And Wolscht? Wolscht of course is different. Wolscht is suspicious, cautious, but even he made a number of confessions both in prison and in court which cannot be denied, cannot be disputed. The accused themselves, more clearly than anyone else, reveal the fallacy of the legend that their journey to Soviet Russia was an innocent undertaking. As a matter of fact, three students traveled into the Soviet state, having made an agreement with their friends, especially with the witness Fink that if they were arrested, they should send a telegram containing the sentence "How is Herr Grunbaum?"

In prison Wolscht told the other occupants of his cell that he had intended to murder Trotsky and Stalin. Who loosed his tongue? Are we to believe that he wished to gain the respect of his fellow-prisoners? He related that he had launched not a few Communists into eternity. This also, you see, to win the respect of the fascist Baumann! In just the same way Kindermann suddenly remembered in prison that it was Kaiser Wilhelm's birthday and inaugurated a celebration of the day, or he all at once began to feel that his favorite song was the fascist Erhardt hymn. Strange to say, Wolscht had the habit of carrying cyanide of potassium about and the still stranger habit of carrying it in a bottle labeled "pyramidon"!

It is no good trying to fol us with the legend of the innocence of these people!

THE Duetsche Allgemeine Zeitung consoles itself in its number of July 1 by writing that it must be clearly understood once for all, that Moscow is as convinced of the innocence of the German students as is Berlin. Blessed is he who believes!

No, Moscow is convinced that exactly the reverse is true, and the verdict of the court met with the general approval of the masses. We have no use for such upholders of culture from the Neomachia, and we have no use for persons such as Ditmar. The more the bourgeois press and bourgeois public opinion try to whitewash the German fascists, the firmer hold will the conviction take in the consciousness of the working masses of the Soviet Union, of Germany and of the whole world, that the proletariat can only protect itself from danger by such merciless blows of class justice; and the more will the conviction prevail that the verdict pronounced was the only just one.

membership, the officials decided to put us on trial on a charge of having invited speakers of the Workers Party' who are enemies of the present reactionary leadership, to speak at our First of May celebration.

Before notifying us officially of the charges against us, and of our suspension, our local offices were seized in the dead of night, with the aid of gangsters, police and detectives.

Unfairness of Frame Ups

Because they realized the flimsiness of their charge, they tried us behind closed doors, in spite of the opposition of our entire membership the protest of the entire Jewish and English press, which characterized this trial as a new inquisition. The trial was nothing but a farce, staged by the joint board and general executive board, without a shadow of evidence we were found guilty and expelled from the union.

Having carried thru these shameful expulsions, the officials that the progressive elements had been eliminated from the International and hereafter they could carry on their destructive work unhindered. But the workers of our industry have taken up the challenge of the joint board and have started a bitter struggle against this new reign of terrorism. The revolt of the membership against these misleaders has spread to every nook and corner of our industry and has drawn in thousands of workers who before this were merely passive.

Workers Back Up Left Wing Leaders

The workers in the shops have refused to recognize or deal with the representatives of the joint board, or to pay any dues. At a mass meeting held on July 9th, 25,000 workers gathered at the call of the Joint Committee of Action and decided, unanimously, to continue this fight until Sigman, Pearlstein and Feinberg, the present pogrom in our union, were forced to resign from their offices; until the three suspended executive boards were reinstated ,and until the union was reorganized on a basis of proportional representation.

The officialdom refused to heed the demands of the cloak and dressmakers. Instead, they attempted to break the revolt of the members by instituting a campaign of terrorism in the Jshops. With the aid of the bosses Jand their associations, workers have been sent down from their pobs. The Joint Committee of Action has been forced to declare strikes in order to compel reinstatement. The shop district has been converted into a veritable battlefield where workers are brutally beaten and wounded on the picket line by the hired gangasters. Hundreds of workers are arrested daily and heavily fined for the crime of picketing the striking shops.

Sigman Conspires With Bosses

Not satisfied with the result of this campaign of terrorism, the officials of the International, in defiance of the policies of even the most reactionary labor officials, advised the bosses to make out sweeping injunctions against the strikers, prohibiting picketing at all these shops. When the cloak and dressmakers, at the call of the Joint Committee of Action, went down in a general two-hour stoppage on August 20th at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, as a protest against the persecution and terrorism carried on by the joint board, the officials of the International united with the bosses in an effort to starve the workers into submission. Many shops were stopped off from work, by order of the joint board. Shop chairmen were attacked in a most cowardly and brutal manner by the hired gangsters of the union machine.

But in spite of all this terrorism, the revolt of the membership is becoming every day more widespread, and is taking on an increasingly bitter form. The workers are determined to carry on this struggle until their demands are granted.

Long, Brave Battle Against Terrorism

Friends, for thirteen long weeks we have been engaged in a bitter struggle against all the dark forces of the Jewinsh Labor Movement. For thirteen long weeks, our workers have been beaten up, arrested and fined. For thirteen weeks, the cloak and dressmakers have exerted themselves to the utmost, contributing their last pennies to pay for bail, for fines, and to assist the striking and injured workers.

For thirteen weeks we have been carrying on this struggle with out own resources, in spite of the long period of unemployment and the poor season in our industry. Now, when this struggle is becoming more intense, more bitter from day to day, when arrests are becoming more frequent, and fines imposed are becoming larger; now when the striking and injured workers are in greater need than ever before, we turn to you for assistance.

An Appeal For Aid

We call on you who sympathise with our struggle for a clean union, without corruption and graft, to assist us at this critical moment. We call on you to help the New York Cloak and Dressmakers to win this struggle for a union led by the workers and not by a small group of parasites.

The victory of the cloak and dressmakers in the present struggle will not affect the workers of our industry along, but it will be the victory of every right-thinking worker in America. In this struggle we are now engaged in, all the dark forces of the movement have been arrayed in a conspiracy to defeat the will of our membership. It is the solemn duty of every progressive and right-thinking person to help raise the funds which will enable us to carry the fight to a successful conclusion.

With fraternal greetings,

SIXTY thousand tons of Welsh anthracite coal have been ordered for the American market, because of the strike in the Pennsylvania fields according to news reports. John L. Lewis is hobnobbing with republican party politicians. He is not taking any steps to prevent the transportation of European coal to the United States. He is taking no steps to secure the support of the workers in the transportation industry, as the British miners did. Lewis is not seeking the support of labor. He prefers to jockey with the capitalists.

THE United States light cruiser Denver and the gunboat Tulsa have arrived at Nicaragua, ostensibly to protect American lives, but really to protect the interests of American capitalists. This government cares very little for lives. The army is organized and built to protect the interests of our rulers from their foes, which are sometimes the slaves whom they exploit.

To protect that dollar and its family of nickles, dimes, quarters and half dollars, the lives of American workingmen are offered up on the silver altar of mammon every year.

PRINCE PHILIP of Hesse, a protestant, is engaged to marry princess Mafalda of Italy, a catholic. This is a damnable alliance in the official eyes of the catholic church and should the daughter of a bricklayer or plumber contract it, her soul would be immediately consigned for all time to an atmosphere of brimstone, unless she succeeded in bringing her spouse to recognize the pope as the successor of St. Peter, the Jerusalem mackerel catcher.

There was a time when a pope could have torn the protestant prince's tongue out of his infidel head with red hot pincers, and in the name of god too. The world does move just the same.

THE anti-imperialist resolution passed by the British Trade Union Congress was one of the most important ever passed by that body. It hits old J. Bull right where he lives. It shows that the British workers have finally lost confidence in the ability of the pirate empire to do anything for them. This news was considered important enuf to be placed on the front page in the early edition of last Sunday's Herald-Examiner, of Chicago. But it was carefully omitted from later issues, and the story of a gang fight was put in its place. This is the way capitalist papers handle labor news.

THIS may be a good time to call your attention to the appeal for funds now made by the DAILY WORKER. We would much rather use the space for news about the class struggle, but we have no choice. Unless you send us the money to keep going, there will be no DAILY WORKER to tell the truth about the labor movement here and all over the world. It is good to read the lists of contributors and learn that the workers are responding so generously to the appeal. It shows that the DAILY WORKER fills a need and that it has friends among the working class who are ready to make sacrifices for it. Bring on your dollars.

STRIKE OF I. W. W. SEAMEN TIES UP BOATS IN NEW YORK HARBOR; SPREADING TO OTHER SEAPORTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 14.—The strike called by the Marine Transport Workers of the I. W. W. is rallying an ever increasing number of seamen as crews walk out and strikers pack the I. W. W. halls cheering the speakers who call for a show down with the shipping bosses while their fellow workers over sea are battling in the United Kingdom, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and Denmark. Especially fine work was done in winning over seamen of the White Star liner Majestic, from which some of the crew is leaving as a result of the spirited picketing.

The M. T. W. picket captains report from the S. S. West Kedron, half of the crew left immediately on strike call; the S. S. Cape Cod gave six men to union headquarters; the S. S. Santa Eulalia crew will leave when paid off, same with the crew of the Cristobal and the River Del Rio. Fine spirit was shown by the crew of the S. S. Republic, where seamen dropped everything and walked out on a moment's notice in both engine and deck departments.

Tugs and Steamers Tied Up.

The Mark Williams tugs are all tied up, three Red Ball tugs are stuck. At Hoboken the whole crew of the S. S. Mongolia walked off. Crews came off in a body from the following vessels: Guantaunamo, Lillian, American Merchant, Sisko, Bolivia Colombia lines. The Ossis sailed three men short. But the biggest hit was the walkout of additional seamen from the Majestic which got away from Southampton strikers only to meet a picket line in New York of combined I. W. W. and Communists.

The spirit of solidarity with the fellow workers striking oversea is shown in the following cablegrams exchanged between the continents. The British strikers sent the following:

Messages of Solidarity.

"Marine Transport Workers, No. 3, Coenties Slip, New York City. Unofficial seamen's strike in England. Ships leaving with non-union and naval ratings. All genuine seamen on strike. Can you assist? Stop shipping at all cost. Fight like hell." (Signed) Central Strike Committee, Canningtown, London, England.

The I. W. W. seamen's answer war: "Are giving you all possible aid. Strike called." (Signed) Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union No. 510 of the I. W. W.

From the British strikers came back the following:

"Bravo! Glad to hear good news. Stick together."

Strike On at Other Ports.

The headquarters of the M. T. W. has received wires that the strike is in full force in the following ports, where the I. W. W. seamen have branches: Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Mobile, San Francisco, Tacoma, Seattle, Galveston, Houston, Portland, Ore., and New Orleans. Others were not yet heard from. The Philadelphia longshoremen are taking a strike vote to support the seamen.

Strike Spirit Good.

DEFENSE BREAKS JAIL BARS, SAYS C. E. RUTHENBERG

I. L. D. Mass Meeting Hears Zeigler Case

The need for the International Labor Defense proves that the class struggle in America has developed to the point where the ruling class must imprison the leaders of the working class in order to keep their power, C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party declared at the mass meeting of the I. L. D. held at Temple Hall, Van Buren and Marshfield Sts., William Z. Foster recited the history of the persecution of working class leaders of the past, many of whom have all but been forgotten as they rot in prison. Other speakers were George Maurer, Henry Corbishly, who told of the frame up of the 18 Zeigler miners by the ku klux klan and the mine union officials, Robert Minor, noted Comumunist cartoonist and Oscar Brown, miner from Arkansas.

"The persecution of the Zeigler miners is an example of the manner in which the government is today using its power against the workers, with the aid of the reactionary officials of the labor movement," Comrade Ruthenberg told the large and enthusiastic audience. "It shows we are entering the period which leads to the final struggle and the victory of the working class. The capitalist dictatorship in the past hid itself in fair words. The constitution seemed to give certain rights of free speech, assemblage and freedom of the press."

Can Break Prison Bars

Comrade Ruthenberg then traced the history of the criminal syndicalist laws which were passed after America's entrance into the world war and after a wave of revolution had swept the working class thruout the entire world. He told how the espionage law passed by congress in 1917 was the first of a series of measures to take the freedom of speech from the

ALLIES MILKED THREE BILLION MARKS FROM GERMANY THRU DAWES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Germany paid one billion gold marks, under the Dawes plan, during the first year of the operation of the plan, according to the report of Parker Gilbert, agent general for reparations, made to the reparations commission and published by that body.

The billion gold marks paid by Germany consisted of 800,000,000 gold marks raised by an external loan and 200,000,000 as partial interest from railway debentures.

MURDER CHARGE TRUMPED UP ON CLOTH WORKER

Raid on Amalgamated Inspired by Bosses

Business Agent Pyzak of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union was held on $16,000 bonds on a charge of "assauult with intent to kill" when he with nine other Amalgamated union business agents was arraigned in the Chicago avenue police court yesterday.

The nine business agents who were charged with "disorderly conduct" were discharged by Judge Morgan who held that the police had failed to prove the existence of disorder. The raid, as was the former one, is said to be inspired by the International Tailoring Co., whose employes have been on strike for twelve weeks.

The court cases grew out of the raid on the Amalgamated offices conducted Saturday and led by Captain O'Malley, of the Chicago avenue station. The charge of assault with intent to kill was placed against Pyzak by a tailor named Rosenstein, who claimed to have been shot by "a business agent of the Amalgamated."

Business Agents Pyzak, Skala, Dunn, Rocco, Smith, Hubacek, Janicek, Kires, Cooper and Bobroski were arrested in the raid. They were taken by the police squad to the County Hospital, where Rosenstein was asked to identify his alleged assailant. He charged that Pyzak was the man. Then the ten men were taken to the bureau of identification where their finger prints were taken. From the bureau of identification they were again taken to the County Hospital. There it was found that Rosenstein had been taken to his home. The prisoners were taken there and Rosenstein repeated his charge that Pyzak had assaulted him.

They were then taken to the Chicago avenue station, where Pyzak was booked on the assault charge and the others were charged with disorderly with disorderly conduct.

Pyzak doesn't take the charge against himself seriously. "Part of the strike tactics of the bosses," he said. "We can expect anything before our strike against the Internation is won. The International is desperate. They are not making clothes so they try to make trouble for the union. When they discover that we are not to be frightened by such charges and frame-ups, they will have to settle. If this sort of thing will help to bring the strike to a quicker end, I am ready to face these framed-up charges."

TAMMANY TODAY FIGHTS BITTERLY OVER N. Y. LOOT

Badger State Indulges in Political Catfight

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Whether William Randolph Hearst, Hylan's political godfather, shall run city hall for the next four years or whether the running shall done by Al Smith thru Jimmy Walker will be decided at tomorrow's primaries after the most bitter battle ever waged in the metropolis.

That the fight is a "family affair" adds to the bitterness. Hylan is a Tammany man, but has wandered far from the Wigwam since former boss Charles Murphy helped to lift him from an obscure judicial bench and put him in the way of becoming a national figure and a commuter between the Battery and Palm Beach.

Tammany's Tricks

Senator "Jimmy" Walker is Tammany's candidate and Tammany is another name for Al Smith. Tammany has a powerful organization and unless all signs fail, Hylan will bite the dust in the primaries. There is something paternal about Tammany which counts heavily on election day. It opens jail gates, appeases greedy landlords at times, slaps the meanest democrat on the back, and in many ways fastens its gelatinous fingers on the political affections of New York City's 794,652 enrolled democratic voters, excepting those who know that it pays better to make a little, but not too much trouble for the machine at times, than to be chronically loyal.

Five Cent Politician

Hylan is a five cent politician, but those who ride in Gotham's subways and receive their osteopathic treatment while rushing up and down thru the subterranean passages of Manhattan island, as guests of the traction barons, lend a willing ear to the political tune played on Hylan's nickleodeon. Passengers, get massaged too much, and tho an alcohol rub is said to be good for the skin, the odor of second hand moonshine is not so pleasant when wafted to the nostrils from some strange pair of lips, forced into disagreeable proximity by the desire of the aforesaid barons to make a little profit out of the transportation business, since Hylan will not let them raise the ante so that they can purchase enough space to let each passenger enjoy his own smells, whatever they may be.

To put the issue in plain language, Hylan will stand or fall on the five cent fare and his opposition to the "interests." Tammany will win with the aid of its precint, ward and district captains, friendly cops, gangsters bootleggers and the labor fakers, who failed to get on Hylan's payroll. Hylan will have the support of some of the capitalists. Tammany will have the support of the bigger ones and Waterman, the republican who makes your

Franklin Union Rejects Anti-Communist Letter

Franklin Union No. 4 of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, voted to reject the anti-Communist red-baiting lettter sent out to all its affiliated locals by the officials of the Chicago Federation of Labor, in an effort to curry favor with William Green and the other grand dukes of the A. F. of L.

As soon as the letter was presented a motion was made to return the document with an appropriate gesture, to Fitzpatrick and Nockels. The chairman, a Berryite, declared he could not receive the motion in the form in which it was presented, so after some strong language was indulged in, a motion to reject the document made by Brother Jimmy Barndt was carried unanimously.

During the discussion Brother Brandt defended the Communists against the charges of union disruption contained in the Fitzpatrick-Nockels epistle. He declared that the Communists never scab or break strikes or favor such a policy whether those on strike be members of the A. F. of L. or of any other union. He was referring to the action of George L. Berry of the pressmen and Tom Rickert of the garment workers.

Defended Communists.

He said they don't go around putting bombs in the homes of good union men or firing shots in thru their windows. Brother Brandt recently found a bomb in his own home and Jimmy King, a member of No. 3, had his window pierced by a bullet from a gangster's gun, believed to be in the employ of the international gangsters. Both were active in the Cunco lockout.

Brandt challenged the Chicago Federation of Labor officials to debate the question of unionism with representatives of the Workers (Communist) Party.

The meeting went on record approving the joint agreement drawn up recently between the pressmen and

Rail Progressives to Aid Anthracite Coal Mine Strike

In view of the fact that the great anthracite mine strike which involves 150,000 miners, may be won or lost according to support given it by the railroad men, the following resolution passed Sunday by the Second Railroad Amalgamation Conference has a significance on the part to be played by the progressive element among the railroad unions. It says:

> Whereas, over 150,000 anthracite miners in Pennsylvania, confronted by the determination of the employers to reduce their standard of living, have gone on strike to protect their interests against the rapacious exploiters; and
> Whereas, the attack of the employers upon the anthracite miners is only a part of their general attempt to destroy the United Mine Workers of America, further evidence of this being the crushing of the bituminous miners' organizations in West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Alabama, Colorado, and other states, and their weakening in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, etc., and
> Whereas, the attempted destruction of the United Mine Workers is only a part of the employers' larger scheme to destroy the trade unions in every industry and thus to etsablish the "Open Shop," with its yellow company unionism and slave conditions for the workers; therefore be it
> Resolved, that we progressive railroad workers recognize the struggle of the anthracite miners to be the cause of the working class as a whole and we call upon the workers everywhere to lend their active support in every available form to the anthracite miners; and be it further
> Resolved, that we specifically call upon all railroad men to absolutely refuse to haul scab coal from the anthracite mines; and be it further.
> Resolved, that we declare in favor of an alliance, defensive and offensive, of all railroad unions with the U. M. W. of A., and call upon the progressive delegations in the coming railroad union conventions to fight for the formation of such an alliance.

In addition, the conference expressed by resolution, its opinion that the general chaos in both the mining and railway industries could be remedied, and these industries taken out of the hands of capitalist exploiters and made to serve the interests of the workers, only by nationalization and with workers' control. The conference then pledged itself to work for this program.

Many important resolutions were passed by the conference, including resolutions opposing the expulsion campaigns against progressives in the I. A. M. by William H. Johnston, a resolution support Johnston's recall, a resolution against racial discrimination in the unions, a resolution favoring trade with and recognition of Soviet Russia, one favoring autonomy of Canadian unions, for the release of labor prisoners, opposing "criminal syndicalism" laws, and endorsing the movement for international trade union unity.

Seek Wage Raise

The conference took a stand by resolution for a united campaign of all unions to get a general wage raise of 20 per cent, with a minimum of 75 cents an hour for unskilled workers. In addition resolutions were passed on company unions, organization of unorganized workers on the railroads, demanding a convention of the railway employes department of the A. of L., organization of bus and electric transport workers, concerning labor banking, unemployment, for a Labor Party and for amalgamation, particularly calling upon the progressive delegations at the conventions of the boilmakers, carmen and maintenance of waymen to adopt constitutional amendments to start their unions definitely on the way to amalgamation.

The program of the amalgamation movement was adopted as follows:

The Amalgamation Conference Program

"The international railroad amalgamation movement is not a trade union, or dual organization. It is an educational movement and works for the building, strengthening and educating of the railroad unions on the following basis:

For amalgamation of the existing railroad unions into a departmental industrial organization covering the entire industry.

(a) "For a united and militant struggle of all railroad trades to protect and improve wages, hours and working conditions.

(b) "Against company unions, "B. & O. Plans," "industrial peace" schemes, and dual unions as substitutes for fighting trade unions.

(c) "For an immediate joint campaign participated in by all 16 unions to organize all unorganized railroad workers into the present trade unions.

(d) "Against the money of the unions being used to establish so-called 'labor' banks, insurance schemes, and real estate deals which are in reality only capitalistic business enterprises; and for the re-organization of these existing institutions upon a co-operative basis, thereby placing the control of them back in the hands of the union membership.

(e) "For development of the shop committee system to increase the representation of the workers in the management and control of the industry.

(f) "For a National Labor Party with the affiliation and participation of the unions as organized bodies.

(g) "For international unity to bring about closer affiliation of all trade unions of the world in accordance with the contemplated plan of the Anglo-Russian Trade Union Unity Commission."

Officers Elected

GOVERNMENT BEGINS TO DEPORT CHINESE WORKERS WHOLESALE

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Fifty-three Chinese, rounded up by federal officers, were ordered deported from the country immediately when they were arraigned before United States Commissioner Garrett Cotter. They were taken to Ellis Island.

Six others caught in the raids were freed when they established citizenship. Nine others who asked for hearings were held over without bail until next week.

"The excuse given for rounding up the Chinese was the government's drive to deport all Chinese connected with the tong outbreaks."

FAKERS BUILD FINE HOUSES; MINERS STARVE

Traitors Thrive on Union Treasury

By HARRY P. SHAFFER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILIPSBURG, Pa., Sept. 14.—This is District No. 2 U. M. W. of A. and it is as dead as the stones that are going into the fine big residence John Brophy, president of District No. 2 is building in Clearfield.

John has done well for himself slick and fat and well kept, while the miner's children of this district run after the bread wagons crying "Bread, Bread."

Brophy has done well. He is a successful business man, and he has determined that he must live like other successes even though children cry while father pays dues to build houses for labor fakers. Like Lewis, Brophy blames the fact that this district is dead upon increased railroad rates, and not upon the sell out of the Jacksonville Agreement.

Since the Jacksonville Agreement was brought forth upon the earth, this district is dead; and now their only hope lies in the fact that miners here are hungry to mine coal to take the place of anthracite upon the market, to scab! Miners here under the Jacksonville Agreement have become scavengers upon the blood spilled upon the battlefield of labor. This is what the policies of Lewis have brought the union to.

And yet prosperity reigns among the labor fakers and houses continue to go up, like stinking tombs, marking the betrayal of labor.

God, how long will these things be?

There has never been any one in this district to stay the hand of the faker. Their sway has been absolute and prosperity smiles upon them while they suck dry the treasury of the miner's union.

Floods Drown 3,000 in China

LONDON, Sept. 14.—More than three thousand Chinese have been drowned by floods in the Shantung province, where broken dykes released the high waters of the Yellow River.

Hundreds of villages have been swept by the flood waters, which reached fifty miles back from the river's normal course.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE CHICAGO CONFERENCE SETS UP LIVELY LOCAL ORGANIZATION

The eighty delegates representing 18,000 organized workers of Chicago, who met Sunday afternoon at Ashland Auditorium launched a section of International Labor Defense that will bring the message of America's class-war prisoners and the obligation to defend those now being attacked to every unit of organized labor in Chicago. The conference unanimously indorsed the actions of the National Conference held in the same hall last June and that founded International Labor Defense as the champion of all workers persecuted for their activity in the class struggle.

The delegates represented 12,000 trades unionists, 4,500 members of workers' benefit and fraternal organizations and 1,500 members of permanent branches of International Labor Defense.

Henry Corbishley, the central figure of the case of the fifteen Zeigler miners now under serious criminal charges in the southern Illinois coal fields, reported on the frame-up he and his comrades are now being subjected to. The conference pledged its support to the fight of the Zeigler miners and then and there raised over $200.00 for the defense fund.

To Raise More Than Dollars.

W. S. Milson of the Carpenters' Union brought out the dynamic phase of the I. L. D. Not mere dollars, he said, are needed, but while these are good to use in the routine work of paying lawyers and gaining publicity, yet the function of the I. L. D. is to raise the spirit of the working masses, to bring the collective force of wide masses into action to demonstrate to capitalist governmental oppressors that the working class will fight solidly, united as one man behind its spokesmen and fighters who are chosen as victims by the master class.

With wide masses aroused and determined the courts and other wolves of capitalist state power will hesitate to carry out their brutal desires of framing up, killing and burying alive our brothers who fight in the front ranks.

Victims of U. S. Imperialism.

Max Hankin of Local 199, Machinists, spoke on the recent outburst of brutality against the Cuban workers, in which Jose Miguel Perez, the secretary of the Cuban Communist Party, only just organized, has been deported and the trade unions are being viciously attacked.

A resolution of protest and pledging the support of Chicago workers was offered and passed, in which the fact that American imperialism has practically usurped complete governmental power of the Cuban state, was accented as a special factor making necessary the duty of American workers to combat the evil forces of imperialist persecution.

The I. W. W. Fighters Remembered.

Fred Mann, member of the I. L. D. national executive committee, took the floor to bring out the part of the I. W. W. as victims of class persecutions. He wished to make clear that he did not represent the I. W. W. but merely took part as an individual interested in class war prisoners' defense, in this respect, however, representing a certain sentiment among the membership of the I W. W. There were about 100 good revolutionary fighters in prison in this country, where we have an American counterpart of the white terror of Europe. The European workers have suffered ghastly persecutions and still suffer. It is necessary that we give our utmost solidarity to them.

Here, particularly in California and Washington, the I. W. W. whose record of revolutionary struggle is known not only nationally but thruout the world, the American white terror has jailed scores upon scores of the most conscious fighters for their class. In California a worker needed to commit no crime to go to jail. Mere membership in the I. W. W. sent workers to prison for from one to fifteen years.

The General Defense and the California Defense have done all they could for these men and done very well. But the I. L. D. with its intimate connections within all labor and radical unions thruout America could do more, it could raise a huge cry of protest on a national scale in exposing the tyranny that has sent these these fine fighters of the I. W. W. into the hell holes of California prisons.

Centralia the Test.

The Centralia victims lying in Walla Walla with a 40-year sentence had fought not only their own struggle, but defended the right of all union labor to organize and meet in union halls. If this right is challenged successfully by the continued imprisonment of the Centralia victims, who are I. W. W. members, it would no longer be an I. W. W. matter, for raids by white guard American legion thugs on union halls, would soon be the rule in Chicago. Money was needed, not only for lawyers, but for publicity, to raise the class consciousness of the wide masses of workers to the meaning of the Centralia and other cases.

Fellow Worker Mann spoke of the effort being made by the I. L. D. to raise $5 a month for every class war prisoner, regardless of affiliation, and told how much it means for prisoners to get the little comforts and to know that someone cares enough to see that these are furnished.

Prison Relief.

"Let us resolve to keep this pledge," he said, "These revolutionary fighters fought our battles. They are inside for our cause. Let them know we shall stand by them and care for them in their years of prison."

"Let this be done and a great many if not a majority of the members of the I. W. W. will whole-heartedly support the I. L. D. and aid it in the wonderful wor it is just beginning."

Get Individual Members, Too.

Secretary Maurer, in closing the conference, obtained the pledges of the delegates of an immediate sum to the local I. L. D. treasury. He accented that the I. L. D. has both collective and individual affiliations. Those organizations, such as unions and fraternal bodies which affiliate and make the affiliation effective by subscribing a certain fixed monthly sum, are the collective affiliates.

But the members of such organizations should also be invited to join I. L. D. branches as individual members and take a direct and active part in defense work and relief work for class war prisoners. A big campaign for the Zeigler miners is to begin at once, Maurer announced.

An executive committee of nineteen to direct the work of Chicago local of the International Labor Defense set up at the conference was elected. The committee includes Emil Arnold of Painters' Union No. 275; H. Schneid, Local No. 39, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; S. Hankin, Machinists' Local No. 199; A Newman, Workman's Circle 519; S. Gallant, Workman's Circle 497; L. Cohen, Workman's Circle 518; H. V. Phillips of the American Negro Labor Congress; Fred Mann of the National Committee of I. L. D.; George Maurer, Rose Karsner, Sam Hammersmark and others.

The Chicago Local will immediately proceed to work, campaigning funds for the Zeigler defense and other cases and gathering in new members for the organization.

President: Roy H. Woods, of the Electrical Workers.

Vice-president: Peter Jensen, Machinists, Chicago, Ill.

Secretary: Otto H. Wangrin, Railway Clerks, St. Paul, Minn.

The international committee, also unanimously elected, consists of the following: John Foley, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Cleveland, Ohio; C. H. Clarke, Machinists, Stratford, Ontario; John Kipper Boilermakers, Chicago, Ill. A. S. Harbin, Boilermakers, Covington, Ky.; Homer Booth, Sheet Metal Workers, Huntington, W. Va.; C. E. Lombard Electrical Workers, Hudson, Wis.; Frank Dinardo, Blacksmiths, Montreal, Canada; Clyde Crawford Blacksmiths, Huntington, W. Va.; J. W. McGraw, Railway Carmen, Tacoma, Wash.; Donald Menzies, Railway Carmen, London Ontario; E. Wilton, Sheet Metal Workers, Montreal, Canada.

This international committee is empowered by the conference to enlarge itself by the addition of new members so as to have 32 in all, two from each of the 16 standard unions.

Get Ready for Reorganization

WITHIN a few days the Organization Department will announce its plan to mobilize the membership for the reorganization of the party into shop nuclei and international branches.

With the beginning of this campaign to reconstruct our party, a series of articles on organizational questions will be printed in every organ of the party. Questions and problems confronting our members in the rebuilding of the party will be answered and analyzed in the DAILY WORKER by Comrade Jay Lovestone, head of the Organization Department, and other party members.

The DAILY WORKER will also establish a special section for the Organization Department. In this section there will be printed articles on the progress of the organization campaign, the experiences of the comrades in the work of organization, and letters and reports from comrades giving their experinces in carrying on the party's activities thru the shop nuclei.

These articles will be living articles, and of intense interest. Watch these columns closely.

quarters at No. 3 Coenties Slip attract large crowds of seamen, with a steady stream lining up in the union, scores reporting for picket line duty and showing fine fighting spirit. In Brooklyn a crowd of 800 seamen packed the hall at 158 Carroll street to listen to strike speakers of the M. T. W.

Detachments of pickets are commanded by captains and the I. W. W. is making every effort to make the strike effective. Funds are required to sustain the picket lines, and all working class organizations in the ports affected, particularly the Workers (Communist) party units, are making efforts to give all material assistance they can afford. Workers in New York City and vicinity are urged to take or send relief funds to either No. 3 Coenties Slip, or 105 Broad stret. Quick action is imperative.

Police Protect Crambert.

Seven policement were outside the hall during the meeting. Four were plain clothes men from the bureau and three in uniform. Crambert was asked what the police were doing there, but he refused to answer. When Crambert left the hall the police followed him.

According to the union rules an official who misses two consecutive meetings without a reasonable excuse finds his office automatically vacated. Two of Berry's tools had broken this rule, but they were saved by Crambert who refused to allow the members to decide whether their excuses were reasonable or not.

Children Strike For More Seats.

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 14.—Shortage of seating space has brought about a children strike at the Washington school which meets with the parents consent. School authorities have attempted to transfer the older children to another school to make room for the smaller ones. The other school is over a quarter of a mile away.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., CONVENTION IS DISMAL SCENE

Reaction Rules Over Illinois Labor

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 14.—The several hundred delegates here to attend the annual convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor face a dismal prospect of one of the most reactionary assemblies of the state organization in years.

Typical of the unprogressive nature of the convention is the fact that all and sundry expect the most serious "fight" of the convention to be over the fake issue of whether it shall endorse "light wines and beer" or the "bone dry" prohibition act,

The only real issue rumored is the fight the few progressives present may make for abolition of all discrimination by unions against Negroes and for their admission on par with all other members. The same fight is made for abolition of discrimination concerning all races and race prejudices.

The convention will listen to Bill Green, president of the A. F. of L., and Frank Farrington, and betting is close on which shall give the most reactionary and "anti-Communist" speech. Both are acknowledged experts in this field.

Johnny Walker, president of the federation opened the sessions with his usual lacrimose oration, magnifying beyond all resemblance the almost indiscernible "victories" of organized labor in the past year, but ended with shedding futile tears over the "bad industrial conditions" and the "distress among the miners" (which he has done not one thing to alleviate) and admitting in fact that besides the flat janitors and the milk wagon drivers labor unions in Illinois are going backwards fast.

The Second Flood

Strangely, Johnny had little to recommend as a remedy for these deplorable conditions. Weeping seems to do no one any good. If it did Illinois unionism would be prosperous long ago instead of drowned in the crocodile teams of "Weeping Johnny Walker." One bright idea Walker dwelt upon was that discovered by the Union of Brick and Clay Workers of Lansing, Illinois, which pay the difference between the jury fee and eight dollars a day for every member which serves on a jury.

"By so doing they avoid having many decisions rendered against the labor movement that are unfair and unjust," said Walker, scarcely comprehending the insult he was giving to the mentioned brick and clay workers.

Victory With Some Alloy In It

The biggest "victory" that he could boast of was the mythical "restrictions" placed by the recent legislature on the use of injunctions. While the technical and legal aspects of antilabor injunctions may in some cases be changed by the bill, the big employers of labor, as shown by the Chicago Tribune at the time of the law's passage, are quite satisfied that it won't matter a tinker's dawn what the law says, the picket line is going to have a round with the courts in any strike of consequence.

William B. Wilson, who was the secretary of labor during Wilson's presidency, is due to address the convention. It is a sad looking lay out for progressive unionism unless the left wing developes unexpected strength.

fountain pen, will have the support of the biggest, provided he has a chance to win. If not big biz will support Tammany, as Hearst is looked upon more or less as a scab in Wall Street.

May Run Independent

It is reported that in the event of Hylan's defeat in the primaries, he may launch a third ticket in the finals with Fiorillo LaGuardia as candidate. LaGuardia would be counted on to garner the Italian vote and the so-called progressive vote. He would have the support of Hearst and might pull enough support away from Tammany to make the republican candidate's election possible. But Tammany may find ways and means of forestalling such a dangerous development.

The only sane voice crying in the political wilderness here as far as the working class movement is concerned is the program of the Workers (Communist) Party and that organization's call for a united front of all working class organizations to fight the elections under the banner of labor against all capitalist candidates.

MADISON, Wisc. Sept. 14.—Robert M. LaFollette, Jr. is expected to get a good start towards wearing his late father's senatorial toga, after the primary vote is counted tomorrow. Besides having his father's sentimental following as an asset, young Bob is favored with the support of the state machine, with Governor Blaine at the throttle.

This machine has the dispensation of almost 6,000 robust jobs. What that means in votes could be told with fair exactitude by the most uncultured ward heeler in Chicago or New York.

The Coolidge republican candidate is Roy P. Wilcox but his chances are slim. If defeated in the primaries, the latter is expected to run in the finals. The socialist candidate is expected to get on the final ballots. His main argument is that LaFollette is not his father's son, politically speaking. Work, the socialist claims to wear the dead man's mantle, but the family refuses to surrender the heirloom.

It would not surprise many seasoned politicians to see Blaine and LaFollette Jr. walk into the Coolidge camp after the next election shows the G. O. P. grand chiefs who's who in Wisconsin. Recently LaFollette, Jr came out in favor of Mellon's tax program, declaring that the rich needed relief as well as the poor, or words to that effect

Chinese Are Opposing the White-Washing of the Shanghai Murders

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the imperialist governments at Washington, London and Tokio must have finally reached the conclusion that the Chinese do not intend lending themselves to a fake investigation of the murders of Chinese workers and students, starting four months ago, in the streets of Shanghai and elsewhere.

Decked with all the panoply of judicial procedure, a commission jointly organized by Great Britain, America and Japan announces that it is ready to investigate the Shanghai incident. But it is desired to have a Chinese representative on the commission to help apply the white wash. Otherwise the calcimine might appear too muddied, failing to have the proper effect on the workers of China and those of other lands intensely interested in imperialist crimes in the orient.

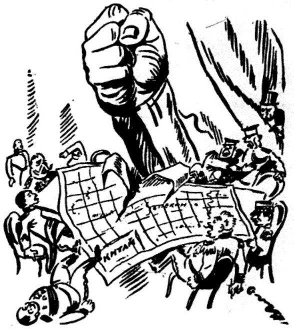
The American member of this commission is none other than Judge Elias Finley Johnson, member of the supreme court of the Philippines, where he must have received excellent schooling as an agent of the robber rule of the Wall Street bandits. The Filipinos can easily conjure up the kind of a report that this judicial lackey would make on the struggle of the Shanghai textile workers. The Filipinos know from experience, bitter experiences under the bloody regime of the anti-labor General Leonard Wood, who rules the islands. The loyalty of Judge Johnson to the dollar bandits is further attested by the fact that he is joyously acclaimed by the British member of the commission, Sir Henry Gollen, chief justice at Hongkong, where the English lash falls especially heavy upon the backs of Chinese workers. The Japanese member is another judge hailing from the courts of Tokio that have been quick to send protesting workers to prison and to the gallows.

• • • •

In fact, the trio is so foul that it cannot be stomached by even the capitalist governments of France, Italy, Belgium, and the Netherlands, who refuse to participate in the farce, which they can afford to do, since their interests are not so much at stake.

The power of the fist of Chinese labor in these days is pictured by the cartoonist of Gudok, the Soviet railroad workers' daily, as follows:

The Fist of Chinese Labor



It Disturbs the Plans of the World Imperialists.
—From Gudok, Russian Railroad Workers' Daily

• • • •

One of the British-American demands on the Chinese is that the Chinese government "must give concrete evidence of its ability and willingness to enforce respect for the safety of foreign lives and property and to suppress disorders and anti-foreign agitation."

The Chinese do not take that demand seriously. It is purely a demand that China be made safe for imperialist agents to plunder and murder the Chinese. In the words of General Feng Yu-Hsiang:

> "It is not timely to talk about China's ability to protect foreigners while foreigners are shooting Chinese with unequalled ferocity."

• • • •

These expressions will sound familiar to every worker in this country who has gone out on strike only to have the state militia, if not the federal troops, brot in to shoot him down in the name of "law and order." The troops have only been withdrawn when "order has been restored" which, translated, means that the strike has been broken.

For more than a hundred years, the imperialisms of the great predatory nations have plundered China and made open war against her. The Chinese people have fought back as best they could. Their determined stand at the present time shows that they have plenty of fight left. It is the wish of all enlightened workers the world over that they will develop enough strength to drive all their oppressors, native as well as foreign, into the Pacific, to be rid of them forever.

The heroic struggle of the workers of China is the deep concern of the workers of the whole world.

workers in order that the capitalists might maintain power.

"Why is it that in 1910 they did not need criminal syndicalist laws and in 1919 they did?" Comrade Ruthenberg continued. "The answer is the international revolution. The victory of proletarian revolution in Soviet Russia was an answer to the challenge of the rule of the capitalists, the rule of the capitalists here in the United States was challenged by the Communist movement."

"The International Labor Defense can break the bars and save the working class fighters from prison, just as the protest of the workers secured the freedom of the members of the I. W. W. in 1920, and saved several thousand workers from deportation after the Palmer raids. The fight made for those working class leaders shows that the workers have the power and if they use it can save their champions from the clutches of the capitalists." Comrade Ruthenberg declared that so far the workers had won in the Michigan Communist cases, keeping the Communist out of jail for three years.

"The International Labor Defense can take up the fight for the forgotten class war prisoners. It must also think of the international situation, of the white terror raging against the workers of other countries."

Saved Fighters from Hangmen

Comrade Ruthenberg then told how the protests of the workers of the European countries had done much to save Sacco and Vanzetti and Tom Mooney from the gallows. He told how in Poland, Roumania, Bulgaria and other countries the capitalists are trying to wipe out the struggle of the workers by killing off their leaders. He told how the three million members of the International Red Aid are sending help to the workers of all the world.

"We in the United States must do the same," Comrade Ruthenberg concluded. "We must help those who stand in the forefront of the struggle against capitalism. That is the purpose of the International Labor Defense. If we do that we may look forward to the day when the workers will rule, and will put the capitalists in jail."

"Must Enlist Masses," Foster

Comrade Foster told how the capitalists of Spain and other countries are seizing on the leaders of the workers and murdering them in cold blood. The I. L. D., he said, must defend the leaders of the working class. "Some of the finest fighters for the workers are now rotting away in the prisons and the masses are not stirring a hand to secure their release," Comrade Foster said.

Comrade Foster told how Kline and Wrangel in Texas, Mooney, Schmidt and MacNamara of California, Sacco and Vanzetti, are being persecuted, and forgotten.

"New systems, a new spirit is needed," said Comrade Foster, "And the I. L. D. is about to supply that. We must realize that the defense of political prisoners is an established part of our work of fighting the capitalists. We must enlist the masses, and the only way is thru such an organization as the International Labor Defense, whose purpose is to teach the workers the real meaning of this class persecution. The I. L. D. is an effective organization of the workers to defend their leaders."

Struggle in Zeigler

George Maurer opened the meeting by telling of the successful conference which organized a permanent local unit of the I. L. D.

Henry Corbishly went into detail on the struggle of the Zeigler miners against the Farrington machine of bureaucratic mine union officials. Corbishly told how the progressives, with himself as president of the Zeigler local, were twice arbitrarily deposed from office by the mine union officials, who enlisted the aid of the ku klux klan. He told of the frauds perpetrated by Farrington in the miners elections.

The kluxers, Corbishly said, at a meeting of the local, following a dispute with the Bell and Zoller Coal company, started a fight and Alexander Hargis, a klansman and Farrington hanger-on, shot and killed Mike Sarevich. The next day 18 of the progressive miners were arrested on warrants sworn to by Lon Fox, sub-district president of the union, and other Farrington machine men, charged with "assault with intent to kill."

Alexander Hargis, the klan murderer, on the other hand, was released on bonds supplied by Lon Fox. The dispute with the coal company, Corbishly showed, was decided in the company's favor by the mine union officials. The coal was being run out so fast that it was impossible to weigh it. The checkweighman went home, and the miners walked out. The Farrington machine took the company's part and deposed Corbishly and the other progressives.

Corbishly thanked the International Labor Defense for its aid to the militant miners of Zeigler.

Robert Minor, the chairman, made the collection speech, and a large sum of money was donated for defense of working class prisoners.

SEAMEN'S COMMITTEE TELLS OF LIFE AND CONDITIONS ON SHIP IN CALL FOR WORLD SOLIDARITY

The following excellent description of the conditions of life of seamen on American ships gives sufficient reason for the strike called by the I. W. W. Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union No. 510, just as the I. W. W. strike itself is given as proof of the need for international unity. Not only is the following article interesting, but it is a call to action from the hands of a seaman, J. Stone, secretary of the International Marine Workers' Amalgamation Committee.

The Condition of the Marine Workers

The workers of one of the greatest industries, of this country—in fact, one of the greatest industries of the world—the marine workers, stand today unorganized, weak and incapable of realizing the fight they could wage against the prevailing conditions of slavery thru the upbuilding of a powerful marine union.

Wages.

Altho the shipowners and the capitalist government of this country claim that the American seaman is the highest paid in the world, he is in fact the lowest paid if we take into consideration the high cost of living in the U. S. in comparison with that in other countries. For instance:

	England	Holland	Sweden
A. B. Seaman	$39.82	$38	$40
Fireman	42	40	40

On the American ships the seaman's wages range from $40 to $50 on private vessels and are about $62.50 on U. S. shipping board vessels; for firemen, $50 on private vessels and $67.50 on U. S. S. B. vessels. The work on the U. S. S. B. ships is, however, not steady, since ships are laid up so often that one is never sure of his job. To make a trip on a vessel for a month or two and then to be laid off to loaf for another month in the shipping offices waiting for another job is an experience that very frequently happens to the American seafarer.

Moreover, everybody knows that it is easier to live on $40 in England, Holland, or Sweden than it is to live on the same amount or even on $50 or more in the U. S. A. And so if we also take into consideration that the job of the foreign seaman is more steady we will come to the conclusion that the American seaman is the lowest paid.

Working Hours and Overtime.

A few years ago when the International Seamen's Union was still strong and the seamen had an agreement with the shipowners and when the shipping commissioner acted as an intermediary between them, the working hours of the men on deck or fire or engineer rooms were estimated at eight hours a day. Every additional hour, be it at sea or in port, was paid for at the rate of time and a half. With the break up of the International Seamen's Union the payment of overtime was abolished and the old 12-hour day for the men on deck was again introduced.

After the strike won by the I. W. W. Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union, the eight-hour day was again given to the seamen, but the overtime was abolished for good. Today a seaman can work from 12 to 14 hours a day without getting any compensation for time worked above the regular eight hours. There is no law or agreement to protect the seaman from working longer hours.

In most cases a lot of work on ship, instead of being attended to in port by the shore gang, is left to be done at sea either by the black gang if it is in engine or firerooms or by the sailor if it happens to be on deck.

Food.

Now about the food on American vessels. It will be easy to guess what seamen eat aboard the American ships when we learn that most of the shipping companies allow about 35 cents a day for the feeding of a man. This, minus the graft on the part of the port steward and the other sharks, reduces the allowance to 20 or 23 cents a day. No wonder that the seamen on most of our vessels are starving to death from lack of nourishing food.

Conditions of Slavery.

In order to keep the seamen unorganized, in order to enslave them the more, the American shipowners are maintaining a force of detectives—so-called "specials"—whose duty it is to spy upon the sea workers, to report their conversation, and to prevent the "radical elements" from entering the docks. They also have special men who mix with those in forecastle, foreroom, or glory hall (the last is a large room for waiters and those of the steward department). They also spy upon those with radical tendencies and report upon them upon arrival in port.

Men reported in this way are rarely only discharged; in most cases they are blacklisted or even framed-up. To raise your voice for your rights is equal to rebellion; for such a thing one is always apt to be accused of belonging to the I. W. W. even tho you may never have gone near that organisation. To frame-up an I. W. W. is a very frequent scheme and it is done ever so often. In the past only the blacklist, but today a beating or even a murder by hired gangsters of the shipowners is a very common thing on the water front.

What Is the Blacklist?

In the olden days the blacklist meant a list of names of undesirable sea workers. It was kept under cover and rarely displayed. At present it is very common that before signing articles, a seaman's name is carefully looked up in a certain book by a certain man whose appearance and duties are of a very doubtful character. This individual shouts O. K. to the commissioner if the seaman's name is not on the blacklist and then the seaman is permitted to sign up for a voyage. If the O. K. is not given the seaman is contemptuously rejected and thrown out.

Fingerprinting Introduced.

The fingerprinting of seamen was practiced only during the war, but now it has again been introduced by the government on the west coast. Every seaman must leave his fingerprints before signing on the ship's articles. This disgraceful way of treating a seaman as if he were a criminal will in all probability reach the east coast before long.

The Deportation of Seamen.

It is greatly to the advantage of shipowners that seamen are mostly foreigners for with our new laws in operation a seaman can easily be deported as one who has illegally entered this country. The legality of a seaman's entry can easily be disputed. For years foreign seamen have manned our ships; even today more than 60 per cent of the seamen on American vessels are foreigners. During the war the American authorities were only too anxious to have these foreigners since 80 per cent of those who carried ammunition and transported soldiers for the American government were foreigners. Today scores of them are deported because they are "too radical" for the American shipowners.

One who spends most of his life at sea, who has no friends or relations ashore, tho is not able to marry on account of low wages, can easily be deported, framed-up or even murdered without any one ever learning of this outrage. And since the existing organizations in the marine industry are too weak to protect the interest of the seamen, the seaworkers in America are the most helpless and forgotten men on earth. The administration of Coolidge has done away with the LaFollette law; it has diminished the power of the shipping commissioner, converting him into a tool of the shipowner; it has given the law entirely over into the hands of the shipowners. And that is why the American ships are the most intolerable to work on since they carry men with a suppressed spirit, enslaved and oppressed like no other seamen under any other flag.

International Unity.

The Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union No. 510 of the I. W. W. have called a strike and written their demands to correct in some measure the abuses and conditions described above. The International Marine Workers' Amalgamation Committee endorses the demands of the I. W. W. seamen and calls upon all marine workers, organized and unorganized, to co-operate with the I. W. W. in their struggle against the shipowners.

But, in addition, the I. W. W. as a whole should realize the importance of affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions, since to combat the tremendous power of the shipowners—who enjoy the full co-operation of the capitalist government—and to organise the tens of thousands of marine workers still unorganised, the necessity of international organization becomes most evident and pressing.

When seamen of all countries are united in one fighting union; when no ships manned by scabs will be unloaded by organized longshoremen—only then will our strikes be fully effective. The longer we remain isolated from the revolutionary marine workers of the Red International of Labor Unions, the greater our crime against those who anxiously await a call to be organized. No program for the American seamen can be imagined as having hope of success unless it follows the policies and asserts its unity with the transport workers of the Red International of Labor Unions.

J. STONE, Secretary,
International Marine Transport Workers, Amalgamation Committee.

A BROTHER TELLS OF FAKER'S GRIP BUT OMITS CURE

Collective Not Individual Action

By JOHN M. WALKER
(Worker Correspondent.)

The writer wishes to show the railroad men of the different organizations just how they are being led astray by their grand lodge fakers.

Before a convention is held, the board of directors gets together and makes out all the changes they want in the constitution. They then have all their tools, their hand picked delegates, vote the way they want them to vote.

Over half of these delegates are not in railroad service, but they have a nice trip every three years at the brotherhood's expense.

The Way It Is Done

The board of directors consist of the grand president, vice-presidents, general secretary and treasurer. How can the rank and file expect to get anything when these fakers are there to get everything for themselves? If a delegate goes to a convention and does not fall in with the gang, he never is seen at another convention. This is the way it is done: It is three years before another convention. In that three years, one of the vice-presidents visits the delegates home town, gets the president, secretary and a few more local officers, and tells them never to sent Brother So and So to another convention, as he couldn't talk, was unreasonable and kept the convention in an uproar.

The faker never gets up in open meeting and make these charges, but spreads the poison about on the uiet. The seed is sown. The good brother never goes to another convention.

How About a Remedy?

The above description by Brother Walker is undoubtedly true. But we would like to have something besides a negative attitude from those who complain of such evils. Brother Walker does not mention a word of how to avoid or counteract the influence of the union bureaucrats. Has he no idea of the power and possibility of a left wing movement in the railroad unions?

Has he never heard of the International Committee for Amalgamation in the Railroad Industry whose activity has set thousands of local unions into opposition to the reactionary bureaucrats? Does Brother Walker imagine a rank and file movement in which each progressive member is isolated from every other one, fighting a lonely and losing battle? That would certainly be no movement at all.

What Is A Left Wing?

But we suggest to Brother Walker that he think of collective effort in the union against the fakers, just as he thinks of collective effort of the workers in a union against the bosses.

Why not a left wing movement, organized with local committees in all lodges? A movement with a national executive and a publication, literature and power to see that any brother who is persecuted by these vice-presidents or any other sort of fakers is protected by the whole committee movement which would expose the traitors and by raising fighting issues against them everywhere ultimately educate the membership to such a level of class understanding that they are immune from the poison of class collaboration and would stand no autocracy from their servants who assume to be their masters.—Editor, T. U. E. L. Section.

AVERAGE WAGE UP; TOTAL WAGE DOWN, IN U.S.A.

Don't Be Deceived by Statisticians

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

A gain of more than 5 per cent over July, 1924, brought the average weekly earnings of factory workers in July, 1925, up to $25.82, according to the U. S. department of labor. This is the highest July average since 1920 when weekly wages reached a peak at $31.56. Wages this July were 18 per cent below that high level.

Employment showed a drop of 1.1 per cent compared with June but there were 7.4 per cent more workers on factory payrolls than in July, 1924, when the first Coolidge depression reached its maximum. This gain, however, means only that big business is stabilizing employment at a low level. The average employment of the first 7 months of 1925 is considerably below the same period of 1924.

75 Per Cent Capacity

The new low level at which employment is being stabilized means little more than ¾ of full-time capacity. Factories are averaging about 90 per cent of full time for 80 per cent of a full working force.

Average weekly earnings are today 88½ per cent above July 10 years ago. The figures for July each year since 1916 are:

Average Per Capita Weekly Wage in July

1925	$25.82	1920	$31.56
1924	24.53	1919	23.84
1923	25.61	1918	20.08
1921	23.14	1916	13.69

The apparent gain of the workers in the purchasing power of wages is more than offset by the speeding-up which is narrowing the number of jobs. The total wage payments to factory workers in July, 1925, were less than 72 per cent of July, 1920. Compared with July, 1915, they show an increase of only 53 per cent. Factory owners paid 10 per cent less in total wages in July 1925 than in July 1923.

Part Time General

More than half of all the establishments reporting to the department of labor were operating with less than a normal force and over one-third were operating part time. Only 17 per cent of the meat packing establishments had a full force and only 44 per cent had full time. For other important industries the corresponding percentages were flour mills 43 per cent and 36 per cent; cotton goods 53 and 61; woolen mills 39 and 57; men's clothing 42 and 70; women's clothing 39 per cent and 63 per cent; iron and steel 29 and 50 per cent; foundries and machine shops 25 and 40; boots and shoes 41 and 51; automobile plants 32 per cent with normal force and 60 per cent on full time schedules. The country's production power exceeds its ability to dispose of the products.

Hatters and Capmakers to Cooperate

NEW YORK—(FP)—Cooperation has taken the place of jurisdictional disputes between the two leading unions in the headgear trades. The new spirit is reflected in the joint labor day message sent out by these two organizations—The United Hatters of North America and the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers International union.

LOW WAGES AND SWEATSHOP RULE LOT OF PHOTOGRAPHIC WORKERS, SAYS APPEAL TO LABOR UNIONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The Photographic Workers' Union No. 17830 has issued a call to all workers urging cooperation in their struggle to get better working conditions.

Under the caption of "Help Us Abolish Sweatshop Photography and Child Labor" the following letter has been sent to all labor unions in New York City:

To All Labor Organizations:

The men and women who take and make pictures, who develop plates, films and papers, who finish Kodak prnits, are overworked and underpaid, their jobs are at best insceure; sweat shop and unsanitary conditions prevail in most instances. Their average wage is between $15 and $20 per week. All these things, together with other occupational evils, have had a tendency to greatly undermine their strength and individuality, and at the present moment they are but mere playthings of shifting moods and varying seasons.

The purpose of this communication is not only to acquaint you with the facts, but also to enlist your wholehearted support in the attainment of our aims. You CAN and MUST give us your assistance, our demands must be made known to your membership, their help secured and resolutions passed in our behalf.

Here are a few items for your immediate consideration:

1) Look for the union placard before patronizing any photographic establishment.

2) Demand the union label on all photographs and Kodak prints.

3) Refrain from handling non-union photographs.

If every solitary member of your organization will respon to this appeal, the Photographic Workers' Union of America, Local No. 17830, will be greatly strengthened and the objects for which it is striving, attained.

Fraternally,

The Photographic Workers' Union of America, Local No. 17830.

BRITISH MINORITY CONFERENCE BIG LABOR PROGRESS

683 Delegates Represented 750,000

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON.—The National Minority Momevent, the definitely revolutionary left wing of the British unions, held its second annual conference at Battersea Hall on August 29 and 30. The aims and objects of the movement are set forth as follows:

"1. To organize the working masses of Great Britain for the overthrow of capitalism, the emancipation of the workers from their oppressors and exploiters, and the establishment of the socialist commonwealth.

Class Struggle Program.

"2. To carry on a wide agitation and propaganda for the principles of revolutionary class struggle, and to work within the existing organizations of the workers for the purpose of fighting for the adoption of the program of the National Minority Movement, and against the present tendency towards a false social peace and class collaboration and the delusion of a peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism.

"3. To unite the workers in their everyday struggles against capitalism, and at all times to advance the watchword of the united front of the workers against the exploiters.

"4. To maintain the closest relations with the Red International of Labor Unions and to work for the unity of the international trade union movement."

Officers and Delegates.

The officials are Tom Mann, chairman; general secretary, Harry Pollitt; general organizing secretary, George Hardy, and treasurer, Geo. Fletcher.

The conference was attended by 683 credentialed delegates, with 142 branches in the provinces sending 165, and 41 trades councils sending 82. By industrial groups, the metal workers sent 126 delegates, building workers 103, transport workers 75, general workers' organizations 33, co-operatives 16, miscellaneous trade unions 75, minority groups and shop steward committees 56, and unemployed organizations 45. There were 430 branches, seven district committees and six executive committees represented. Altogether it is reckoned that 750,000 workers were represented.

Tom Mann Still Leads Labor.

Besides the general organization report following the address of the old working class fighter, Tom Mann, who opened the conference as chairman of the movement, the conference heard reports from the special sections, miners, transport workers, building workers, metal workers and general workers.

Each of these sections have their special programs, and the Minority Movement as a whole has the following among its leading demands: An increase of wages of $5 a week for all existing wage scales with a minimum of $20 a week. The 44-hour week for all trades except mining and a six-hour day for miners. Nationalization of mines, railways and all chief heavy industries, without compensation and with workers' control. Unemployment relief based on confiscation of idle land and factories with workers' control. Housing relief for workers by requisition of empty houses and intensified work to build new houses for workers.

Break With Imperialism.

In foreign policy the minority movement accents its separation from imperialist interests by repudiation of the Versailles treaty and the Dawes plan, treaty and trade with Soviet Russia, a trade unionist to represent England at Moscow, and "Repudiation of the conception that the British Empire is of any regard to the British workers, and instead, to pledge ourselves to work in close connection with the workers of all those countries comprising the empire and assist them in their struggle to overthrow British imperialism."

Numerous resolutions in consonance with the aims and methods of the movement were passed at the conference which marked a most constructive period in the development of revolutionary labor not only for British workers, but for the world proletariat.

Carpenters to Gather With Building Crafts

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Among the building trade unions which will be officially represented at the conference in Washington Sept. 22 called by the national board of jurisdictional awards will be the carpenters, who for some years have not been affiliated with the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor and ~~have~~ not accepted the awards made by this board.

While the most conspicuous dispute engaged in by the carpenters regarding jurisdiction is with the sheet metal workers, they have trouble also with the lathers and other building trades. The conference has been summoned to start settling these differences.

LABOR PARTY, BUILDING UNIONS MAJOR ISSUES AT MINNESOTA CONVENTION; LAWSON A TRAITOR

(By Worker Correspondence.)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 14.—The Minneapolis State Federation of Labor will meet in annual convention at Austin, on the 21st, 22nd, and 23rd of this month. It is calculated that from 200 to 250 delegates will attend.

The convention this year holds great promise of being a very interesting session, by reason of the fact that many complex and pressing problems will stare the delegates in the face, which cannot be ignored and sidetracked, but must be squarely faced and dealt with.

At the present time the labor movement is in an extremely weakened condition. The open shop barrage has left its trail of wrecks, due to causes hereinafter cited.

This state of labor affairs, has set many earnest workers in the labor movement, to seriously concern themselves with the health of labor. But let us state the bad condition existing.

Organizations Wrecked.

Practically all organizations among the railroad shop crafts have been destroyed, what exists being company unions. Almost nothing has been done in the state, to cope with this situation among the rail workers.

The building trades are also in a very bad way. Outside of Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Duluth, the building trades have been wiped out. And in these cities seventy-five per cent of all construction work, is done under open shop conditions. The situation is simply unbearable with respect to these trades.

As far as the metal trades are concerned, we can say positively that hardly are they organized. Only a handful of these workers are organised out of the vast numbers in the trade.

The culinary trades are non-existent as far as organization goes. This trade is the most sweated of all. Long hours, low wages; intense exploitation of female workers, are the prevailing conditions. Laws which ostensibly were made to protect the women and girls, are openly violated. The federation has left this trade to sleep in misery.

This is also true in regard to all the miscellaneous trades. No effort is put forward to organise them. It is simply disgraceful to say the least.

Steel Workers Ignored.

A hundred thousand workers, directly and indirectly, employed in the steel industry, are now, as during the entire tenure of office by Hall and his reactionary cohorts, are completely without organization.

These workers labor for nine and ten hours a day. Their wages are paltry. No safety devices are furnished, as the recent accident in a mine near Crosby disclosed, which cost the lives of 40 miners.

Moreover, Wm. McEwen, editor of Duluth Labor World, and a member of Hall's reactionary family, as a member of the governor's investigating commission, vindicated the steel trust of all negligence, of all guilt. A fine piece of work indeed.

Federation Lacks Vitality.

One of the first questions, therefore, of prime importance to organized labor, which must be answered, is the scandalous lack of vitality in the federation.

There has been a tremendous falling off of membership and a great number of local unions have passed out of existence. The general position of the federation with respect to its membership and its activity, has never been so low as it is at the present time.

E. G. Hall, the president of the federation, and George Lawson, its secretary, together with their ilk, have shown no signs of a program to meet the desperate situation which confronts organized labor. They have absolutely made no effort to organize the unorganized. Not only that, but they as leaders of the federation, have not crossed a single straw to stimulate the low pulse of the federation. As far as their activity is concerned, in these important phases of the federation, it can be tersely expressed by the word nil.

Consequently, there is quite a growing sentiment against the further defeatist leadership of Hall and Lawson, whose outlook, such as it is, on labor problems, has not benefited the federation, as the record shows.

This plight of Minnesota labor demands a program of organization and education, such as the militant left wing is presenting to reconstruct the decaying organizations. The failure of Hall, Lawson & Co. to deal with these organization problems is sufficient proof of their utter incompetency to lead the federation, unless we are to regard the federation as their special pie card reserve. In that case they are highly qualified to remain at their posts. But not from any constructive labor standpoint.

The Labor Party.

The labor party is mother issue that is going to stir the convention. As is well known, Minnesota labor is among the pioneers of the labor party. It has definitely committed itself to a labor party at the New Ulm convention held in 1918, the federation took its stand on this qeustion as follows:

"Resolved, That the delegates to the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, in annual convention assembled, do hereby declare that they keenly appreciate the urgent necessity of united, aggressive and independent political action of the working class in order to intelligently and effectively solve the many momentous labor problems growing out of the present world crisis in government and industry."

This resolution put Minnesota labor into the farmer-labor party. It still stands as the position of labor on that question.

Hall, Lawson Showed Stripes.

It must be remembered in this connection, that both Hall and Lawson were opposed to this action by the New Ulm convention of 1918. They did not participate in the deliberations on that issue. They didn't want a labor party, as that group is strong for "rewarding your friends and punishing your enemies," that is to say, the capitalist parties. They have construed this resolution as meaning a petty bourgeoisie political dabble; They have gutted its proletarian significance.

Since its passage, both Hall and Lawson, as labor lieutenants of capitalism, have successfully pursued a policy of emasculation, of defeatism. They have sabotaged it to a standstill.

This resolution provided, to use its own terms, "for a permanent political movement of the working class."

Very well. But Hall, Lawson & Co. have seen to it, that no such a movement would emerge out of the trade unions. As a result of this piece of sabotage, on the part of these misleaders, the resolution is a dead letter today. The Communists are doing their level best to make the the desires of the rank and file, heeded by the officials.

Hall and Lawson must answer to the convention, for their sabotage of the labor party. The convention undoubtedly will take proper steps to insure the organization of a labor party whose foundation shall repose in the trade unions of the state. Because the capitalists and their labor henchmen are opposed to this kind of a party, is only the more reason why labor should adopt it. It certainly is an evil day for labor, when the standard of its political and industrial conduct is formulated by its natural enemies.

Election of Officers.

The officers of the federation are going to be elected at this convention for the next two years.

It is predicted by labor men here that Hall and Lawson will have the fight of their pie card careers, to be re-elected. It is pointed out that their failure to meet the problems of the federation, in any sort of way, has demonstrated even to the backward sections, their unfitness to lead. Then there is profound disgust with the manner in which Hall and Lawson have used the official year book, in which they publish scab ads. Even the timid are inflamed with wrath against industrial blackmail. Their sabotage of the labor party is also something that they cannot explain away. Their stewardship of the federation has not rebounded to the welfare of the working class. They must go, the progressives declare, who will be on hand to submit constructive measures to build the labor movement of Minnesota.

MACHINISTS OF DETROIT ANSWER JOHNSTON ORDER

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 14.—The machinists of Detroit have given another vital blow to the reactionary administration of "B. and O." Bill Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists. At a call meeting of Lodge No. 82, the members in a most decisive way protested against the executive council's expulsion policy by a vote of 57 to 5, demanding the rescinding of their decision as printed in the official circular No. 183.

A committee was elected to draft a resolution answering the ridiculous charges that "the Workers Party, Trade Union Educational League and The Young Workers League are dual organizations to the International Association of Machinists."

The members of this Lodge are greatly aroused against the present administration. At a recent special call meeting, the recall of the International officers was endorsed by a vote of 90 to 4.

At the last meeting, William Green, president of the A. F. of L. was also severely criticized for his Labor Day speech, wherein he attacks the Communists within the trade unions and had not outlined any policy of organizing the unorganized.

CROUCH AND TRUMBULL BEING PERSECUTED BEHIND WALLS OF ALCATRAZ ISLAND PRISON HELL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 14.—Paul Crouch and Walter Trumbull, Communist soldiers imprisoned in Alcatraz Island for their defense of Soviet Russia, and the rights of Hawaiian colonial tools of American imperialism, are deprived of practically all personal rights and the authorities spare no efforts to make life unpleasant for them.

All books were taken from the red soldiers, even tho many of them are authorized by regulations. Crouch was not permitted to receive ten books sent to him since his arrival in the military prison or to know the name of the person who sent them.

Another instance, typical of the policy of the authorities, was the refusal of permission for Crouch to have more than one photograph in his cell. Regulations do not specify the number and other prisoners are permitted to have any number of pictures in their cells. This brutal act of the prison administration prevents Crouch from having pictures of both his father and his mother.

Alcatraz prison regulations (prepared by the commanding officer) state that "no sensational paper of radical views is permitted." The executive officer declares that a publication advocating any socialistic principles is sensational and not permitted in this "institution."

Denied DAILY WORKER.

Therefore Crouch and Trumbull cannot receive the DAILY WORKER or any publication that does not have the O. K. of the American white terror.

This is in violation of the federal law governing prison administration (Statutes of U. S. of A., Section 1356, revised) which states that prisoners can receive newspapers, without any reservation or qualification.

Bar Criticism of Capitalism.

Army officials spare no efforts in their endeavor to follow the example of Russian czarism. A captain at Alcatraz told Crouch that personal letters from friends containing political ideas not in agreement with capitalism would be treated as sensational radical literature and would not be delivered.

This captain stated that two letters from the Internatinoal Labor Defense for Crouch and Trumbull are being held by Alcatraz authorities.

Robbed of Writing Privilege.

Prisoners on Alcatraz Island are permitted to write two letters each week if they have stamps. The government is supposed to give prisoners two stamps per month. But at present they do not receive even that allowance. One has no means of writing to friends and relatives for stamps if he has none at present. A prisoner cannot give stamps to another who has none.

Crouch and Trumbull are not permitted to correspond with other political prisoners. In letters to friends, they can speak only of personal matters. Alcatraz prisoners are given but one small sheet of paper for each "letter," and they cannot use personal stationery.

Forced to Do Injurious Labor.

Despite the need of the Alcatraz band for more musicians and the desire of the band master to have Trumbull, a professional musician, in it, the prison administration refuse their consent and are keeping him on the outdoor laborers' detail.

Crouch, also, is employed at the same work. His health is very poor and he has lost fifteen pounds in weight since his imprisonment. Because of the state of his health, he asked for a transfer to indoor work where his services would be of greater value and which would be less injurious to him.

Discrimination.

He was informed that his request would not receive even consideration until he had worked as an outdoor laborer for a month or more. Other prisoners who are more capable of doing and who wish to do outdoor work were given indoor jobs immediately after their arrival.

A military prison is the worst place in the world for one to be ill. Last week Crouch was accidentally injured so that it was almost impossible for him to walk. Nevertheless, he had to continue at his task.

Trumbull a True Rebel.

Walter Trumbull is scheduled to be released February 6, 1926, if no "good time" is taken from him before that date. He intends to come out of prison as he went in—a militant fighter for the cause of the working class—but with an even stronger determination to work unceasingly for the emancipation of the workers from wage slavery.

"Prison hardships and the white terror, bad as they are, are not sufficient to cause me to avoid imprisonment in the future as the price of my work for Communism," Trumbull declares. He says capitalist militarism has failed in its efforts to make him believe that the workers' cause is not worth the persecution its soldiers are forced to endure.

Crouch Not Weak Before Persecutors.

Paul Crouch is equally determined to fight aganist capitalism and imperialism at every opportunity, even tho that decision may mean long imprisonment or death.

"I ask no mercy from capitalism," Crouch says, "and I expect no justice from its tools except such as they are forced to give by the iron fist of labor."

Keep Up Campaign.

The protest of the workers against the brutal imprisonment of Crouch and Trumbul, which resulted in great reductions of their sentences, are continuing to have effect. In a letter to I. M. Crouch, father of the red soldier, a brigadier general of the war department staff writes that the Crouch-Trumbull case will be reviewed by the adjutant-general.

Crouch is devoting most of his spare time to a study of the Russian language. He hopes to visit Soviet Russia after his release and take lessons from the workers' republic. Crouch desires that publications in Russian be sent to him and that Russian speaking comrades write to him in that language.

Boys Want Letters.

Crouch and Trumbull state that they are unable to answer many of the encouraging letters sent to them by class conscious workers. Nevertheless, they are eager to receive letters from Communist fighters and hope their unability to answer will be attributed to a lack of gratitude and appreciation on their part.

"Letters from comrades are the most encouraging events in the life of a political prisoner," Crouch declares.

All communications to the red soldiers should be addressed to: Paul Crouch or Walter M. Trumbull, Bldg. 68, Alcatraz, Calif.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it. Send for a catalogue of all Communist literature.

BRITISH SHIPPING STRIKE IS NOT DEAD; NOT EVEN SLEEPING

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Sept. 14.—The unofficial strike, which the shipping bosses thot they had crushed, broke out anew yesterday when 130 seamen and firemen and sixty stewards refused to sail on the royal mail steam packet liner Ohpo.

Storm Near Danville.

DANVILE, Ill., Sept. 13—Thousands of dollars worth of damage was done to the town of Crescent City, in Iroquois county 77 miles west of Watseka, in what seems to have been a purely local storm, 10 buildings were blown down, and 5 of the inhabitants received injuries, but none of them serious enuf to be taken to a hospital.

DAILY WORKER FUND STILL $1000 SHORT OF FIRST WEEK'S GOAL AS HUNDREDS RUSH IN THEIR SUPPORT

Altho the total receipts to the Save the DAILY WORKER Fund fell almost a thousand dollars short of the amount set during the first week, the increasing number of supporters coming forward seems to indicate that the readers of the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Party branches are determined to meet the emergency 100 per cent. Monday's mail brought remittances from more supporters than any previous day. Small remittances from individuals and a number of big ones from organizations brought the total for the day to $906.49 and the grand total to over $4,000.

The most encouraging feature of the drive is the widespread response being secured. While a large sum of money is necessary and therefore it is essential that every contributor give as much as possible, what is more important still is for every single member of the Workers Party, every reader of the DAILY WORKER and every other working man or woman (and child too) to take part in this campaign to save the DAILY WORKER.

WITH A VIGILANT, ENERGETIC AND DETERMINED MASS MOVEMENT BEHIND THE DAILY WORKER OUR ORGAN CAN NOT BE DESTROYED BUT ON THE CONTRARY CAN AND WILL BECOME THE FLAMING TORCH-BEARER OF A REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT INCREASING ALWAYS IN SIZE AND IN POWER.

The time to do your part in forwarding the accomplishment of this task is NOW.

EMPLOYERS' LACKEY, DRAGGED IN BY LABOR FAKERS, HOOTED DOWN AT SAN FRANCISCO CELEBRATION

By FRED HARRIS,
(Worker Correspondent.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 14.—After referring to the main speaker of the evening as a competent man of labor affairs, whose advice on matters pertaining to organized labor should be taken as a lesson by the union man and woman of San Francisco, Jim Gallagher, reactionary labor leader and chairman of the Labor Day festival introduced Ernest March, former secretary of the State Federation of Labor of Washington, and for the last few years "governmental conciliator" of the Department of Labor, as the Labor Day orator to the assembled multitude of willing listeners, rallied together in the Civic Auditorium, to hear a message of importance.

Using many words and much energy, Mr. Marsh wound his oratorial trail thru a labyrinth of statistical confusion, testing the length of his audience's patience to the utmost limit. The greatest achievement of organized labor, according to Marsh, is its industrial insurance or workmen's compensation law, guaranteeing them a subsistence after they have been crippled for life by the tools of production owned by the capitalist.

Referring to the American employers as the most humane and far-sighted men, Marsh contradicted himself in the very next words by stating that the employers of the northwest lumber industry had been most hostile to institute the eight-hour day, and that it was only due to the war time measure of the federal government in establishing the eight-hour day that the employers could now see the advantage of the same. It was while he was showing the reduction of the numbers of industrial strikes in the last few years, and while he was outlining a scheme by means of which the government is going to prevent all strikes in the future, that the assembled men and women put an emphatic halt to this long and wearisome tirade by hooting, whistling and clapping their hands in an unmistakable manner.

Marsh at first took this outburst to be a well-meaning applause and began to resume his argument; but again the masses made themselves heard, and again Marsh had to stop speaking. However, tho white in his face with anger, Marsh persisted in speaking only to be halted again by the noise of cheers.

There is something definite in an applause approving the speaker if demonstrated at the right time. But there is also a definit demand expressed at the wrong time. A speaker is either made or beaten by a proper or improper ovation. Marsh had occasion to learn a lesson as to what men and women of labor want.

After the hostile demonstration of the audience was properly understood by the platform, the chairman came to the rescue imploring them to silence and respect, but to all futility. Marsh, wishing to save his face, proceeded: "In conclusion, I wish to state," and again the same noise of disapproval, and Marsh never stated what he had wished to state in conclusion. The curtain was drawn, and thus ended a farce, which the labor skates had been so careful in planning.

Bootleg Is Poisonous.

Ninety-five per cent of all liquor now being comsumed in the United States is poisonous.

That was the statement made by Prohibition Director E. C. Yellowley as he announced that he would begin next week a series of conferences with local officials in all sections of the Illinois-Indiana-Wisconsin prohibition district.

The Crime of Unemployment

To the DAILY WORKER:—

I am giving the DAILY WORKER to another worker here, when I am thru with it, and he promised that he will subscribe when he gets a little money.

I don't know when my shift will start to work to enable me to earn a piece of bread. I have already been without work for six months. If I get any help from somebody to buy medicines, maybe I can rid myself of my swollen legs and heart trouble and when the mines open again, I would go around and get some subscriptions as I used to do in the past, before I got this sickness.

But now I am not able. My heart doesn't let me work, and I must move very slowly, and drag my legs after me. Food is very scarce here.

Fraternally,
Tony Stanfl, Mystic, Iowa.

U. S. Population Increases.

The total amount of money in circulation on Sept. 1, this year, exclusive of funds held by the treasury and the federal reserve banks, was $4,784,024,000, compared with $4,773,878,000 on Sept. 1, 1924.

The per capita circulation on Sept. 1, was $41.84, compared with $42.28 a year ago.

NUMBER 3 THREE
The Little Red Library

Principles of Communism

By FREDERICK ENGELS.
Translation by Max Bedacht.

TO every worker and especially to every student of the labor movement this booklet should prove of extreme interest. It is the original draft of the Communist Manifesto—and the first American publication of this original exposition of Communist principles. With the historical notes included, it definitely establishes the Little Red Library as carrying "important contributions to the literature of the revolutionary movement."

RIFFIANS TAKE HEAVY TOLL OF FRENCH TROOPS

Pour Lead from Hills Into Attackers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Sept. 14.—Abd-el-Krim, whose defense against the French-Spanish attack is now aided by the fog, is centering his forces at Mount Amjot and Mount Aghil. The Riffians are pouring an effective fire of machine gun and artillery fire from these and other barren slopes into the Europeans, forced to advance to their death because of the greed of the imperialist bankers.

The French war office has admitted that there is no foundation for the report that the French had captured Amyat, capital of the Beni Zeroual region.

General Noucilas has been appointed commander of the Spanish troops in the Beni Harrick region, because of the success of the Riffians in this territory. Tetuan is still besieged by the Riffians, who have surrounded the Spanish capital.

RED SCARE AND MURDER THREATS AGAINST BRITISH MINERS' HEAD ANSWERED BY CALL FOR DEFENSE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A letter from the Communist Party executive to the labor party has been the pretext for a concerted press attack upon the labor movement in this country.

In form the press attack is against a "Communist conspiracy" to "undermine the loyalty" of the army and navy. In reality it is an atack upon every section of the labor movmeent which is alert and virile enough to be on its guard against and to be prepared to defend itself against the planned and projected capitalist dictatorship.

Especially significant is the savagery with which A. J. Cook is singled out for vindictive abuse—a fact that has already found expression in threats of assassination.

John Wheatley, member of parliament, has arroused capitalist fury by his courageous call for a workers' defense corps to meet the threatening storm.

Ten Million Men Wanted.

Writing in the South Side Standard (Glasgow), John Wheatley, member of parliament, says:

Reading the capitalist press one might think that the workers alone thot of using force in trade disputes.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

Nearly every reduction in wages during my lifetime has been obtained by force. The workers never agreed to a reduction, but were always forced to yield. They had to choose between surrender and starvation. They knew that resistance would mean a blockade of their homes, that not only they put their wives and children would be attacked.

The form of force used against them usually is one of the most brutal in warfare. We bitterly denounced the brutality of German bombing because it brot innocent women and children into the line of fire. This mode of attack is the first in capitalism's plan.

It is already quite clear that the attack on the miners was suspended, not because their enemies had become more reasonable, but because they were taken by surprise.

We don't find their press devoting columns to an examination of the rights and wrongs of the industrial dispute. We do see them devoting article after article to an appeal for force.

"Sooner or later," says the Weekly Dispatch, "there must come a definite trial of strength. We have no sort of doubt as to the result—if we are prepared."

Says Mr. Garvin: "The government would be criminal if . . . it did not from this moment prepare thoroly for the worst, and compile its detailed registers for citizen service in emergency."

Says the Morning Post: "The nation must save itself. Every man and every woman must be ready to play an appointed part—to make the necessary sacrifices and submit to the necessary discipline."

The fascisti have been threatening A. J. Cook, and it is quite possible that one of these days he may be murdered.

Now or Never

It is now or never. If the workers are defeated here and driven to a lower standard of living I can see no hope of a successful rally.

Can anyone believe that reason will operate in industrial questions if the workers have inadequate power of resistance?

In order to maintain industrial peace the workers must be ready to resist successfully the attack that is now being prepared.

The workers' defense corps must not be merely an alliance of leaders. It must be a hearty union of the rank and file. Every labor organization in Britain should proceed immediately to obtain pledges from millions of workers that in this hour of destiny they will not desert their class.

We want ten million men, men who are prepared to suffer rather than see Britain made a land of coolies.

The very existence of the nation is menaced. You cannot depress 70 per cent of the population to barbarism without national disaster.

Nine months is not too long in which to enrol ten million men. No man is too busy or too humble to take part.

Your class and country want you.

Let every worker obtain a pledge of loyalty from his fellow-worker. Let every labor organization be used en masse to enrol recruits.

Ten million men could save us.

FRENCH BUDGET FOR 1926 SHOWS DEFICIT OF 3 BILLION FRANCS

PARIS, France, Sept. 14.—The tentative French budget for 1926, submitted to the finance commission of the chamber of deputies by M. Caillaux, finance minister, shows a deficit of 3,400,000,000 francs.

Caillaux proposes to budget for expenditures 36,040,000,000 francs, and estimates receipts at 32,600,000,000 francs.

AIR COMMITTEE APPOINTED BY CAL ALL PLUTES

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 14.—The committee of nine appointed by president Coolidge to "investigate the subject of air craft," forced by charges of criminal negligence made by Col. William Mitchell, consists of manufacturers, bankers, and a few conservative tools of the employers sitting in congress.

Included on the Coolidge committee are Dwight Morrow, banker partner of J. P. Morgan and personal friend of Coolidge, Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, president of the Radio corporation of America, the radio trust, Howard E. Coffin, vice president of the Hudson Motor Car Co.

Rear Admiral F. F. Fletcher, retired, Col. Hiram Bingham, senator from Connecticut, Congressman Carl Vinson of Georgia, Congressman James Parker, and Judge Arthur Denison complete the committee.

Col. Mitchell expressed himself as satisfied with this committee of employers, showing his previous statements were merely made in behalf of a section of the capitalist class. This committee will decide, among other things, the responsibility for the death of 14 members of the wrecked airships Shenondoah.

Mitchell's charges serve to promote militaristic propaganda.

20th Boot and Shoe Strike.

LYNN, Mass.—Pickets of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union are picketing the Washington Shoe Co. where 200 workers are striking for union standards. A number of strikebreakers have been imported. This is the twentieth strike in Lynn shoe factories in the last month.

NOTED FOREIGN SCIENTISTS AT SOVIET ACADEMY

Huge Gathering at the Bicentenary

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, (Russian Information Bureau.)—A governmental commission at Leningrad made arrangements for the celebrations in connection with the bi-centenary of the Russian Academy of Sciences. The commission was headed by M. Gorbunov, chief clerk of the Council of People's Commissary of U. S. S. R. The first meeting of the commission at Leningrad took place with the participation of the academicians Staklov and Oldenburg and public officials.

Gorbunov, in an interview with a press correspondent, said:

"The Soviet government has issued a decree proclaiming the bi-centenary of the Academy of Sciences a festival for the whole of the Union, in view of the tremendous scientific importance of the academy. Guests had been invited from the leading scientific institutions of the world and over 600 invitations had been sent out to Europe, America and Asia. The arrival was expected of not less than 150 foreign scientists. More than 1,000 representatives of scientific institutions in U. S. S. R. would take part.

"Among the world-known scientists who signified their desire to take part in the celebrations are Flang, the physicist, the permanent secretary of the Prussian Academy of Sciences; Keynes, one of the leading economists of England; Prof. Levicovitz, Francesco Savelli, rector of the University of Rome, and many others."

The festivities began at Leningrad on September 5. An official commission organized the festivities, headed by M. Rykov, with the participation of representatives of the Academy of Sciences and also Lunacharsky, Gorbunov, Milyutin, Bubnov, Litvinov, Yevdokimev, Tsyperevitch and other public men.

Maynard Keynes, who arrived with his wife, the famous Russian dancer, Lupokova, representing Cambridge University, said to the Soviet press:

"A belt of fog has been separating Russia from the rest of the world. Both we and the Russians have been losers. Russia has so much that is unique and characteristic to give to the world, and at the same time Russia is to dependent for progress on the outside world, that this separation has been one of the most deplorable things possible. I welcome the occasion of the bi-centenary, because it represents the lifting of the fog belt—the first small tentative movement toward the reunion of the Russian mind with the international mind. The occasion is a happy one, because we meet under the auspices of science, which knows no frontiers nor political parties. In this field, which lies outside of morals, parties and conventions, we can meet on a safe, neutral ground and begin to feel the way by personal contacts to a reunion of the Russian soul as well as the Russian mind with the soul and mind of the rest of mankind.

"When I talked with the Soviet Foreign Minister, Tchitcherin, and the financial expert, Preobrajenski, at the Genoa conference, I foretold that Russian money would be stabilized sooned than in any of the other countries of Europe. Now I say that if Russia has good harvests coming two years in succession her wealth will be greater than the greatest credit she might obtain abroad."

CANTON GOVERNMENT DEMANDS FULL REDRESS FOR SHAMEEN MASSACRE, FINDS BRITISH, FRENCH TO BLAME

PEKIN—(By Tass)—L. M. Karakhan, Soviet ambassador to China, has received from the Canton administration a letter embodying the findings of the investigation commission on the Shameen firing which killed Chinese students who were parading.

This letter was sent for the information of the diplomatic corps, and was forwarded to all the foreign missions at Pekin.

The findings show that French and British troops were solely responsible for the massacre. The letter from the Canton government follows:

Re: The Shaki Massacre.

In continuation of the protest telegraphed to you by my predecessor Mr. Chao-chu Wu, secretary for foreign affairs, I have the honor to transmit to you as doyen of the diplomatic corps of the foreign powers at Pekin for the information of the members of the diplomatic body, and your own information, the findings of the investigation commission. This commission was composed of 18 persons including judicial, police officers representatives of the laborers, farmers, merchants and educators.

Findings of Commission.

The commission, after examining numerous witnesses, finds as follows:

1. The order of procession of the demonstrators were respectively (a) the laborers and merchants, (b) the boy and girl students of schools, colleges and universities, and (c) the cadets.
2. Everybody was unarmed, except the cadets who were in the rear.
3. Firing was first started from Shameen.
4. The cadets were several hundred feet distant from the students.
5. The student section was first fired upon from Shameen in front of the English bridge.
6. Shooting near the French bridge followed that from the English bridge.
7. Many victims were spectators of the procession and passers-by.
8. Machine guns were freely used by Shameen forces and the bullets were of the dum-dum and soft-nosed kind.
9. Many policemen were posted along the route of procession to keep order.
10. There was no intention on the part of the cadets to create trouble by the manner of their close marching namely, four abreast, during the firing from Shameen.

British and French Responsible.

The above findings clearly prove that the responsibility for the outrageous massacre rests with the British and French authorities in Shameen. Thereupon the Kwantung government presented thru the consuls at Canton to the British and French ministers at Pekin the following demands:

1. All the nations concerned should appoint high officials to tender apology to the Kwangtung government.
2. To punish the authorities concerned.
3. All the men-of-war of the nations concerned to be withdrawn, except two boats designed for conveyance of messages.
4. Rendition of Shameen to the Kwangtung government's control.
5. Compensation for the Chinese who were killed and wounded.

I append herewith a copy of Mr. Chao-chu Wu's telegram to you, copies of the government's dispatches to the British and French consuls re the subjects, and a translation of the full report of the investigation commission.

The nationalist government demands that justice should be done and redress be given for this infamous massacre, and respectfully requests your good offices in this matter.

(Signed) Hu Han-min.

One Hundred Casualties.

The telegram mentioned above, from Choa-chu Wu to Karakhan follows:—It is my painful duty to bring to the notice of your excellency as dean of the diplomatic corps the following incident. A procession consisting of merchants, students, cadets, laborers, and peasants, marched thru the streets of Canton as demonstration of sympathy for the victims of the Shanghai outrage. Perfect order was preserved.

About 3:10 p. m. when it reached Shaki Road which runs parallel to the Anglo-French concession of Shameen, but is seperated from it by a canal, and when the greater portion of the procession had already passed, unexpectedly a murderous fire from machine guns and rifles was opened from Shameen on the demonstrators, particularly the students. The pandemonium among the boy and girl students, the demonstrators and spectators, can be better imagined than described. The casualties so far known total upwards of a hundred.

"Outrage of Imperialism."

I have the honor in the name of civilization and humanity to register with you and thru you, the diplomatic representatives of the foreign powers in Pekin, the strongest protest against this fresh outrage of imperialism.

The case is aggravated by the fact that the demonstrators were separated from Shameen by a wide canal spanned by two bridges at the heads of which were stout iron gates closed and barricaded, and these gates were unmolested thruout.

In face of this atrocity the indignation of the people is naturally great. Nevertheless the government is doing everything in its power to protect foreigners of all nationalities, to prevent the people from committing futile acts of anti-foreignism, and to guide and teach them that the struggle is rather with the system of foreign imperialism and that it should be conducted with means worthy of the cause.

(Signed) Chao-chu Wu.

SCHOOL BOARD OF LOS ANGELES WARS ON UNIONS

Building Tradesmen Are Kicked for Pains

(By Worker Correspondent.)

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Sept. 14.—This burg is undoubtedly as well organized as any place in the U. S. Yet fraternizing with the "powers that be" is not getting too good results.

One of the main thorns in the side of the unions here is and has been the school board. There have been small jurisdictional squabbles between crafts.

On one job particularly, the Lincoln School, they have imported a "rat herder" from Los Angeles. He evidently is a graduate from the "Free Workers' Page" of the L. A. Times. He is an out and out "open shopper" and therefore suits the board fine. On this job the other day the carpenters quit because of "open shop" conditions.

The Santa Barbara Building Trades Council at a special meeting of the school board have unsuccessfully pleaded for union conditions on school jobs. The board decided that they would not "deviate from the precedent established years ago on all school work where men regardless of their fraternal affiliation can work if qualified."

In an editorial the Santa Barbara Daily News of Sept. 4 blames the unions for the lack of harmony, claiming: "The difficulty grew out of a controversy as to which craft should do a particular piece of work." It has only praise, as might be expected, for the board, saying: ". . . 'the school board has done wonders towards the reconstruction of the schools." It ends hypocritically: "The labor officials and representatives ought to see to it that no factional disputes retard by one minute the work on the schools."

Everything that the unions could be expected to do in the way of cooperating with the school board they have done. Their members have contributed a day's wages and voted money out of their treasuries for the rehabilitation fund; they have even set aside their trade rules and worked Sundays for straight tmie. In their meetings they have argued that by doing this they would in the future, when clouds gathered and they were asked what they had done for the upbuilding of the community, be in a position to point to money contributed and sacrifices made.

It is true objections have been made to taking this stand. One man took the floor and stated he had not contributed money to the school board and did not intend to. A school board which was too stingy to pay common laborers their scale of $4.50, would get no money from him.

Religion in Politics

There was a time in Ireland when a protestant member of the British ruling class coveted a horse belonging to a catholic peasant of the subject class, the only thing he had to do was to offer the poor catholic a five pound note for the steed and the animal changed hands. If the catholic refused the offer, he lost his horse, the five pound note and very likely his catholic head.

This was correct in the eyes of the lord who was worshipped after a fashion by the British ruling class. That same ruling class once owed fealty to the catholic god, but owing to a difference of opinion between themselves and god's agent in Rome, there was a rupture of relations and they made a god of their own, who came in very handy when they wanted to rob somebody of his wordly goods. The task was easier when that person worshipped a different god.

In the days of the Inquisition anybody suspected of harboring ideas on religion not in conformity with those prevailing in official circles, was liable to find himself entertained by many instruments of torture, wielded by men who were either too lazy to argue with the recalcitrant one, or else thought that their god was a he-man who did not relish converts who came to him by appeal to reason, emotion or self-interest. There usually was a nickel somewhere under the heel. Religion has always been the handmaiden of business and ruling class politics. The three are inseparable. That the founder of christianity did not know the game is amply proven by his crucification, which we might as well accept as authentic for the sake of argument.

In the days of the Inquisition it often happened that one catholic who coveted another catholic's wife, his property or both felt it to be his bounden duty to question the integrity of his neighbor's religious fervor. An application of red hot iron slippers, a quart of molten lead, a little stretch on a rack and the questionable catholic either gave up the ghost or gave up the things his co-religionist coveted.

It is a long cry from the days of the Inquisition until today. Yet we see the same old methods applied tho in a modified form.

Al Smith, governor of New York, is waging a life and death struggle against William Randolph Hearst. Smith, is backing Jimmy Walker as mayor of New York. Hearst is backing Hylan. Smith is a catholic; so is Hylan. So is Jimmy Walker. Hearst is not.

When Al Smith and McAdoo were battling for the democratic nomination for the presidency, Al branded McAdoo as a kluxer and stopped him short in his tracks. Perhaps McAdoo was no more a kluxer than Smith, but it worked. William Jennings Bryan prayed to god—ostensibly the same deity that serves both Al and Mac—to drive out the K. K. K. issue, but the rank and file were too set in their ways and god had to remain neutral in order to retain his following. Finally Smith, the catholic, and Mac, the kluxer, met in the Belmont hotel and agreed on the banker Davis, who was neither. He was just J. P. Morgan's attorney.

Now, Hylan, backed by Hearst and Walker, backed by Smith, are battling for New York City and all the graft thereof. It is a prize worthy of great fighters. It is a noble city to loot. The harvest is great and the harvesters are many.

In this struggle all rules of civilized warfare are ditched. The combatants are hitting below the belt, but those who have the votes are led to believe that the struggle is one between right and wrong, between democracy and autocracy or between the "interests" and the "peepul." Hylan got the jump on Smith, because Hylan has a monopoly on all anti-traction baron stuff and the traction barons are as popular in New York as the pope of Rome is in Copenhagen. Smith looked around for something to fasten on to Hylan and he saw the klux brick he belabored McAdoo with, laying idle in the corner. The governor hurled it at Mike Hylan's red head.

Here was catholic versus catholic. It was to weep. But the klux charge changed many votes. How many, today's primaries will tell. The working class of New York, many of them, will worry their heads off over Hylan's alleged desertion to the K. K. K. and forget all about the employing class which is served so well by Hylan, Smith, Hearst and Jimmy Walker.

Thus religion is used by Al Smith today for the same purpose it was used by some other Al Smith several centuries ago. The workers should not be fooled by this fake issue, but they will nevertheless for a while. We must keep on telling them that not Hylan or Hearst, Walker or Smith, or any other collection of capitalist lackeys will or can give them the lead in solving their problems, but the Communists who have consigned the gods to the limbo of dead superstitions and who intend to consign capitalism to the limbo of history.

Amid all this welter of confusion created by the tools of capitalism in their mad scramble for power and loot, there stands out one party that has a program, free from cant and humbug. The Workers (Communist) Party, with its candidate Benjamin Gitlow, calls on the workers to rally for the task of freeing themselves from the economic chains that bind them. Those who would free themselves must first strike the blow.

The Communists are disrupting the unions, says William Green. After saying this, Green sits down and writes a letter sanctioning the scabbery of the United Garment Workers' Union on the Amalgamated strikers in Chicago.

"If I had loved my class half as well as I have loved my king, they might not have turned me down at the Scarborough conference," is what Ramsay MacDonald may not have mused when the resolution denouncing imperialism was rammed thru.

John H. Walker, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, fears that the wet question will supersede all others at the coming convention of that body. Let us hope John does not get sloppy over the issue and turn on his lachrymal spigots.

Two strikes are on in Chicago at the present time and two unions affiliated to the American Federation of Labor scabbing on both Isn't graft unionism grand?

BRITISH GIVE WOMEN MINERS NO PROTECTION

Not Even Sympathy for Colonial Slaves

LONDON—(FP)—Women still toil in the coal mines of India. On the tea plantations a system of indentured labor exists, which practically amounts to slave labor. Flourishing Bombay cotton factories, paying dividends of 100 per cent on the original bonafide capital, pay their workers far below the minimum living wage determined by government experts and are now trying to cut these starvation wages 25 per cent in some cases. These are a few facts about the exploitation of Hindu labor with which the Workers Welfare League of India, the agents in Britain of the All-India Trades Union congress, are seeking to acquaint the British labor movement.

The government of India has only recently been expressing its full sympathy—not with the unfortunate women miners, who are driven to backbreaking toil underground—but with the employers who are demanding that the use of women shall not be interfered with. The Indian Mining Federation (the employer organization) has protested to N. B. Mitra, government member of industries and labor, against the bill contemplated by the government of India prohibiting the employment of women labor underground in the coal mines. In reply, Mitra assured the employers that the government sympathized with their view, and that it would reconsider.

Action by the British cooperative movement to assist Hindu labor is urged by the Workers Welfare League. It is calling on the gigantic Cooperative Wholesale society to refuse to allow on its tea plantations—or on plantations which, as buyers on an enormous scale, it influences—the system of indentured labor or the employment of women and children. The league is also asking for a minimum wage amounting to about $35 a month, and for assistance to be granted to the Indian Trades Union congress by the enforcement of a "trade unionists only" employment policy by the cooperative.

SOVIET UNION ALLOTS LARGE SUM TO BUILD AGRICULTURE, BUYS MORE TRACTORS, CONDUCTS EXHIBITIONS

MOSCOW—The council of the people's commissars of the R. S. F. S. R. has allotted 75 million rubles to improve the agricultural conditions of the central-blacksoil region which conists of the provinces of Kursk, Orlov, Voronish, and Tambov. According to the plans the reconstruction will take five years. In 1925-26, 28,000,000 rubles will be spent, out of which six million will be used on tractors.

Tractors in the U. S. S. R.

According to the Narkomsem (department of agriculture) the Union of S. S. R. has now about 7,500 tractors. Five hundred of them are from pre-war times. One thousand tractors have been manufactured in U. S. S. R. during the last few years. Six thousand have been imported. This year the Markomsem will import 4,500 tractors, part of which are now on the way to Russia. In 1926 the Soviet factories will manufacture 500 tractors.

Exhibition of Agricultural Literature.

In October, 1925 an exhibition will be opened in Moscow of popular agricultural literature issued during the last few years in many tens of millions copies. In pre-revolutionary times Russia had a few agricultural periodicals and not one daily paper. Now there are hundreds of periodicals and daily papers. The circulation of the most popular daily agricultural paper Bednota is about half a million daily.

Export of Grain.

The ports of the Black and Asov seas are full of steamers which are exporting grain from Soviet Russia. From all over the U. S. S. R. thousands of carloads of grain are coming into the ports.

Harvester Trust Re-enters.

The main concession committee has decided to allow the International Harvester Co. to resume commercial operations in U. S. S. R. This well known firm will furnish for them harvesting machinery and spare parts.

The Narkomsem has worked out a plan by which 2,595,000 rubles in various sums will be distributed among the peasants to improve their methods of agriculture.

In the month of July in the newly opened house of the peasants 1,698 representatives visited the institution, notwithstanding that this month was a very busy one for field work. In July the lectures on agriculture were attended by 3,400 persons.

"NA BOYKOM MIESTE" TO BE PRESENTED SAT. AT WORKERS' HOUSE

The Russian theater season will be opened formally this Saturday, Sept. 19, at 8 p. m., at the Workers' House, 1902 W. Division St. Under the leadership of the Russian actor L. Luganov, and with the participation of the Russian actresses Aza Namgova, Moiseyenko and others, the play "Na Boykom Mieste" by Ostrowski will be presented.

It is expected that the play will draw a big crowd.

The library of the Workers' House is now receiving magazines from Soviet Russia, also books published recently in Russia.

The Gosplan of the R. S. F. S. R. will purchase from the crop of this year 1,500,000 poods of the best seeds in order to establish a seed fund.

The cotton seeding campaign in Transcaucasia has been completed. According to the original plan the area seeded was to be 106,200 dessiatins. The respective areas are as follows: Azerzajdjan—107,665 dessiatins; Armenia—16,705; the province of Nachichevan—9,705 dessiatins; Georgia—5,827 dessiatins. If the conditions should be favorable, a crop of 5,570,000 poods will be expected, or 87 per cent more than the preceding harvest.

The Narkomsem has received from all parts of R. S. F. S. R. requisitions for one million plows, 390,000 harrows, 6,000,000 threshing machines and about 250,000 other machines. A large amount of dairy machinery, binding, spare parts, etc., is also required. The sum of 130,000,000 rubles is on hand for these purposes. The export will be about 60 million rubles.

DETROIT RUNS LABOR SPYING DEPARTMENT

Streetcar Men Made Victims of Finks

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT—(FP)—The intelligence division of the Detroit department of street railways stands discredited as a system for spying and intimidation on the employes. The Detroit railways are municipally owned and operated.

A board of arbitration has just awarded Benedict Robin, a conductor, $509.09 back pay for the time lost between Aug. 7, 1924, when he was discharged, and Dec. 14, whe he was reemployed. Representatives of the Amalgamated Assn. of Street & Electric Railway Employes of America convinced the trial board that Robin was discharged by the department's trial board because of his leadership in opposing the formation of a company union, or, in this case, a department union, and in strengthening the streetcar men's union. The inspectors who made the charges against Robin were undercover agents known in department records by number only. He was not allowed to confront his accusers at the departmental hearing. He was accused of knocking down fares, using profanity against car riders, keeping car doors open, being late to work and various other offenses. The arbitration board held the charges were not proved.

The "intelligence division" is a relic of a previous city administration, notoriously anti-union, but it continued under the present administration which was supported by organized labor.

A Voyage to Soviet Russia by American Mariners

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 1.— This graphic story told in simple language was written by a master mariner and vouched for by every seaman aboard just returned who went, saw and were convinced. Every one of these sturdy and brave mariners are now the staunchest friends of the Workers' Soviet Republics they declare. It is the most memorable fishing voyage made they say. It is full of interest—Aaron Fisherman.

(Master Mariner.)

Log of schooner "Apollo" on a voyage from Seattle to Petropavlovsk and Ust. Kamchatka, Siberia, Red Russia, as we as members of the ship's crew found it while there.

We left Seattle, Wash., on April 20, 1925, and after a stormy passage of 37 days, we steered our little vessel of 269 tons into Avachee Bay. We anchored in the harbor of Petropavlovsk, about 7 a. m., and it struck us all, that it was a beautifully laid out little town. Sloping down the foot of high hills into a valley. It was our first look at Red Russia, the land we had read so much about in American newspapers.

After breakfast six port officials, courteous young men, came on board, shook hands all around, and proceeded to examine the ship's papers. After they got thru they granted us pratique, shook hands all around again and left. A while later the pilot came on board and took us alongside the dock.

Given Warm Welcome.

When the ship was docked, we all washed up and went on shore, as we all were anxious to take a look at the people and conditions there. We only had a short walk to the town and as we got there we were astonished at the welcome we got from the people. It seems everywhere we looked or went, we were invited in. It sure was different from what we expected, after reading so much about the cruel Bolsheviks in Soviet Russia.

But anyway we all made up our minds soon, that there was nothing cruel about these people, because they were kindliness themselves. So we said to each other that some of the press in America must have made a mistake about these people, which we will try to correct for the benefit of the American worker.

First of all we will say, as old seafarers, with among us, all the way from ten to forty years of experience on the high seas, that most of us had visited Russia in czarist days, in the Baltic and Black Sea ports. Therefore we soon noticed the difference in the atmosphere and conditions about. The people were not the same as they were 20 years ago. They looked entirely different from those days.

They all have a happy, healthy look of satisfaction on their faces. Dressed neat and clean, the young women mostly with hair bobbed and the men neat and clean shaven.

Meet Young Communists.

We were kind of handicaped on account of the language, but soon found one or two that could speak English and German so we were soon fixed in that respect.

Several young men from the town invited us with them to a restaurant where we were introduced to several young men and women. After we were seated they explained to us that this was the Young Communist Restaurant and during our stay in port we were welcome. We were brot tea, cigarettes and mineral water, and were entertained until about 8 p. m. Then the young men bade us to come along, so we got up and wanted to settle the bill, for what we had eaten and drank, but they only laughed good naturedly and said, "Put your money in your pocket, it is of no use to us. You are our guests as long as you are here." So we thanked them, bade them good night and went with the young men.

Visit Soldiers' Culb.

Next they took up to a large building where we passed a sentry, a red soldier, who greeted us. We were taken inside and soon learned that we were in the soldiers' club.

There were about 30 young soldiers there. We were introduced to all, a jolly lot of young fellows. They soon made us at home, showed us around and finally took us into their game and recreational rooms, there we had all kinds of fun, gymnasium and different games. Then they fetched their stringed instruments and played and sang the Internationale. After that they danced, all the step dances and their own Russian dances which we enjoyed wonderful. They sure were happy and contented.

Some of them spoke German. They told us how they had fought on the different fronts during the revolution. Some of them had seen service from the Archangel front clean across Vladivostock and Kamchatka, Bering Sea.

About midnight we bade them all good night. They all told us not to forget to come back again. We told them we would, if we had time, as we were only going to stay in port about two days.

So we started back for the ship, all thoroly convinced they were the friendliest people we had met in our travels. Real people and friends, workers like ourselves. Different from any other part of the world where crimps and sharks usually lay in wait for their easy prey to come on shore. We sat up late on board that night, discussing with each other about the hospitality and welcome we got from those people.

Wanted to Stay.

Next day, was a busy day, as we had a lot of work to do and get ready for the fishing grounds. All day long we had a lot of visitors, some of them young Communists, whom we had invited down to our little ship for a visit. They invited us to the movie theater that evening and to different places of amusement which we gladly accepted.

Our cabin boy, a fine young lad of sixteen years, from Seattle, was on shore the night before and and it could be seen that the young people in the club took all kinds of interest in him. So the next morning, young Kenneth wandered off by himself and soon found himself back with his friends of the night before. A while later one of us went on shore to get some cigarettes and there was young Kenneth playing with the boys and girls. The ship apparently the farthest away from his thoughts.

About 3 o'clock in the afternoon, he came back to the ship looking for his grand dad who was the engineer on board. He found him and we were surprised to hear that he wanted to leave the ship and stay in Siberia. His grand dad asked him what he wanted to stay there for. He said that the young people wanted him to stay there and that he had grown so fond of these young people that he did not want to come back on the ship. He further asked his grand dad to come on shore with him to the club, which he did.

When they got there, the young fellow who spoke English was there and several of the other young people. Soon they got around him and fairly begged him to leave young Kenneth there; that they had taken such a liking to him and that in about one month they were going to the university at Moscow and they wanted young Kenneth with them. Then they took the old man with them to their parents and they also assured him that Kenneth would be taken care of and would get a good education at the university of Moscow.

Education Best in World.

Well, Mr. Bennett, his grand dad, was taken back at all this that he told them he would give his word in the morning, that he would think it over, so he came back to the ship.

Late in the afternoon we washed up and went on shore. It was the same as as the previous evening with many invitations. But we told them it was early yet, and we wanted to see the town. Whereupon they came with us and showed us all around. After our walk we had some refreshments in the club and then they took us to the movie. There we spent a pleasant evening, with good music and fine pictures.

After the show we had some more refreshments and smokes, then we bid them good night and went on board.

The next morning the professor of one high school, Mr. Noblegrabblenoff, came on a visit to our ship and we soon made him at home on board. He spoke good English. We had quite an interesting talk with him. We spoke with him mostly on the economical and political questions of Soviet Russia. And he soon answered us that he himself was not a member of the Communist Party of Russia. But that he had all kinds of respect for the Communist government.

Also that Russia was coming to the front wonderfully industrially and that he was more than contented with the government and conditions. He also said that as far as the educational system was concerned in Russia, well, that could not be beaten in any part of the world. Education in Russia was the order of the day.

Mr. Bennett, the boy's grand dad, opened the subject with him about young Kenneth staying there. And he also assured Mr. Bennett, that he did not have to be alarmed to leave the boy there. And that he could be assured that the boy would be well taken care of and be given a good education at Moscow.

We gave the professor some English books and he in turn invited us all to come and visit the school if we had time. So we told him that we would like to, so he bade us come along now which we did, as the school was only a short distance away.

Visit to Soviet School.

Upon our arrival at the school he introduced us to all the teachers and took us all thru the different classes while the pupils were there at their study. He explained everything to us. They had the Dalton system of schooling. The pupils were all bright, healthy looking children and seemed all to be very interested in their studies. I asked him if there was any religion taught in the school, and he said none whatever. I asked him if any of the children attended church. Whereupon he answered in the whole school of several hundred, just three girls attended. So I said "the church is not doing a flourishing business here."

So we thanked him for his kindness and said goodbye to him. Mr. Bennett and myself took a walk up the street and there was young Kenneth with the boys. We went in the club and they soon got around him and wanted to know now if Kenneth could stay, as they all knew that we were to sail that day. So the old man said to one, "I think I will leave him here. He is with good kind people. And if he gets back to Seattle, his mother is dead anyway. I think he is better off here." So he gave his consent and the young people went wild with joy and shook the old man's hand and told him not to worry any more over Kenneth.

Kenneth Goes to Moscow.

So young Kenneth went on board with his friends and packed his clothes and deserted the ship. He is at the university of Moscow, now.

I have often thought since, how many of those kind hearted American capitalists in America would take a workingman's son and send him six thousand miles by land and water to get a good education.

Yet those "cruel" Communists did that with a glad heart, to a strange boy at that.

When Mr. Bennett spoke to some of the older people before we left, as to how he was and where to send the money for the boy, they again assured him that the boy would be taken good care of and that the money part was absolutely out of the question and was not wanted.

Just about that afternoon as we were ready to leave, three young men and the town priest, in his official garb, came down to the ship and begged us for a passage to Ust Kamchatka, 250 miles north, the place we were bound. One of them spoke German and I asked him what they were going to do up there. He answered they wanted to go fishing up there and that the Russian steamer would not be there to take them for six weeks and then it would be too late in the season. The priest was in the same boat as they, he also was going to fish, he said. There was nothing else for him to do.

He said the church business had gone to pieces. So being, they were all good proletarians, including the priest, who had to be one, we gave them a passage. That afternoon about 3 o'clock, we cast off. There were a lot of people at the dock to say good bye to us including our young cabin boy.

Our trip up the coast we made uneventful and arrived at Ust Kamchatka June 1. We were boarded on arrival there by the officials and pratique was granted us. So that night we sailed down the coast 18 miles to our destination where we were to receive our load of fish. We anchored there off a Japanese cannery about half mile from shore. There we go a Soviet Russian custom official on board for the purpose of counting the fish. He was a happy, jolly, old fellow. He could not speak English, but we got along fine with him. As we did not understand his name, we immediately named him the Proletarian.

The days passed slowly there as we were 18 miles away from the village. So we often strolled off in the mountains for a few hours to pass the monotony.

Praise For Government.

The old Proletarian amused us much. He wore high top leather boots, after the Russian fashion. There was one among us who played the mouth organ and got the Proletarian and he danced Russian dances in the cabin. He was a man of about 60 years, but full of fun, like a kid of 19.

On about June 25, there came two Swedish explorers on board our ship for a visit. They were sent out from Sweden in 1920, on a scientific expedition to Kamchatka and had been there five years and spoke good Russian. They were two fine fellows, so we soon made them feel at home. They spoke good English and we were very glad to have them on board. They told us their adventures in Kamchatka and liked the country very much. They also spoke highly of the Soviet Russian government and their educational system.

The youngest of the two said that he was seriously thinking about offering his services to the Moscow government. They stayed with us all day and that evening when they went on shore we told them to come often as they were working in that vicinity. They said they would and they were our guests many times after.

ONE of th[illegible] of L. delegates to the British Trade Union Congress, expressed the opinion that British labor is decidedly conservative and still follows the lead of MacDonald and the yellow socialists. Whether he was consciously lying or merely exhibiting his ignorance is doubtful. The American labor skate did not see the significance in the passage of a resolution against British imperialism, the first time such a resolution was passed at a British trade union congress.

IMPERIALISM means something more to an English worker than it means to a follower of LaFollette or of William Jennings Bryan. To the latter imperialism is something vague, anything from shooting craps to manslaughter. But to the English worker it smacked of bread and butter for him, at somebody else's expense, but hard world that this is, the other fellow's pain was not the English workers' worry. The significance of the anti-imperialist resolution is not that the English worker has grown wings, but that he has lost confidence in the empire's power to fill his belly.

WHEN British labor is revolutionary enuf to satisfy us, there will be a red flag flying over Buckingham Palace and king George will be under the palace, very much so. But taking things as they are, British labor is making very good progress. I have just glanced thru a magazine called Trade Union Unity, and it contains aritcles from the leaders of the British trade union movement, that testify to the new spirit that animates the workers in the "tight little isle." The time will come when American labor will begin to march forward in like fashion, and when American capitalism begins to lose its grip as British capital is losing it, our labor fakers will pay more heed to the masses than they are doing now.

J. J. McNAMARA was scheduled to go on trial in Indianapolis yesterday on charges arising out of labor disturbances. With his brother he was involved in the trials that followed building trades troubles that shook the nation several years ago. It appears that the employers have "it in for him." His brother is still in San Quentin. The employers never forget and never forgive.

QUITE a commotion was caused in Chicago thru the activities of Terry Druggan, a millionaire bootlegger from the "Valley," who showed his contempt for the prohibition law in such a frank manner that the authorities were forced to lock him up. Terry and a pal by the name of Frankie Lake, according to underworld rumor have more human scalps to their credit than Sergeant Mike O'Leary of world war fame, who killed 40 Germans in a day's work and threw a French bull over the fence on his way home to his dugout.

SUCH records are not uncommon in Chicago. It should be remembered that the late and lamented Dean O'Bannion, attended to the last rites of at least sixteen sinners, and found himself in such high favor that after every funeral in honor of one of his victims, city officials and police lieutenants attended banquets in Dean's honor. Finally Dean was polished off and the police chiefs felt mighty sore because O'Bannion stocked a good cellar and kept a good table.

DRUGGAN and Lake, became one of the newly rich after Volstead switched the signs on the liquor business. They did not endow universities or subsidize opera stars like the Genna boys. They or their ancestors did not come from the land of song and stilletos. They came from the habitat of the wild potato and the blackthorn stick. So they naturally took to keeping politicians, the army and navy, or as much of it as made its headquarters around Chicago. They were executives by instinct.

SPANISH SOLDIERS MUTINY IN AFRICA; REFUSE TO FIGHT THE RIFFS, OFFICERS SIDE WITH MEN

LONDON, England, Sept. 15.—A crack Spanish regiment which embarked this week for Morocco has mutinied, a dispatch from Malaga states, the Spanish soldiers refusing to fight for the European imperialists. The officers are said to be taking sides with the men. Several who did not, were killed.

The Communists of France and Spain have been agitating for the end of the Moroccan invasion, pointing out to the workers that they are being sent to Africa to rob the natives there and engage in a slaughter which benefits no one but the bankers of Europe.

FIGHT EXPECTED IN THE CHICAGO FEDERATION OF LABOR OVER WAR OF "MAJAH" BERRY ON PRESSMEN

Refusal of the Illinois State Federation of Labor convention to seat the delegates of Chicago Printing Pressmen No. 3, whose charter was recently lifted by strikebreaker Berry, may be followed by the unseating of the union's twelve delegates to the Chicago Federation of Labor.

The state convention seated Barry's delegates, instead of those sent by No. 3, tho Berry's fake union has nobody in it but a few strikebreakers outside of those who may be inveighled in by the fairy tales of Marks, McHugh and Brophy.

No. 3 is entitled to send 14 delegates to the Chicago Federation of Labor on the basis of its per capita and Franklin Union No. 4, about an equal number. This combination would prove a formidable bloc, as all the progressive elements in the federation would line up with them against Berry in case the fight gets on the floor.

Gave Berry a Wallop.

Fitzpatrick was no friend of Berry in the past. In fact, it is reported that he handed the "majah" a husky wallop on the jaw at the Montreal convention. This was shortly after the steel strike and Berry made some disparaging remarks about the strike and its leaders, particularly the radicals like William Z. Foster, in Fitzpatrick's presence.

But Fitzpatrick may have changed his opinion of Berry as he is willing to do about scabby Tom Rickert, the strikebreaker, who is supplying finks to the International Tailoring company with the sanction of William Green.

The Plot Thickens.

Another complication that makes the fight between Berry and No. 3, more delicate, as far as Fitzpatrick is concerned is the fact that Harry Scheck, man of many schemes, is reading clerk for the Chicago Federation of Labor and very close to Fitzpatrick's vest pocket. Scheck is agent for Clown cigarettes. He receives the fags for nothing. They are supposed to be given away as samples, but it is reported that Harry turns an honest dime by selling them to the faithful. He is also secretary of the label league and so important

PRESSMEN LOSE SEATS AT ILL. LABOR MEETING

Reaction Musters 175 Votes Against 55

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 15.—The Illinois State Federation of Labor's convention opened with the usual prayers by preachers and class collaboration speeches by politicians.

John McGrath, president of the Twin City Federation of Labor, opened the sesions. William B. Wilson, secretary of labor in Woodrow Wilson's cabinet, "sounded the keynote," so to speak, by warning of the "danger of the revolutionary movement."

Most of the morning session was given over to the only fight so far in which real issues were involved. The Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3, now in a fight with "'Majah" George Berry, the most infamous labor faker of the American labor movement, was denied seats for its delegates by the convention when Berry's recently organized scab local contested for the seats in the name of being regular reactionaries. They won. The vote was 175 to 55.

Much bunk about Governor Small as a "friend of labor" was the other leading feature of the morning session.

PROGRESSIVE MINERS IN THE ANTHRACITE DEMAND U. M. W. A. FIGHT FOR GENUINE DEMANDS

By PAT TOOHEY.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Sept. 15.—It is the second week of the anthracite strike. We travel far and wide over the region and not a car moves; not a colliery or washery is in operation. The union membership have responded to the strike call 100 per cent, which was effective midnight, August 31.

John L. Lewis terms the strike a "vacation," the capitalist yellow press says ditto, the operators chime in with "suspension." Everywhere it is evident the horrible word of strike is taboo, beginning from the offices of the coal operators, to the press down to the betraying officialdom of the union. Strike is a nasty word therefore none of these birds of paradise want it used. Strike might get the workers in any angry frame of mind. All efforts are made to maintain the "tranquility" and "good will" harped upon so much by Lewis and company.

The tri-district convention formulated certain demands. Some of the demands are constructive, necessary and valuable to the well being and happiness of the workers of the anthracite field. Some of the demands, if fought for and won, truly would better the miserable lot of the anthracite mine workers. Then some demands were formulated which are secondary in the everyday struggle of the anthracite mine workers.

At this late day, from all press accounts, from the speeches of the union "leaders" the fact is all to evident that the concrete, burning needs and

FRENCH DRIVE ON RIFFIANS IS FORCED TO HALT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Sept. 15—The advance of the French troops in Morocco, who under the command of Marshal Petain are attempting to conquer the Riffian natives for the benefit of the French bankers, has been checked. The French have not yet been able to retake the territory within the boundaries of French Morocco. They have not reached the Spanish Morrocan border.

The rainy season will next month stop the operations of the French army, which will be forced either to dig in for the winter or retreat.

New York Harbor Tied Up By Big Strike of Seamen

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 15.—The strike committee of the Marine Transport Workers No. 510 of the I. W. W. states that strike developments are very satisfactory, particularly in New York harbor, where the strike call of four days ago now has 900 men out on a three shift picket line with a long list of ships 100 per cent struck, another with 50 per cent of the crews out and additions being made hourly.

The 150 crew of the Panama-American liner Mongolia is out, the Porto Rican liner San Lorenzo, the Morgan liner passenger Creole, the United American liner Monticello, are all out 100 per cent. Twelve American, six Scandinavian, one British and one Belgian freighters are all struck 100 per cent. An equally long list of ships could be given with crews off 50 per cent or more.

Telegraphic reports to the M. T. W. headquarters indicate good response to the strike call in all Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific ports.

When the Mobile, Alabama, branch of the M. T. W. called off the crew of the first ship the police raided the I. W. W. seamen's hall and arrested Secretary S. Bagstevold, and port delegate P. Hjort, who are to be tried today.

Several members of the M. T. W. at New Orleans have gone to Mobile and are maintaining the hall and making the strike effective in that port. Mobile has been the scene of much persecution of the I. W. W. seamen since the 1923 strike. The authorities interfere in every dispute with arrests under the state "anti-boycott" law, but have never been able to make convictions stick.

Since the historic New Orleans conference which called together many of the marine unions of Latin-America with the seamen of the I. W. W., the latter have been in communication with thirty-four of the largest longshore and harbor workers' unions in Latin-American ports.

It is expected that most of these unions in the following ports will boycott scab ships upon call of the M. T. W. No. 510 of the I. W. W.—Buenos Aires, Rosario, Rio de Janeiro, Santos, Valparaiso, Iquique, Antofogasta, Callao, and Coli in South America; Havana, Cienfuegos, Santiago, Mantanzas, Nuevitas, Puerto Tarafa, Antilla and Pastelillo in Cuba; Tampico, Vera Cruz, Progreso, Manzanilla, Puerto Mexico and Salina Cruz in Mexico and San Juna in Porto Rico.

COUNCIL OF A. F. OF L. TURNS FROM WORLD UNITY, REFUSES TO SEND A DELEGATE TO GERMAN CONFERENCE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(FP)—Although the American Federation of Labor convention at El Paso last November received a fraternal delegate from the General Federation of German Trade Unions—Peter Grossman—and authorized the executive council to send fraternal delegates to the meeting of the German labor federation this year, the council has decided that no such delegates shall be sent.

The official explanation of the refusal to send delegates with a greeting to German labor is that "it would cost too much and set a bad precedent." If the old custom of sending fraternal delegates to the British Trade Union Congress and the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress is to be broadened into a policy of greeting the German workers, it is argued, then the French and Poles and Italians and Czechs and Japanese will demand visits from the Americans.

American visiting delegates at British trade union congresses do not, as a rule, take their duties very seriously, and they come home untainted. They can understand the speech of the country, and can prepare interesting reports with a minimum of work. But if delegates were to be sent to Germany, France, Poland, or Italy, they would have to get translations of resolutions, speeches and reports, and would discover how far more serious is the class struggle in Europe than in America.

SYRIAN NATIVES IN BATTLE WITH FOREIGN CONVOY NEAR DAMASCUS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Arthur C. Milspaugh, American administrator general of Persian finances, was reported safe today after an escape from Bedoin natives sixty miles from Damascus, a dispatch from Haifa, Syria said that one person was killed and two injured when 100 tribesmen, believed to be friends of the Druses, who have been in revolt, ambushed a motor convoy.

Sixty travellers were in the convoy, which gave the natives a twenty mile running fight before they escaped.

BOSTON DEFENSE BRANCH FORMED BY 52 DELEGATES

Union Represented, Hold Mass Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15—Fifty-two delegates attended the Boston conference for the formation of a local of the International Labor Defense. A number of unions, fraternal organizations, and other working class bodies were represented. An executive committee was elected consisting of one representative from each union, also Harry and Alice Stone Blackwell and Helen Hayes. Comrade Wellesley was elected chairman, and Comrade Harry Canter was elected secretary.

Ella Reeve Bloor spoke at the mass meeting held in the evening, emphasizing the international and class character of the organization. Her address was much appreciated.

BRITISH LABOR WON BY MOSCOW, IS BOSS WAIL

Ramsay MacDonald Is Hope of Capitalists

LONDON, Sept. 15.—The right wing elements of British labor are preparing for the labor party conference to be held soon in Liverpool, by laying down a newspaper barrage against the left wing in an effort to win back by counter-attack the ground they lost at the Scarborough conference of the British Trade Union Congress, when J. H. Thomas, Clynes and company were routed by the left wing, led by Cook, Purcell, Swales, Hicks and Pollitt.

Startling headlines declaring that British labor has bowed to Moscow are spread over the pages of the capitalist press. Practically every capitalist paper in England, from mild liberal like the Manchester Guardian to the fascist Morning Post has joined the anvil chorus.

The Bosses' Knights.

Ramsay MacDonald, Philip Snowden, Sidney Webb, and other socialist leaders are put forward by the employers as the knight errants of democracy who are to save the country from the Bolshevik dragon, personified by Cook, and his comrades.

What got under the hides of the reactionaries was the passage of the anti-imperialist resolution. This is J. Bull's sore spot. The British ruling class could stand any number of I. L. P. resolutions congratulating the gimlet of production on its successful evolution towards the center of the capitalist cocoanut, when the milk of socialism would finally trickle into the mouths of the patient proletariat that had waited for centuries for the day when their aims would be realized without even the killing of a bed bug.

They Groan in Anguish.

The anti-imperialist resolution smacks too much of struggle, and every pot bellied capitalist, every perfumed harlot, every yellow socialist pimp from the Isle of Wight to the Orkneys is inwardly groaning over the prospects for the future.

The capitalists hope that MacDonald will carry the Liverpool parley, he being on his favorite ground. The left wing is expected to have as its leader John Wheatley, who, tho a catholic in religion expressed a good deal of militancy and recently startled the British bourgeoisie by calling for ten million workers as volunteers in a defense force against the capitalist's fascists.

In addition to the big things that are making Britain's imperialist couch anything but a comfortable sleeping place, is the little irritation caused by the insistence on the part of the Communist Saklatvala to attend the interparliamentary conference which is scheduled to meet soon in the United States. Two British capitalist M. P.'s have already resigned from the British delegation rather than defile themselves in the Communist's presence.

Saklatvala, however, seems to enjoy the fuss his presence is creating and the governments involved in the parley do not seem to be able to find a plausible excuse for barring him.

I. L. G. W. LOCALS STAND BY OLD PEACE DEMANDS

Joint Action Committee Nails Lies

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 15.—Negotiations for peace in the ranks of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union are dependent upon the union officials' willingness to reinstate all workers discharged as a result of the August 20 stoppage and for sympathy with the Joint Committee of Action, according to the statement of Louis Hyman, the committee's chairman.

The committee of five shop chairmen's meeting, and authorized to mediate between the two factions of the union, were told yesterday by the Joint Committee of Action that there could be absolutely no discussion of peace until all workers were allowed to go back to their jobs.

Stand by All Demands.

The committee announced that its peace demands were just the same as they had been for the past three months: reinstatement of the expelled officers; resignation of President Sigman; reorganization of the joint board on the basis of proportional representation.

In answer to a rumor that there was a difference of opinion in the ranks of the Joint Committee of Action as to these peace trems, the committee today issued the following statement "To All Cloak and Dressmakers":

Deny Lying Rumors.

"You who together with us have carried on the present struggle and whose courage and bravery have been looked upon with awe and admiration by all interested in this struggle, will surely stand by us in order to bring it to a successful conclusion, with our justified demands fully realized.

"Now, more than ever before, it is important that you do not take for granted the various rumors which are being circulated by our enemies in order to bring confusion and demoralization in our ranks. The fact that a committee of shop chairmen has been elected to bring both sides together does not by any means signify that peace has already been made. All the stories that are now being circulated to the effect that the Communists in the Joint Committee of Action are preventing a peace, come directly from the camp of the enemy. All members of the Joint Committee of Action are in complete agreement on all questions of policy, and we will make no retreat until the principles for which we have fought are fully won.

"Do not take seriously any statement that does not come officially from the Joint Committee of Action. Our committee will keep you fully informed upon every important event. Nothing will be done without your approval. Stand by us as bravely and loyally as you have until now, and we can be sure that our struggle, has not been in vain."

Workers in Factory of Fleischman's Bakery Have Been Locked Out

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—A lockout is on in the factory of Fleishman's Vienna Model Bakery at 151 East 23rd St. Since the workers were locked out they have been on the picket line every day. In spite of the company's supreme effort to keep the shop going with scabs, surrounding the shop with detectives and police to intimidate the workers and hauling the scabs to and from the shop in automobiles they only managed in keeping the scabs in the plant one day. The following day not one of them showed up. The locked out workers are picketing the shop every day.

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

What Do You Say?

ONE of the features of the special issue of the DAILY WORKER for International Press Day, Sept. 21, will be the publication of replies to a questionnaire addressed to all the readers of our Communist daily. This day has been especially set apart in the drive for the Bolshevization of the Communist press. Every DAILY WORKER reader must join in this effort. Here are the questions:

1. Why do you read our Communist newspaper, the DAILY WORKER?
2. What shortcomings do you find in the DAILY WORKER, politically or otherwise?
3. What criticisms have you as to make-up, contents, display, etc., etc.?
4. Can you act as a worker correspondent for the DAILY WORKER?
5. What experiences do you meet with in getting others to subscribe for and read the DAILY WORKER?

Sit down today and write your reply to one, two or all of these questions and then mail them in to the Editor, the DAILY WORKER, 1113 West Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

COOLIDGE GOVERNMENT FORCED TO ADMIT WIDESPREAD UNEMPLOYMENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(FP)—Part-time operation of textile and other plants in New England and the nort central states is confessed in the August report of the U. S. employment service. The actual reports from many cities show that lack of jobs is serious in many places.

For instance, Bath, Me., reports: "Part time continues in effect in the iron mills and windlass factory, affecting in both 1,000 men. There is not sufficient employment locally to care for all those released."

Waterville: "Paper mills are operating on an average four days a week. Building trades dull. No demand for farm labor here."

Springfield, Mass., and district: "A surplus of skilled men in the metal trades, together with clerical workers, janitors and watchmen, contributes to the general unemployment."

Fall River: "Cotton textile mills continue to operate at about 50 per cent of normal, and there is not enuf work in other lines to absorb those released."

New York City: "Employment showed a slight decline during Aug."

Indianapolis: "Unemployment is not confined to any separate industry, and most all lines are gradually absorbing the unemployed workers."

Ohio: "There is still a surplus of common laborers in this state."

Missouri: "Completion of harvest and threshing in adjoining states resulted in a surplus of labor in the larger cities."

CLOTH WORKERS WINNING NATION-WIDE STRUGGLE

Amalgamated Gains on Coast and in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Set. 15.—Clothing factories of Oakland, California, have conceded the 44-hour work week to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, announces the organization's general headquarters. The shorter work week was won without a strike after the previously "open shop" employers saw that enough workers had enrolled in the union to enforce demands. Similar working hours were already in effect in San Francisco.

Several small strikes have been won in New York in the last week, another strike in Cleveland and a strike is on against a big "open shop" firm in Montreal. In St. Louis the stiff fight against the Curlee firm, affecting 800 workers, continues.

Court Case Here.

In Chicago the cases of pickets arrested in front of the International plant, 847 W. Jackson Blvd., continue to come before the municipal courts. This morning Mike De Novi, business agent of the Italian local union of the Amalgamated, will appear at room 1106, city hall, to answer charges of "assault." De Novi was in court yesterday but his case was continued until today. De Novi was arrested while walking the picket line.

A report was made at the strike meeting yesterday on the situation in New York. Regular picketing of the J. L. Taylor Co. plant in the same building and owned by the same people as the International, is now going on, and the International, which secured the injunction against the union, is not being benefited by the picketing it was reported.

IMPORTANT MEETING LITERATURE AGENTS THURSDAY, SEPT. 17

A very important meeting of all DAILY WORKER, literature and book store agents and delegates will be held on Thursday, Sept. 17th at 8 p. m. at 19 So. Lincoln Street. Delegates and agents must attend without fail.

1000 SCHOOL CHILDREN ON STRIKE DEFY POLICE; PARADE THRU STREETS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 15.—As a protest against being transferred to a new building, one thousand public school children went on strike here today, parading the streets in defiance of police. The youngsters, ranging in age from 12 to 19 years, walked out of the school in a body. They stormed newspaper offices, marched thru the business sections with banners flying, disrupted downtown traffic and gave the city a thrill. Police were powerless to stop the parade.

MOSCOW CONCERT IN HONOR OF ACADEMY'S 200TH ANNIVERSARY

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 15—A musical program was given in the state Grand Academic theater, formerly the Imperial Opera house, in honor of the guests of the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the founding of the Russian Academy of Sciences.

An orchestra of 100 pieces, a mixed chorus of equal numbers, a ballet of forty and a score of stars formed the group. The immense theater was crowded to capacity. All foreign diplomats and many others were invited. A large bulk of the audience was composed of workers direct from the factories.

RADIO MONOPOLY PLANNED BY CAL, TO CENSOR AIR

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—Radio broadcasting from now on will be more strictly supervised by the Coolidge government, and even freedom of the air will be abolished. Secretary of Commerce Hoover said today that radio broadcasting stations will be barred from the air "unless they offer a real public service."

If the employers are not pleased with the broadcasting they can revoke the station's license or refuse to issue one, thus censoring radio as well as the press and the platform.

BRITISH-TURK WAR OVER MOSUL OIL THREATENS

England Refuses to Negotiate Further

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 15—The Turkish government has refused to promise to abide by the impending decision of the league of nations' council on the ownership of the Mosul territory. The Turkish forces are massing on the Mosul frontiers, and war is threatened between the British and Turkish governments for possession of the rich oil fields of the region.

The league of nations will decide in favor of Great Britain, it is understood, as the league is under that country's domination in this matter.

England Fears Revolt.

The conflicts already going on in Syria and Morocco against French imperialism have alarmed the British empire; and the situation is regarded as critical.

It is reported that christians have been expelled from the Mosul territory now occupied by the Turkish government and claimed by Britain on the strength of these christian inhabitants. Eight thousand chirstjans are said to have been expelled.

Turks Ask Pact.

The Turkish government has suggested a "security pact" between the two countries, with a division of the territory along the lines of the league's Iraq commission, in the event that the league council attempts to partition the district. This would give the district of Mosul to Turkey and the irrigation source of the Diala to Iraq.

The league's decision will be made within a week. The British government refuses to negotiate further with the Turkish government.

does he consider this work that he maneuvered the committee into purchasing an $1,800.00 automobile for him. And this is not all. Harry got himself made high-cockalorum of a trade union store, which also adds to his financial security.

The main reason why Scheck is all those things is primarily because he was an anti-Berry man some years ago. No. 3 sent him as a delegate to the federation and by making himself conspicuous he gradually rose to a position of influence. Now, after rising on a ladder made from the backs of members of No. 3, and having gotten an independent footing he kicked the ladder away and went over, Clown cigarettes and all, to strikebreaker Berry.

Scheck, the Missionary.

Some of the pressmen facetiously say that one reason why Harry shifted his position is, in order to be able to make better union men out of "Marble top" Marks and Sam Fox. "Marble top" smokes Camel cigarettes and even travels in Yellow taxi cabs. It is even said that Scheck was so willing to convert the Berry crowd to the ways of pure trade unionism, that he once rode in a yellow so that he could keep in touch with his quarry. "All the members of No. 3 smoke Clown cigarettes." said one starwart pressman to the DAILY WORKER. "Perhaps Harry, like a good missionary wants to spread the gospel among the heathens."

There is no doubt in the minds of the few progressives that the DAILY WORKER interviewed that the pressmen will receive heavy support from the rank and file of the Chicago Federation of Labor if the question of the Cuneo strike comes up on the floor. They believe the members will take the same position they took on the United Garment Workers' Union, and condemn strikebreaker Berry.

Mexican Politician Is Assassinated, Causing Sensation

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 15.—Francisco Moreno, a leading politician of Vera Cruz, has been assassinated at the government palace at Jalapa. The murder is believed to have been due to the opposition of Moreno to the policics of Governor Jara.

The killing has created a profound sensation here because President Calles and his entire official family are going on Thursday to Jalapa to be the guests of the governor for four days.

American Workers Must Join in Celebration of Russia's 1905 Revolution

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Union of Soviet Republics, thru its agencies in different capitalist lands, announces to the world that it is planning to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the 1905 revolution on December 20th. The news is spread in the United States thru the Russian Information Bureau at Washington, D. C., and it is expected that the department of justice will wake up at any moment and denounce it as a new form of Bolshevik propaganda.

But the celebration will not be confined to the Soviet Union alone. There will be held great gatherings in memory of this important event in all lands still under capitalist rule, because the 1905 revolution in Russia under the czardom, which laid the basis for the successful Bolshevik revolution of 1917, belongs to the workers of the world, not alone to the Russian workers and peasants.

Just as the world war was the forerunner of the Bolshevik triumph eight years ago, so the Russo-Japanese war, ending with a defeat for the czar, laid the basis for the struggle to seize power 20 years ago. General strikes were called and met with tremendous response, uprisings took place, in the then St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) and Moscow, Workers' Councils sprang up, but czarist rule had not been weakened sufficiently, the workers and peasants were not strong enough to win power. Nevertheless, the 1905 revolution presents to world labor an inspiring chapter in its history of struggles, offering valuable lessons, that may well be thoroly studied and reviewed on this twentieth anniversary, Dec. 20th.

Workers and peasants, having firmly established their triumph of 1917, will this year take the time required to fittingly commemorate the events of 1905. Special organizations have been set up to gather with care all data obtainable that relates to the revolutionary movement of 1905. This will be published in book form with the usual Bolshevik thoroness. A contest has already been announced for the best poster. There will be a moving picture scenario and theatrical play dedicated to the historic events of 1905. It will be interesting to read part of the announcement as issued by the U. S. S. R. Society of Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries in part as follows:

> Several Leningrad playwrights and producers are working on a play to be staged at the Academical Dramatic Theater of Leningrad. At the little Ballet Theater (formerly Michailovsky) will be staged an operatic production entitled "Gapon" (the orthodox priest who had led the workers of St. Petersburg to the massacre in front of the Winter Place on "Bloody Sunday," January 5, 1905). A cinema "1905" is to be reproduced, for which pictures will be taken all over the territory of the Soviet Union. The picture is to include scenes of the battle of Tsusima, of the All-Russian General Strike, of the barricade battles in the Presnia quarter of Moscow, of the Jewish pogroms, of the work of the czar's punitive expeditions, etc., etc.
> The program of festivities at Leningrad includes pageants and mass action, reproducing the historic scenes of 1905.

• • • •

So the oppressed of the remaining five-sixths of the land surface of the earth will learn how the workers and peasants of Russia fought and suffered to win their emancipation. Such struggles are still ahead for those who still wear the capitalist yoke.

It is not sufficient that the celebration of this 20th anniversary be left in the United States, to Russian workers, with a few workers of other nationalities taking a sympathetic interest.

In Chicago a good start has already been made in the calling of a conference of Russians who took part in this struggle.

• • • •

Workers of all nationalities, however, especially American-born workers, must be drawn into the commemoration of this historic event. There are three months ahead for the preparations. Let these arrangements be thoro, enlisting large masses of those who labor in memory of an event that showed how the workers of a great nation turned a defeat in the short space of 12 years into the greatest triumph enslaved labor on this globe has yet achieved.

MELLON FEARS TO MAKE DEBT PLOTS PUBLIC

Parley with French Will Be Secret

PARIS, France, Sept. 15—Secretary of the treasury Mellon has promised the French debt envoys, headed by Finance Minister Joseph Caillaux, who are coming here soon strict secrecy, "to prevent popular outbursts," it is announced here.

The French government considers Mellon's secrecy proposal "extremely favorable" it was made known.

Prime Minister Baldwin, of England, at a conference with Caillaux, has warned the Painleve government that if they should promise to pay America more than was promised Britain, he would re-open the British debt question.

FRENCH ACTION SEEN AS FRESH SOVIET THREAT

Illinois Solon, Donkey Says U. S. Attache

PARIS, Sept. 15—Reports that the debt negotiations between Paris and Moscow have been suddenly broken off by France have created a political sensation here. Coming on the heels of the acceptance of the security pact, by the governments of Britain, France and Germany, the news proves the Soviet contention that the security pact is nothing else but an alliance against the U. S. S. R. hatched and brought to maturity by the British government.

Three main considerations re believed to have prompted France to break off negotiations with Russia, if the reports are well founded.

First there is the French fear of Germany.

Secondly, the need for benevolent neutrality on the part of the British in the French campaigns in Morocco and Syria where French prestige has received demaging blows.

Thirdly, on the eve of France's effort to solve the American debt problem, she wants to show the United States that her relations with Russia are not so cordial as to prevent her joining a world wide attack against the workers republic provided good and sufficient considerations were advanced.

There is Skepticism

Of course, seasoned political observers, well acquainted with the diplomatic technique of the Quai d' Orsay, are abiding their time before building any speculative edifice on the flimsy foundations laid down by these rumors. It is no secret that Caillaux is not very much in sympathy with the proposed Soviet debt terms. The French finance minister is in high standing with the international bankers and the bankers have not yet shown any inclination to make concessions to the Soviet government.

A regular tornado of anti-Soviet propaganda was turned loose in every European capital just as soon as the news of the acceptance of the security pact was made public. An American congressman by the name of Britten, hitherto unknown in Europe was quoted liberally by the British press. Britten is reported to have said, that after talking to Tchitcherin and other Soviet officials, he concluded they were a lot of murderers. An attache of the American embassy in Paris laughed loudly and raucously when shown Britten's statement. "We do not agree with Tchitcherin's ideas any more than Mr. Britten" he said, "but I will say quite unofficially that compared to the Soviet foreign minister, in intelligence and manners, Mr. Britten is a donkey."

The Chicago board of education is threatened with a parent and children strike at the Eugene Field school because of the removal of portables from Albion Ave. and Greenview to a narrow lot on Clark St. and North Shore Ave. The parents claim street cars and automobile traffic make the new location dangerous for children and there is no playground.

ENGLAND URGES WAR ON CANTON, FAKES DECREE

Would Provoke Trouble with Gross Forgery

MOSCOW, (By Inprecor.) — For weeks the English press has carried on the strongest campaign against the Canton government on account of the shipping order which forbids English ships to enter or leave the harbor. The English press demands an intervention, the sending of warships and finally war against the revolutionary Canton government.

No direct news can be obtained from Canton as the telegraph cable from Canton leads thru Hongkong where the English censorship holds up the telegrams. It has now been discovered that the Canton government has never issued the reported decree.

Canton workers and students demanded such a degree in a leaflet, that is all. This is the greatest falsehood since the famous Zinoviev letter, and it deserves to be exposed as such.

SOUTHERN MOB TARS, FEATHERS, STRIPS, 2 WOMEN

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 15—Police are searching for two women who were tarred and feathered early Sunday and then dropped from sight after a man who found them relieved them of their coating.

When the women left their benefactor they said they were going to police headquarters to report their experiences. However, they had not shown up there this morning.

The women were reported to be sisters and were captured by 150 masked men soon after being released from the city prison farm, where they had been confined for 30 days. After being captured, the women are said to have been taken in automobiles to a lonely spot where the coat of tar and feathers was applied.

Later they were brot into Jacksonville and released at a downtown street corner. A nearby resident discovered their plight and took them into his home, removed the tar and feathers by applying kerosene. When found the women were clad only in gunny sacks.

Cal Approves Meat Monopoly, Gives the Packers More Profit

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—Following out the policy of President Coolidge of giving all possible aid to the employers and help the bankers increase their profits, Secretary of Agriculture Jardine approved the merger of big Armour and Morris packing companies into one huge trust.

The packers have been fighting in the courts to have their monopoly legalized for many months past.

Canton, Ohio has Fine I. L. D. Meeting

CANTON, Ohio, Sept. 15.—A splendid International Labor Defense meeting was held in Canton at which 44 members from the finest groups of fighters in the labor movement joined the I. L. D.

der, particularly that part of the law which has to deal with the spirfluous side of an American citizen. They seized breweries and distilleries and made the heart of Bacchus glow and the hips of citizens bulge with the product of their toil.

EVERYTHING was running smoothly, gangsters died their customary unnatural deaths, and no 100 per cent American had any reason to regret his nativity, until an infernal protestant who never heard of Noah going on a drunk, caught Druggan and Lake sans legal covering and finally maneuvered them into prison. But there they could not stay. Putting those two boys in jail was like turning a bathing beauty loose in a monastry. They simply demoralized the officials.

JUDGING by the pictures of the boys published in the newspapers Messers Lake and Druggan do not come within speaking distance of Rudolph Valentino, as far as pulchritude is concerned but as somebody said about Oliver Goldsmith: "They are ugly only to those who cannot see the light of the spirit thru the shrine of the countenance." A million dollars can light a wicked fire.

THERE was a good deal of resentment in the newspapers when Frankie Lake was released ahead of time. The sheriff, a jovial soul, was catching fish, until a moron fortunately committed some depredation and shoved Lake off the front page. The sheriff went chasing the moron and got his share of the publicity. Then it was discovered that Druggan who was supposed to be holding down a cot in the hopsital prison was wrestling with wild fish up in Wisconsin. The sheriff had to threaten Druggan with punishment unless he returned and Terry like a good fellow came back, opened the gate and walked into the jail again. He was so sore that he fired a couple of guards.

THAT was not the end of his troubles. He arranged a cabaret party for himself and some of the under sherriffs at the jail, and hardly had he disposed of the last ginger ale highball when the ku klux klan got hold of the news and began to make headlines. The sheriff and the police swear that they are not responsible for the leak, but Terry is undecided whether to remove Hoffman and Collins or not. An inquiring repofter came to the jail to learn whether Druggan was the jailed or the jailor. He was carried away on a stretcher. Druggan was having his nails manicured when the reporter made his appearance and did not want to be disturbed.

AT the present stage of hostilities, the odds are all in favor of Druggan. The ku klux klan have enlisted the support of the United States government, but Druggan has threatened to call up reinforcements in the form of Frankie Lake and "Dapper" Danny McCarthy. If this threat is carried out, and the government does not back down, there may be a hot time in this city.

THIS proves nothing except that a couple of enterprising bootleggers can add to local gaiety and that money makes the mare go and sometimes the mayor. While the Hon. Mr. T. Druggan was exploring the hinterland, and tickling the gills of the finny tribe, from his castle in Cook County jail, several business agents of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers were being finger-printed, bullied, grilled and generally abused on the mere suspicion of having interferred with some nonunion employers. And the abuse was being heaped upon them by the very police who hail Terry Druggan, the millionaire bootlegger and dissector of superfluous competitors, as a friend. Under capitalist democracy, you see, everybody has an equal chance to rise in the world.

L. A. Juniors Write Plays; Give Parties and Start Campaigns

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15. — Now that vacation is over activities of the Juniors will once more begin at full speed.

The different groups are now busy arranging musical programs. Group A and B meet every Tuesday night at the Cooperative Bldg. and will give theirs on Wednesday, Sept. 30. All children are welcome to any and all of these programs, in fact they are urged to come if they want to enjoy an evening.

Write Their Own Plays

A good number of the members are busily engaged writing plays, of course plays of a working class character. The best ones will be used for these and other concerts, and will also be sent away for publication in The Young Comrade. That is why they are all doing their best, and you may expect to see some good plays if you come.

On Saturday Sept. 20 all the Juniors and their friends will go out for a whole day to the Exposition Park. We are expecting to have a keen time, as the Juniors always enjoy themselves when out together on a picnic.

At our last C. C. C. we decided to give a big concert on Sunday Nov. 22nd. at the Co-operative Building. This means a lot of work for the Juniors but also a lot of fun. We know that funds are needed for the upkeep of the Co-operative Building, so we decided to give all the proceeds of this affair for the Co-operative Bldg.

School Nuclei Next Job

Since the Juniors were organized, there have been no changes in our groups. However, an important change is going to be brought about now. As it is, the Juniors in L. A. are organized into groups, such as A. B. C. and D. Now we are are going to be classified into School Nuclei, and in that way we can be in closer daily contact with the different schools. We are sure that such an arrangement will be decidely better than the one we have been following all along.

All our meetings are open to visitors, and we urge everybody to come. Children between the ages of 8 and 15 are especially welcome. We meet every Tuesday and Wednesday at the Co-operative Bldg. corner Mott and Brooklyn.

LEWIS TALKS LIKE A CLAM ABOUT STRIKE

But Will Gabble with Governor Pinchot

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Sept. 15.—John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, left this city today for Milford, Pa., by motor, for a conference this afternoon with Gov. Pinchot.

Lewis was asked last week by the Pennsylvania chief executive to visit him for the purpose of acquainting the governor with the anthracite coal strike situation, and his visit at the governor's home, follows a visit by William W. Inglis, of Scranton, chairman of the anthracite operators' scale negotiating committee.

The miners' head arrived here after a trip from Philadelphia, to Hazelton and other points in the coal region. Lewis would not comment on the subjects he would discuss with Gov. Pinchot, but he said he was ready to answer any questions the chief executive may ask.

Lewis did not venture an opinion as to whether he believed that Gov. Pinchot would attempt to end the anthracite strike as he did two years ago, nor would he give an opinion as to how long the strike would last. Following his conference with Gov. Pinchot Lewis expects to return to Philadelphia.

But, Brothers, We Need Some Missions to Arouse Us, Also

WASHINGTON—(FP)—No attempt will be made to send a mission to Latin American countries to arouse interest in trade unionism, but instead there will be an effort through letters and other appeals to induce labor unions in Latin America to contribute their share of the funds for such an undertaking. This decision was reached at the meetings of the executive committee of the Pan-American Federation of Labor in Washington. Wage scales in Latin countries are very low, but the Mexicans agree that even with their small incomes the Latin labor organizations must contribute more than they now pay, if they are to establish a democratic international of labor in the western hemisphere.

Injunctions Getting Thick in Cleveland

CLEVELAND—(FP)—An epidemic of labor injunctions is sweeping through Cleveland's courts. At least a dozen are in effect restraining members of building trades unions, for the most part, from striking. Officers of the Building Trades Council have been held in contempt for failing to halt a strike on the new Ohio Bell Telephone Co. structure. Another injunction instructs officers of carpenters unions throughout northeastern Ohio to rescind a strike order growing out of the metal trim dispute. Youngstown and Warren as well as the Cleveland district are affected by this order. The Jewish meat cutters union has been forbidden to interfere with strikebreaking butchers.

WORKERS ENJOY REAL VACATION AT HUDSON RIVER CAMP, FAMOUS THESIS WRITER HUSTLES WAITER SQUADS

By M. D. LITMAN.
(Workers' Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.— Hidden in the bushes and flowers that grow on the Hudson River slopes, near Beacon, New York, there flourishes a browntented city, nay, it is more than a city; for in no other place in the United States can one find a sign, which reads as follows: "This camp is for workers ONLY. Businessmen, large or small, will be turned back." It is a workers' summer haven.

What great ecstacy one feels when a vacation can be enjoyed among real workers, away from the boss and the stench which he creates. A vacation amid natural surroundings, without the usual conventionalities of bourgeois hypocracy. A camp which well earns the name of "Camp Don't Worry."

Plenty of "Atmosphere."

For weeks it was announced that no reservation could be secured for Labor Day, as all available room was reserved long before, but that did not stop twice the number of workers from coming out. Food was provided for all and all the available space within "reserved" tents, was used. Unlike the bourgeoisie, the workers were glad to house new comers in their tents. Then, of course, there is the Nit-Gedaiget Barn. It may be a broad statement to make, but you really never enjoyed a vacation and the true working class spirit, until you try the Nit-Gedaiget Barn. Once you get that barn-yard spirit, you'll never be the same.

A grand concert was given in the newly built dance hall and dining hall and after the ball was over, about two hundred workers straggled into the Nit-Gedaiget Barn.

Plenty of hay, enough holes in the roof shingles for the rain to trickle in and all the "atmosphere" an artist wants. The greenish-yellow light cast by the flashlights of the workers who came into the dark barn, seeking a soft spot to lie down, produced some wonderful sillhouette effects. Once a soft spot is found, all one has to do is to lay in such a position as to be between the shingle holes and thus avoid a natural shower bath.

Feeding More Than a Thousand.

Regardless of rank, by a severe method of conscription, the hashslingers are mobilized. During the course of a meal, Jack Jampolsky, famous for his party thesis, picks out the waiters who are to serve the food the following day. Jack Jampolsky turns out expert waiters after one hour's training. He has to go thru this formality one hour before each meal, because new recruits serve each meal time.

With a megaphone in hand, he directs his little army of recruits, shouting orders to sweep floors, set tables, cut bread and finally a general meeting of waiters is called 11 minutes before the "customers" are admitted, when he gives his final instructions. Under his able leadership, a thousand are fed with clock-like system.

A fire alarm siren, that can be heard for miles, calls in the work-vacationists. They don't have to be called long, for they can be seen hanging around the mess hall watching the waiters in training.

The portions are very generous and the workers eat with gusto. From a waiter's standpoint, the writer thinks that rye bread, potatoes, and herring, are the three most popular dishes.

Workers Sing in Camp Nit-Gedaiget.

Songs—revolutionary and folk, never cease to be heard. Song fills the air everywhere. In groups, in tents, on lawns, amid bushes, workers vie with each other and revel in song and jest. Youth pulsates everywhere. The real equal association of men and women, devoid of the perverted American seventeenth century chivalry finds expression at Camp Nit-Gedaiget. No "weaker" sex to worship and no "stroner" sex to look up to. After meals, concerts, lectures, discussions, games, bathing, dancing, laughing and playing occupies the time of the worker-vacationists, marred only by the thot that all good things come to an end.

"Fearlessly we'll go to war
For the rule of the Soviets,
And all as one we'll die,
For the working class."

COLLECTION OF $134.73 TAKEN FOR CLASS WAR VICTIMS AT I. L. D. MEET

The collection at the mass meeting conducted by the International Labor Defense at Temple Hall, Van Buren and Marshfield Sts., was $134.73, Robert Minor, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party and one of the Michigan defendants, who was chairman of the meeting, announced.

This money will be used by the I. L. D. to defend working class prisoners who are being persecuted because of their fight against the capitalist class. The I. L. D. is also aiding families of the class war prisoners.

Bosses Interfere with Freedom of Religious Worship!

HENRYETTA, Okla.—(FP)—When the Oklahoma criminal court of appeals sustained the right of striking coal miners to pray for the salvation of strikebreakers and coal operators, the owners of the mines continued their offensive against practical religion by blowing the mine whistle whenever a prayer meeting began operations. As the strikebreakers left the pit the prayers and the whistling of the siren competed for their attention. Prayer meetings are also held at a grade crossing where, according to state law, motorists must come to a full stop. Scabs in autos that do not stop have their cars reported by license number to the authorities. The strike against the 1917 scale is spreading to other camps in Dist. 21, United Mine Workers.

Locomotive Does Work of 14.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The Lake Shore Limited pulled into New York drawn by one locomotive. This locomotive pulled the train a total of 2,000 miles on a round trip between New York and Chicago in less than seventy-two hours for which fourteen engines have previously been used. The company announces that only one engine will be used hereafter on each one-way trip.

Told to Discard Veils.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 15.—In a recent speech, President Mustapha Kemal again called upon the Turkish women to remove their veils and "show their faces." He addressed an audience of over 1,000, half of which were women and was enthusiastically applauded.

NEGRO CONGRESS IN PITTSBURGH SEPTEMBER 20

Many Labor Bodies to Be Represented

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Many delegates are expected to attend the Negro Labor conference called to convene by the local committee of action at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St., Sunday, Sept. 20, 2 p. m.. Deep interest has been shown in the Negro Labor Congress movement by Negro workers of the steel cities, from trade unions, from various other organizations as well as from the coal mining camps.

The Negro Champion has been distributed, 2,000 copies of the last issues and the message contained has been eagerly received, while the Workers Party and the militant unions of both races in general have given all possible support. Lovett Fort Whiteman, of the Negro Labor Congress, the national organizer, has announced his presence at this conference. Local speakers representing the various Negro organizations will be present.

This local conference will elect delegates to the national congress in Chicago, October 25th and take up the various issues confronting the American working class as set forth in the call to action by the congress, such as a campaign for equal wages for equal work regardless of race and sex, abolition of industrial discrimination in factories, mills, mines and on the railroads and in all places where Negroes are employed, the abolition of Jim Crowism not only in the south but thruout the nation and to stimulate and promote the organization of interracial committees to bring about better feeling between the black and white workers and as a remedy against lynchings and race riots, as well as the demands for social and economic equality for Negro workers, etc.

Workers Party members and militant unions have been urged to redouble their efforts to make this local congress a success and to help mark an epoch in the lives of the American Negroes.

Union Set Prevailing Wage, Court Decides

By ART SHIELDS

NEW YORK—(FP)—Union labor won a victory over the city administration that is expected to bring increased pay to hundreds of mechanics when the municipal court ordered the department of plants and structures to give $476.75 back pay to Peter Peterson, a painter, the difference between the $9.50 per day he had been getting and the $10 and $10.50 that union painters received during the same period. Peterson's case was a test case that will affect 200 other city painters and hundreds of other mechanics whom the city has been paying less than the union rate.

The law unequivocally provides for wages at the prevailing rate, and the evidence showed that the prevailing rate was from $10 to $10.50 during the time involved. The prevailing rate is the union rate, the court ruled in the trade in New York City. Many master painters testified as to the $10 and $10.50 scales and when the corporation counsel argued that some firms were paying only $9.50 the court ruled that since only a minority of firms had this lower and openshop rate it could not be defended as the

The New Course of English Policy in the Near East

By IRANDUST.

AT the same time as the hostile activities against the Soviet Union in the west are being intensified, English imperialism is endeavoring to create an eastern front against the Soviet Union. The English press is making efforts to exploit in an increased degree the theme of the omnipresent hand in Moscow and to frighten the leading groups in the countries of the Near East with the bogey of a "red imperialism of the Bolsheviki" which is said to be directed against the backward peoples of the East. This English propaganda is noticeable in recent times especially in Turkey, Persia and Afghanistan.

In connection with the recent resolution of the government of Angora to build up a new Turkish navy, the English paper "Near East" proposed that Turkey should work on similar lines to those taken by England, on the grounds that the interests of Turkey and England are completely identical, in that both these countries are obliged to carry on a policy of defence against "the aggressive plans of Russia" in Asia, in which proposal it is easy to see a transparent hint that it would be best for the Turkish fleet to be under English guidance. The taking over by the Angora government of the property of the non-Moslem population of Turkey, which remained unclaimed in consequence of the war, prompted the "Morning Post" to urge Turkey not to follow in the footsteps of bolshevism but to take its direction from "Western civilization" and to help England.

AT the same time the English press is raising a hue and cry about the Bolshevist threat to Persia and Afghanistan which is alleged to have arisen as a result of the demarcation of national boundaries in the Soviet Republics of Middle Asia, and is trying to represent the present insurrection of the Persian Turkestans, which has been provoked by the activities of English agents, as a Moscow intrigue.

The "Daily Tlegraph" expert on questions concerning Middle Asia recently demanded, in that paper, the revision of English policy in the Near East. He pointed out that the mandatory territories of England represent a narrow corridor at the extreme ends of which lie the potentially hostile districts of Egypt and Persia, whilst in the North is Turkey (and nothing has been done to gain its sympathies) and in the south the sovereign territories of the Sultan of Hedjas and leader of the Wahabiti, Ibn Saud, the whole of whose interests have been prejudiced by England's policy in the last few years, in his opinion the foundations and principles of England's policy in Middle Asia should be revised, as othervise she might expect to lose her whole influence and prestige in the Middle East.

As a matter of fact England has in the last few months developed a feverish activity in Egypt, Palestine, Arabia, [illegible], Turkey and Persia. New perfect methods of diplomacy are being used side by side with the former methods of force and terror.

THE English high commissioners for Egypt and Palestine are being exchanged. The resignation of Lord Allemby in Egypt and his replacement by George Lloyd, the former governor of Bombay, signifies, as has been remarked in the Arabian press, that the English government circles are trying to cover the iron hand of the policy carried out by them in Egypt, with a velvet glove. The replacement of Sir Herbert Samuel in Palestine by Lord Plumer is regarded in English political circles as a preventive measure for possible political complications in the Near East. According to the opinions expressed by the leaders of the Zionist movement, Plumer's appointment signifies a change in English policy in Palestine, with the object of morally disarming Arabian nationalism and turning Palestine into a purely English colony.

In Palestine and Transjordania, England is creating a new strategic base the significance of which is growing, thanks to England having recently taken possession of the harbor of Akabah in the Red Sea and thanks to the transformation of Cyprus into an English colony.

In recent times England has obviously renounced her attitude of neutrality and non-interference between the two states, Nedpd and the Hedjas, which lay claim to th ehegemony in Arabia, by confiscating the [illegible] bought by the Hedjas and by making efforts to subject Ibn Saud, the strongest aspirant to a united Arabia, to her influence.

ENGLISH diplomacy is at the same time making efforts to adjust the delicate factors in the relations between England and Turkey. The insurrection in Kurdistan gave the goverment of Angora the opportunity of concentrating considerable forces on the borders of Mosul; this threatened to bring about a military solution of the Mosul question. If Turkey should not be satisfied by the decision of the League of Nations. It is characteristic that the examination of the Mossul question in the League of Nations Council which had been fixed for the month of June, is now postponed until the September session in order to give the parties the opportunity of coming to an agreement.

In the meantime English capital openly renounces the actual boycott of Turkey which was imposed by the treaty of Lausanne, and is ahead of all other countries in the economic conquest of Turkey. Last year, among the foreign limited companies registered in Turkey with a capital of 226 million Turkish pounds, 23 companies with a capital of 23 millions Turkish pounds were English.

The more or less conciliatory policy of England in the question of Mosul, is partly explained by the fact that the situation in South Kurdistan threatens the English interests in Iraq; communications have appeared in the press to the effect that Sheik Makhmud has succeeded in defeating repeatedly the English troops in Iraq.

A few days ago the government of Iraq signed a treaty accepting 70 English specialists, for periods up to ten years, in the state government. This is evidence that the transformation of Iraq into an English colony is rapidly advancing.

The change is most striking in the working methods of English diplomacy in Persia. After the inglorious adventure of its puppet Sheik Kheisal, English diplomacy has decided not to play the part of an enemy of the national movement for freedom in Persia to take its orientation from England, it is working out plans on a large scale for the economic enslavement of Persia, with the assistance of American capital.

In England's policy in the Near East, the Anglo-American bloc which has so obviously collapsed in China, continues as before to play an important part. It finds expression in a series of agreements between the interested capitalist groups of both countries, in the first place between the petroleum companies English-Persian Oil and Standard Oil which have come to an agreement as to the dividing of the treasures of native oil of North Persia, and are offering united resistance to other competitors, especially France. Preparations are being made for the transference of Persian finances to Anglo-American control, for which object the issue of an Anglo-American loan to Persia is planned. Further Anglo-American cooperation in the question of railways and concessions can be observed.

A similar picture is to be observed in Turkey and the Iraq. The Standard Oil and the English-Persian have come to an agreement with regard to a common exploitation of the native oil of Iraq, and a short time ago a concession treaty was signed in Bagdad with the government of Iraq. England is trying by this agreement to get America to guarantee the borders of Iraq.

HAND in hand with this a tendency can be observed for the relations between England and France in the East to become strained; this corresponds to a certain degree to the situation in Europe. Thus the attempts of the French to gain a share in the affairs connected with native oil and railways in North Persia is met by England's violent opposition. When communications were published with regard to negotiations between Turkey and France as to adjustment of the frontier of Syria, the English press very plainly gave expression to the opinion that France had no right to dispose of Syria. The English press showed similar anxiety during the last visit of Franklin-Bouillon, the French politician, to Angora.

England's attempts to strengthen her position in the East and to create in the East a hostile front to Soviet Russia are, in their very nature, full of contradictions and therefore doomed to failure. The Turkish government has already declined to have the Turkish navy re-organized by an English mission. The Arabian movement in Palestine and Transjordania against the English rule continues.

THE Eastern peoples cannot be deceived by the new mask of English imperialism. This became evident at the conference for the limitation of trade in arms which took place recently at Geneva, a crass example of a cynical farce, at which the great military powers who hold all the achievements of the modern technique of war in their hands, demanded, that the Eastern people should limit their armaments. In accordance with the interests of England and France, the conference provided for the establishment of forbidden zones in Morocco, on the Red Sea, in the Persian Gulf and in the Gulf of Oman as well as in the Indian Ocean. It endeavored to isolate and weaken the national movement in the East. After a series of protests on the part of representatives of the Eastern countries, the Persian delegate demonstratively left the conference and declined to sign the minutes. According to a communication of the "Morning Post", in which a hidden threat is contained, the incident might lead to Persia resigning from the League of Nations. As yet there are no communications as to whether the Geneva protocal will be signed by Turkey and Afghanistan. This shows us what the forerunners of the success of English "stabilization" in the Near East look like.

PAINTERS' UNION PASSES GAG LAW ON MEMBERSHIP

Reaction Wins Fight in Convention

MONTREAL, Quebec, Sept. 14—(By Mail)—The thirteenth biennial convention of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America is drawing to a close. The thing that saved it from complete reactionary mediocrity was the appearance for the first time of a militant though weak (numerically speaking) left wing. This group livened up the convention fighting militantly for progressive measures and against the reactionary proposals of the administration.

Reaction triumphed but not without a struggle. The old officials were returned to office. The salaries of the general president and secretary were increased $1,000 more per year. The term of office extended from two to four years, conventions to be held every four years instead of biennially. A red baiting clause was added to the constitution aimed to expel the Communists or any militant members under the guise if they oppose the principles of the A. F. of L.

The administration came to the convention determined to place the official seal of the convention on their proposed fight against the progressives, ostensibly the Communists, but under this head they lump all progressives who stand for Amalgamation, Labor Party, Recognition of Soviet Russia, International Trade Union Unity, Defense of Class War Prisoners, etc., and for class struggle as against class collaboration.

The central point in the convention was the fight against the reds. That the 600 odd delegates were not all tools of the administration is shown in the fact that the proposed amendment to the constitution aimed against the reds had to be referred back twice to the laws committee and a recounting of noses was taken before it was railroaded through. This was only accomplished after a hectic thirty minutes speech by President Hedrick followed by a cutting off of all debate.

President Hedrick's opening speech was made on Monday Sept. 7th in which he stated, speaking of the development of the painters' union and referring to the division in the Canadian labor movement, it was not easy in the beginning, we were all divided as they are in Canada today. Religious, political, nationality and race questions abounded and the success of the trade union movement in the United States has been because we forgot religion, we forgot politics and we forgot race."

"I met two old members at this convention whom I have known, anywhere from 25 to 30 years and if anyone should ask me what their religion or their politics is, I could not say, as I have never asked them, and this should be the attitude of our Brotherhood.

"All we should be interested in knowing is: 'Have you worked a sufficient lenght of time and are you able to command the average scale of wages and are you of sound health..' and that is about the end of our investigation—and that is why our organization has been a success."

This is quite true. All shades of political thought were allowed expression within the organization. No internal struggles were tolerated on the questions of race, nationality, religion or politics. But this is a quite different speech than the one made by President Hedrick one week later, on Monday September 14th, in which he urged the delegates to place an amendment to the constitution to expel from the organization those who do not endorse the particular brand of politics advocated by the administration and by the A. F. of L. They had to sugar coat the amendment by saying "Members of the Communist Party who oppose the principles of the A. F. of L.

This was done to win over the unsophisticated delegates who could not see that under this cloak that all progressives who were fighting against the perversion of the principles of organized labor by the bureaucracy can and will be expelled under this amendment.

As an example, the basic principle upon which organized labor is built is that of struggle, any attempt to divert this into class collaboration is a betrayal of the labor movement and is in opposition to the principles upon which the movement is built.

The entire left wing from the progressives to the Communists will and are opposing this betrayal. For this they are being expelled from the Machinists, Furriers, Ladies Garment Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the miners, under the guise that they are opposed to the principles of the A. F. of L., and now the painters have entered the red baiting alliance.

Party Reorganization and Its Political Campaigns

By C. E. RUTHENBERG
General Secretary
Workers Party of America

TO ask the question, how will the party reorganization aid the party in its political campaigns is to ask how will the party reorganization aid the party, for the central purpose for which the party exists is to draw the workers into a class, political struggle against the capitalist state power. All the work which the party undertakes must aid in the achievement of this central task of the party. It has no work which is separate and distinct from that necessary to achieve this task. The party works in many fields, but the fruit of its work must all serve its main objective—to draw the workers into a struggle against the capitalist government.

I emphasize this statement of the fundamental aim of our movement at the risk of criticism for stating something that is axiomatic for all Communists because it is just in the reorganization of the party that false viewpoints are apt to creep in. In fact, there have already been expressions of erroneous ideas in regard to the reorganization of the party.

AT a meeting of one of the English branches in Chicago, a comrade opposed the reorganization stating as his reasons that he was against the transformation of the Workers Party into a new industrial union. The same erroneous conception appeared in a letter from one of the comrades in charge of the trade union work of the party who asked whether the work of organizing shop nuclei was not a phase of the work in his charge. Both the comrades had the wrong idea that thru the reorganization our party was to become a sort of new union and do work which the unions now carry on.

This conception arises from the fact that in arguing in support of the formation of shop nuclei as the basic unit of the party we have emphasized the fact that the shop nuclei will be the closest contact with the workers in the factories and will know and understand their grievances and make these grievances the starting point for their agitation and thus draw the workers under the influence of the Communist Party.

OUR shop nuclei must take up the grievances of the workers in the factories where they are organized but they cannot and must not stop there. It is not sufficient that the shop nuclei raise the issue of bad working conditions and carry on a struggle against the employers on this issue or that they lead a fight for reduction of hours or increase of wages in the factories. It is not sufficient that they take up the work of organizing shop committees as the basis of organization of unorganized factories. The struggle for better wages, shorter hours, better working conditions, to organize the unorganized must be connected in every case with the struggle against the capitalist government and the capitalist system. It must be a means of approach to gain influence and establish the leadership of the Communist Party. The struggle over wages and working conditions must be connected with the struggle against the Dawes' plan and imperialism. The leadership in a strike and governmental interference in such a strike must be the means of directing the struggle of the workers against the government. Every struggle originating in the factory must be connected with the broad political struggle of the workers to establish the proletarian rule.

All of the above is only another way of saying that we remain a revolutionary political party after we organize on the basis of shop nuclei. Reorganization does not mean that we have established a new form of industrial organization to fight the battles of the workers in the factories. It does mean that we have found an effective means of combining these struggles with and making them the starting point thru which we draw the workers into the political struggles against the capitalist state power.

THE reorganization of our party presents itself in two phases. First, the creation of the new basic unit of the party in the form of the shop nucleus and street nucleus and second, the creation of a centralized apparatus of the party. The party has been greatly hampered heretofore in its political campaigns because of the slowness and heaviness of the party in going into action. With the decentralization of the party into 18 language sections made it almost impossible to secure a quick response and quick action in support of the campaign initiated by the Central Executive Committee. Its communications and instructions regarding the campaigns had to slowly filter thru the language sections before the party units locally could be drawn into action. The consolidation of the party, thru the creation of sub-section, section and city organizations, the leading committees in charge of these sections will create the apparatus thru which the party can in the future, be quickly mobilized for its work.

The organization of shop nuclei and street nuclei in place of the territorial and language branches of the party is the fundamental change which will enable our party to really influence the masses of this country. At the present time, communications and instructions regarding party campaigns reach our territorial and language branches, are read and some efforts made to put them into effect, but these territorial and language branches are not connected as such with any mass of workers whom they can influence and draw into action in support of the campaigns the party initiates

THE shop nucleus on the contrary, is a cell embedded among a mass of workers. The members of a shop nucleus do not have to wait two weeks or a month for the meeting of a territorial or language branch to receive instructions in regard to a party campaign. The secretary of the nucleus receives the instructions today and tomorrow communicates them to every member of the nucleus and the members of the nucleus immediately begin their agitation among the mass of workers around them in support of the party campaign.

THE reorganization of the party, thus, in two ways creates the fundamental condition for successful work by the party in drawing the workers into the mass political struggle against the capitalist government. It establishes contact with the immediate grievances of the workers which makes possible the development of our campaigns out of these grievances thus starting from the immediate point of interest of the workers and it creates the organizational machinery thru which the party can make its influence felt among the masses.

The reorganization of the party means that we will have a new party, the party will gain as effectiveness as an instrument to reach and revolutionize the American workers. We have been working with a clumsy, unsuitable organization because of that we have wasted a great deal, of our energies. To reorganize the party means at least the starting of the effectiveness of all our work. We will go forward in the work of making our party the leader of the mass movement of the American workers directing against the capitalist state power and for the establishment of Communism.

The Party Reorganization - - -

By Wm. Z. Foster

FOR the past three years our party has had before it the question of its reorganization upon the basis of shop nuclei. We have had much talk upon the subject, and within the last year the first real steps have been taken towards reorganization. But these were the merest beginnings. The recent sessions of the Enlarged Executive of the Comintern devoted the major part of their attention to the question of the reorganization of the parties and Bolshevization generally. Consequently, all over the world the reorganization process has been stimulated in the various parties. Our party is no exception to the general rule. At the party convention just ended it was clearly manifest that our party now fully realizes that it must be reorganized and is willing to undertake this important task. Our party is now actually entering into the period of reorganization.

The party stands to benefit enormously from the reorganization, coupled with the whole process of Bolshevization. The present system of organization is altogether unfit for a Communist party. The language branches are an even more primitive and ineffective form of organization than the purely territorial form common to social-democratic parties thruout the world. So long as our present form exists we cannot function effectively as the vanguard of the proletariat. The reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei is a first requisite for our party's active and effective participation in all phases of the class struggle.

IN all its spheres of activity the power of the party will be increased by its reorganization on a shop nuclei basis. Not the least of the advantages accruing will be an intensification and extension of our industrial work. This will come inevitably because of the shop nuclei form of organization tending to throw our party more directly into the struggles of the workers for better conditions in the industries. This type of party unit will bring home to us with greater force the problems of the workers in the shops and factories. Its general effect will be to greatly stress the necessity for our more active participation in all phases of trade union activity.

The antiquated language branch is a conglomeration of workers of all industries. It does not reflect the life and struggles of the workers in any particular industry. Consequently its tendency is to devote itself not to the real struggles of the workers but to affairs of a much more minor character. The shop nucleus, on the other hand, composed solely of workers in one industry, is by the very nature of things confronted and animated by the problems and movements of the workers in that industry. Every cut in wages, every act of tyranny of the employers, every movement of unrest of the masses inevitably precipitates itself into the life of the nucleus in the industry concerned.

CONSEQUENTLY the question of trade union organization must always occupy a leading position in the activity of the shop nucleus. If the workers have no unions the problem of organizing them into such is an ever present one before the shop nucleus. It must fasten its attention upon this great problem of the organization of the unorganized until eventually a trade union is founded. If there are company unions in its industry inevitably the shop nucleus will be forced to fight this institution of the employers, aiming to destroy it or to turn it into a real labor organization. If there are trade unions in the industry their actions in defense of the workers' interests, or their failure to act, are also bound to be matters of constant and major importance to the shop nucleus involved. In all industries the shop nuclei will feel a direct and urgent impulse for the powerful organization of our party fractions in the trade unions.

Let us therefore, proceed diligently with the reorganization of our party that is now being prosecuted. The effective completion of this great task means to multiply the efficiency of our party, not only in the activity here elaborated upon, trade union work, but in every field of party activity. Doubters and those who meet the party reorganization campaign with passive resistance should be pushed aside and this great task made the first order of business thruout the party. The speed and effectiveness with which we accomplish the party reorganization will show very much the degree of Bolshevization that our party as a whole has arrived at.

demands of the anthracite mine workers have been forgotten, pushed to the background and in lieu thereof have been substituted some fake issues, issues on which the present strike is being waged, firstly comes the "check-off," they the 10 per cent increase, and then the $1.00 day for all labor classified as "company labor, which is all labor other than that of contract mining inside and outside."

Lewis, Kennedy and Murray, with their handpicked scale committee are concentrating on the demand that the "check-off" shall be established in the anthracite field. The more important, the burning issues are forgotten entirely. And what might the check-off be? Does this demand, the check-off mean so much that it should supercede all other demands? It does not. The check-off is but an organizational measure, not effecting the wages, hours and working conditions of the anthracite, but is merely a demand, which if won, means that Lewis will not have as much trouble as heretofore in collecting the dues and assessments of the miners of the region.

The companies would just take it from their envelopes and turn it over to the union. What a mighty, soul stirring demand! Yet Lewis and his official cohorts emphasize the strike will continue until the check-off is established. We support the check-off, since the tri-district convention included it among the demands, but we point out the check-off is dangerous in many respects, as controlled by the operators and the union bureaucracy constitutes a tremendous weapon to be used against the militant forces of the union.

Some Admit Mistakes

Many militants of the hard coal field were and are yet, confused over the check-off. Many who were sincere unreservedly supported the demand. Pointed out the dangers of the check-off, from a theoretical standpoint and from past experiences, many have admitted their previous position to be wrong. Is this demand of sufficient merit to be made the chief demand during this strike?

Lewis forgets the miners of this field load a four, five and six ton car of coal being paid on the car basis, robbed of their labor by this system, make thousands of dollars profits individually for their bosses. The tonnage system will be fought for a relentless ceaseless struggle will be conducted by the militant forces of the anthracite for the realization of this demand. The progressive bloc at the tri-district convention introduced and fought for the tonnage resolution. It was adopted and included in the 12 demands. Lewis shoves it to the background, quite content to have the companies rob the miners longer under the system of being paid for coal produced on the basis.

Real Demands

Lewis concentrates on the check-off, and what of the miserable lot of thousands of miners who daily go underground, remain there all day long slaving like beasts in gas, water and mud only to return home without having made a days wage? Lewis forgets that there is one thousand and one different prices for labor in the anthracite mines, discriminatory and inequitable, that no standardization of wages exists, that thousands of boys, paid boys wages, from $3.00 per day up, are compelled to do men's work, that children daily scab their parents out of jobs.

Standardize the wages. Equal wages for the exploited youth. A minimum wage are demands fought for by the progressives during the election campaign, on the floor of the tri-district convention, and will be fought for in the future, the very near future.

And again, Lewis fights for a secondary demand forgetting that the eight hour day in the anthracite fields is a big joke. The exploited miners are forced, in many instances, to remain underground far exceeding the eight hour limit, in a wild endeavor to make a days wages, yet to fail. A six hour day and thirty hour week was fought for by the progressives and they will continue to fight for it. Make of this strike a real strike, since a strike is a conflict between the employer and worker.

Van Bitner Usual Failure.

April 1st the miners of Northern West Virginia, under the leadership of that famous Jesus Jazzer, Van Bittner, declared a general strike. The anthracite continued to work. Other bituminous fields continued to work. The West Virginia miners are still on strike, with victory an impossibility, the anthracite followed them on strike six months later, the central competitive field continuing to work. This is a sample of how Lewis conducts strikes, a sample of the solidarity he and his crew indulge in.

Victory will be assured the miners only when all fields are united under one general agreement expiring at one time. We demand a national agreement, an agreement covering the industry nationally in order that this organized scabbery stop.

Lewis concentrates on the check-off. He denounces nationalization of the mines, he forgets the miserable conditions of the workers here, he kowtows to the scabherding republican party. We will fight for a labor party, a political party of the working class, for a workers' and farmers' government.

Communists Heard From.

The Progressive Miners' Committee has been heard of here. More will be heard of them. All militant forces in the anthracite field will fight tirelessly for their program. Nationalization of the mines, six hour day, the tonnage system, abolish the contract system; a labor party, a minimum wage.

They demand Lewis fight for real demands. Present real issues which will benefit the anthracite miners. We know the operators can very easily grant the check-off without any loss to them. We know the operators can grant the 10 per cent increase and still lose nothing. These two are the chief demands of Lewis. The more vital are forgotten. We ask why did the Lewis machine fight the Progressive Miners' proposal at the tri-district convention to demand $2.00 for company labor and 20 per cent for miners? Lewis instead of doing that inserted $1.00 and 10 per cent.

Mellon's Whiskey Distillery Stock Aids Bootleggers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.— Secretary Mellon is the one man held chiefly responsible for the non-enforcement of prohibition in the United States, and his ownership of whisky distillery stock is pointed out as helping to explain his indifference, in the first section of the report by the research department of the federal council of churches on the social consequences of prohibition.

U. S. Vessel Grounded

HALIFAX, N. S. Sept. 15.—The United States shipping board steamship Argosy, which was held fast on a submerged sand bar on Sable Island for six hours and which refloated with high tide, was headed toward this port for a survey today, according to wireless reports. The Argosy, a vessel of 5,000 tons, sailed from New York last Friday.

The time clock system in the schools may die a natural death. Pay roll clerks in schools have demonstrated to Superintendent McAndrew and his assistants at a meeting discussing the time check system that instead of the few hours of work a month of heretofore a full month's time will be taken to handle that work.

RIFFIANS HALT FRENCH ATTACK, PETAIN STUMPED

Counter Assaults, Bad Roads, Stop Invaders

PARIS, France, Sept 15. — The drive of the French troops has been halted by counter attacks launched by the Moroccans, and after only two days of local advances, the Europeans, sent to Africa by the order of the French bankers, are faced with great difficulties.

The French troops are forced to repair roads in their rear, and the country just ahead of them has no roads, but borrow paths. New roads would have to be built, even if the French were able to advance further. In addition, the imperialist army is unable to cross the boundary into Spanish Morocco, owing to objections by England and Italy.

Marshal Petain faces two alternates. He must either change his tactics at this late hour and instead of relying on heavy artillery, must use light troops, or must spend the time building roads. If he does the latter, he wil be caught by the winter weather, and the rainy season, which comes in during October.

The Riffians are violently counter-attacking around Issoula, in the Bibane sector, and on the heights of Bab Hocino.

The French and Spanish imperialists have between two and three hundred thousand troops at their disposal in Northern Africa, while the Riffian natives have but little over 50,000.

Students Pledge Co-operation.

MOSCOW, Sept. 15.—(Tass.)—The Students' Committee of the Institute of Modern Oriental Languages, Leningrad, has received a letter from the Students' Union of the National Pekin University in reply to the good wishes of success from the Russian students.

The Pekin students express their gratitude to the Leningrad Institute and set forth in detail, in their letter, how they propose to struggle against imperialistic oppression.

A celebration in memory of the 20th anniversary of the Russian revolution of 1905 is being planned in Chicago by old rebels of the 1905 revolution.

The revolution of that year awakened the masses, it shook the throne of the czar, but it was not strong enuf to overthrow czarism and capitalism. As a result of that, a terrible massacre broke out, killing thousands of workers. Many were exiled to Siberia; some were more fortunate and fled to other countries.

A conference of the old rebels who are living in Chicago is being called to organize a monster celebration for the occasion. Old rebels are requested to send their names and addresses to the Chicago office of the Novy Mir, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Illinois.

ZANKOV REGIME TOTTERS IN SPITE OF CONTINUED MURDER OF WORKERS

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 15.—The bloody hangman of the fascist government of "Professor" Zankov and his clique of generals, capitalists and adventurers does not stop its bloody campaign for the annihilation of the best workers, peasants and intellectuals in Bulgaria. The more intolerable the situation of the working masses of Bulgaria gets, the more the situation of the hanmen's government, despite its mass murders and imprisonments, gets critical and gradually rouses the opposition of all classes of the population, the more desperate and brutal do the bloodhounds of the Zankov government defend themselves. Only their methods have recently changed. In the place of attempts and murders in the streets they have proceeded to murder legally, to pass wholesale death sentences and undertake wholesale executions.

This does not mean, however, that the attempts and illegal murders no longer take place. We mention only the following of the recent murders:

Murdered For Poem.

The well-known poet George Mileff, who hade been sentenced to one year prison on account of a poem, was murdered in the most brutal fashion. Immediately afterwards the lawyers Wassil and Spas Muletaroff from Sofia as well as the former member of the municipal council I. S. Keen and the metal worker Micola Mileff were murdered by "unknown persons."

Near the village Guchansy, district Verkov, the lawyer Zanfyr Popov and the agricultural worker Todor Blagov were murdered in the woods. Assen Alexieff who had escaped from prison, was murdered by policemen in his hiding place. On the same day in Tirnovo one of the founders of the Communist Party of Bulgaria, Grabovsky, was murdered in the open street by the shots of a Zankov agent.

The Communist Georgi Kortieff was "found dead" in prison. The former ministers of the Stambulisky government, Kyrill Pavlov and Peter Janev were burnt alive in the police prison cellar in Sofia.

Killers of Workers Shielded.

The Zankov murderers are also raging abroad now as before. In Achemoe section near Innesbruck, (Tirol) the dead bodies of two Bulgarian students, Dimitri Russov and Karokov were found with fettered hands and feet. As Russov is an active follower of the Macedonian federalists, of the revolutionary wing of the Macedonians and as they were both found fettered, it is clear that the two were murdered. The further intentions of the Zankov bandits it is significant that Mencia Garmiac, the woman who murdered Panitza, has been taken to a sanatorium because of an alleged illness where she is splendidly taken care of and from where she will certainly one day escape, provided with excellent passports. It is thus necessary that the workers pay careful attention to the activity of the Bulgarian embassies.

Sentenced After Death.

The most unheard of shamelessness of the Bulgarian hangmen, however, is the fact that they accuse still the murdered people and sentence their tortured dead bodies to death "in absence." Thus a trial took place in Sofia in which the murdered lawyer Grantcharoff, the member of parliament Petrini, the member of parliament Kosevsky, the secretary of the Young Peasant League Ganovsky, Baroff Naidenoff and Koteff were accused "in absence" and sentenced to death altho the whole press reported long ago that they had been murdered. With the same shameless hypocrisy a trial was undertaken against a number of "anarchists" who have been burned alive in the streets of Durestol in March, 1925.

Altho illegal murder has not yet stopped completely the court martials are working feverishly to fill the gap that the decrease of these murders has made in the plans of Zankov. Legal proceedings have become a mere farce, every legal protection has been abolished. Under the pressure of the government the official organizations of the lawyers have passed in most larger towns of Bulgaria binding decisions that all their members are prohibited to defend "high traitors" and "illegal persons."

In order to force also those lawyers who do not belong to these organizations or who would like to resist the decision, to follow this rule, attempts are organized against them. In Lom the lawyers were attacked and brutally beaten. In the house of the lawyer Ivan Datoff from Burgas, bombs were thrown because he had defended the Communist Maximov. An appeal to the district council and to the minister of the interior had no result. In the office of the lawyer Jevir Novakchoff in Zara Zagora a bomb was thrown and the lawyer who managed to escape was threatened with death.

Under such circumstances the mass fabrication of death sentences is easy. In the recent weeks the following death sentences were passed and in most cases carried out:

The court martial of Vratza passed a death sentence against four members of the Communist organization of Tchirpan. On the same day the court martial in Vratza passed four further death sentences. The court martial in Philip Popel passed a death sentence against 11 Communists from Karlens. The supreme military court in Sofia passed a death sentence against the Communist At. Georgieff from Jambol; no appeal is possible. The court martial in Sofia passed death sentences against two fellow fighters of the murdered Borimeikov. The court martial in Sofia passed a death sentence against the teacher Mavrikoff and the student Bogdanoff from Trevna. The court martial in Sofia passed death sentences against four Communists from Ichtimani; no appeal is possible. The court martial passed death sentence against Chr. Tenoff who was accused of participation in the bank robbery in Kotel. The court martial in Sofia passed death sentences against two accused on the so-called "trial of conspirators." The court martial in Slivan passed death sentences against 10 accused, in Haskov against four and in Berkoviza against three accused for "plotting against the government." The appeal court in Sofia passed death sentences against four members of the illegal organization and against the student, Jontchev. The court martial in Sofia passed death sentences against 10 members of the Communist military organization. The incomplete list shows 60 death sentences in July. The true figure, however, is much larger.

Despite this unlimited terror the Zankov terror is losing more and more the ground under its feet and the rumors about a resignation of Zankov, a transformation of the government, etc., continue to spread. The more must the international working class consider it as its task to come to the aid of the tortured Bulgarian people and to assist it in overthrowing the rule of hangmen by a storm of protest. Save the Bulgarian revolutionaries whose lives are threatened!

Telegraphic Lines For Siberia.

MOSCOW, Sept. 15.—(Tass)—Novo-Nikolaievsk, Western Siberia, reports that, according to news received from Uriankhai, the local authorities are constructing a telegraph line between Krasny, the capital of that region, and Kemtchuy, the next thickly populated locality, which is rapidly growing into a fairly big town. An electric station is also being erected at Krasny.

LABOR DEFENSE CALLS PROTEST AGAINST TERROR

Meeting Sept. 18 to Flay Polish Hangman

A protest mass meeting against the white terror in Poland will be held by the Chicago local of the International Labor Defense in Schoenhoffen Hall, Milwaukee and Ashland avenues, on Friday, Sept. 18, at 7:30 p. m.

The speakers will be C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party; James P. Cannon, secretary of the International Labor Defense, and B. K. Gebert, secretary of the Conference to Aid Political Prisoners in Poland. There will also be speakers in the Russian and Ukrainian language.

The white terror in Poland, instituted by the imperialist government, is gaining every day. Every day it becomes more severe, and claims the lives of new members of the working class.

The workers of Chicago are called upon to join with the workers of other countries to protest against the murder of workers for their part in the class struggle. The workers must demand the release of their champions who have fallen victim to the white terror of the master class.

Poverty Cause of Last Year's Poor School Attendance

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Country children in the United States get an inferior type of schooling, as compared with children in towns of less than 2,500 population where more than half of the children enrolled live in town.

These facts are brought out in a report on rural schools issued by the federal bureau of education. It does not say plainly that farm poverty is responsible for the fact that only $68.39 was spent on the average rural school pupil in 1924, as against $100.64 on the town pupil. It does ask: "Under present conditions is there any such thing as equality of opportunity in education for the children of the country?"

Fourteen southern states spend only $34 average per pupil in rural schools, and $44 in town. Western states averaged last year $97 for rural and $117 for town pupils.

CHICAGO DAILY NEWS SENDS CORRESPONDENT TO U. S. S. R. ON SECOND TRIP

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Sept. 15.—(Tass.)—The arrival was recently reported at Odessa of Junius Wood, a correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, who told his colleagues of the press that his paper had sent him as a special correspondent to the U. S. S. R., because it was impossible to have the faintest correct idea of what was going on, and generally of the situation, in the Soviet Union from the foreign papers using such utterly unreliable sources of information as Riga and Helsingfors.

The present is Mr. Wood's second trip to Russia. The first time he was in Siberia shortly after Kolchak's fall. He proposes to stay in the U. S. S. R. for about two years.

REACTIONARY U. S. DELEGATES TO BRITISH UNION CONFERENCE, BLIND TO VICTORIES OF THE LEFT WING

LONDON, England, Sept. 15.—All that Edward J. Evans, reactionary trade union official of the Electrical Workers' Union, and an American delegate to the Scarborough trade union conference, could find to say as he left London was that conditions are getting better for the capitalists, and the Communists should stop annoying them.

Evans said, "I am convinced that industrial conditions in England are improving," whereas the official figures show that unemployment is steadily increasing.

The defeat administered the conservative MacDonald-Thomas, reactionary yellow socialist regime when the left wing resolution condemning British imperialism and favoring the right of self determination for all peoples within the empire, even if they chose complete separation, was passed by a card vote of 3,082,000 to 79,000, meant nothing to Evans. "The leadership of MacDoland was never seriously endangered," he said.

Evans disapproved the fact that M. Tomsky, the Soviet delegate, was treated so well. He said Tomski was "Unattractive," and deplored the fact that the conference gave Tomski "every courtesy," and of course, issued the usual tirade against the Communists.

Pervious to the passage of he anti-imperialist resolution, which was introduced by A. A. Purcell, member of parliament and one of the signers of the report on Soviet Russia, Harry Pollitt, in answer to a speech by J. H. Thomas, said: "The empire does not mean Lord Curzon or Lord Reading riding elephants. It means appalling conditions at Bombay and Calcutta and mine workers in India having to be doped with opium before they will go down into the mines. It is not a Wembley empire exhibition which is being attacked, it is not an Indian pavilion with colored lights. It is an empire every inch of which is drenched with blood of British soldiers or native soldiers, fighting to keep the British soldiers out." Thereupon the resolution was passed.

Minnesota Soldiers Fight Laws Aimed at Teaching of Science

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 15.—Aroused by information from the state of Virginia to the effect that a "Patriotic Welfare Committee" under the leadership of the ku klux klan had been organized there to put over an anti-evolution law at the next session of the general assembly, the World War Veterans is to combat similar action in other cities.

Emil E. Holmes, national president of the veterans said, "Here in Minnesota with Dr. Riley on the job and the ku klux klan in support of this anti-evolution measure, it is certain to receive much greater support than has heretofore been suspected. Dr. Riley has already announced that steps will be taken to secure the passage of such a law. We have begun the organization of a committee, to promote the organization of a statewide committee for progressive education."

Train Kills Three In Auto

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 14.—The lives of three persons were snuffed out early today when a fast Lehigh Valley railroad passenger train, enroute to Buffalo, struck and automobile at North Tonawanda

The dead: Percival Dunham, 27; his brother, Daniel Dunham, 50, and Michael Farmer, 43, all of North Tonawanda.

Ames Hay, driver and owner of the car, is suffering from serious injuries.

Worker Correspondents

What? Where? When? Why? How?

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

WITH the growth of the world Communist movement, new factors contributing to its growth were developed. The question of worker correspondents receives its first attention in America in this booklet. Here is the analysis of its importance and a text book to guide every worker to success in this field.

BUMPER GRAIN CROP IN SOVIET UNION IN 1925

Three Billion Bushels Will Be Harvested

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Nearly three billion bushels of grain will be harvested in the Soviet Union this season, according to late figures received by the Russian Information Bureau in Washington from the central statistical department of the U. S. S. R. This is above the pre-war production in the present area of the Soviet Union, and is 80 per cent more than was grown last year. The wheat crop is double that of 1924 and the corn crop is 5 times as much as last season.

Before the war, Russian wheat yields averaged about 10 bushels to the acre; this year's crop runs 12.7 bushels. Rye, oats and corn are likewise showing a greatly improved yield per acre. Experts give credit to the use of tractors and American farming methods for the gain made.

The crop includes 817,700,000 bushels of rye, 660,000,000 of wheat (or only 50,000,000 short of the American wheat crop this year), 697,500,000 of oats, 273,750,000 of barley, 205,700,000 of millet, 175,500,000 of corn and 75,000,000 of buckwheat. About 300,000,000 bushels of grain will be exported.

An International Scandal.

The battle put up by a few hundred thousand Moors on the north coast of Africa against the force of two European powers—one the most formidable military force in the world—is as gallant a struggle as ever challenged human admiration. Those tribesmen are defending their country against the imperialist boodlers of France and Spain and they are doing it under handicaps that would daunt any people not buoyed up by an unshakeable faith in the justice of their struggle, and in an undying determination to win their freedom at all costs.

The capitalist press, which misses no opportunity to slander the proletarian dictatorship of Russia, to accuse the workers' and peasants' government of oppressive rule, gloat over the spectacle of imperialist France and fascist Spain, sending their iron battalions, their air armadas and their floating steel castles against the hardy Riffian tribesmen, who demand only the right to live their own lives in the land where they were born.

With very few exceptions the entire American press re-echoes the French plea that it is in the interests of christian civilization that the Riffian tribesmen should be annihilated. In order to save the world for the christian god the Mohammedan Moors must be sent to hell with the greatest possible dispatch!

In their fight against the imperialist powers the Riffians found sympathy only in one quarter. That section of the working class which acknowledges the leadership of the Communist International, saw in the struggle of the Riffian tribesmen, a part of the world-wide struggle against imperialism. So they hitched up that struggle with the fight of the Chinese, the Egyptians, the Hindoos, the Philippinos against world imperialism and joined those struggles with the never-ending conflict of the industrial proletariat against their class foes in every country.

The American capitalist press cannot speak out against the slaughter of the Moors by the French and Spaniards because American capitalism is engaged in the same bloody work elsewhere. The French and Spanish armies are eating food, wearing clothes and manning guns bought with Wall Street dollars. Wall Street is interested in the conquest of the Riffian tribesmen, so that the business of exploiting the raw resources of Morocco can proceed, to the greater glory of imperialism and the greater profit of the international bankers. Hence there is no outcry against the crushing of a people who want to be free, even tho an American president made the right of self-determination one of the conditions of signing peace with Germany.

The boasted regard of the American ruling class for the right of self-determination is a hypocritical gesture. American aviators are bombing defenseless villages in Morocco and murdering women and children. The leader of those cut-throats, a rat by the name of Sweeney, and the son of a fink, is a special correspondent for an American newspaper syndicate and every day, after dropping bombs on a Riffian village, he sends off a story of his exploits, for which he draws blood money.

The United States once had the reputation of being the haven of the oppressed of all lands. That day is no more. Those who are welcome here today, are not men and women fighting for freedom, but the dregs of European aristocracy and the fascist envoys who seek financial aid so that they can keep their gallows busy with the bodies of the revolutionary workers.

Cognac and Patriotism.

Perhaps a hero of the world war is just as well off without a glass of cognac. We are inclined to believe that a gulp of clam chowder would do him just as much good, but you heard the old story of the camel and his ability to go without refreshment. You also know that very few people would exchange roles with a camel, despite that animal's immunity from thirst.

Rich people wear silk shirts, smoke half dollar cigars, drink cognac and even champagne, ride in costly automobiles, sail in luxurious yachts and live in splendid mansions, without exciting any feeling other than envy. But let a working man aspire towards such a mode of living and things will begin to happen.

Now we can go ahead with the story. An unemployed ex-soldier recently called on M. Clemenceau, war premier of France and after chatting with the Tiger for awhile walked away with a 20 franc note. He did not steal it.

Shortly afterwards Clemenceau went out for a stoll and fancy his consternation when he saw the ex-soldier spending his 20 franc note on cognac and sitting comfortabley at a sidewalk cafe. Such conduct on the part of an unemployed ex-soldier got under the Tiger's hide, so he reached over and picked up what was left of the 20 francs and put it in his pocket.

Clemenceau did not do this because he thot cognac was not as good as potato soup for the stomach of the ex-soldier. What angered him was to see a proletarian acting just as if he belonged to the ruling class.

Perhaps that ex-soldier remained a little longer at the sidewalk cafe pondering over the question: What the devil was I fighting for?

The Wall Street Journal sees a bright future for the coal industry. It figures on the miners' union going out of business by next spring. The trouble with the W. S. J. is that it is figuring on John L. Lewis and not on the rank and file of the union. The U. M. W. of A. is here to stay for a long time yet, regardless of the treachery of Lewis, Farrington and the rest of the per capita sharks.

Marshal Petain announces that if his campaign against the Riffians is not successful before the rainy reason begins, he will continue the fight next year. This looks like the old reliable alibi.

Andy Mellon promised the French that absolute secrecy would be observed in the debt negotiations. Andy must have learned the need for tight lips in the bootlegging business.

It was just as we thought. Terry Druggan's escapades in and out of the county jail came to light when the boys fell out over the division of the bribe money. This is 100 per cent Americanism.

PRODUCTION INCREASES IN AUGUST

By Earl R. Browder

INDUSTRIAL production in the United States, which for the year 1925, has been showing substantial increase over 1924, but which had been declining slightly from January to July, took a decided upturn in the month of August. This is indicated by many reports of basic factors in the industrial situation. Among them are:

Steel Production.

PRODUCTION of steel ingots for August totalled 3,424,034 tons. This was an increase of 336,444 tons over July, and of 871,143 tons over August, 1924. The daily production averaged 131,694 tons, against 118,753 the previous month and 98,183 for the same month of 1924. This production is 74 per cent of capacity, against 68 per cent in July, or about 7 per cent above the post-war average. (Figures from Wall Street Journal, and the Commercial and Financial Chronicle.)

It will be seen from these figures that one of the basic indicators of the course of industrial development, is decidedly on the upgrade.

Railroad Traffic.

THE amount of business, measured in the number of car loads of revenue freight, has been constantly increasing. The following weekly totals from reports of the American Railway Association, give some measure of the movement of commodities:

Week	1925	1924
July 11—	982,809	909,983
18—	1,010,970	930,713
25—	1,029,603	926,809
Aug. 1—	1,043,063	945,613
8—	1,051,611	941,407
15—	1,064,793

The total car loadings for 1925, up to the end of August, totalled 33,549,472, an increase even over the former record year of 1923.

Figures for the profits of the railroads for August are not yet available. But reference to the course of the so-called "gross and net earnings" up to and including July, will show that the railroad capitalists are reaping rich harvests from the increased business. From the Commercial and Financial Chronicle (Sept. 12), we find "gross earnings" of railroads for the month of July, 1925, to be $521,538,604, an increase of $40,595,601 over the same month of 1924. "Net earnings" were $139,606,752, an increase of $27,819,865.

A very significant angle to these figures is contained in the comparison between "gross" and "net" increases. The gross increased but 8.44 per cent, while the increase of net profits was approximately 25 per cent. This is another indication, in addition to those pointed out in a previous article, (DAILY WORKER, Sept. 12, "Problems of the Railroaders' Left Wing"), of the increasing intensity of exploitation of labor on the railroads.

Building Trades.

THE highest total of construction contracts on record is that for August, 1925. This comes as the latest development in what is sure to be a record year. In the 8 months of 1925, building construction has reached the enormous total, according to the figures of the F. W. Dodge corporation, of $3,778,792,000, for the 36 Eastern states. According to the Indiana Limestone Quarrymen's Association, the total for the country exceeds four and a quarter billion dollars. This is an increase of 25 per cent over 1924, in spite of all the predictions one year ago, by the same authorities, that 1925 would witness a big drop in the amount of construction.

Lumber production, shipments, and orders for the first 36 weeks of 1925, showed interesting and substantial increases, as follows:

	— July —		First Seven Months
	1924	1925	1924	1925
Imports	$278,593,546	$325,998,901	$2,128,154,437	$2,389,798,625
Exports	276,649,055	339,629,653	2,366,271,653	2,703,035,565

These are the figures of seven leading regional associations of lumber producers.

Petroleum Production.

THE daily average production of crude oil reported by the American Petroleum Institute, in barrels, for the week ending Sept. 5, 1925, was 2,138,850 compared with 2,038,500 for the same period last year, or an increase of 100,350 barrels per day, or considerably over 3 million barrels per year average increase.

Retail Trade and Postal Receipts.

MAIL order and chain store sales furnish the most available index to the course of retail trade. For the 8-month period ending Aug. 31, the two leading mail order houses report sales of $257,383,267, against $226,522,270 for the same period in 1924; or an increase of 13.6 per cent. Ten leading chain stores report total sales of $331,143,313 against $290,620,738 for last year, or an increase of 14 per cent. The gain of both groups together for 1925 over last year is 13.7 per cent.

Postal receipts for this August, (of 50 selected cities) according to a report from the office of the postmaster general, were $25,084,541, while for last year they were $22,545,277, an increase of 11.26 per cent.

Foreign Trade.

AUGUST figures on imports and exports are not yet available. There is every reason to believe that they will show a continuation of the trend up to and including July, which may be summarised as follows:

	Production	Shipments	Orders
1925	$3,755,278,948	3,641,191,086	3,514,499,375
Increases	378,027,317	329,953,637	457,938,247

That is, in approximate percentages, the increase for July, 1925, over July, 1924, was, imports, 17 per cent, exports 22 per cent; for the seven-month period, imports 12 per cent, exports, 14 per cent. The greater increase of exports over imports is an important indication of the growing movement of capital to foreign markets.

Summary.

THE fragmentary but basically important data given above, shows the acceleration of the process pointed out by Eugene Varga, in his report on "Economics and Economic Policy in the Second Quarter of 1925," when he said:

"In general American economics are taking an upward trend, apart from the periodic fluctuations."

The upward trend has sharpened considerably. How far it will go, or how soon the inevitable downward slump will come, is not now apparent.

A Voyage to Soviet Russia by American Mariners

By H. J. R.

ON July 10, the fishing was getting pretty well done. That morning there came a Soviet Russian cruiser steaming to the village. Her name was the "Vorovsky." About 3 in the afternoon there came a steam launch alongside with three officials from the cruiser, Russians, one of them I recognized, it was an official from Petropovlosok. We had met him while there. He jumped on board, shook hands and asked for Staricho, as I could understand that much Russian, by that time, which means old man, I knew he meant Mr. Bennett.

I brot him to Bennett and as soon as he saw him, shook hands and embraced him and told him thru one of the other officials who spoke English, that young Kenneth, his grandson, was given four outfits of clothing and was on his way to Moscow with the other young folks by way of Vladivostok, to commence his studies at the university.

Visit Soviet Village.

They stayed and had coffee with us. One a gentleman from Vladivostok by the name of Goerman, spoke good English. He had been in San Francisco. But when the revolution started in 1917, he went back to Russia. They asked us how we liked the village. So we told them that we had not been there because it was too far away.

They asked us would we like to go and visit the village. We said we sure would. "Alright," they said, "can you go tomorrow?" We said we could. "Alright," they said. "We will arrange and have a motor boat come for you tomorrow afternoon about two o'clock, then. You be up to the village about 4:30 p. m. and we will meet you there." So about 5 they said goodbye and left.

The next day the motor boat was there at the appointed time and six of us started for the village. The village Ust. Kamchatka, is a small fishing village about three miles up the Kamchatka river with a population of about 700 people. We arrived there about 4:30 p. m. and Mr. Goerman was there to meet us. The Red cruiser was anchored a mile from shore and we asked him if we would be allowed to take a look on board of her. He said you are welcome if you want to go and said, "Any of our warships are open to visits by a worker, so come right along." So we started for the cruiser.

Board Soviet Warship.

We got alongside and when we came on board, Mr. Goerman introduced us to the commander who was at the gangway. The commander, a polite man, spoke good English and immediately took us around the whole ship. They showed us all the quarters and the big salon which was used for educational purposes for the crew, with all the up-to-date and Communist literature. Then we went thru the crew's quarters which were very good and shook hands with all the boys, all fine big strapping young fellows.

We met one young fellow amongst them who had been in Honolulu and spoke good English. We were the first foreigners, who had come on board to visit them and he told us he could not understand why it was that foreign merchant seamen did not come on board their warships oftener to visit them. That they were always welcome. And that they were the only real workers' navy in the world and that the foreign merchant seamen were workers and are welcome.

Talk of America.

So I soon explained why it was they did not visit them as I understood it thoroly. I explained that the merchant seamen of the world, never came to visit a warship of any nationality as it was not customary for them to go on board a warship and if they did try to visit a warship of any nationality, except a Soviet warship, they would not be allowed to go on board. But I told him soon as the merchant seamen knew they were welcome and understood that the Russian Red Navy was a workers' navy, they would have plenty of visitors. He understood me quite well, and realized the whole thing.

Next the commander invited us down in the salon; there we had tea and cake. We also had an interesting talk with all the officials there. We talked about the conditions of the workers in America and the American yellow labor leaders whose names they know better than we did. Then we spoke about the output and production of commodities in Soviet Russia. Mr. Goerman who was a delegate to the Comintern, told us that the output in the year 1924-1925, was satisfactory under the conditions and that 1925-1926 would be better by about 100 per cent in certain commodities. Of course, one must understand Soviet Russia is different from the capitalist countries where the capitalist is always talking about netting so much and so much at the expense and misery of the worker and his family.

Education, Welfare Come First.

One must understand the first order of business in Soviet Russia, is education, the welfare, health and happiness of the worker and his family. And then production. We all were glad we had taken the trip on board the cruiser, as the kindness and happiness of all those on board of her from the commander down, was quite an education. We also learned while on board there that the day before, when the cruiser came in, there was a Japanese scout cruiser anchored about one mile from shore of the Japanese cannery.

The Russian commander soon as he came to anchor sent word to get on the outside of the internationel limit, which the Japanese cruiser immediately executed.

About seven o'clock we thanked them and bade them good bye. Mr. Goerman and the young seamen accompanied us to the village. They told us there was going to be a big meeting of the Communist proletarian and peasants. We asked them would we also be allowed to attend the meeting. And he said, you come right along. That will give you people an idea how interested the people are in their government and also how we run those meetings in those remote villages.

A Communist Meeting.

We arrived at the village about 8 o'clock and went right up to the meeting hall, a little frame building. The place was packed with men and women, old and young. Mr. Goerman found us all a seat in front. It looked as if every person in the village was there. About five young sailors in uniform from the cruiser were seated in front with string instruments. About 8:15 the meeting was called to order, the curtain was drawn from the little stage, everybody stood up and the seamen played the International. The meeting was conducted by the local secretary and one of the seamen from the cruiser in uniform acted as chairman.

And while the International was played there stood on the stage with the right hand raised the youngest Communist in Kamchatka, a boy of 11 years of age. Mr. Goerman and the young sailor who spoke English were seated next to us and translated from Russian into English what was spoken.

Mr. Goerman asked Mr. Bennett if he would also like to speak a few words in behalf of the American worker. He said he would like to, but they would not understand him. Mr. Goerman said go to it old man, I will do the translating. So Mr. Goerman jumped on the stage and had Mr Bennett's name put on the program.

Greetings From America.

About 9:30 Mr Bennett's name was called out by the chairman. He got up and went on the stage. He spoke about 15 minutes. Mr. Goerman writing down in short hand. He greeted them in behalf of the Communists and the workers of America. Thunderous applause.

He spoke of the Russia 2 years ago when he was in Russia and the Russia of today. He praised them for destroying the rotten capitalist system in Russia and for building up a workers' republic. And added that he hoped to live long enough to see the same conditions in America.

He hailed Lenin as the greatest statesman of the day and one who laid his life down for the cause of the worker. He thanked them for their kind attention. Mr. Goerman jumped up on the stage and translated. Thunderous applause. Several of the seamen from the cruiser spoke and read poetry. The most interesting was the young seaman who was chairman of the meeting. He had come all the way on the cruiser from Archangel thru the Suez Canal, and related all his experiences from the voyage to the meeting.

Tell of Red Cruiser's Voyage.

First port, in London, he said, they were given a big welcome by the street car conductors' organization. Next port, Naples, Italy, they were not allowed on shore because they were Communists, and he said the Communists of Naples came down to the ship to welcome them in behalf of the Communists of Italy, but they were driven away by the police and fascist soldiers. After that there was a guard thrown around the ship and nobody was allowed near her. Everything they bought, provisions and other things for consumption of the ship's crew, he said, was carefully examined and opened.

From there they went thru the Suez Canal, in Colombo and the Eastern ports and said the conditions there were miserable and deplorable beyond imagination. In Colombo they had mostly women labor to coal their ship. The women carrying the coal on their heads and their babies strapped to their backs and so they were driven like slaves all day long. Finally, they got to Shanghai. He said there was all kinds of labor trouble there and warfare. After they were two days out from Shanghai on the way to Vladivostok, they were sent back to Shanghai, by wireless from Moscow, with instructions to give the workers party there all possible aid.

So we can plainly see that it was not the usual joy ride for those seamen in the Workers' Navy. One can notice that by the welcome they got in all capitalist countries they visited. There was not the usual free theaters, for them, candy, chocolate nor cigarettes and sightseeing. And it is all because they have been bad boys and driven the capitalists to destruction in Russia and organized a workers' government.

Meet Old Friends.

At about 11:30 the meeting came to an end. When we got outside there were several people who invited us to their homes. But as we could only go with one we went with a friend of Mr. Goerman who invited us.

We had some supper and music. So Mr. Goerman said it was too late to go back to the ship. We best sleep here tonight, which we did.

Next morning we got up early; Mr. Goerman had a boat put at our disposal. We thanked the people where we slept, said good bye to Mr. Goerman, and started back for our little ship. The cruiser sailed up the coast that evening.

We visited the village more often after that in our own motor boat. After that evening I met those three young men we had given passage from Petropovlosok. I asked them what kind of luck with the fishing and they said good. I asked where the priest was we had also given passage as I did not see him at the meeting. They told me fishing in a little open boat was too tough a life for that gent, so he had gone to some little place up the river.

The last time we visited the village we asked the young people in appreciation of their kind treatment they had given us all times while in the village if they could not visit our ship for a day, as we were about ready to sail home. They said they gladly would and the next day in the afternoon they came in a motor boat, ten young men and two young ladies, their string instruments with them. They had supper on the boat with us and after supper we had music and singing and jolly good time. They sang Russian songs and we sang English songs. About twelve that night we saw them off on shore as they were going to stay in the cannery for the night. The Japanese superintendent having put rooms at their disposal. So we bid them a fond good bye as they were going back to the village early next morning on a little tug boat and we were to sail for home that evening.

Next morning about eight o'clock the tug boat came out towards the ship with our friends on board on their way back to the village. They all lined up forward on the little tug and bareheaded sang the International for us three times as the tug slowly circled around our ship, and throwing big bouquets of forgetmenots on our deck. Then they gave us three cheers for the American proletariat and the little tug was off.

Soviet Russia There to Stay.

That is the kind of farewell we got from those people, which each of us in the crew of this ship will remember all our lives. It was a real farewell from workers like ourselves. We also wish to add that by the looks of conditions and talk we had with all the people we came in contact, that Red Russia is there to stay, and not on its last legs as the American capitalist press would have us believe. Every one we spoke to about that only laughed and said, "Let the foreign capitalist have his way we have no love for him. But we want the workers of the world to know different. They are the ones we care about and not the capitalists. The workers' interest and welfare we have at heart."

Later in the day we bid farewell to the old proletarian, the custom official who had been with us 52 days. The old fellow when he said bood bye commenced crying. He had been one of us for so long. He spoke something in Russian in behalf of the American and Russian proletariat. That evening we set sail and left for home—Seattle.

And in conclusion we wish to say this about our visit to Red Russia: That we have the highest respect for everybody we came in ontact with and that the people are of the highest moral standard. Straight, honest, upright and friendly to the workers of the world.

Joins Workers Party of America.

We have been there and have seen conditions and the people and stand convinced that Communism is the only medicine for the proletariat. Therefore it means nine more members for the Communist Party of America. And long live the Soviet republic of Russia and the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Anton Maroun

The Communist Party of Egypt mourns its first victim; on the first of August Comrade Anton Maroun died in the prison hospital as a result of a hunger strike.

Comrade Maroun, a lawyer of Arabian Syrian nationality, had always taken a keen interest in the Egyptian labor movement. After the war, when the great revolts against English imperialism commenced in Egypt, he devoted his entire energies to organizing labor unions. The Egyptian Trade Union Federation, which was affiliated to the R. I. L. U. elected him as secretary. At the same time Comrade Maroun was very active in the Communist Party. In 1924 Comrade Maroun was arrested, along with the other members of the Central Committee of the C. P. of Egypt. The long period in prison while awaiting trial and the abominable treatment which was meted out to the political prisoners, undermined his health to such an extent, that during the trial in September last year the medical experts certified that he was not capable of undergoing the trial. Notwithstanding this, he was condemned to three years' hard labor. Soon after being sentenced, Comrade Maroun was compelled, along with the other condemned Communists, to carry out a prolonged hunger strike in order to gain something approaching human treatment. This injured his health still further. In spite of this, Comrade Maroun flatly rejected the offer of King Fuad to grant him a "pardon," and preferred to share the fate of the other condemned comrades. The prison administration thereupon sought to take revenge on Comrade Maroun for his inflexible attitude; he was exposed to every possible petty persecution and torment, which caused him once again to enter on a hunger strike. Comrade Maroun remained on hunger strike for six weeks. The Egyptian prison authorities did nothing to meet the demands of the hunger strikers; not a word concerning the strike, penetrated to the ears of the public. It was not until six days after Comrade Maroun's death that the government published a short communication of the facts.

"Public opinion" in Egypt passes over in silence this act of murder on the part of the Egyptian hangmen's government. But the young Egyptian labor movement will never forget the martyr death of Comrade Maroun.

Striking Parents Meet Tonight

Circulars announcing a meeting tonight in a hall at 6505 Sheridan road of the parents of children on strike at the Eugene Field school were distributed all day yesterday in that neighborhood. Small meetings of striking parents were held thruout the day yesterday to outline the fight for return of the portables to the school grounds at Albion and Greenview Aves.

FAMILY REQUIRES $1,800 TO LIVE, IS PROFESSOR'S REPORT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15. — A wage or income of $1,800 a year is needed to supply "elementary decencies of life" for a family in cities of 100,000 or more, and $1,600 is needed in smaller towns, says Rev. Francis J. Haas, professor of Markuett University. Production, he said, is increasing twice as fast as population, yet this increased wealth is not being passed around. Machinery is displacing skilled workers and reducing their buying power.

SEA STRIKE TO HIT LINER OLYMPIC

Franco-Spanish Armies Defeated

RIFFS RETAKE BIBANE, DRIVE FRENCH BACK, HALT ATTACK ON ADJIR, WHIP SPANISH TROOPS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADRID, Spain, Sept. 16.—The Riffians have administered a severe defeat to the French imperialist army and have recaptured the important position of the Bibane Heights, while at the same time they have alarmed the Spanish bankers by causing the landing force on the shores of Alhucemas Bay heavy losses.

The Spanish government officials have been unable longer to hide their fears that the landing in the shores of Morocco will prove disastrous. There are persistent reports that the landing was unsuccessful.

Spanish Troops Exposed.

The Spanish troops are now in an exposed position, and have been unable to secure supplies from the transports because of rough weather and the heavy Riff attack. Before them is a difficult terrain, and the rainy season is bearing down on them.

Thru the strict censorship set up by the Spanish government, it has now leaked out that the drive on Adjir, capital of Abd-el-Krim's forces, has been foiled due to a mutiny of crack Spanish regiments, and the attack of the Riffians on Tetuan, which is still in danger.

Spanish Put to Sea.

The official Spanish communique admits that the landing of ammunition has been prevented. "The Riffians have stubbornly resisted the continued disembarkment of ammunition at Alhucemas Bay," says Gen. Vallespinosa's dispatch.

Dispatches from Tangier declare that the Spanish forces which landed at Morro Nueva are being harassed nightly by the Riffians, and that their food and ammunition supply is low. The Spanish ships have put to sea in face of the Riffian attack.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THOSE who favor peace and harmony might as well engage a vacant lot in a quaker graveyard and lay down and die. It seems the dove of peace, unlike the other birds of the air spoken of in scripture, has no place to lay his head except on the chopping block. If there is any place on earth where peace could find a welcome, one would expect that place to be the league of nations, which was organized to make war on Mars, but even there the discordant notes of disagreement rend the ether.

FRANCE and a certain number of small nations favor the reference of all controversial matters to arbitration, while Britain, Japan and Italy, bar out almost everything save swearing on the Sabbath, using garlic for perfume and eating fish fried a la Greece. This is also the position of the United States. Those powers evidently have projects that cannot brook arbitration. Britain for instance wants the oil that is buried in the ground in Mosul. Anyhow there is a rift in the league loot and two definite wings have been formed, none of them right. They are both wrong.

ACCORDING to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, a former army stoolpigeon by the name of McEwen, told the Kiwanians of that city that the reds are spending millions of dollars to spread the "menace" of Communism thruout the United States. The idea is a good one but unfortunately the gentleman is exaggerating considerably. If the money is available somebody is holding back on us. We would not have the slightest scruple about using it, but it simply isn't there. Again we appeal to our readers to send in their dollars and save the DAILY WORKER. Let us all try to make good the optimistic assertions of McEwen.

A LITTLE news item in a capitalist paper tells us quite nonchalantly that a defunct bank has paid its depositors fifty cents on the dollar. None of the bank officials are in jail. There is no stigma attached to their names. But if a couple of highwaymen held up the bank and got away with half the bank's deposits what a howl would come from the bankers! They would call for more state police, and pictures of bank employes learning to use machine guns would appear in all the newspapers. We always held that if there was any bandit shooting to be done the banks were entitled to the first consideration.

PEACE is a worthy aim but all those who talk peace are not necessarily prophets thereof. A peace pageant is planned in New York with Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip as patroness. The mushy Frank Crane was engaged to theologise on the blessings of peace and others interested in the same subject are: Norman H. Davis, Judge Gary, Henry W. Taft, brother of the beefy ex-president and Thomas W.

NO PROGRESS AHEAD IN ILL. LABOR MEET

Triviality Rules with Reactionary Control

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 16.—The greatest danger confronting the American labor movement is the development of a revolutionary movement in this country, and this must be fought effectively by organized labor, declared William B. Wilson, who was secretary of labor in the cabinet of Woodrow Wilson.

This capitalist politician, pictured by the labor fakers of the Illinois Federation of Labor convention in session here as a great hero, could give no greater insult to organized labor than to appear before them as a "friend"—a friend who had deported foreign-born workers as a purely suppressive measure against the labor movement.

Mutual Admiration Society

Rep. Soderstrom, who is supposed to have the credit for the anti-injunction or rather the "limitation" of the injunction law, also spoke and paid great tribute to Governor Small and at every sentence, gave his blessings to "Honest John" Walker and "Vic" Olander.

This eloquence in praising these labor fakers was accepted by Honest John, who of course gave his compliments back to Soderstrom as the great savior of peoples rights in the state legislature, with the appeal to vote right in the next election.

Partly Right

Compliments were also given to the preachers by President Walker who stated that labor and the church is

An organization tour of the western districts is being planned by the C. E. C. Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and other party centers of the west will arrange mass membership meetings to be addressed by a representative of the Central Executive Committee.

Note.—Articles on party reorganization by Elis Peterson, editor of Ny Tid, on page four today.

Consolidation in Finance.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 16.—Stockholders of the American Investment company looked with favor today on a new financial institution that is to result from the proposed merger of the local concern with the Continental Discount company, of Des Moines, Ia. Two-thirds of the stockholders in a special meeting Tuesday, favored the alliance.

Mistaken for Melon Thieves.

McMINNVILLE, Ore., Sept. 16—John Hamblin, of Portland, was shot and killed instantly near here today, and his father, Frank Hamblin, a resident of Minnesota was paralized when wounded in the leg by farmers who thought they were melon thieves.

Courses for Teacher.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—During the current educational year there is to be an increase in the number of training courses for national minority teachers. A German seminary is to be opened at Odessa. Training courses are also to be organized for Polish teachers.

GARMENT BOSSES DISPLAY BANNER ADVERTISING A. F. OF L. UNION IN ATTEMPT TO BREAK STRIKE

The International Tailoring company, whose 800 employes, members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, have been on strike for the past twelve weeks, yesterday again adverticed for strikebreakers under the banner of the American Federation of Labor.

The company displayed a large sign above the second floor of its building at 847 West Jackson Blvd., which proudly boasted, "All employes are members of the United Garment Workers, affiliated with the American Federation of labor. Watch Us Grow!"

Organized Scabbery of A. F. of L.

When the strike started, the A. F. of L. union immediately offered its services to the International bosses, and the name of the United Garment Workers was used before Judge Pam's court in an attempt to secure an injunction against picketing.

When this failed, the scab "union" furnished strikebreakers to the employers, under a signed agreement. Now the International, unable to hold the few strikebreakers obtained, is endeavoring to attract honest workers by displaying the name of the A. F. of L. on its building.

Appeal Fine of Picket.

The fine of $25,000 and costs placed against Rose Cicole, striking employe of the International, in the municipal court, Room 1106, City Hall, is being appealed by the attorneys for the Amalgamated.

Rose Cicole was one of seven strikers hailed into court yesterday, charged with picketing in a "disorderly" manner. William A. Cunnea, the union's lawyer, immediately made a motion to vacate, and the case will be heard on September 19. Abe Vloomgert, another striker charged with violating the Cuthbertson anti-injunction law by "violent" picketing, was discharged.

The cases of the five other strikers were not called yesterday. These are William Scarman, Dominic Ca-

CAILLAUX LEAVES TO BE MILKED BY WALL STREET

PARIS, France, Sept. 16—Finance Minister Joseph Caillaux left this evening for the United States, with a definite proposal of a debt settlement, made by the cabinet, in his pocket, to bargain with the Coolidge administration on terms of France's settlement of her war debt to the United States.

Caillaux said that he relied on America's "big heartedness" and "spirit of fair play." But Wall Street has forced France to come begging at Coolidge's door for terms, and if France gets any better terms they will be at the expense of guarantees of market and other concessions accorded American big business.

Borah Wants Full Payment.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 16—France is better able to pay her war debt than is Great Britain, and should be accorded no better terms, Senator William Borah of Idaho, chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations, told President Coolidge in a conference at the White House.

SHIPS OF ALL NATIONS LOSING CREWS TO STRIKE AS THEY DOCK AT N. Y.; PICKET LINE GROWING

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 16.—The general strike of seamen on sea-going ships is rapidly intensifying as ships enter the harbor. When the Morgan liner Creole arrived from New Orleans yesterday, the whole crew struck. When the freighter Callagasas docked at Yonkers 80 per cent of the crew walked off; from the Grace liner Santa Teresa, 50 per cent left.

The Danish steamer Rolf is still without a crew, the mates and engineers leaving her yesterday. When the liner Olympic pulls in today, the Marine Transport Workers of the I. W. W. expect to get a large part of her crew to strike. Over half of the crews of three oil tankers just arrived have answered the first call.

How They Walk Off.

All hands came off the Howick Hall, including the Japanese stewards. From the Danish steamer Bornholm came all hands, some mates and engineers also. From the Icehall, 75 per cent of the crew, from the Josea, 60 per cent, from the Hawaiian, 40 per cent of the crew struck at once. More is expected from the last three ships.

The picket line of the M. T. W. is growing larger, with more men lining up in the union daily. It is particularly noticed that the strike is raising the prices of scabbing. Shipping agents are trying to ship men at $75 a month for able seamen and firemen. This is about $12.50 to $15 more than existing rates.

Union Scabbing Not Effective.

The men are not being fooled by this maneuver, however, as they know that this would last only for one month and is given merely to break the strike.

The officials of the International Seamen's Union, together with the Salvation Army, are doing all they can to break the strike. When the steamer Virginia Express crew walked off 100 per cent the I. S. U. delegates entered into negotiations with the skipper, according to information given by the M. T. W. strike committee, with a view to supplying I. S. U. men to scab, but to date had been unable to get the members of the I. S. U. to ship out as scabs. The M. T. W. reports many of these I. S. U. members are joining the M. T. W. and going on the picket line.

Holy Scab Herders Busy.

As seamen can scarcely be found even by the I. S. U., the Salvation Army is trying to induce the Bowery bums to scab. But "even a Bowery bum has a sense of honor," according to the strike committee, and the efforts of the Jesus screamers were in vain.

The following are the ships listed as completely tied up on Sunday: From American lines, the Huron, Pipestone County, Steel Scientist, Padsany, Cape Cod, Ponce, Cuyampa, Sucaresco; from the Norwegian lines, the Anna Neilsen, the Sesktant and the Vika; from the English lines, the Japan Prince; from the Danish lines, the Rolf and the Diana.

Rumor Majestic In Trouble.

Affected 50 per cent are the Republic, the America, the Sarcoxie, the Waukegan and the Henry Grove of American registry; the Loghton, an English ship, the Vavirno, an Italian ship and the Rotterdam, a Dutch ship. These reports are from picket captains up to Sunday after five days of strike.

The White Star liner Majestic, which boasted of its beating the Southampton picket line when she left the British port, was supposed to leave at 10 a. m. from New York, but she left two hours late and dropped anchor off Sandy Hook, according to reports reaching the strike committee and is seemingly laying by to get more crew from off shore.

In spite of police interference, the cops and officers trying to stop them, the crew of the Cuyampa was struck just at sailing time.

Threaten to Arrest Parents of Striking Children Under 16

Boonton, N. J., Sept. 1—Threats of arrest have been made to parents of the school children on strike here who are under 16 years of age. About 350 boys and girls attending the Boonton high school have gone out on a strike demanding the reinstatement of their principal Albert S. Davis who was dismissed by the board of education. These threats have been sent out by the board with the announcement that the dismissal will not be rescinded.

LEAGUE FEARS CRASH OF WORLD IMPERIALISM

Broaches Conference to Fight Soviets

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 16.—Delegates to the league of nations assembly here, admit that economic conditions in Europe, are in many respects growing worse, despite seeming financial betterment. They are proposing fantastic artificial regulations to bolster up the declining capitalist states of Europe.

Premier Painleve, on the opening day of the assembly, said that "economic forces, if left unrestrained, might cause a new war."

Louis Loucheur, the French delegate, who proposed the resolution for a "world economic conference" of the capitalist powers, said that "since the end of the war, Europe has been a prey to an economic crisis."

The "economic conference" is proposed in an attempt to counteract the growing prestige of Soviet Russia, and to check the decline of the European imperialist powers.

LABOR DEFENSE UNIT LAUNCHED IN N. Y. CITY

Gitlow Makes Report; 29 Unions Present

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The conference called by the International Labor Defense, which took place at the Labor Temple, was a tremendous success. It was attended by 124 delegates, 29 from trade unions, 28 from Workmen's Circle branches, 9 from miscellaneous organizations and 56 from branches of the International Labor Defense, which had already been formed. In addition to the 29 trade union delegates there were two from the I. W. W

Great enthusiasm was manifested at the conference at the idea of an all-inclusive labor defense organization. Comrade Ben Gitlow, who acted as chairman of the conference, made a report on the conference held in Chicago, at which the I.L. D. was formed. "You remember the Palmer raids, the Lusk committee, you remember the recent attacks on the foreign-born workers. In Zeigler, Illinois, workers face a sentence of 20 years

Italian Makes Another Hop.

MANILA, P. I., Sept. 16.—Commander De Pinedo, the Italian aviator, who is making a flight from Rome to Tokio, hopped off today for Apparri. De Pinedo has been held up here for a considerable time, due to unfavorable weather and necessity for repairs to his machine.

Marked Unemployment in Mexico.

MEXICO, Sept. 16—There is marked unemployment here at present. The closing of the sugar mills for the season and curtailment of the manufacture of alcohol on account of high taxation placed this year by the federal government upon the manufacture of alcohol, are a few of the reasons offered to explain this condition.

NO PROGRESS AHEAD IN ILL. LABOR MEET

coming closer together, and in the words of one preacher, that the programs of the church and of labor are almost the same.

The first struggle between reaction and progress developed over the recommendation of the credentials committee not to seat the representatives of the delegates from Pressmen's Local Union No. 3, and instead seat J. Polsner, who is supposed to represent the local reorganized by strikebreaker Berry.

Delegate Cahill was given the floor to explain the situation on the Cuneo plant which led up to the suspension of the local by Berry and in a clear manner put the question before the convention.

Pressmen Unseated

On the vote to accept the report of the credentials committee 107 voted for and 55 against with a still greater number abstaining from voting. It seems to have been even too raw a deal for many otherwise loyal followers of Honest John.

The committees were then appointed and it is worth while noting the reactionary make-up of these committees.

Heaven Help Progressive Resolutions

Frank Farrington was announced selected chairman of resolutions committee and in his absence G. Slater, famous for his scabbery in the strike of the Amalgamated in the International Tailoring company was announced as chairman in his place. A slim chance of any progressive resolutions to pass thru these hands and win approval!

Such is the general make-up of all these committees, and the absence of the progressives among the miners expelled by the Farrington machine gave the impression that the convention will be more reactionary that any preceeding one.

A number of progressive resolutions have been presented by various locals but no doubt that the reactionary leadership in control will not allow any move of progress in this convention.

"And The Evening and The Morning Was"—

The second day of the convention proceeded with more speechmaking. It adjourned early to give the delegates an opportunity to visit the University of Illinois.

The manager of the Illinois Tuberculosis Association spoke of the great help the labor movement of United States has given to fight disease.

Kate O'Hare and Scab Union

After him Kate O'Hare representing the United Garment Workers' Union spoke. Kate O'Hare is now trying to peddle the fake union label for Rickert's scab union or, as she puts it, break down the competition of the prison goods contractors.

The conditions she described as existing in the various prisons, and the diseases which endanger those who buy those garments manufactured under these conditions, did not fail to impress the delegates, but her solution of this problem can not be accepted by anyone who understand the class nature of the capitalist system.

No Solution

Patronize the union label. This we have heard for ages, and it does not solve the problem. Not a word about organizing the unorganized and amalgamating the unions in the needle trades industry and bringing about the necessary solidarity among the working class politically to stop diseased prisoners from being exploited under the protection of the capitalist state laws.

A rising vote of thanks may please Mrs. O'Hare but it does not solve the great problems facing organized labor of this country.

Gratz of the Brewery Workers' Union spoke on the necessity of doing away with prohibition.

Frey Spouts Blah-Blah

John P. Frey editor of the Molders' Journal and president of the Ohio State Federation, was the last speaker during the forenoon session. He made a terrific attack on individual judges who abused their powers but at the same time pleading for respect of the law.

He spoke on internationalism also. The American labor movement is the greatest international movement in the world. We do not want to learn from Europe. We want to teach Europe about practical internationalism.

Pernicious Influence

He paid great tribute to Samuel Gompers under whose leadership the American labor movement had extended influence to Mexico and other South American republics, of course always loyal to the stars and stripes.

According to Frey it seems that it is quite enuf to call yourself international unions and then invite the rest of the unions in the world to adopt the policy of uniting with the capitalist governments for the subjection of the colonies, etc., and we will have his brand of internationalism.

Yo, Ho! A United Front!

Mrs. Serrame Berreiter, known as one of the proletarian party high lights was given the floor to advertize the sale of a book by Mother Jones—a revolutionary work—and the representative of Majah Berry concluded by a short speech to the convention in which he said nothing.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 16.—Nationalization of mines and railroads and unemployment insurance paid by capital and administered by unions are demanded by resolutions presented in the convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor here today, by left wing delegates opposed to the ruling reactionary policies.

Many other resolutions were presented, including endorsement of world trade union unity and the efforts of the Anglo-Russian Unity Committee to unite all labor unions in one international, a labor party and industrial unionism or "amalgamation."

Union railroad workers are asked by one resolution to refuse to handle anthracite coal, mined by non-union miners, especially while 160,000 union miners are on strike. It recommends an alliance between the United Mine Workers and the railroad unions.

Negro miners from Duquoin and Culp, Ill., ask in resolutions presented by them that the constitution of the State Federation of Labor be amended to provide for the election of two colored unionists as vice-presidents of the organization.

New Members Must Attend Y. W. L. Class in Economics Tonight

The class for new members of the Young Workers League will open tonight at 8 p. m. at 2613 Hirsch Blvd. Harry Gannes, member of the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League will deliver a lecture on elementary Marxian economics. All new members must attend this class. Thsi applies to Samuel Herman, Rufus P. Heath, Debarth Mell, Edith Kaplan, Bessie Wiesman and Mary Drober. All league and party members and sympathizers are welcome.

Farmer Getting Too Rich, They Say.

Representatives for the seventy-four railroads asking a 5 per cent increase came before the Interstate Commerce Commission with statistics and whatnot to show why the railroads should be permitted to add this additional cost onto farmers. Figures were on hand to show that the farmers' income is bigger and that expenses of railroad companies have gone up.

This day has been especially set apart in the drive for the Bolshevization of the Communist press. Every DAILY WORKER reader must join in this effort. Here are the questions:

1. Why do you read our Communist newspaper, the DAILY WORKER?
2. What shortcomings do you find in the DAILY WORKER, politically or otherwise?
3. What criticisms have you as to make-up, contents, display, etc., etc.?
4. Can you act as a worker correspondent for the DAILY WORKER?
5. What experiences do you meet with in getting others to subscribe for and read the DAILY WORKER?

" Sit down today and write your reply to one, two or all of these questions and then mail them in to the Editor, the DAILY WORKER, 1113 West Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

WHITEWASH TO BE SPREAD ON IMPERIALISM

China to Get Two Fake Investigations

PEKIN, China, Sept. 16—The whitewash .commission .to ."investigate" the May 30th massacre of Chinese workers and students at Shanghai, which began the great strike and upheaval, has finally been appointed by the foreign imperialist powers.

The commission is composed entirely of jurists of American, English and Japanese legal fame. The American member is E. Finlay Johnson, associate justice of the supreme court of the Philippine islands. This is regarded as having been good training for imperialist suppression of China.

Chinese are uniformly hostile to this judicial whitewash, since the imperialists, thru their diplomatic agents at Shanghai gave one verdict on the massacres, but that was not acceptable to Britain because it was too near the truth in laying the blame on the British police troops and the American chairman of the municipal council. The Chinese government will, therefore, probably ignore the "investigation."

The Chinese also look without hope on the much touted "tariff conference." They know that if the imperialist powers grant the country a "right" to increase import duties a little bit, that increases will only be used to pay some of the debts owing to the imperialist bankers and China will not profit at all from it.

Rumors that Wu Pei Fu is making an alliance with Feng Yu-hsiang for war action against Chang Tso-lin is discounted by informed Chinese, who indicate that Wu is playing with the Pekin government who wishes to use him in suppressing the revolutionary nationalist government at Canton.

Word from Canton indicates that some friction exists between the factions of the government administration and the alleged "left wing" Wampoa cadets. It is rumored that firing has taken place between the two factions and that the cadets are in armed control of the city.

And Now a Third Fake.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—Secretary of State Kellogg has suggested to the powers that the commission to inquire into extra-territorial rights in China meet in Peking on December 18, it was announced today.

Slovenian National Benefit Society in Waukegan Meeting

The Slovenian National Benefit Society is holding its national convention in Waukegan, Ill. The organization is a mutual benefit society with an overwhelming proletarian membership. It is therefore natural that the issues and problems which agitate the workers at the present day, have penetrated also into the ranks of this organization of Slovenian workers in America.

In the convention these problems and issues create clear divisions. On the one hand there are the indifferent and the reactionary members, represented by reactionary delegates. These reactionaries are led by a few socialists, whose main mission is the protection of capitalism.

This group mustered at first, when the chairman was elected, a bare majority.

But there are also, on the other hand, good progressives, led by Chas. Novak and a group of Communist delegates. This group endeavors to make this proletarian organization a part of the forces fighting for and with the workers against the capitalists and against capitalism.

Resolutions for the support of International Labor Defense, for recognition of the Soviet government of Russia, for a labor party, and others, will be the issues between reaction and progress in this convention.

In connection with this convention there will be held a public mass meeting in the Finnish Hall on Helmholz Street, with C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the Workers Party, as the speaker.

The meeting is arranged for Monday, Sept. 21st, at seven in the morning.

Beer Lord's Retainers Put on the Carpet by Judge James Wilkerson

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson today ordered Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court in permitting Terry Druggan, west side beer baron, the freedom of the county jail and of the city while he was supposed to be serving a federal sentence for contempt of court. Hearing was set for late today. At the same time Druggan must show cause why he should not be required to serve his term anew.

Pickets Sing at Meeting.

The Amalgamated members have been showing their spirit at the strike meetings by impromptu concerts, in which many of the strikers join with musical instruments. Everyone joins in the chorus. Among those strikers who are appreciated at the meeting are Tony Gulloti, clarinet player, Frances DeSpensa, who holds the record for arrests and for piano playing, Gus Marzo, guitar player, Frank Saxone, trombone, Annette Palimbo, singer.

Peter Korak was arrested on the picket line. J. Reiss, president of the company, was standing in front of the building, and an enterprising copper arrested Korak to show what a good slave to the bosses a policeman can be. Korak was poked in the ribs, and then taken to the Des Plaines street station, where he was booked on charges of "disorderly conduct," and released on $400.00 bond.

DOES SIGMAN OWN THE N. Y. POLICE FORCE?

This Seems to Be the Practical Situation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 16—In spite of President Sigman's talk of peace in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and his promise that there would be no police on the picket lines, Monday, three workers were arrested in front of the H. Fredericks Co. shop at 206 West 39th street, and gangsters attacked the workers in front of the Match & Ebert shop at 164 West 25th street.

Gangsters Show Up—As Usual.

There were larger picket lines than usual in front of the striking shops today, and it was because they so far outnumbered the gangsters at the Match & Ebert shop that the pickets were able to drive them off the block when they attempted an attack.

At the H. Fredericks shop, Saul Steiglitz, Harris Hochstein and Dave Smith were arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct and later were fined $5 each in Jefferson Market court.

In the 6th district court, Sam Weintraub, Sam Grossman and Morris Neuman, who were arrested on Sept. 10 in front of the shop of Alexander Weiss of 368 E. 140th street, were arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Even-Handed Justice.

Weintraub and Grossman had been attacked and badly beaten by two gangsters, who were also arrested and appeared this morning. Attorney Goodman stated that the gangsters were not members of the union, that they had brutally atacked these workers as they were peacefully picketing and the two men were guilty of assault. A business agent of the Joint Board then testified that the gangsters were members of the International and this was merely a fist fight between members of the union.

The judge finally imposed a fine of $3 on all five men arrested, gangsters wh odid the beating and picketers who were beaten alike.

SCHOOL STRIKE PARENTS MEET TO OUTLINE FIGHT

Send Petition to School Board Tonight

What is appearing to develop into quite a strike is a situation that is now threatening the Eugene Field public school. On Monday morning many mothers refused to send their children to school. On Tuesday numerous others followed the example. It is rumored that by the end of this week more action along this line will be taken by all of the parents of this section.

The trouble started when the board of education decided to move the portables from the park at Greenview and Albion to a piece of territory about 100 feet square on Clark and North Shore Aves. The board of education did not start to move these portables until two days before school opened, with the result that on the first day of school the parents were at a loss as to where to send their children. Some were sent to the main building and the rest were scattered until the portables could be made ready.

There are eight portables tightly packed together on this tiny square. Since their moving, the portables are just outside of the school district. The children have to walk six or seven blocks extra crossing Clark street at a very busy center. This, together with the fact that they have no playground except the street tends to greatly increase hazard of accidents.

About forty irate parents met Monday night at the home of Louis J. Falk, 6604 Newgard. They issued leaflets and distributed them thruout the neighborhood advertising a mass meeting to be held at 6505 Sheridan Road, Wednesday night at 8:00. They are determined not to send their children to the portables even after they are ready, which will be next week. At this meeting they are going to sign and send a petition to the board of education. They are determined to get results.

Workers Must Mobilize for the Important Tasks of Communist Press Day

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, as you sit down to read these words, consider what you have done, or intend to do, to make a success of the Communist Press Day issue of the DAILY WORKER, Sept. 21, the success that it ought to be. It can only be successful as the DAILY WORKER receives the co-operation of all its readers.

• • • •

FIRST.—Turn to Page Five and read the announcement to worker correspondents who must help make this issue thrill with the life and the struggles of labor in the shops, the mills and the factories. This issue must mark a mobilization of worker correspondents.

SECOND.—Turn to the appeal on this page under the heading, "What Do You Say?" Many letters have already been received in response to this question, but not enough by far. Have you written your letter?

THIRD.—On Communist Press Day itself you can talk to your shop mates about the DAILY WORKER, get them interested in it, get their subscriptions. For in addition to turning out a DAILY WORKER, without a flaw, our paper must reach the broadest masses of the workers. It must become a mass press.

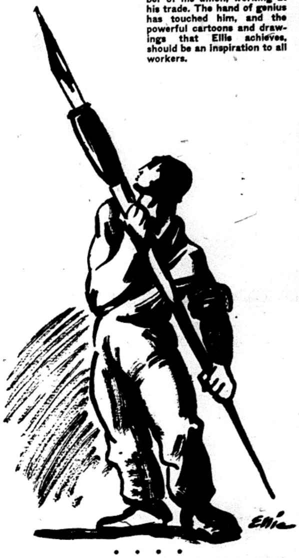
These are some of the things that you can do that are brought to your attention today. But, you say, "I am no writer."

The answer to that is the illustration in this column, drawn by our comrade, Fred Ellis, a painter, a worker, member of his union, working at his trade. The hand of genius has touched him, and the powerful cartoons and drawings that Ellis achieves, should be an inspiration to all workers.



• • • •

When it was written that "The pen is mightier than the sword," there was no injunction issued that labor should not also use the pen, nor take up its sword. Labor must wield its pen. It must write. It must write for its press, telling the stories that will help educate all workers. One of the struggles of the master class in all ages has been to prevent the oppressed from wielding the pen of awakening working class knowledge. That struggle of the masters continues today. If the DAILY WORKER fails to mobilize a large army of worker correspondents that is a capitalist class victory. If the workers develop their power to write for their press, that is another working class triumph.

• • • •

Labor must learn to use the pen as well as the sword. The Russian workers learned to write for their press, an illegal press under czarism, long before the Bolshevik revolution. It was because they had learned to wield their pens correctly, to write intelligently of their problems, to develop a correct knowledge of their struggles, that they were able to wield effectively the sword of the proletarian dictatorship in defense of their Soviet Republic. Now the Russian workers have newspapers and magazines of all kinds, of their own, more in number than there were in the days of czarism, to take the place of the master class publications that have disappeared with the wiping out of master class rule.

• • • •

The pathway marked out by the Russian workers is the one that American workers must follow if they would also win their liberation. The Communist press can only go to the workers to find its writers.

WORKERS! TAKE UP YOUR PENS!
WRITE FOR YOUR COMMUNIST PRESS!
WRITE FOR THE DAILY WORKER!

WAR OVER MOSUL BEING PROVOKED BY THE BRITISH

Protest to League Is Only First Step

LONDON, England, Sept. 16—Great Britain's protest to the league of nations, which charges that the Turkish government has violated the status quo of the Mosul region by deporting christians, is looked on here as only the first step leading toward a war over possession of the rich oil fields.

The Turkish government denies that christians have been deported, declaring that there are no christians in the territory reported to have been raided, and look upon Britain's protest as a provocation and a lever whereby England will have an excuse to sieze territory now controlled by Turkey.

Mass Troops on Border.

The Turkish government officials declare that all the christians left over a year ago, at the time when Turkish troops entered, "to punish persons who had kidnapped the government."

Reports of large numbers of troops massed by Turkey at the Iraq border, continue to circulate, and the British government regards the situation as "unpleasant."

Will Not Accept Decision.

The British control the Iraq state in Mesopotamia, and the Turks are in possession of a portion of Mosul, the control of which is disputed by the two countries. The league of nations council, which is to render a decision in a few days, favors the British, but the Turkish government has let it be known it will not abide by this decision.

TAMMANY MAN LICKS HYLAN IN NEW YORK

Walker May Wink At Volstead Act

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Mayor John F. Hylan, defeated for renomination in the democratic primary yesterday, will retire to private life. The mayor made this announcement late today in a statement in which he thanked those who supported him at the polls.

With 131 districts missing, the vote was for Hylan, 147,117; Walker, 239,212.

The defeat of Hylan and Hearst is a big victory for Tammany Hall and establishes the leadership of Al Smith over the democratic organization thruout the state. Many of Hylan's supporters deserted him at the eleventh hour.

Hearst Threatens Complications.

According to the Hearst press, a third ticket will be put in the field in the finals and the Evening Journal declared that Hylan would lead it. Hylan's own statement denies this. Tammany will take good care of Hylan provided he ceases to make more trouble. Should he run, he might take enough votes away from the Tammany nominee to turn city hall over to the republican candidate.

Jimmy Walker is a favorite among the "light wine and beer" fans and may be counted on to wink his eye at the imbibing of something stronger. Walker is the father of the state boxing law, and sponsored Sunday baseball and movies.

Most of the labor leaders supported Walker. Neither faction of Tammany Hall felt obliged to take labor seriously. Walker posed as a "friend of the workingman." Hylan boasted that he was once a locomotive engineer.

Young Bob Wins.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 16.—Robert M. LaFollette won the republican nomination for the United States senate in Wisconsin, carrying all but eight of the seventy-one counties in the state With 369 counties missing, the vote stood: LaFollette, 163,584; Wilcox, 72,996; Woodward, 35,227; McGovern, 17,866. Wilcox had the endorsement of President Coolidge. Woodward was the K. K. K. candidate

The democratic entry was not able to bring in enough votes to qualify his party for the finals. It is doubtful if the socialist candidate will be able to make the grade either.

"NA BOYKOM MIESTE" TO BE PRESENTED SAT. AT WORKERS' HOUSE

The Russian theater season will be opened formally this Saturday, Sept. 19, at 8 p. m., at the Workers' House, 1902 W. Division St. Under the leadership of the Russian actor L. Luganov, and with the participation of the Russian actresses Aza Namgova, Moiseyenko and others, the play "Na Boykom Mieste" by Ostrowski will be arranged.

SHIPS LOSING CREWS IN BIG MARINE STRIKE

I. S. U. Officials Try to Force Scabbing

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 16.—Already about thirty boats, including such important vessels as the Mongolia, Republic and the American are tied up in the port of New York as a result of the strike of seamen called by the Marine Transport Workers Union No. 510 of the I. W. W. on Sept. 9 with the double purpose of sympathy with the striking British seamen and to fight against the unbearable conditions on American ships.

This is an international strike in the real sense of the word. Seamen of all nationalities are involved, including a large percentage of Americans. The strikers are making the appeal to the crews of all ships coming into port, talking to them in their own language.

Strategy to Reach Crews.

For instance, at the headquarters of the Marine Transport Workers Union at 105 Broad Street a striker comes in to report of heroic efforts that he had made to reach the crew of one of the United Fruit company ships with the strike message. When the superintendent of the dock did not allow him to go aboard he got into a tug boat and went by a back way and spoke to the crew in Spanish, which was the language the most of them understood. The all promised to join the strike.

The I. W. W. is very active in the strike. Successful street meetings are held and the appeal is made to all seamen, whether organised or unorganised. A well-attended street meeting was held Saturday evening at 23 Coenties Slip near the Seamen's Institute. The men are coming off the ships as fast as the ships are touching port.

I. S. U. Officials' Betrayals.

The International Seamen's Union which is the A. F. of L. union of marine workers is playing a most inglorious role in the strike as a result of the strikebreaking attitude of the leaders.

The union leaders are using the headquarters of the International Seamen's Union are disgusted with as a strikebreaking headquarters. When the crew of one ship left their ship, the International Seamen's Union officials tried to ship a crew on her for $72 a month. Many of the rank and file of the International Seamen's Union are disgusted with the leaders. The rank and file sailors claim that the officials of the International Seamen's Union are a bunch of fakers who haven't been to sea in the last 15 years, and a number of them have never been seamen at all.

So far the strike has been peaceful, altho the strikers are firm in their determination to make this a finish fight for their demands which call for a wage increase of $15 a month, a uniform wage scale, the eight hour day and the 44 hour week, pay for overtime, better food and living conditions and recognition of the union.

Bad Conditions.

The conditions at present on American ships are abominable, with the average wage $58 a month, as compared with $85 a month for Australian seamen and $90 for Mexican sailors. This shows that all the talk of a higher standard of living for American workers is pure bunk, at least as far as American seamen are concerned.

The law which is supposed to protect the seamen on American ships simply does not function. The La Follette seamen's act has been thrown into the discord. An American ship is the most disgraceful thing afloat, as far as conditions for the seamen are concerned. The skipper of the ship is a czar. He fines men a whole month's wages and the government commissioner always supports him. The seamen have absolutely no redress except a lawsuit which is far beyond their means.

The strike is spreading. It is a blow at the tyranny of the United States Shipping board as well as the American Steamship Owners' association and other private ship owners. It is a strike of momentous importance, coming at this time when the British seamen are out on strike. American seamen are refusing to scab on their British fellow workers.

Do Something Now!

Financial aid is needed to make it a success. The Workers Party is throwing its full support to the strike. At the Conference of the International Labor Defense held in New York on Sunday, Sept. 13, a special appeal for funds was made and the response was inspiring in its enthusiasm. Anyone desiring to send money directly for the strike fund may send it to the treasurer, Marine Transport Workers' Union, No. 510, 105 South Street, New York City.

Hod Carriers Strike.

ANSONIA, Conn., Sept. 16.—Hod carriers receiving only 50 cents an hour struck in Ansonia for higher wages at the call of the Hod Carriers' and Building Laborers' Union which is seeking to organize the upen shop work in this vicinity.

T. U. E. L. CALLS FOR SOLIDARITY IN STRIKE OF SEAMEN AGAINST BRITISH AND U. S. SHIP OWNERS

The National Committee of the Trade Union Educational League yesterday issued the following call to all marine workers to support the worldwide strike of the seamen and particularly the strike call and demands of the Marine Transport Workers Industrial Union No. 510 of the I. W. W. which has called a strike on all coasts:

• • • •

To All Seamen and Seafaring Workers, Organized and Unorganized:

The seamen of this country have declared a strike, in common with the seamen of the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Denmark, for demands of decent wages and human conditions of labor.

The shipping of the British empire is paralyzed. Scores and hundreds of ships are tied up in the harbors of the British Isles, in Danish ports, at Cape Town, and every port in Australia is filled with ships without crews—all demanding that the ship owners who have tried to cut their already miserable wage a whole $5 a month be met with a solid front of the general strike.

Union Officials Buck Strike.

True, Havelock Wilson, detestable traitor to the interests of the British National Sailors' and Firemen's Union again betrayed the interests of the seamen by agreeing to the wage cut—after a banquet with the British ship owners. But the members of that union are the leaders of the British strike and have repudiated the traitor Wilson, who has come to the United States to get aid in his betrayal from similar traitors in the American marine unions.

Members of the I. S. U. and the I. L. A.! Members of the Marine Cooks' and Stewards' Union, members of all marine unions and you marine workers yet unorganized! Do not be deceived by the Havelock Wilsons of this country, by the Furuseths, the Olanders, the Pat Flynns, Pryors, Carlsons and Grangers who are trying to get you to scab on the world wide strike of the seamen under the banner of unionism!

Don't Scab!

Don't be a union scab! Don't be any kind of a scab! You who are organised, stand up in your locals and demand united strike action not only with British, Danish, Australasian and African seamen, but with the Marine Transport Workers Industrial Union No. 510 of the I. W. W., who have led the response to call for resistance to the greedy ship owners with a strike which is now tying up American ships in Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific ports.

Unorganized seamen, form ship committees, walk out for the demands of the M. T. W. No. 510 and make common cause with the seamen of the I. W. W. for the interests of all seafarers against the shipping companies. Unorganized longshore workers, gather your forces together on the docks, elect a strike committee, demand union wages and hours and conditions, and demand that the ship owners grant the demands of the M. T. W. No. 510 of the I. W. W. for seamen before you touch your hands to cargo! An inquiry to one is an injury to all! Stand by the M. T. W. seamen and demand they stand by you in united action against the ship owners and stevedore bosses.

Stand By! Join the Strike!

Seamen and shore worker, boycott all British, Australian, New Zealand, South African and Danish ships! Support the demands of the M. T. W. No. 510 of the I. W. W. on American ships, which are as follows:

1. "Wage increase of $15 for all men licensed and unlicensed on all U. S. Shipping Board ships.
2. "That the American Steamship Owners' Association and private owners pay the same rate as the U. S. Shipping Board ships; there must not be any difference in wage scales.
3. "The same wage scale for all vessels of foreign registry signing articles in American ports.
4. "The eight-hour day as a maximum for the marine industry with 44-hour week in port.
5. "That there be no overtime work without pay. Overtime pay to be at the rate of sixty cents an hour for all sea-going and coast-wise vessels.
6. "Better food and living conditions.
7. "That the ship furnish clean bed linen once a week, mess gear, towels and soap also to be furnished by the company.
8. "That logging only be permitted if a member of the crew fails to turn to for a whole work day in port, the same to be at the rate of 'one for one.'
9. "That the delegates of the I. W. W. shall have access to all ships and docks.
10. "That all men shall be hired from the Marine Transport Workers No. 510 hall."

Unity and Struggle.

Marine workers of shore and sea, stand by the striking seamen of other lands and of this country! Defeat the ship owners. Repudiate the traitorous union leaders who betray the interests of the workers. Instead of wage cuts, demand higher wages, shorter hours and better conditions. International trade union unity and amalgamation of all marine unions into one industrial union.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE,
Trade Union Educational League.

LABOR DEFENSE UNIT LAUNCHED IN N. Y. CITY

on trumped-up charges. In the anthracite region, it is impossible for the workers even to hold a meeting. In New York meetings have been broken up by the police—thus, a meeting to express solidarity with the Chinese workers. All of these facts indicate clearly that there is no real freedom of speech in this country," said Comrade Gitlow.

Comrade Gitlow's Speech

"In New York the criminal anarchy law has been tested, and the decision of the U. S. supreme court in upholding the constitutionality of the law means that a club is held over the head of every worker who expresses the opinion that a change of government can and should be effected by other means than the ballot. The sanction of the U. S. supreme court makes the criminal anarchy law a national statute.

"These facts make it evident that the workers must have a powerful defense organization fighting for the rights of the workers.

"Further, let us regard the injunctions that have been issued by the courts against the workers. A recent injunction against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union in this city makes it an offense for a worker to be seen within 10 blocks of the International Tailoring company. What is true of New York is and can become true of any other section of the country. In the coal regions, where everything is owned by the coal operators, any miner who goes on strike, can be evicted by the coal company and he and his family left to starve and freeze. The workers therefore, must fight against government by injunction, against arrests during strikes, against the denial of the right to organization, against the use of sheriffs, police and machine guns against the workers.

Fight Against Imperialism

"When men in prison have wives and children, it becomes the obligation of the workers outside to take care of them. The I. L. D. is the organization that will take care of them.

"When Sacco and Vanzetti faced execution, the workers of Paris and Moscow demonstrated and the execution was stayed. And today we know that these two militants are innocent.

"In the Baltic states, thousands of workers have been butchered by the bourgeoisie; in Morocco the Riffs are fighting against French imperialism; in China the workers are being massacred by American, British and Japanese imperialism; in Africa, British imperialism shoots down the workers. The workers must unite against world imperialism.

"In this country again, we have laws against foreign-born workers, against the Negro workers; we have the ku klux klan.

"Therefore, it is high time that a defense organization has been formed, to combine the interests of the working class. Unity behind the defense means success in building up the International Labor Defense, as the representative defense organization of the workers of this country."

Comrade Gitlow's speech was greeted with long applause, which showed that the delegates were united in the determination to build up the I. L. D.

Report on Deportations

Comrade Rose Baron made a report on the deportation cases. She told of her experiences as secretary of the National Defense Committee which was in charge of the deportation cases resulting from the Pallmer raids. She told about the suffering of the prisoners, how children almost died of hunger; how a woman deportee was taken to the hospital where her prematurely born baby died and she followed in a few days.

Comrade Baron enumerated various cases of workers who were picked up on the streets or in their shops, and without being allowed to communicate either with their families or lawyer were taken to Ellis Island and deported. At present there are 70 workers facing deportation, who are out on perole or on bail. Even strikers today are subject to deportation. The question of deportation therefore becomes one of the most important before I. L. D.

Prison Relief

Comrade Kate Gitlow reported on the necessity of prison relief, Comrade Richard Moore on the sufferings of the Negro workers in this country. He told of the harassment of the work and tenant farmers of the south, who are virtually robbed by the owners, and when they complain are arrested and sent to prison. "There must be an organization that makes no distinction between white, black or yellow workers. The capitalists are united in exploiting and crushing the workers. There must be no distinction between anarchists, Communists, I. W. W. or any other type of worker. As long as they are workers, the whole working class must get behind them."

Honor John Lassen

Comrade Felshin spoke on the life and death of John Lassen, who faced deportation for publishing a poem, and who robbed the department of justice of another victim by death. He told of the eminent work that Lassen had done in the revolutionary movement of France, Hungary, Germany and Russia, till he came to the United States, where the government joined the Horthy regime in hunting him down. The conference rose in honor of Comrade Lassen.

Fellow Worker Brazier of the I. W. W., spoke about the 160 members of the I. W. W. who were sent to prison for anti-war activities, many of them being held for deportation. Deportation in many instances means death, starvation or misery. One member of the I. W. W. was deported to Italy and latest they heard was that the fellow worker had been forced into the army and was sent to Morocco.

Brazier said, "I endorse the International Labor Defense personally and shall do everything in my power to secure the endorsement of the I. W. W. The united front can be made more sure if we develop the defense organization, which will wield a tremendous influence for good in the labor movement. Workers will not hesitate to fight in the front ranks when they know there is a national organization fighting in their interest. It will give not only legal aid, but also furnish the small things that help to alleviate the suffering of prison life.

Aid to I. W. W.

"Comrade Baron has undoubtedly informed you about the aid that has already been given to prevent the deportation of some members of the I. W. W. The resources of the general defense of the I. W. W. were sorely taxed and we greeted the aid given us by the I. L. D.

"The I. L. D. should become a gigantic organization, to back up with all its influence the struggles of the working class the world over."

Fellow Worker Brazier's speech met with a hearty response from the conference, which greeted the presence of delegates of the I. W. W.

Comrade Bentall spoke on the Crouch and Trumbull case, the case of the two American soldiers who have been sentenced to the federal prison at Alcatraz, California, for being members of the Communist League in Hawaii.

The Zeigler Persecution

Comrade I. Amter spoke about the Zeigler cases, the cases of 18 miners who are charged with "conspiracy to murder" an official of the United Mine Workers' Union in southern Illinois. This is a typical case of reactionary treachery against the rank and file of the militant workers.

"Among the most militant workers in the country are the miners. In 1922 5,000 of them were obliged to form an army, furnished with guns, to get their constitutional rights. These were American miners, white and black, most of whom had served in the American army in France, and had to return to the United States to fight for 'democracy' here.

"In New York City, 30,000 needle workers are in struggle against their reactionary officials. The struggle of the militants is the same the country over. There the workers present must raise the slogan of Zeigler in their trade unions and fraternal organizations. Funds must be raised for their defense; resolutions must be adopted against their persecution. New York must lend all aid possible to Zeigler."

Elect Local Committee

Comrade Horowitz reported for the resolutions committee. There were resolutions on Crouch and Trumbull, on Zeigler, on the Polish white terror, on the 550 Bessarabian workers now being tried by the Rumanian courts, a resolution endorsing the national conference of the I. L. D. and an appeal to the workers of New York City to support the I. L. D. There was a further resolution calling upon the incoming executive committee to seek the cooperation of all sections of the working class with the I. L. D.

All the resolutions were adopted unanimously. The conference decided that a copy of the resolution on Crouch and Trumbull should be sent to the war department, Washington, D. C., copy of the resolution on the Polish white terror to the Polish ambassador at Washington, D. C. and the consul in New York City; on the Bessarabian persecution to the Rumanian ambassador at Washington, D. C.

The constitution on the I. L. D. as drafted and adopted by the national conference, was then adopted with the amendment that the national office of the I. L. D. should submit monthly reports on finances and activities.

Thereupon the conference proceeded to the election of a local executive committee. Fifteen was recommended as the size of the executive committee but as 19 names were proposed, it was decided that the 19 should stand.

Mass Meeting at Night

The New York conference of the I. L. D. laid the foundation for a broad organization in this city. The mass meeting in the evening at Webster Hall was one round of enthusiasm. Comrade Bentall was the chairman, the speakers being Joseph R. Brodsky, the attorney for the I. L. D., whose remarks were greeted with applause especially when he said he hoped that the day would soon come when the I. L. D. would not meet as a defensive but as an offensive organization to consider ways and means of taking over the power by the workers.

Robert G. Dunn, Ben Gitlow, Charles Krumbein and Richard Brazier were the other speakers. After the collection was taken up for the I. L. D. a second collection of about $47 was taken up for the striking Marine Transport Workers, I. W. W., who are engaged in a sympathetic strike to aid the British strikers.

At the end, the movie taken at the outing of the I. L. D. at Pleasant Bay Park on August 29, was shown, rounds of applause following each picture.

The I. L. D. is launched in New York City. It must and will have the support of all militant workers and working class organizations.

Success at Cleveland.

An enthusiastic mass meeting was addressed in Cleveland, O. by Earl R. Browder, himself an ex-class war prisoner. Some 25 delegates from unions and branches of International Labor Defense attended the conference in the evening and started a promising local of International Labor Defense. John Fromholz was elected chairman and A. Severino, against whom deportation charges are pending, secretary of the new local unit.

Canton and Bellaire

The speaker at the meeting at Canton, O., was W. J. White. The conference on Sunday afternoon was presided over by D. Berger of the Carpenters' Union. Both mass meeting and conference were highly successful and plans were laid to extend the organization of I. L. D. thruout the whole of Stark County. Carl Guillod, of Canton, was elected secretary of the Canton local of I. L. D. and Brother Berger permanent chairman. A live local was set up at Bellaire, O., in a conference that set immediately to work on the actual task of carrying on I. L. D. work in Belmont County. H. Benjamin of Cleveland was the main speaker.

FOUR-DAY DRIVE FOR DAILY WORKER NETS SEVENTY-ONE SUBS IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 16—The four-day campaign for the DAILY WORKER here netted seventy-one subscriptions. Big crowds are attending the special demonstrations addressed by Mother Ella Reeve Bloor, who has just completed a coast to coast hitchhike, speaking at meetings for the DAILY WORKER.

The Brownsville Junior League took part in a meeting last night. Comrade Goodisman, leader of the Brownsville Young Pioneers, made a ringing appeal for parents to send their children to the Junior League, and protested against religious instruction in the public schools. Little Comrade Eisman stood beside Mother Bloor on the platform leading the Junior chorus.

Unprecedented crowds greeted Mother Bloor on the historic Red Corner at Stone and Pitkin streets. Twenty-two, subscriptions poured in. Comrade Mitnick was chairman. Mother Bloor speaks in Boston today.

TO DEPORT 134 MORE CHINESE FROM NEW YORK

Government Declares War on Orientals

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Police and federal agents have seized 600 more Chinese, and it is announced that 134 will be deported. The government declares it is attempting to wipe out tong wars, but many Chinese see the wholesale arrests, raids and deportations as a move against the American section of the Koumintang, which is supporting the striking workers of China who are battling foreign imperialism.

The raid was conducted at the very moment when the national officials of both tongs, meeting at the Chinese consulate, were signing an agreement of peace. A fleet of patrol wagons took the 600 Chinese to the federal building.

A "special immigration" court was immediately convened in the chambers of United States Commissioner Garret W. Cotter, which rushed thru the deportation orders.

The 134 Chinese to be deported were taken to the Tombs. United States Attorney Buckner said the deported Chinese would not be taken to Ellis Island, but will be rushed out of the country direct.

Peasants' International Calls on Farmers of World to Take Over Co-ops

master class.

The letter follows:

To the Toiling Peasants thruout the World!

Brother and Sister peasants:

The decline of peasant agriculture, which started since the outbreak of the war, is continuing to stifle the broad masses of peasants thruout the world. The great majority of the peasants in all countries are cultivating small plots of land, and they do not raise sufficient to cover the needs of their families. If there be anything left for sale, the middlemen get it at cheap prices. It stands to reason that under such a state of affairs the peasants cannot hope to accumulate any savings. They are always in need. They need credits, they need loans of money, seeds and so on. Even if they get the means for the purchase of necessary implements, seeds, stocks, fertilizers, etc., the middlemen again take advantage of the peasant's need to sell him the goods at exorbitant prices. Thus the middlemen cheats the peasant twice; on buying his produce and on selling him goods.

To obtain credits from private individuals, the peasant has to pay a high rate of interest. The peasant's property is practically mortgaged thru the whole of his life. The poor peasant cannot hope to get any credit from the state. Neither can he save up any money by his work. The poor peasants could see only one possibility of liberation from the thraldom of usury and exploitation by mutual credit organisation and co-operative disposal of their produce, eventually leading to the common use of agricultural machinery and implements.

Thus arose the wave of the co-operative movement. Poor and middle peasants were rapidly building up their co-operative credit organizations, primarily for the sale of produce and the acquisition of supplies and implements. Millions of poor and middle peasants united for mutual aid and agricultural co-operation. They were joined also by prosperous peasants, usurers, and even by landowners, who saw the growing force of the movement and wanted to "help" the co-operatives.

Brothers and sisters of the co-operative peasant organizations! Did you ever ask yourselves why the wealthy peasants and landlords joined the co-operatives? Of course, not in order to help the poor peasants, not for mutual aid which they did not need, but in order to gain the leadership in the co-operative organizations, and to take advantage of the petty savings of the poor peasants for their own advantage, and also in order to get the poor peasants to follow the political lead of the bourgeoisie.

This they have achieved. Particularly after the war, when the economic crisis gripped both agriculture and the agricultural co-operatives (the credit co-operatives, thanks to currency inflation, had nearly lost the whole of their capital), the latter became financially entirely dependent on financial and industrial capital. This circumstance was particularly responsible for the fact that the co-operatives have fallen under the control of the wealthy peasants, landlords, and their satellites

This is the situation everywhere, in all countries.

Take Germany as an instance. The German landlords, thru their pan-German "Landbund," are grabbing the credit societies entirely into their hands (the so-called Reifeisen banks), either supplying them with capital or covering their indebtedness to the different banks. Why, the Central Reifeisen Bank itself has been converted into a limited liability concern. The same is the case with other agricultural co-operative organizations. The Landbund members in control of the co-operative organizations will extend co-operative assistance only to those who are members of the Landbund, which means their belonging to the political parties of the landlords and the bourgeoisie. In economic respect, they are endeavoring to make use of the co-operatives to create for themselves a monopoly in the sale of agricultural produce and industrial products, to the detriment of the large masses of workers and peasants.

If we examine the situation in other countries, we shall get the same picture; the agricultural co-operatives, instead of being a weapon for the building up of the economy of the poor and middle peasants, has become a weapon for the economic and political interests of the wealthy peasants and the landlords.

Even as late as last June, at Warsaw, the leaders of the politics of the bourgeoisie and the landlords tried to create an international amalgamation of the agricultural co-operatives in order to line up the international agricultural co-operation behind the world reaction, against the struggle of the poor peasants for emancipation from the yoke of capitalism and landlordism.

Working Peasants in Majority.

You must put an end to this state of affairs. You must ask yourselves, what do you get from the co-operatives in which you are in the majority. You get pitiful loans at fair interest and a few purchases at prices that are not exorbitant. But most of the funds and all the advantage of co-operative effort are used to serve the interests of the wealthy peasants and landlords. They get big loans, they sell and buy large quantities of goods, and on the other hand, as shareholders in the industrial enterprises, they draw dividends from the profits obtained on the co-operative purcases. This they are enabled to do not only because the co-operatives are controlled by the wealthy peasants, landlords and their satellites, but chiefly because as long as capitalism exists and the power is in the hands of the capitalists and the landlords, they own also the greater part of the land, and the big means of production sharing with the industrial and banking enterprises in their profits, which means that they absorb the greater part of the national income, and this enables them to gain control of the state and of the co-operative organizations.

Your task is to turn agricultural co-operation into a weapon for building up the property of the poor and middle peasants, into a weapon of the struggle for the interests of the toiling peasants. This you can attain only by gaining the leadership of the co-operatives into the hands of the toiling peasants.

Brothers and sisters, peasants and peasant women! Get hold of the agricultural co-operative organizations, oust the wealthy peasants, the landlords and their satellites from the leadership, do not allow your own co-operative organizations, in which you are in the majority, to serve the interests of the wealthy peasants and landlords, so that the latter might take advantage of the material and political power of co-operation to further their own bourgeois interests. Direct the co-operative struggle against the monopoly enjoyed by financial and industrial capital, which exploits the peasants and their co-operative organizations both at selling and buying.

Demand cheap and long-term public credits for the co-operatives; demand a rebate of taxation for the co-operatives, and special state co-operative credits for poor peasants; establish a business connection between agricultural co-operation and the workers' consumers' co-operation, in order to avoid exploitation by banking and mercantile capital; give your active support to the struggle of the toiling peasantry in your own and in other countries for a better life and against war and unbearable militarism. Sincerely working in the cause of co-operation, and relentlessly fighting for these objects, you will gain the leadership in the agricultural co-operatives and get them to fight for the interests of the toiling peasants.

But this is not all. Having gained the leadership in the co-operatives, you will find yourselves confronted with the hostility of the entire apparatus of the capitalist domination. If they will be unable to destroy you by the force of economic action, by withdrawing credit, by intimidating you with an industrial and banking boycott, they will call in the aid of governmental power to wreck the co-operative organizations, as it has been the case in Italy and Bulgaria. Therefore, your work and your struggle in the co-operatives, as an organization of toiling peasants, should go hand in hand with the struggle of the organizations of the toiling peasants and industrial workers who are fighting against the power of the capitalists and landlords, for the nationalization of the land, of all the means of production. Only in this manner will be removed the power of the landlords and usurers, which hinders the transformation of agricultural co-operation into a weapon of the toiling peasents for the building up of their economy.

The purpose of co-operation is to build up the property of the toiling peasants, and this can be achieved only after the overthrow of the power of the capitalists and landlords, and the establishment of the power of workers and peasants. Whether working in the existing co-operative organizations, or creating new ones, this should always be your goal.

Long live agricultural co-operation as the builder of the prosperity of the toiling peasants!

Long live agricultural co-operation as the weapon in the struggle of the toiling peasants!

Long live the united struggle of all the organizations of the toiling peasants against the yoke of capitalism and landlordism!

Long live the united front of agricultural co-operation and workers' consumers' co-operation!

Long live the united struggle of the toiling peasants and industrial workers thruout the world against the power of the capitalists and landlords!

Long live the government by workers and peasants!

Peasants and workers of the world, unite!

The Presidium of the International Peasants' Council.

GERMAN SECTION OF W. P. PLEDGES FIGHT ON LORE

Membership Meeting in N. Y. Indorses C. E. C.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—At a meeting held at the Hungarian Labor Temple the German branches of Greater New York attended by 100 members unanimously adopted a resolution condemning Loreism and pledging their support to the new C. E. C. in its attempts to unify and Bolshevize the party, and to the efforts of the new bureau of the German Federation to build up a revolutionary section of the party among the German workers.

Report on National Convention

Comrade Wolfe reported on the national convention and Comrade Weinstone and Comrade Leman, secretary of the German bureau, spoke on Loreism. After a thoro discussion, in which all points of view freely expressed themselves, particularly on Loreism, the resolution was put.

Comrade Wolfe stressed, in his report, the fact that this convention differed from previous ones in its emphasis upon the Bolshevization of the party, and achieved more in that direction than all the others. The factional fight, which was so bitter during the last pre-convention period, went back to the founding of the party, with its heterogeneous and in many instances, partly Communist elements. The many comrades who considered only surface manifestations looked upon the discussion as merely a struggle for power between two groups, the convention decisions arrived at and the manner in which the convention was carried on, made it plain that it was a struggle for the Bolshevization of the party.

The convention settled for the party the question of Loreism. Comrade Wolfe showed how much the party needed unity, and urged all the Communist elements to come together and to give all their time and energy to the work before the party. Any crisis that might result would be particularly evident in the German Federation, where Loreism had its origin. But after the struggle against Loreism the party would come out unified and strengthened beyond anything before possible.

Lore Sapped Vitality of German Section

Comrade Leman pointed out that the German Federation had been sapped of its vitality under Lore's domination, its membership had dropped, and work in the unions and other workers' organizations demoralized.

Blohm Supports Lore and Loreism

In the discussion from the floor following the reports of Wolfe and Leman, Blohm insisted that Lore had not once deviated from Communist principle, but had differed merely on questions of tactics; that propaganda and agitation, and not political maneuvers were the work of a Communist Party in this country, since we must first prepare the workers by our propaganda, and we would then execute maneuvers with them. He stressed the point that it was better to achieve good results even tho by wrong methods, as he said Lore had done, than bad results by correct methods, as the party had done. He sharply condemned the Communist International for interfering in the American movement, declaring that the C. I. had treated the American members as automatons.

Comrade Berg, who followed, admitted that Lore had made errors, but insisted that the party and the Communist International had also made mistakes. He said that Lore nae been right on the LaFollette question and, that he had not fought the C. I.

Comrades Rosenberger, Hamp, Corbarsky, Johnson and Sanger were other comrades who spoke from the floor. They claimed that the German Federation had been demoralized by the bureaucratic family which Lore had gathered around him, sabotaged party decisions and work, and instanced dozens of occasions upon which Lore and the Volkszeitung had failed to maintain the Communist position.

Blohm Exposed as Lore Agent

Comrade Weinstone in reporting upon Loreism for the C. E. C. showed that tho progress had been made in most other federations, none had in the German, due to Lore's leadership. At the last German convention Lore had stated that the German workers were too well off for us to make progress among them. In the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Society and in the German unions and tourists clubs, Lore had worked to build up a personal following and not to build up the movement.

Tho the field was so fertile, little of an organizational character had been accomplished for the party. The Volkszeitung had carried on its campaigns weakly, had been a news-dispenser, but not a fighting, organizing Communist organ, such as was typified by the Russian Iskra under Lenin's direction, and such as every paper in the movement should aim to become.

In answer to Comrade Blohm, Weinstone characterized as Kautskyite the differentiation between principles and tactics, between theory and practice, between organization and propagand. Blohm had defended Lore and in declaring against the interference of the Communist International in the American question, showed that he had not the slightest conception of what an international signified. The differences between the party and Lore, on the questions of party and international discipline, on that of an underground party, on the Chinese revolutionary movement, his opposition to the German Communist Party uprising in March 1923, which he characterized as a "putsch" in truly social-democratic fashion, his continued belief in Serrati's errors when even the latter admitted his errors,, his opposition not only to the labor party but to all united fronts, all these issues, tho but a small part of Lore's record of passive sabotage and active opposition, showed his non-Communist character.

Lore would rather be the leader of the Volkszeitung than of a revolutionary section of the party. Tho he knew that his expulsion was before the party and the C. I., he had refused to go to Moscow, with the excuse that he was more necessary in the fight in the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Society, a fight which the Volkszeitung had sabotaged.

Weinstone asked Blohm why he not only had not tried to win over the paper for the party, but had even injured the party by publishing such bits as the Horthy advertisement. Blohm's arguments, Weinstone pointed out, had only one object, to defeat the party's fight against Loreism.

In answer to Comrade Berg, Weinstone pointed out that mere formal discipline was not enuf. It was not accepting the Communist International and the party decisions to say that Lore had made errors, and then to refuse to specify what those errors were, and to enlarge only upon the errors of the movement. Such evasion and indirect defense of Loreism was not the sort of support the party expected after convention decisions had been reached. He asked Comrade Berg and other comrades to declare in clearcut fashion if they would support the resolution introduced and take energetic steps to fight Loreism. Berg said he was for the resolution, and would fight the members of the former bureau who had resigned from the party and who were going over to the yellow socialists slowly but definitely.

In closing, Comrade Weinstone appealed to the comrades to win over every sincere proletarian who was under Lore's influence. Our task now is to build a mass, revolutionary movement among the German workers, more consistent activity in all their organizations, to build up now what Lore had prevented, unified party activity in all German workers organizations, to unify and Bolshevize the party and reorganize it on the shop nucleus basis. The liquidation of Loreism is the first step for the German section.

When the vote on the resolution was taken, it was unanimous, except for Comrade Blohm, who had left before the vote came up.

The Scandinavian Section and Party Reorganization

By ELIS PETERSON, Editor, Ny Tid.

THE Scandinavian section of our party is one of the smaller language sections of our party. This makes the reorganization of its membership on the basis of shop nuclei and international branches easier than in the big federations of the party.

The ideological propaganda for the reorganization has already begun among the Scandinavian comrades. There has, so far, been no opposition against it. Some lectures and discussions have taken place in the Chicago branches, where also every fundamental question of the reorganization was discussed in detail and made clear for the members. The organ of the federation, Ny Tid, has published a few articles on the problem, and especially about the role of the federations in the time of the reorganization, and the role of the "Workingmen's Clubs" (the present language branches) and non-party proletarians, after the reorganization. The role of the Communist fractions in these "Workingmen's Clubs" has been explained. It has always been pointed out, that the reorganization cannot be carried thru by the language committees of the federation, but only thru the direct party committees.

OUR federation most likely will not hold any national convention. All the decisions have already been rendered by the National Convention of the party. The reorganization of our federation can be carried thru merely with the assistance of the district conventions. In fact, we already had a convention of our eighth district (Chicago). Thruout this convention it was obvious that the best way to make the members understand the reorganization and carry it out, as far as our federation is concerned, will be thru the district conventions.

Probably a member of the Scandinavian bureau will have to be present at the other district conventions of our federation, and there explain the reorganization in every detail and assist the comrades in their work. This way will not only be less expensive than a national convention, but also more effective.

In our ideological propaganada preparing the reorganization, we have put a big stress upon the individual initiative of every member in a factory or a workshop so that he, when he once has a clear idea about what a shop nucleus is and how to start it, will not have to wait for the initiative of someone else to organize him and his party comrades in his shop. Every comrade himself has the duty to gather the other comrades in the shop together, decide about the forming of a shop nucleus, immediately notify the nearest party committee about the organization of that shop nucleus. Comrades should then wait for instructions or eventual personal assistance before proceeding any further. In many cases, certainly, the party organizers or party committees will take the initiative before the members will be able to begin.

THE present language branches will in the time of reorganization and for a period after it form "Workingmen's Clubs" with affiliated non-party members. In these "Workingmen's Clubs" our party members, organized in the party thru a shop nucleus or an international branch will form a Communist fraction, quite in accordance with forming Communist fractions in other non-party organizations, e. g. trade unions, co-operative societies, temperance societies, etc. But our comrades should remember that their work in the Communist fractions in other existing non-party workers organizations in their respective language groups, especially if these are mass organizations.

In considering the property of our language sections, we believe it will be a very easy task for the party to take it over. The party already is the owner of our weekly paper, Ny Tid, and of our printing press. There are a few other shareholders than the federation in our printing press, but the actual taking over of it will not make any difficulties. Also the Folkuts Hus, the hall owned by the Karl Marx branch of the Scandinavian Federation of the Workers (Communist) Party of America is already owned by the party.

EVERY branch, every district convention of the language section will be covered with a lecture on the question of the reorganization of the party. A thoro discussion will follow. The Ny Tid will in every issue propagate the reorganization as the most important issue now before the party. First and foremost: The closest co-operation with the party committees must be strictly observed.

In the offices of the Ny Tid and the Union Press there will be organized a model shop nucleus, the meetings of which can be attended by comrades from other shops or other places who wish to know how to form a shop nucleus, how it works, and how to lead it and organize its future work.

IT would be very advisable that a model shop nucleus should be organized at once in the national office of the party. Not only in the DAILY WORKER printing shop, but for all the Communists working in that house, or according to the statutes of the C. I. and the constitution of the party. Here all the visiting comrades from other cities and places could get inspiration and advice, especially if the shop nucleus of the national office will see to it that it very soon publishes its first wall shop paper. This shop paper would be of the greatest value for every visitor at the national office.

The Scandinavian section will not only in words, but in eager activity, assist the C. E. C. of the party in its hard work of reorganizing the party as soon as possible.

Special Notice!

All DAILY WORKER, Literature and Book Store delegates are expected to attend the joint meeting to be held Thursday Night, Sept. 17, 8 P. M., at 19 So. Lincoln Street.

Dairy Workers Need Protection Against Carbon Dioxid Gas

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 16.—(FP)—Danger of asphyxiation or smothering by carbon dioxid is one of the hazards against which dairy workers need protection when filling siloes, the New York state health department warns. Studies of ensilage show that green fodder on being placed in the silo immediately begins to undergo changes opposite to normal plant metabolism; that oxygen from surrounding air is consumed and carbon dioxid gas liberated. Sometimes almost all the oxygen is consumed. The carbon dioxid, supposed to be the preservative of the fodder, remains at the surface and for a few feet above because of its high specific gravity.

Most silo accidents to dairy workers occur in the morning, apparently due to fermentation during the night or over Sunday. Workers may be engulfed in an invisible lake of carbon dioxid gas upon entering a partly filled silo and quickly be overcome. To prevent accidents, experts recommend that the blower be started a few minutes before workers enter the silo partially filled with fresh fodder.

Truth to Trash Basket

To the DAILY WORKER:— I am sending you a copy of a letter I sent to J. B. House, columnist on the New York Evening Post, which I think will interest your readers.

J. B. House,
New York Evening Post,
New York City.

Dear Mr. House:—Mr. Irving Mandell sends me a clipping of your item in which you instruct him not to send you any of my books, and explain with elaborate sarcasm that your janitor suffers from an overloaded trash basket. I am pleased to note the high standard of humor now prevailing in metropolitan journalism. I note your beautiful open mindedness and eagerness for new truth; and how well you have learned the great lesson of history, that truth always comes into the world clad in the rags of unpopularity.

You are a "colyumnist" and you like to have little bits of verse to diversify your space. Well, I will send you two lines, and surely they will not burden your trash basket too heavily. They are the last two lines of an immortal sonnet, composed by Ralph Chaplin at the time that he was one of a hundred I. W. W.'s, kept in prison by our national government, while it was engaged in making the world safe for democracy. The lines read:

"For men will name their children
after us,
And name their dogs for men you now admire."

Sincerely,
Upton Sinclair.

Negro Labor Congress to Be Discussed by the Russian Branch W. P.

POLITICIANS who want to be with the rank and file at all costs should study the technique of Patrick J. Diamond, of Brooklyn, New York in the recent Hylan-Walker imbroglio. Mr. Diamond is deputy commisisoner of licenses, at Mayor Hylan's pleasure. When Tammany decided to tie the can to the mayor, Diamond was seized with a serious fit of illness. He took to his bed, but evidently did not lose consciousness. While he was grappling with the grim reaper, his lieutenants were making a canvas of his district—the district he was supposed to keep kosher for Hylan in return for his salary. Just as soon as his lieutenants reported that the voters were for Walker, Diamond suddenly recovered his health and vigor and hied to Tammany Hall. His first words were: "Let's go to it and work for Walker."

Chinese Strikers Use Effective Method to Teach Class Solidarity

NEW YORK, Sept. 16. — "Labor unions have never been recognized in China, but we believe that before this strike is over they will be," says the secretary of the Electrical Workers' Union of Shanghai. Strikebreakers are taken care of easily, the Shanghai union leader says. "We just drop around to their houses, take them out to some convenient lot and make them kneel down in a circle of strikers. We don't beat them at all, but we make them sign a statement something like this: 'I am a dirty low-down traitor to my fellow workers.' Then we take their pictures and this statement and hang them up where everybody can see them. No, we don't have many strikebreakers."

I. W. W. of Sidney for General Strike to Stop Deportations

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The city of Sidney, Australia, has been placarded by the I. W. W. urging the workers to organize a general strike against the threatened deportation of leaders of the British seamen's strike. As soon as the deportation of any person connected with the seamen's strike is ordered, the coal miners of New South Wales will strike. This is significant, as Tom Walsh and Johannson, leaders of the strike in Australia, have been summoned before the deportation board at Sidney.

Twelve white and fifteen colored sailors and firemen of the steamer Min enroute to London and Rabaul, have called a strike at New Castle, and since the colored sailors are in the class of prohibited immigrants, the captain of the Min must maintain them or pay a fine of $485 for each of them if they are absent from their ship more than twenty-four hours.

FOREIGN TRADE TAKES JUMP IN SOVIET RUSSIA

Internal Commerce Is Also on Increase

MOSCOW—(By Tass)—The internal commercial turnover for the year 1925-1926 has been tentatively estimated at from 33,000 to 35,000 million rubles, as compared with 18,000 million in 1923-24, nad 24,000 rubles in 1924-25, according to a preliminary report issued by the economic department of the People's Commissariat of Internal Commerce.

This development is expected in connection with the planned 40 per cent extension of the industrial scheme and the 43 per cent increase of agricultural production.

As for the foreign trade balance, it is estimated that it will increase up to 2,000 million roubles, as against 1,200 million rubles in the current year 1924-1925.

SOVIET RUSSIA EXPECTS CLOSER TIE WITH LATVIA

Moscow — (By Tass.) — The new Soviet minister at Riga, Chornykh, in presenting his credentials to the Latvian president, pointed out that new prospects were being opened in mutual relations between the USSR and Latvia promising to be mutually beneficial to both sides. It was with much satisfaction, he said, that the Soviet government took note of the growing tendencies among Latvian circles in favour of closer economic ties with the Soviet Union.

In reply, President Tchakste stated that the Latvian people and the government were ever striving to keep up close relations with their great neighbor republic and welcomed every step that could promote co-operation and economic rapproachment of both peoples.

Should Stop Anti-Soviet Acts.

Commenting on the statement recently made to press representatives by Mr. Moyerowiez, Latvian minister of foreign affairs, while he was in Vienna, namely that Latvia looked upon herself as a link between West and East and, as such, wished to be in a position to meet the economic requirements of her neighbors from both sides, the Moscow papers express the wish that the Latvian government should live-up to these good intentions and for ever leave off harboring any plans of aggressive anti-Soviet alliances.

Closer Railway Relations.

In particular, the Soviet press declares itself ready to welcome, if genuine, the desire of the Latvian government, voiced by their foreign minister, to improve railway ties with the USSR in order to help promote economic relations between the Western European countries and the Soviet Union.

NEW COMPOSITIONS BY SOVIET COMPOSERS ARE MANY, YOUNGER ONES ARE THE MOST PROLIFIC

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—In spite of the civil strife and the severe living conditions of the last eight years or so, creative muscial work in the Soviet Union went on uninterruptedly.

During the post-revolutionary period a series of new musical creations appeared, written by composers who had made their mark already prior to 1917.

New Compositions.

The composer Vasilenko has written a ballet entitled "Joseph, the Beautiful," a ballet-pantomine "Noah," the musical score to Muratov's play, "The Coffee Shop," etc.

Glier has written music for folk songs of Azerbaijan, an opera entitled "Shah-Senem," a ballot "Egyptian Nights" (after Pushkin), music for Aristophanes' "Linistrata" etc. Gedike has completed his thir romantic symphony, a series of Russian folk songs for two voices with the accompanyment of violin, cello and fortepiano.

Ippolitov-Ivanov has written a symphonic poem entitled "Le Lac d'Anneau," an opera "David and Bathsheba," and an operatic ballet "The Panther's Skin" after the libretto by the Georgian poet Shot-Rustaveli. Mayakovsky has completed his 6th, 7th and 8th symphonies, in which he forsook the classical symphony for the more versatile poetical form.

Post-Revolution Composer.

Particularly prolific were the young composers who came to the front chiefly after the revolution. Alexandrov has written five fortepiano sonatas, a string quartet, and a suite to the play "Blue Beard." Borkhman, one of the few followers of the German romantic school in the Soviet Union, has completed a symphonic poem entitled "Kusum." Lobatchov has written a series of songs for children and arranged a series of folk songs of different peoples. Sabaneyev, one of the few Wagnerites in Russia, has produced a fortepiano trio, sonatas, etc. Sheninshin has written compositions chiefly for the children's theater, also romances, fortepiano miniatures, etc.

Prominent among the young composers are Netchayev, the author of a string quartet; Polovinkin, Shebalin, Sherinsky, Knipper, Mosolov, Abramsky, and others.

A unique place is occupied by the composers Alexandre Krein and Gnessin, who are cultivating the old Jewish song and working on the new Jewish musical style.

Folk Songs.

Of tremendous interest is the work produced by the two ethnographical composers, Paskhelov, who gathered and harmonized a collection of folk songs of Great Russia, Crimea and Tartaria, and Zatayevitch, who has collected 1000 Kirghiz songs and harmonized a series of Kirghiz melodies for the fortepiano.

In a line distinct from the professional composers, so to speak, are the so-called "proletarian musicians" writing almost exclusively musical pieces on revolutionary themes. Among these should be mentioned: Kortchmarev, Lazarev, Krasev, Shulgin, Klyatchko, Turenkov, Kasyanov and others. Their common features are the simple Russian folk melody, very simple harmony, and themes taken from modern life.

Revival of Operas.

In recent years there has also been a revival in the creation of operas. There appeared the opera "The Silver Prince" by Triodin (after the novel by A. Tolstoy), "Lachel's Loment" by Dudkovitch, "The Unknown Lady" by Krynkov (after the story by Block), "Ivan the Soldier" by Kortchmarev, "Trilbi" by Yurasovsky, etc. An interesting musical comedy of modern life in the Soviet village is the musical play by Ivanov-Boretzky entitled "Electricity Festival."

SOVIET DOCTORS HOLD MEETING IN ODESSA ON HEALTH MEASURES

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 16.—The third conference of surgeons of the district of Odessa was held in that city on September 12 to 15. Among the subjects discussed were the following questions: (1) Surgical treatment of suppurative pleurisy, and (2) treatment of patients before and after the operation.

The flst conference of physicians of Northern Caucasus is to be held at Rostov during the first half of December.

The All-Russian Congress of Pathologists will be held this month.

Moscow Prepares for Tolstoi Centennary Anniversary in 1928

MOSCOW —(By Mail)—The government has approved a series of measures preparatory to the hundreth anniversary of Tolstoy's birthday three years from now, on Sept. 1, 1928.

The present Tolstoy's Museum will be removed into a large and specially accomodated building; Tolstoy's house in Moscow is to be repaired, as well as all buildings in the "Yasnaia Poliana" (the writer's land estate;) collections of Tolstoy's Museum are to be replenished; a special jubilee complete edition of Tolstoy's works is to be published: an exhibition will be organized, and so forth.

National Education in White Russia.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—The White Russian language has been adopted in White Russia in a number of schools, both elementary and superior. In schools where the majority of the pupils speak Russian, the White Russian language has been introduced as a subject. Sections for White Russian literature have been established at the libraries.

At Moscow a labor college has been organized for White Russians living outside of the White Russian Republic.

National Educational Activities.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—In Moscow there exist 13 clubs maintained by residents belonging to the different nationalities of the Union, including 2 Polish clubs, 2 Jewish, 2 Latvian, 1 Tartar, 1 Esthonian, 1 Korean, 1 Ukrainian, etc. There are also educational circles for national minorities maintained at various Moscow factories where non-Russian workers are employed.

A New Monument at Baku.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—The well-known artist Yakulov has drawn up a project for a monument to the 26 commissaries shot by the counter-revolutionary generals about 6 years ago during their reign in Azerbaijan. The monument is to consist of a spiral column symbolizing the force and momentum of the revolution. The monument is to serve as a sepulchre for the remains of the revolutionary martyrs. There are also to be erected on that site a museum, a library and a hall for meetings.

U. S. S. R. Folk Concerts at Paris

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—B. Krassin, director of the Russian Philharmonic Society, is in Paris to carry out the preliminary work in connection with the arrangement of concerts of the nationalities of the Soviet Union at the intrenational exhibition of decorative arts.

WORLD RESEARCH BUREAU NOW IN SOVIET RUSSIA

To Exchange Data on Economics

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—The rapid growth of economic and cultural relations between the Soviet Union and the rest of the world has caused the need for the organization of special research work in the domain of world economics. In Germany there have long since been in existence special institutes for the study of the economic situation of Eastern Europe (at Breslau, Konigsberg etc).

A number of central scientific institutions of Western Europe and America, not to speak of individual scientists, are constantly enquiring about the economic situation in U. S. S. R. There is similar interest on the part of Soviet organs to study the economic situation of the world.

There has now been organized a special economic research department by the state planning commission (Gosplan) of the U. S. S. R., whose task is to make a systematic and thoro-going study of all the dynamic and static economic processes on a world-wide scale, and on this basic to establish the reciprocal effect of economic phenomena as between the U. S. S. R. and the other countries.

Informs of Economic Situation

The state planning commission is the supreme organ which regulates the national economy of U. S. S. R., co-ordinates its individual branches, and outlines the course of its further development. An essential part of the Gosplan is the so-called "Council on Conjunctures," which studies the combined action of the world-economic factors that serves as the objective basis for all new economic measures.

The Conjuncture Council receives telegraphic reports from all parts of the Soviet Union, and on this basis it draws up every month a general estimate of the economic situation of the Union. Another important section of the Conjuncture Council is the statistical appartus which calculates the indexes of wholesale prices, published under the title of "Gosplan Indexes."

The close contact existing between the economic research department and the Conjuncture Council enables the department to furnish systematic information to interested organs in Western Europe about the economic situation in U. S. S. R., in exchange for similar information by Western institutions on the economic situation in their respective countries.

Connections With U. S.

The department is now establishing connections with scientific institutions in Europe and America engaged in similar researches, in order to establish permanent correspondence and mutual telegraphic information. The initiative in this respect has largely been taken by Prof. Irving Fisher who proposed to Gosplan to supply weekly telegraphic reports on indexes in the United States in exchange for the Gosplan indexes. The proposal was gladly accepted.

At the head of the economic research department is Prof. Smilga, vice-chairman of Gosplan, assisted by Prof. S. A. Falkner. The department is divided into 3 sections; (1) Economics, in charge of Prof. J. M. Bukspan; (2) Statistics, in charge of Prof. K. S. Parmonov, and (3) Information, in charge of D. P. Bukhartsev.

The address of the department is as follows: Moscow, State Planning Commission, World Economic Research Department. Telegraphic address: Moscow, Gosplan Mirkhoz.

National Wealth of the Soviet Union

On October 1, 1924, the Soviet Union's capital wealth, exclusive of land, amounted to 37,843,000,000 gold rubles. The value of the land on the same date was equal to 63,000,000,000 gold rubles, of which the equivalent of 50,000,000,000 gold rubles was in possession of the population.

The country's total wealth, including land, aggregated 100,843,000,000 gold roubles. The per capita wealth, exclusive of land, amounted to 282 gold roubles; including land, it was 752 gold roubles.

The total capital wealth of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics was made up of the following:

Form of Capital	Value Gold Roubles	Pct. of Total Including land	Pct. of Total Not inc. land
Industry	5,335,800,000	5.3	14.1
Agriculture	6,527,100,000	6.5	17.2
Buildings	19,592,000,000	19.4	51.3
Municipal Utilities	338,000,000	0.3	0.9
Transportation	6,050,100,000	6.0	0.9
Land	63,000,000,000	6.2	—
Total	100,843,000,000	100.0	100.0

The capital wealth in small-scale industry amounts to 644,000,000 gold roubles, which is less than one-seventh of the total for large-scale industry—4,692,100,000 gold roubles. Of the latter gfiure 4,572,000,000 gold roubles or 97.4 per cent, falls to the share of the state industry; 87,300,000 gold roubles, or 1.9 per cent, to the co-operative industry; 32,800,000 gold roubles, or 0.7 per cent to private industry.

Holdings of State.

Wealth in the form of buildings is almost equally divided between urban and rural districts, the cities having 9,586,000,000 gold roubles as against 10,000000000 gold roubles for the country regions. Of the aggregate of 19,592,000,000 gold roubles under this head the state owns 6,575,000000 gold rouble's worth or 33.6 per cent. The remainder 13,017,000,000 gold roubles, or 66.4 per cent is in private hands.

The state holdings are chiefly in the cities—6,289,000,000 roubles, as compared with 286,000,000 gold roubles in the country districts. Private wealth in buildings is principally in the rural regions—99720,000,000 gold roubles, as against 3,297,000,000 in the cities. Wealth in the form of various municipal utilities in the cities amounts to 338000,000 gold roubles, of 0.3 per cent of the aggregate national wealth.

Of the wealth in transporation, 1,560,000,000 gold roubles consists of rolling stock, while the balance of 4,490,0000,00 gold roubles is in the form of stationary equipment.

The total for the agricultural capital wealth is made up as follows: draft animals—2,319,000,000 gold roubles, making an aggregate of 6,527,000,000 gold roubles.

The value of land is calculated on the base of selling prices in the year 1914.

New Bill Helps Foreigners.

MOSCOW, Sept. 15. (Tass)—The government has approved a bill giving right to cultivate land and take up farming to foreigners of working classes residing in the USSR and enjoying rights in accordance with the constitution of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

A New Soviet Museum.

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R.—The Russian Academy of Sciences at Leningrad is opening a new museum of soil. Exhibits for the museum are to be collected in various parts of the Soviet Union.

SOVIET UNION EXPORTS BULK OF FURS TO U. S.

Fifty-one Million Rubles Worth, Total

MOSCOW—(Tass)— According to figures at the disposal of the People's Commissariat for Foreign Trade, 51.1 million roubles' worth of furs were exported abroad during the last nine months (October-June). The first place in fur exports is held by England—45.4 per cent, then follows America—42.2 per cent, and Germany—9.2 per cent. However, America is the main consumer of furs, English firms mostly reselling them to that country.

The People's Commissariat for Foreign Trade (Narkomvnestorg); working through "Gostorg" and "Acros", is the chief exporter of Russian furs; it exports 51 per cent of the total fur stock set apart for exportation. Then follow the Soviet Cooperative Societies—27 per cent, and the third place in the exportation of furs belongs to the mixed societies—14.5 per cent.

SCIENCE BOWS TO THE RUSSIAN ACADEMY'S WORK

Leaders Present at the 200th Anniversary

MOSCOW, —(Tass) — Interviewed by representatives of the press with regard to the jubilee of the Academy of Sciences, Academician Oldenburg, the permanent secretary of the Academy, made the following observations:

"I may state that letters of foreign scientists exchanged with our Academy with regard to its jubilee prove their sincere and friendly attitude to the Academy and confirm their recognition of the fact that the Russian Academy of Sciences has contributed a good share to the progress of the world culture.

"Having started its work two hundred years ago as a foreign institution the Academy gradually began to be replenished with exclusively Russian forces. But this did not make it a narrowly national institution, the international character of its work, even in its most essential part of studying the nature and peoples of our country, is quite clear to everybody. This is also reflected in greetings which we receive from abroad."

Referring to one or two solitary notes of distrust struck by a very few foreign papers, such as the Journal des Debats, Oldenburg remarked that this has been inspired by political combinations.

Prominent Scientists Present

"I am no politican," he said, "and shall never take part in political controversies; we, Russian men of science, devote our lives and all our forces to our motherland and our people. We want that science should progress in our Union, and that our Academy should work on as before, and even more intensively in its third centenary. Separate hostile voices do not trouble us, as we are certain that all our Western and Eastern friends feel with us in this respect.

"At our celebration feast we shall see, as we already know it, many of the most prominent leaders of contemporary science; we shall be glad to show them what we have done and and what we are going to do."

Sigman a Changed Man.

Outwardly at least, Morris Sigman, acting as czar of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, is a changed man. No longer do the pages of his official organ resound with the banging of the mailed fist and the rattle of the official sabre. Peace is in the air. The cooing of the dove has given place to the roar of the lion, yet a little investigation will show that what takes the places of the old Sigman of mass expulsion days, is neither the lion nor the dove but a combination of the jackass and the grinning hyena.

Sigman tried to expel the Communists and their sympathizers from the union, because of their political convictions and because they took their union seriously enuf to fight against the betrayal of Sigman and company, to the employers and to the capitalist politicians. But Sigman found a mass revolt of the membership on his hands. He tried the rough stuff but he was only heaping fuel on the fires of union discontent with his leadership. Finally he began to talk peace.

But Sigman's peace proposal is the slimiest concoction that ever dropped from a faker's pen. One of the burning issues in the union is the question of proportional representation. But Sigman in his organ, Justice, puts this question outside the pale of discussion before a meeting of shop chairmen in New York City, where the majority of the members of the I. L. G. U. work.

It is not surprising that Sigman should balk at this question. As long as 60 per cent of the union membership can elect only 20 per cent of the joint board delegation, just so long will Sigman be able to retain legal control over the union. The rank and file who now follow the leadership of the Joint Council of Action, will pay no heed to the sophistries of Sigman and his gangsters. They will give him a little more of the kind of argument that always works with an autocrat. That is an effective demonstration of power.

Sigman is now cooing like a dove. Before the Joint Council of Action gets thru with him he will be whining like a pup.

The Pullman Porter

An effort is now being made to unionize the slaves of the Pullman Sleeping Car company, who make the bunks, and in other ways attend to the discomfort of those who are obliged to perform acrobatic feats in their involuntary contributions to the estate of George Pullman, the chief beneficiary of which is former governor Lowden of Illinois.

No other set of slaves are more in need of organization than the Pullman porters. The company has a "benevolent" organization on the "B and O" plan but it even violates the agreements entered into by its own tools. And this is not strange.

Only when the workers have power will the bosses listen to them or abide by their agreements. Before a Pullman porter is considered entitled to his meager monthly salary of something like $65.00, he must have covered 11,000 miles in that month. He is not paid for work done in preparing sleepers before starting time. There are many other grievances which an organized body could force the company to redress. Singly the porters are helpless and entirely at the mercy of the employers.

There is one pitfall the porters must avoid. It is depending on the "public" for salvation. A letter sent out by Philip Randolph, general organizer of the Brotherhood of Pullman Porters, expresses the hope that when the "public" is advised of the inhuman conditions under which the porters work, that it will rise in its wrath and smite the company. This is dangerous nonsense. The porters must depend on their own collective strength, in co-operation with all other categories of railroad workers and with the workers in general. Only in unity with their own class can they find strength. This "public" bunk must be spurned.

A Confession of Impotence

P. J. Conlon, one of the oldest vice-presidents in the International Asociation of Machinists, confessed bankruptcy for the bureaucracy of his organization and for the craft system of unionism when he admitted that only the skilled men in the tool-making section of the automobile industry in Detroit were organized into trade unions. Detroit is the center of the automobile industry.

Conlon declared that the craft unions would never be able to organize the automobile industry: it was a job for the radicals.

There are over 200,000 persons employed in the manufacture of automobile and auto accessories in and around Detroit. Yet barely one per cent of those workers are organized. Here we have a gigantic army of labor, left without any protection against the greed of the employing class, while the leaders of the American Federation of Labor go up and down the country denouncing the Communists and telling the workers to beware of them.

It is not surprising that the capitalists should shower compliments on the labor fakers and picture them as the defenders of American democracy. They are the most valiant supporters of American capitalism, and if they do not receive fat checks from the employers for their success in keeping the workers unorganized and working for low wages, the employers are penny wise and dollar foolish.

Conlon is right. The craft union leaders will not organize the unskilled workers in the highly developed automobile industry, or in any other industry. Skill is no longer required by the great majority of the slaves who make the automobiles. They don't belong in craft unions. They belong in industrial unions; one union for each industry. To organize those workers is the task of the radicals. They must be ready for that task.

It is reported that warring tongs in New York have signed a peace treaty. We note that the hammers are omitted. This reminds us forcibly of the Washington disarmament conference, where the old battleships were scrapped and the up-to-date battle cruisers sanctioned.

The league of nations has been successful in little things, writes a league well wisher, but it failed in its main object. It can't stop war but it can at least call conferences. In this respect it bears a striking resemblance to the C. P. P. A.: it couldn't or would not organize a labor party but it "liked to be talkin' about it."

CANTON GOVERNOR TELLS STORY OF SHAMEEN MASSACRE, DEMANDS THAT FOREIGN WARSHIPS BE WITHDRAWN

PEKIN, (By Tass.)—The Canton government, after a thoro inquiry into the Shameen massacre, sent the British and French governments a full report of the shooting, showing that the foreign troops alone were responsible.

The letter sent by the civil governor of Canton tells the story of the shooting in clearer detail than any report yet sent out.

The governor demands full control of Shameen, that the foreign warships be sent away, and that those guilty be punished and the families of the victims be recompensed.

The document, signed by Fu Ping Sheungi follows:

Foreigners Began Firing.

"Government Despatch to the British Consul General and French Consul:

"I bring to your notice that I have received from the secretary for foreign affairs and the Civil Governor of Kwangtung, verbal instructions to the following effect:

"We have duly received and noted the despatches from the British consult general and the French consul.

"Soon after the Shaki massacre, I, the governor, had an investigation commission appointed in which judicial and police officials, representatives of the laborers, peasants, merchants and educators, and the American, Russian and German consuls were invited to sit.

"The officials in charge of the commission have now handed in their first report, which leaves no doubt that the firing was first from Shameen with the result that many were killed and wounded. This can be proved by the following facts:

Two Students Shot Dead.

"First, the procession was led by laborers, peasants, and merchantts. Next came boy and girl students of schools, colleges, and universities. The cadets were the last to make up the procession. With the exception of the cadets, every one was unarmed. When passing in front of the English Bridge, the students of Canton Christian College were fired upon from Shameen. Instantly a teacher, named Au Lai Chow, and a student, named Hui Yu Cheung, were shot dead on the spot. Three were seriously wounded while many others received slight injuries.

"Students marching after the Canton Christian College boys, like students of Kwan Wei Girl School, Sacred Heart College, Normal College for Girls, City Normal College, Chap Sun School and the Second Higher Primary School, were also fired upon before the cadets. The distance between the Canton Christian College boys and the cadets was at least several hundred feet.

"At the time when the Canton Christian College boys were shot dead, the cadets had not yet reached the English Bridge. According to the coroner's reports later that the corpses of Au Lai Chow, a teacher, and Hui Yu Cheung, a student, of Canton Christian College were found in a place west of the English Bridge while those of the cadets were found near the Shaki entrance—a place some distance away from the English Bridge, it is clear that unarmed students in front of the English Bridge were the first to be atrociously slaughtered by the firing from Shameen, and that in response to what had been done at the English Bridge, shooting also began near the French Bridge so that many persons in the procession fell victims with their bodies lying on top of another. Many passers by were also victims. This fact is quite evident to all.

Good Order Maintained.

"Second, besides those taking part in the procession, there were many policemen standing along the Bund up to Shaki with white flags in their hands to maintain good order. There was also a great number of by-standers along the Bund. Again, those in the procession had not taken the slightest precaution against any mishap. The procession composed of such a dense crowd was, then, passing gently along a narrow and long thorofare.

"If, as was stated by the British consul general and the French consul, the cadets were the first to open fire, and if, as was stated by Captain Maxwell Scott, British naval officer, firing was only returned from Shameen after hundreds of shots were fired from our side, the cadets no doubt would have asked the bystanders to disperse before they started the firing so as not to involve all in the calamity and, again, they would have waited until those preceding them had already passed Shaki before they would consent to open fire.

"Furthermore, firing of a hundred shots on the part of the cadets would certainly have caused all those in the procession and the bystanders to make their escape so that when the fire was returned by Shameen, the casualties would all be sustained by cadets.

French, British Statements False.

"How is it that so many students and passers-by were shot dead and wounded? In view of the above fact the accusation of the British consul general and the French consul that the fire was first started by the cadets was absolutely false.

"Third, on that day, there were already many sand bags put up in Shameen besides many other war preparations while the cadets on the other hand did not take the least precaution in mind. They were marching four abreast behind the laborers, peasants, merchants and the students. If the cadets had purposely intended to create trouble, they would not certainly have during the parade been so close to one another and voluntarily suffered such heavy losses in case of trouble. When the Canton Christian College students reached the English Bridge, and when brisk firing was heard, the cadets who were at the Shaki entrance had not even dispersed so as to prepare for action. This clearly attests the fact that the cadets had no intention to create trouble beforehand and it was only after they heard the news of the unforeseen disaster to the paraders that they thus proceeded to the rescue.

Cadets Drove Off Foreigners.

"Fourth, according to reports of the students of the various schools, after the machine guns from Shameen had swept the dense crowd, they saw some foreign soldiers; with arms in hand as tho to open gates of the bridge so as to make a charge against the demonstrators.

"Fortunately the cadets arrived in time and the foreign soldiers then closed the gates and drew back. But for the rescue and protection of the cadets, the casualties of the demonstrators would not be the present number only. How can any one accuse the cadets to be the first to open fire?

"All the above mentioned facts are the reports collected from the boy and girl students who were eye-witnesses of the tragedy, and judging from these evidences there is no doubt that firing was started first in Shameen. Moreover Shameen fired heavily with machine guns using bullets of an unusual type so that large openings were made in the wounds of the victims. This is a grosser crime against humanity.

Foreign Lives Protected.

"Altho such a heavy blow has been received, yet the government assures full protection to the foreigners. With reference to the former letters of the British and French consuls asking for the protection of foreign lives and property, I, the secretary for foreign affairs, have already made a reply. After the massacre, I, the civil governor on the very same night, in reply to the letters of the German and American consuls and others, declared that foreign lives and property would be duly protected.

"I have likewise proclaimed to the people to strive for the abolition of the unequal treaties by peaceful and appropriate method and not by a narrow-minded policy of revenge.

"If the foreign military forces are increasing, the minimum effect will be to excite the people, making it hard for the government to pacify them, while the maximum effect will be to induce this government to hold that the French and British desire to continue the attack against Canton as in the previous case. Therefore, we request you, the British and French consuls, to declare, first, that the forces will not be increased, that is not to despatch more troops and men-of-war so as to facilitate the negotiation of this case. This outrageous massacre of our Chinese citizens is absolutely against humanity and universal principle.

Demand Control of Shameen.

"We hereby present the following demands:

"1. All the nations concerned should appoint high officials to tender apology to the Kwangtung government.

"2. To punish the authorities concerned.

"3. All the men-of-war of the nations concerned to be withdrawn, except two boats designed for conveyance of messages.

4. Rendition of Shameen to Kwangtung government's control.

5. Compensate the Chinese who were killed and wounded.

"The British and French consuls should be requested to transmit these five demands to their ministers in Pekin and to their foreign affairs departments for consideration and reply and also request them to advise us how they propose to deal with this despatch when they reiceve it."

RUSSIAN-UKRAINIAN PERFORMANCE & DANCE SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11

The Russian and Ukrainian branches of the Workers Party have arranged jointly a performance and dance for Saturday, Oct. 11, at Emmett Memorial Hall, corner Ogden and Taylor.

All friendly organizations are requested to keep this date open and not to arrange other affairs.

WE DARE NOT STOP TO REST IN OUR FIGHT TO SAVE THE DAILY WORKER

If there are those who think that because of the prompt and splendid response which some comrades have made to THE DAILY WORKER appeal for help that the emergency situation is over and that THE DAILY WORKER is out of danger, these comrades are making a very serious mistake. It was not merely to meet current expenses that THE DAILY WORKER asked for support. During the summer large debts were incurred. It is these bills for paper and supplies and the loans that were made that must be paid amounting to many thousands of dollars that constitute one of the most serious threats to our paper. While old obligations are being met new ones are constantly arising.

The money which has so far been received has enabled THE DAILY WORKER to avoid some of these dangers. But to abandon the fight now would be to desert THE DAILY WORKER just at the moment when it is beginning to fight its way out of its difficulties.

It was said at the start of the drive that $10,000 was the amount necessary during the first two weeks. This is the start of the campaign. This goal must be reached immediately and then THE DAILY WORKER and its supporters must set about to establish the security of THE DAILY WORKER during the coming year.

Not quite half of the first $10,000 has been raised. This is not due to lack of efforts on the part of many comrades. Hundreds have rushed forward with all and more than they could spare. But there are thousands who have yet to respond. If you are among these, make up your mind that THE DAILY WORKER can spare the support of none of its readers, of no single one of the militant fighters in the class struggle.

ONE MILLION GOLD MARKS GIVEN BY WORKERS OF WORLD TO AID CHINESE STRIKERS, THRU I. W. R.

MOSCOW (By Tass).—According to reports published abroad by the International Workers' Relief, contributions subscribed thru this organization by workers of all countries for the relief of strikers in China exceeded, by the end of July, one million gold marks (German).

The U. S. S. R. trade unions were leading the list with 400,000 roubles to their credit: then come Czecho-Slovakia with about 110,000 Czech crowns, Germany with 47,000 marks, France with 85,000 francs, etc. A special Chinese strike workers' relief committee was organized in Switzerland while reports of relief drives for the same purpose were received also from Denmark, Norway, and other countries.

PROPAGANDA IN THE ANTHRACITE TO FOOL MINERS

But Big Pay Only Looks That Way

By PAT TOOHEY.

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Sept. 16.—This week the anthracite miners receive their last pay which is for work performed the last half of August It is estimated the payroll for the entire region will exceed $15,800,000. This will be the largest pay ever received by the miners in any two week period. On this fact the anthracite operators' conference are waging an intensive advertising campaign. Printed on the back of the miners' statement of wages is a beautiful message from the coal companies.

The due bill is utilized by the operators to propagandize the miners by pointing out their side of the "controversy." One statement reads "$1,200.00 in wages lost daily by the miners and whose fault?" Another reads "Impartial arbitration is the fairest way to settle disputes. We are always ready to arbitrate our differences, however, come what may, they will be arbitrated in the end," etc. Some others claims the miners could make wonderfully large pays, as was done in the latter half of August, would they only work and keep quiet.

A Big Pay Day.

The large pay can easily be explained. At the end of every two weeks miners have on an average three or four cars of coal on the road to the surface, which are paid for on the following pay, and during the latter half of August, this coal was paid for. Payment for this road coal increased the pay from $10.00 to $12.00 for the two-week period.

Second, the yardage and measurements of the contract miners are usually taken on the 25th and 26th of each month, but during the last two-week period this was measured on the 30th of the month, which added to the measurements of the contract miners for this period, increasing their pay in this respect by at least $10.00 or $12.00.

No Bulge For the Day Men.

And again, miners realizing that it was to be their last pay until the termination of the strike, did make an effort to load as much coal as possible, the company supplying extra cars, something never done before. To continue to work at the increased rate of speed would be impossible, but knowing the strike would give them ample time to rest up, they actually, with the urging of the company, worked their fool heads off.

While the operators harp on the big wages made the last pay by the miners, it is striking to note the company men made but their usual average during this period, they who work for a specific day rate, and the only ones to gain thereby was the contract miner.

Class in Principles of Communism Starts Sunday in New Haven

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 16—A class in the study of the principles of Communism is being started by the English branch of the Young Workers' League. All workers, young and old, are invited to join.

The lecture-discussion method will be used, and debate will be encouraged.

The class will meet every Sunday morning, 10:30 a. m., promptly, at the Labor Lyceum—38 Howe St. Comrade Carl Weissberg, of the Y. W. L., will be the instructor.

Come this Sunday, Sept. 20, and join.

U. S. SHUTS GATES TO COMMUNIST

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

CHICAGO judges are now competing with each other for the compliments of the newspapers by treating prisoners rough. Judge Lyle cannot even stay with the trout for a few days to enjoy a brief vacation. He hurries back to make an example of a few gunmen andperhaps prepare his record for a race for the office of state's attorney. Law and order does not enthuse capitalist politicians unless there is something in it for them.

ANOTHER judge by the name of McGoorty, hurried back from England ready to do his share. He got his picture on the front page of the Chicago Herald-Examiner. McGoorty, whose ancestors were not so enthusiastic about "English justice" thinks it is a fine product of civilization. Burglars and confidence men receive short shrift in British court but wealthy theives are treated just about the same as they are treated here. The impartiality of British courts is a monstrous myth. They are just about as impartial as American courts—just about.

MAYOR Hylan bit the dust in New York's primary race for the mayoralty nomination. The Tammany machine did the trick. It is a powerful machine, rough and ready. The capitalists are not crazy about it but it serves their purpose better than a machine under the direction of William Randolph Hearst. Tammany is disciplined. Hearst is not. Tammany stands for itself first and for the capitalists afterwards, but without the capitalists it would be nowhere. It coins the sufferings of the masses into gold, but it does the trick cleverly. Thus it manages to survive. How long it can survive, depends on many factors the chief of which is the health of the capitalist system.

SPEAKING of the situation in China, a representative of the Los Angeles chamber of commerce was violent in his condemnation of the slogan "Asia for the Asiatics." This is pernicious, he said and carries a message of evil for the "white man." The British were past masters in the art of creating the impression among other races that the whites were superior. The world war helped to kill this belief. The other races saw white men chased back and forth over hill and dale by other white men and sometimes by black and yellow men. They were no longer invincible in their eyes.

WHAT made the Chinese sit up and take notice, says this gentleman was the invasion of China by a horde of hungry Russians driven out of that country by the workers after they had toppled the Czar from the throne. Those Russians accepted any menial occupation that offered two or three meals a day and a bed. The Chinese came to the conclusion that a white man acts like a yellow man under a given set of circumstances, and that therefore his supremacy to date cannot be attributed to the color of his skin.

THERE is a bit of truth in this. The colonial peoples are being educated to see thru the myth of white supremacy just as the workers are being educate to see thru the myth of capitalist infallibility. On the one hand the imperialists crush the colonial peoples under the yoke of exploitation, while on the other hand the requirements of industry force them to make a certain amount of knowledge available to their slaves.

SEAMEN'S STRIKE SPREADING TO GULF PORTS; SCAB CREW WRECKS FREIGHTER; I. S. U. MEN JOINING

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 17.—Here at New York, the initial point of the big international strike of the seamen in this country, the spirit is fine. The picket line grows rapidly in numbers and determination.

The White Star Liner Olympic docked here at 10 P. M. Sept. 15. She arrived in port about fifty men short in her crew. She was delayed at Cowes, England, for about six hours, when 150 members of her crew went on strike. Great efforts will be made to delay this ship here.

Standard Oil Feels Strike.

The ship's delegate of S. S. Walten Jenning, one of the Standard Oil of New Jersey's oil tankers reports that the entire crew quit when she arrived in port yesterday morning. A large per cent of the crew joined the M. T. W. No. 510 upon hearing that there was a strike.

The captain and the chief engineer of the S. S. Major Wheeler quit yesterday afternoon. They were thoroly disgusted with the incompetence of the men aboard. They refused to sail with a scab crew, was their statement at leaving.

Scabs Not Popular, Especially I. S. U.

A similar disposition on the part of the engineering department was ex-

Overgaard Leads Battle at Champaign, Ill.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 17—The left wing delegates made a fight today on the floor of the Illinois State Federation of Labor's annual convention for some of their resolutions which were introduced by them in this, the most reactionary convention in years.

Andrew Overgaard, delegate from Machinists' Union 390 of Chicago, fought valiantly for the resolution for the formation by the unions of a labor party, and assailed the LaFollette movement as "a middle class affair incapable of serving the worekrs and poor farmers whom it betrayed."

Reformed Radicals at Mourners' Bench.

C. F. Lowrie, C. F. Wills and Thomas McCabe, spokesmen for the reactionaries in the question of a labor party, opposed the resolution of Overgaard's, saying that they had "worked hard for a labor party" but found it couldn't be realized. So along with Weeping Johnny Walker, president of the federation, they now went back to where they started from, or a little farther, and declared that "at this time" the only thing possible was to "work" thru the old capitalist parties.

Political horse trading seems to be the order of the day in labor politics.

Two Fakers Talk for Record.

Ed Nockels of the Chicago Federation of Labor seemed to think it necessary to prove his regularity to again spout a lot of nonsense about how bad the Communists are. He said he had supported the movement for recognition of Soviet Russia but added that he doesn't like the "elements" now championing that cause. Just what that has to do with whether Soviet Russia should be recognized or not, he did not say and it still remains dark as to why he quit advocation of recognition—unless, perish the thot—he went back to Gompersian policies.

The delegates today weer bored with long speeches by a lot of professors and high muckamucks of the University of Illinois who took seriously the charges of "vice among the students" made by Ed. Wright, a hard-boiled oud sinner from the ranks of Chicago's choicest labor fakers who wanted to cause a little commotion and get his name in the papers.

INTERNATIONAL ADMITS FAILURE TO GET SCABS

Blind Ads Seek Help for Rock Island

The International Tailoring Co. failing to secure scabs to replace striking members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, has tried a new stunt of inserting large, mysterious, blind ads in the newspapers. These ads, high sounding in tone, neglect to state that the company's operations have been suspended for twelve weeks the 800 employes going on strike when the International failed to renew its agreement and endeavored to establish the "open shop."

A large advertisement, covering several inches of space in the want ad columns of the Tribune and other newspapers yesterday, says, "One of the most prominent special order houses in the country, at present located in Chicago, is planning to make within the next six months a radical change in its manufacturing program. Applicants must be willing to move out of the city, and be able to train help for our kind of work."

This is an admission that the International has been unable to secure help in Rock Island, where they attempted to open up the bankrupt Boone Woolen Mills. The workers of Rock Island and Moline refused to act as strikebreakers, and now the company is endeavoring to recruit help to ship to that plant.

The fact that the International has been unable to secure strikebreakers is brought out in the ad. All sorts of help is asked for, even foremen. The ad asks for "Foreman, assistant foremen, section heads, with experience in managing, coat shops, pants shops, vests shops, cutting rooms, alteration rooms, and trimming rooms."

The International tried to secure strikebreakers by signing an agreement with the United Garment Workers Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and advertised as a "union shop," but this plan also failed.

TWO MINERS KILLED IN NON-UNION MINE IN WEST VIRGINIA

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 17.—Two men were killed and two severely burned at midnight when fifteen five-pound cans of powder on an electric mine car exploded two miles inside the No. 2 mine of the Elm Grove Coal company near here. Sixty-seven other men in the mine when the blast went off came from the workings uninjured.

LEWIS AND PINCHOT CONFERENCE PREPARES ARBITRATION BETRAYAL OF ANTHRACITE MINERS' STRIKE

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 17.—That John L. Lewis is again plotting to betray the anthracite miners' strike which has called 158,000 miners from the pits and collieries of this region is seen by the suspicious secrecy maintained by him and Governor Pinchot, whose past record of intervention as an "arbitrator" has been an issue that worked against any arbitration in the present strike.

It is bad when any labor leader goes into secret conference with a capitalist government authority or with the capitalists direct. And John L. Lewis has shown that he regards his promise of secrecy made to Pinchot higher than his allegiance to the

ZEIGLER MINE, WHERE CORBISHLY FOUGHT, IN HUGE NEW MERGER

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 17.— A merger involving more than thirty-five million dollars, which would consolidate all coal mines within a radius of seventy-five miles of St. Louis, is now under way, with the backing of Chicago capital, it was announced today.

Herbert E. Bell, of the Bell and Zoller Coal company, of Chicago, will head the new concern. One of the mines controlled by this company is the Bell and Zoller mine No. 1, Zeigler, where the mine union officials have combined against the militant miners, and deposed the local officers, headed by Henry Corbishley.

NEW MUTINY OF SPANISH HALTS DRIVE ON RIFFS

Soldiers Refuse to Fight for Bankers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADRID, Spain, Sept. 17.—Spanish soldiers en route to the Morocco imperialist slaughter have again mutinied, contingents at Malga and Algeciras, Spanish ports, preventing emberkation. The Spanish government has ordered that all troops must hereafter be sent away at night, to "avoid demonstrations."

French Losses Heavy.

The French have announced recapture of the heights of El Bibane from the Riffians on the French front, but admit that in the fighting there French losses were usually heavy.

All operations in the Spanish Morocco zone have been suspended, the Rivera government admits, attributing this to the "violent storms raging at sea and along the coast." However, the mutinies of the Spanish soldiers ahve greatly alarmed the Rivera government.

Food Is Giving Out.

The Spanish landing forces on the shores of Alhucemas Bay have been unable to secure re-inforcements from the Spanish-French fleet. The troops which were disembarked have food enough for only a few days more.

The Riffians have again cut the Tangier-Tetuan road, stopping all communication between these two important points. Continuous gunfire is audible around Tetuan.

Rogers Park Parents Protest to the School Board Today in a Body

The parents of the Eugene Field school children will attend a meeting of the building and grounds committee of the board of education today to protest against the moving of the portables. A protest meeting held by them was attended by over 300 parents and the organization of a permanent group known as the Roger Park Parents' Association was started.

The protest which has developed into a strike was started by the removal of seven portables to North Clark street and North Shore avenue from Greenleif and North Ashland Ave. This has increased the distance the children must travel in some cases over a mile.

N. Y. Party Members Urged to Attend the Foster Meeting Saturday

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 17.—All party members who are members of the independent unions, including the Shoeworkers, Amalgamated Metal Workers, the United Labor Council, Public Service Workers, etc., are requested to attend a meeting at 108 East 14th street, at 4 p. m. Saturday, September 19.

William Z. Foster will speak on party policy in the independent uninos.

Saklatvala Barred by Cal At Great Britain's Request

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 17.—The refusal of Secretary of State Kellogg to admit Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, after a conference with President Coolidge, was prompted by the Baldwin government, well informed persons here declared. They say that altho no official request was made, "an informal hint was dropped," that Home Secretary Joynson Hicks wished to prevent Saklatvala from attending the congress of the Interparliamentary Union here next month as a British delegate.

"If I had the power I would soon stop Saklatvala going to America. But I haven't, because he is a British citizen," Hicks said recently. Both the British and American governments were afraid that Saklatvala would inform the workers of America of the true conditions of the working class in England, burdened with increased unemployment and the wage cutting campaign.

Free Speech a Crime to Cal

The reason Kellogg gave for barring Saklatvala was, "I do not believe we should admit foreigners to this country to preach anarchy or a revolutionary overthrow of the government." Kellogg said these speeches had been made "in public and in parliament."

Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee, disapproved strongly of Coolidge's ban on free speech. He said, "We have laws in this country to protect ourselves. If Saklatvala violates them he can be arrested. If he incites Americans to commit crimes put him in jail. But to deny him a visitors' admittance is ridiculous."

Borah pointed out that Saklatvala's speeches had been made in public, and that the United States should be as liberal in the matter of free speech as the British parliament. He declared the barring of Saklatvala a short sighted policy, and a "gagging" measure.

America Afraid of Truth

LONDON, England, Sept. 17.—"Is America afraid of the truth?" Saklatvala asked his interviewers just after receiving official notification that his passport visa, already granted, had been revoked. "So that is free America is it? You can tell your people that I won't attempt to enter their country.

"I wont try to go with the delegation to the Washington conference when it leaves Saturday, altho I understand some of the delegates are fearful that I might go with them to Canada and then try secretly to cross the border into the United States. I won't go, but I would like to know if America is afraid of the truth."

American Burns Overjoyed

Home Secretary Hicks seemed overjoyed that the noted Communist was barred from America. "The United States had a perfect right to ban Saklatvala," he said. Hicks intimated that he is planning to imprison Saklatvala on charges of "preaching sedition."

Hicks fears, however, an "unfavorable reaction in India," Saklatvala's native land where the Communist leader has a large following.

WASHINGTON REPORT ADMITS BRITISH ASKED SAKLATVALA BE BARRED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Secretary of State Kellogg's action in barring Shapuri Saklatvala, Communist member of the British parliament from entering the United States to attend the International Parliamentary Union, was taken at the direct instance of the British government, it was learned here this afternoon on unimpeachable authority.

Unable itself to prevent Saklatvala's attendance, and desirous of preventing his flaming attacks on the British empire before American audiences the British home office informally communicated with the American embassy abroad, and the matter was thus amicably arranged under the law that reposes in the state department authority to bar Communists from the United States.

EXCLUSION OF SAKLATVALA BARES DICTATORSHIP OF EMPLOYERS UNDER FRAUDULENT CLOAK OF "DEMOCRACY"

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has issued a statement exposing the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of parliament of Great Britain, as an attempt of the American capitalist government to hide the truth about its fraudulent "democracy."

Saklatvala was a British delegate to the Interparliamentary Union at Washington early in October. He was barred from the country by Secretary of State Kellogg, just after the latter had conferred with President Coolidge on the matter. The barring of Saklatvala shows that the Coolidge government is afraid of the truth, Saklatvala said, after receiving word of the action.

The statement of the C. E. C. follows:

• • • •

The exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala, the Communist member of the British parliament from the United States by edict of the state department exposes the true character of the government under our "American democracy" as an agency of the capitalists to protect their system of profit making.

Saklatvala was coming to the United States to attend the sessions of the Inter-Parliamentary Union. Since he is a Communist, a member of the Communist Party of Great Britain and of the Communist International, he would have undoubtedly have expressed at the meetings of the Inter-Parliamentary Union the Communist view in regard to the true character of the existing parliamentary government.

He would have torn away the mask of "democracy" behind which the parliamentary governments of such countries as Great Britain, France and the United States hide the fact that the governments of these countries are really dictatorships of the capitalists, and that the main reason for which these dictatorships exist is to compel the workers at home to submit to the exploitation of the capitalists and to fight the imperialists' battles of the same capitalists in foreign lands.

Coolidge Tears Off "Democracy" Mask.

It was because Saklatvala would have brot this message to the United States and would have told the workers of this country how the British workers are organizing their power for the overthrow of the capitalist dictatorship in their country, that Secretary of State Kellogg in co-operation with President Coolidge, both acting for the American capitalists, denied Saklatvala the right to enter this country.

Curiously enough, the denial of admission to Saklatvala to enter the United States achieves the very purpose for which Saklatvala was coming to the United States. In denying the representative of the British workers to enter the United States, while the representatives of the every autocracy and hangman government in Europe freely cross our borders, the American government of Morgan, Kellog and Coolidge drives home the very point that Saklatvala would have made—that the American "democracy" is a fraud and a sham hiding the rule of the capitalists of this country.

Central Executive Committee, Workers Party of America,
C. E. Ruthenberg, General Secretary.

COMMUNIST DEPUTY OF VERA CRUZ MURDERED BY AGENT OF CALLES GOVERNMENT IN JALAPA PALACE

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 17.—Francisco J. Moreno, Communist member of the chamber of deputies of the state of Veracruz, has been assassinated in the government palace in Jalapa.

Moreno had distiguished himself recently by the exposure of a million peso bribe given by an oil company to General Jara, governor of the state, and his associates, in the securing of a concession to valuable oil lands. Governor Jara has hitherto posed as a revolutionary and at mass peasant gatherings in the state has responded to the cry: "Long Live the Bolshevik Governor!"

Moreno has been a member of the Communist Party for about a year—that is, ever since his election to the chamber of deputies enabled him to understand the sham and corruption of Mexican "socialist" politics. Since joining the party he has loyally carried out its discipline (the assassination attests that fact) and has carried on a brilliant campaign in the chamber on behalf of the workers and peasants.

Receiving a large salary as deputy he turned over most of it to the Communist Party, the Peasants League of Veracruz and other worker and peasant organizations; one of the conditions of his entrance into the party being that he take only the salary appropriate to one of his trade. He is a railwayman and has been an active leader in the railway unions.

He was originally elected deputy on the ticket of the railwaymen's party, a pseudo-labor party but a few months of experience in the chamber of deputies was sufficient to ripen him politically and cause his entrance into the Communist Party of Mexico.

Indignation among the workers and peasants of Vera Cruz and of the entire country is running high. Once more the Calles government is revealed as "an autocracy disguised by socialist phrases and tempered by assassination and deportation."

It is a familiar proverb among the Mexican masses that the government uses the "33 for the foreigners and the 30-30 for the Mexicans" that dare to oppose it. (Article 33 is the deportation article under which Bertram Wolfe was deported and the 30-30 is the small bore rifle in common use in Mexico that symbolizes political assassinations such as that of Moreno.)

It is worthy of note that Calles was to visit Jalapa tomorrow. One is reminded of the "preparations" for the visits of the ancient Russian czars to their provincial capitals, which preparations included the elimination of their political enemies.

Moreno is the first Communist martyr at the hands of the new "labor" government.

GREEK SECTION PLEDGES C. E. C. FULL SUPPORT

Resolution for Party Is Passed Unanimously

The Fourth National Conference of the Greek section of the Workers (Communist) Party of America has just closed its last session.

The conference lasted for several days and had successful deliberations over many of the problems confronting the party.

There were present nineteen delegates, representing branches from Detroit, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago, Canton and Yorkville, Ohio, Brockton, Boston, Mass., Blair Station and Amrbridge, Pa., Milwaukee, Wis., Cleveland, O., Newark, N. J., Toledo, O., and New York.

Discuss Shop Nuclei.

The bulk of the time spent by the conference was given over to a discussion on party reorganization and trade union work.

Special consideration was given to developing the official organ of the Greek section, The Empros, from a weekly to a semi-weekly.

The circulation of the Empros is already about four thousand, and is far out of proportion to the membership of the Greek section. In this respect the Greek section of our party exceeds every other section; that is, the circulation of its official organ is greater per member in this section than in any other language group in the party.

The representatives of the Central Executive Comimttee to this convention was Comrade Jay Jovestone. Comrade Lovestone brot greetings from the C. E. C. of the party and reviewed its work in the last year. The Central Executive Committee representative went at length into a consideration of the party's main problems which he outlined to be as follows:

Main Party Problems.

1. The intensification of our trade union work.
2. The labor party campaign.
3. The reorganization of our party on the basis of shop nuclei, and the development of a unified, centralized party.
4. The problem of Bolshevization and the struggle against opportunist tendencies in our ranks.
5. Agricultural work.
6. The building up of a powerful press and a Communist literature in America.
7. Defense work.

C. E. C. Resolution Unanimous.

Comrade Lovestone's resolution, which follows, was unanimously adopted by all the comrades present, regardless of their former adherence in the last party controversy.

The resolution follows:

1. The resolutions of the parity committee, unanimously adopted by the national convention, lay down a correct line of Communist policy for our party. These resolutions provide the basis for work of the party members among the masses, thru which alone our party can grow into a mass Communist party. We declare our wholehearted support to the resolution on the immediate tasks of the party, on trade union work, the labor party campaign, imperialism, work among women, agricultural work, and other major campaigns of the party.

2. We welcome the action taken by the convention for the liuidation of Loreism in our party. Our party has reached the point of development where opportunistic deviations by leading members of the party can no longer be tolerated. In the expulsion of Lore from the party and the removal of Comrade Askeli from the editorial board of the Tyomies, the convention indicated that the fight against opportunism will be intensified in our party in the future. We pledge our support in this campaign.

Pledge Loyalty to C. I. Decision.

3. The resolution on the Bolshevization of our party marks a new step forward for the American Communist party. The reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei and international branches and a centralized apparatus with the language fractions marks a necessary step to centralization of our party, and lays the basis for its carrying on real Communist work. We pledge ourselves energetically to take up the campaign for the reorganization and to give every aid possible in effecting this organization at the earliest possible date.

4. The cable of the Communist International to its representative, declaring that "it has finally become clear that the Ruthenberg group is more loyal to the decisions of the Communist International and stands closer to its views" lays the basis for the future development of the leadership of our party and the unification of its leadership. We declare our acceptance of the decision of the Communist International and that we will loyally support the Central Executive Committee elected on the basis of that decision, in carrying on the work of the party.

Sound Basis for Unity.

This conference declares that in its opinion any attempt to discredit or to question the character of this Comintern decision or in any way at all to interfere with its complete execution would be a blow struck against the Comintern and its American section, the Workers (Communist) Party of America. The conference of the Greek section of the Workers (Communist) Party of America welcomes the decision of the former majority in the national convention to accept the last resolution of the Communist International on the situation in the American party. We hope that the followers of the former majority Foster group in our party will in true Communist fashion loyally execute this decision which in our opinion affords a sound Communist basis for the unification and the healthy development of our party.

5. The conference of the Greek section of the Workers (Communist) Party of America hereby declares its fullest indorsement of the Central Executive Committee and calls upon all members of the Greek section of our party in particular, and all other members of our party in general, to forget their past factional differences to drop all factional strife and maneuvers, and to rally as one solid phalanx, as one unified party, for the new, constructive Communist activities, to develop our party under the leadership of the Central Executive Committee chosen by the last national Convention of our Party.

The last order of business was the election of a National Propaganda Bureau. The C. E. C. representative proposed that all previous factional hard feelings and bitterness be discarded and forgotten as soon as possible. Comrade Lovestone stressed the need for complete unity in the ranks of the party and appealed to the Greek comrades to close their ranks behind the leadership of the Central Executive Committee.

After this appeal by the representatives of the Central Executive Committee the following 15 comrades were unanimously elected as the bureau: E. Chryssus, C. Christie, N. Bobus, Chas. Karavas, A. Stamatis, W. Mikadis, Geo. Chalteas, N. Strattis, Geo. Kalfides, S. Chikouris, A. Dritsas, C. Chriss, J. Manns, G. Kocalis, N. Kostis.

The following comrades were chosen as alternates: S. Economu, W. Kalafites, J. Sifukis, H. Margeris.

hibited in the case of the S. S. Edward L. Doheny 3rd, in port in Brooklyn. All the crew except the cook left. The engineer asked the men why they were leaving and when told it was on account of the strike, said that that was the only way to better conditions. He said he despised a scab and they could look for him ashore too. In the case of this boat, the I. S. U. delegate came aboard and told the men there was no strike on. A fellow worker handed him a strike demand and the crew promptly forced the I. S. U. delegate off the ship.

Crew of the S. S. Vindeggend has come off 100 per cent The captain and mates took her out in the stream and she is still anchored there.

The S. S. Clyde, a British tanker, arrived yesterday and half of the crew that had been shanghaied in England walked ashore today as soon as was possible.

In Port Newark.

The picket reports that the situation at Port Newark is very tense. The following Trans-Marine boats are laying there: Subermco, Surailco, Suscalico, Sucherico, and the Suscaresco.

Aboard the Suscalico, is a crew of coolies whom the United States laws do not allow to land here. The crew of the Suscaresco have all quit. Yesterday the crew of the S. S. Sucherico promised to quit. Today they all came off and are now engaged in active duty on the picket line.

News From Galveston.

Reports from other ports of the country are arriving at headquarters here by mail. From Galveston, comes word that strike action is just getting under headway. A mass meeting for white and colored longshoremen has been called and it is expected that they will walk out. The S. S. Cripple Creek was left there without any men aboard.

Many ships are expected here by the 18th, most of them left this port with 75 per cent wobbly crews. Trouble was reported from Galveston also with reactionary I. S. U. officials.

A strike communication to the I. S. U. was withheld from the membership meeting, but was read to the members in their hall by one of our fellow workers and there was unanimous agreement not to scab.

Scabs Run Ship Aground.

New York papers report that the U. S. Shipping Board freighter, the Argosy, is aground at Sable Island, Canada, and a Canadian life saving crew is standing by. The Argosy sailed from New York on Friday, Sept. 11, manned by a scab crew.

The S. S. Malabar has no sailors and the stewards walked off Tuesday. The S. S. Durango, previously announced as 50 per cent out is now out 90 per cent with the stewards walking off. The crews of the John Tracy and the Barabet came off 100 per cent. Many ships reported as off 50 per cent are being brot up toward 100 per cent. A number of ships have crews that are waiting to be paid before striking. Their names are not announced as that would aid the ship owners to sign up scabs.

Marine Machinists Show Solidarity.

A machinist from Morse's drydock reports that when the Cuyamapa pulled away from the dock Sunday, manned by scabs, she burned up two crank pins so badly that, by the time she reached the Statue of Liberty, machinists had to be sent aboard to put in new crank pin brasses. This machinist reports that all machinists from Morse's refused to work on the scab ship, and other men had to be sent from Murdock's.

The Belgian ship Marcy is left at the dock with no crew at all. The dredge Marcel has the crew out 100 per cent. The towboat Moran is still tied up. The American steamer Monticello docked at Pier 5, in North River, and the whole crew walked down the gang plan.

Crimps are trying to get seamen to desert the Scandinavian-American line ships, and then to reship on the ships tied up in Brooklyn. But the sailors are too wise for that old trick. They desert no ships—but they strike them all!

WHITSETT MINE WORKERS FIGHT ON TWO FRONTS

Bosses and Union Officials Oppose Them

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 17—No measures are too mean for the Pittsburgh Coal company to use in advancing its campaign of union destruction. It has already opened two of its mines the Whitsett Mine and the Banning No. 2 under the 1917 scale and it is busy herding scabs to get coal produced.

Eviction notices have ben served on miners residing on company property who refuse to scab upon their union. The state police have been mobilized and are showing up in force on horseback at the gates of the company property every day to protect the scabs.

Women and Children on Picket Line.

The coal miners at Whitsett, who have been out of work for more than 20 months consistently refusing to accept any lower scale of wages with their wives and children are going on the picket line every morning. Curiously enuf, union officials who have established their headquarters about 10 miles from the mine meet upon the picket line to the bewilderment of the rank and file miners who never before have seen them so active. But it is now becoming clear to them why the officials appear on the picket line.

Scabs were recruited by Pittsburgh employment agencies. At first many men returned when they found the actual conditions but little by little a full crew was established. The coal miners by their usually active method of picketing could easily have prevented the company from recruiting a full scab crew if they had been permitted to go ahead in the aggressive manner they had intended to pursue but the officials were there to soft pedal. They asked the rank and file members to remain quiet while the scabs passed by to go into the mines. These tactics naturally play directly into the hands of the operators and the mine is now working almost with a complete crew.

Officials' "Activity" Becomes Clear.

One of the picketing coal miners from Jacobs Creek expressed his understanding by saying, "that this is a very effective method for the Pittsburgh Coal company to gradually open the mines one by one, wipe out the union and make District Five a non-union territory."

He continued, "the Pittsburgh Coal company is the same everywhere, no matter what mine is operated. It will not do to soft pedal in one place and try to fight it in another. As soon as the company tries to operate with scabs in one place it should be fought definitely in every instance. However, while the operators are flagrantly disregarding the agreement our officials have tried to interpret the agreement to mean no fight whatever. Such methods won't do for only the operators are to gain."

Open On 1917 Scale.

It is rumored that Banning No. 1 and Banning No. 3 will soon follow suit and open up on the basis of the 1917 scale. The company is even trying to organize a union of its own, a union of scabs, mounted state police will always be available. More eviction notices will be made while the officials continue to soft pedal and to advocate nonresistance.

What to Do.

Now is the time for the Whitsett miners together with the soft coal miners of America to declare their solidarity with the striking anthracite miners. John L. Lewis has said "There will be no backward step," now is the time for him to prove it. The coal operators are fighting the union men in Whitsett just as they are fighting the union thruout the entire country.

A general strike of the coal industry is the method by which the present attack can be met successfully. The miners must demand that their leaders call a national strike to save the union, wages and working conditions.

LOUIS ALLEN, RECENTLY RELEASED FROM PRISON, ENDORSES THE I. L. D.

By TOM FLEMING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Sept. 17.—Louis Allen, a member of the first group trial under the criminal syndicalism law in California, who was arrested and convicted in 1921 in Los Angeles was released recently from Folsom prison after serving 3 years and 9 months.

Fellow Worker Allen was one of the first subscribers to the DAILY WORKER when imprisoned in Folsom. This Lawyer Helped to Create Great Trusts As He Fought Communism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Max Pam, Chicago corporation lawyer, who died earlier in the week in New York City, is buried. Bankers, industrialists, merchants, judges, editors, publishers, surviving lawyers, making an imposing array of capitalists and defenders of capitalism, attend his funeral.

Thus passes one whom the kept press eulogizes as an "unrelenting foe of Marxism." It is pointed out that Max Pam, altho a Jew, contributed liberally to the Roman Catholic church because he believed it an instrument in opposing the spread of the doctrines of socialism.

• • • •

But Max Pam was, nevertheless, an unwitting instrument, caught up in the flood of social forces, helping to centralize the agencies of capitalism, thus aiding in its development toward the social revolution that is ushering in the new era he professed to combat. Pam passes away as the nation witnesses an accelerating growth of greater trusts, encouraged for instance by the recent ruling of the department of agriculture that the colossal merger of the Armour and Morris packing interests is not in violation of any anti-trust decree. But the growing masses of workers under one exploiting corporation will learn quicker their common identity of interest, will more readily develop their mass organization, will enter more effectively into the developing class struggle, as their ruthless plunderer stands more clearly revealed before them.

• • • •

Max Pam was an aid in the building of these greater trusts. He was a legal agent in building trusts.

As a clever corporation lawyer Max Pam helped wipe aside the cobwebs of legal obstacles set up by an era that is gone, that sought to perpetuate competition in industry in its attempt to safeguard and protect little business.

• • • •

Pam was the ally of Judge E. H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, sitting fearful upon the seething volcano of labor unrest in this industry. He helped create this great and growing consolidation.

Pam was associated with the late E. H. Harriman, pioneer financier in the merging of great railroad enterprises, and bitter enemy of organized labor. He worked with John W. Gates, spectacular Wall Street operator in the creation of the American Steel and Wire Co., when budding trusts were just beginning to lift their heads on the industrial horizon.

Pam helped organize, along with Vice-President Dawes and others, the powerful Central Trust Company of Illinois, that wields a mighty influence over industry in the middle west. He was among those officiating at the birth of the International Harvester Co. and the National Packing Co. In politics he belonged to the republican party of the great capitalists, being close to Harding, Coolidge and Taft.

This was the foe of Marxism, who tried to stem the world-wide tide of political evolution with petty contributions to the anti-Communist Catholic Church, while in reality he meekly lived from day to day, in obedience to the inexorable international social forces so clearly analyzed and explained by the philosopher of the proletarian struggle for power, Karl Marx, whose theories find their application to present world conditions in the Leninism forged in the white heat of the Russian workers' and peasants' triumph.

• • • •

The great trusts that Max Pam helped create coin profits undreamt of by the business bandits of a score of years ago. This surplus, stolen from labor, struggles for investment at home and abroad, with all the resulting complications, not as Max Pam would have wished for the enhancement of capitalism and its perpetual continuance in power, but according to the theories of Marxism and Leninism that point to the passing of the capitalist era and the coming of its successor—the next stage of civilization—Communism.

Foes of Marxism and Leninism, like Max Pam, are myriad. They come and they pass. But Marxism and Leninism continue inspiring and directing greater and ever greater masses of oppressed to growing victories until the whole world has been won for labor.

SOCIALISTS IN UNITED FRONT AGAINST SOVIET

Join with Hindenburg for Anti-Workers Pact

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany, Sept. 17.—The socialist press has come out definitely for the acceptance of the French and English invitation to the Hindenburg government to send representatives to the proposed "security pact" conference which as Rote Fahne, the Communist organ points out, is an anti-Soviet war pact.

The socialists are thus forming a united front with the nationalists and monarchists of the Hindenburg government to combine with the allies against the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union.

ENGLAND HEDGES AS TURKS MASS ON MOSUL LINE

League Decision May Be Postponed

LONDON, England, Sept. 17.—While forty thousand Turkish troops were reported massed on the boundary of Mosul, the territory also claimed by the British, the league of nations council, whose decision on the dispute over the rich oil fields is due, is about to pass the buck to the international court. British airmen are stationed in the vicinity of the Turkish troops watching their movements, the report states. The council will ask the court to make the decision, it is strongly rumored.

The league of nations council has come to the wierd decision that altho Turkey is "legally entitled to the territory, it should be given to Iraq on condition of the extended British mandate," another report states.

It is well known that the league would make no decision against Great Britain. However, because of the revolt in Syria and Morocco against France, England fears to become too deeply entangled with the Turkish government, and the decision may thus be postponed.

SIGMAN FAILS TO MAKE GOOD PEACE PROMISE

Reinstatements Lag, Cops Still Present

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 17.—While not prepared to say who is responsible for the delay, the Joint Committee of Action states that the promised reinstatement of workers, which was agreed upon by both sides as a necessary preliminary to any discussion of peace in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, was proceeding far too slowly to suit the members of Locals 2, 9 and 22.

"We are convinced that this business of reinstatement is not being carried thru in good faith," said Louis Hyman, chairman of the committee. "If the Joint Board was sincere in its desire for peace, and actually intended to carry out its promise to put back on their jobs all workers who were discharged as a result of the August 20 stoppage, and for supporting the Joint Committee of Action, they could have completed the work by this time.

Sigman Fails to Deliver.

"It is a week since the committee ofshop chairmen was appointed and they have been busy every day trying to carry out their task as mediators between the two sides. On the very first day they began to work, it was agreed that these reinstatements should be made immediately, yet they have scarcely been begun.

"With the machinery at the Joint Board's command, there is no explanation for this delay except that there is no real desire to straighten out the difficulties in our union and bring peace on the terms that the rank and file of the workers want."

Pickets Return.

Following the Joint Board's failure to carry out its agreement to remove all detectives and police from in front of the shops on strike, the Joint Committee of Action sent its members back to the picket line Wednesday morning. There had been no picketing on Tuesday while the Joint Committee waited to see whether the Joint Board would carry out its promises.

There were seven arrests Wednesday morning on the picket lines in front of the shops which have been called on strike by the Joint Committee of Action.

At Match & Ebert at 164 West 25th street, David Friedman, Louis Rosenthal and Gussie Rubin were arrested and taken to Jefferson Market Court. Friedman and Rosenthal were charged with disorderly conduct and fined $10 each. Gussie Rubin was chargde with the simple assault and is held for special session on $500 bail.

At B. Zimmerman Co., 31 West 26th street, Morris Sunshine, Dora Itzkowitz, Dora Craig and Morris Rosen were arrested on a disorderly conduct charge and in Jefferson Market Court were fined $5 a piece. Magistrate Jean H. Morris sat in both these cases.

ATTENTION, NEW YORK!

Mass meetings of the striking seamen are held every night at 7:30 p. m., at the corner of South street and Coenties Slip. All militant unionists of New York and vicinity and all revolutionary workers should not only attend these meetings but should aid financially and in person to make the strike called and conducted by the Marine Transport Workers of the I. W. W. as effective as possible.

CARPENTERS OF DETROIT NAIL 'CZAR' TO BENCH

Yellow Dog Pledge Is Sent to Discard

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 17.—Hutcheson and his Detroit lickspittles received another body blow from the Detroit carpenters Sept. 11 when Loc. 420 voted down a motion to exclude from the meetings all those who had refused to sign Hutcheson's yellow dog pledge.

John Potts, who leads the state cossacks against the rank and file in Detroit, called the puppet officers of Locals 19 and 420 together and told them they must drive all those who cherished their manhood from the two locals. As a result, the motion was made on the floor of 420 to drive out the dissenters from the pledge. After a long and hot debate, the question was put and Hutcheson scored exactly 8 votes, and the yellow bellied crew who supported his move left the hall hurriedly and discredited.

In starting his expulsion drive in Detroit, Hutcheson got hold of the hot end of a poker and it seems he must burn his soft hands many times before his dumb brain registers a need for change of policy.

The intellectual vacuums who have set out to rid the unions of the "red" elements to the end of making them their docile private preserves may well keep their weather eye on Detroit to learn what is not good tactics in red baiting.

Local 420 of the carpenters signed the pledge to about 75 per cent, and now the 75 per cent finds that it can only respect the 25 per cent who refused to sign. They are fighting for the fighters almost to a man; in fact, exactly to a man, for defense of this yellow pledge marks the deadline of manhood and those who waver now are marked for contempt and shame.

420 has spoken, and in its action, 500 more carpenters say in unison, "Hutcheson, you have gone too far."

Nero fiddled while Rome burned, and it remains to be seen if Hutcheson will continue to twiddle his thumbs in vain arrogance while the edifice of unity builded by the carpenters crumbles beneath a hand more skilled at using a box maker's hammer.

As has been stated somewhere, "The results of the blunders of tyrants are always beneficent." Hutcheson's stupidity will leave a heritage of militants who will build the future glory of the Brotherhood.

COWDERY REACHES PITTSBURGH ON COAST TO COAST TOUR AND SELLS COMMUNIST LITERATURE WHOLESALE

By P. B. COWDERY.

Our comrades and the movement generally are overlooking something in the matter of getting our literature to the masses. We comrades who traveled from Frisco to Chicago, and now on to New York, have had some valuable experience. At Pittsburgh we found a quantity of May and June Workers' Monthly and "Blood and Steel" pamphlet, also DAILY WORKERS of fairly recent date. By permission of the party, our crew got busy in the "Hiss district" of the North Side and sold quantities of this literature which otherwise was not moving, and in fact, was rapidly becoming valueless. We operated in the vicinity of four stands selling the DAILY WORKER. Our sign "Frisco to Chicago—Subscribe for the DAILY WORKER" helped.

This district teems with a Negro and Jewish pouulation industrially employed. In warm weather old and young swarm the streets visiting their friends and discussing the workers' problems. The Negroes, especially, were eager to learn. An ordinance in Pittsburgh prevents the giving away of literature. We soon found it was possible to sell our literature regardless of date. It is all good to one who has not read it. Of course, we reduced the price.

How to Sell Literature.

Really, anyone who reads working class reading matter should pay something. No one begins to understand until they begin to pay. They must know there is a struggle and they must contribute to a solution of this struggle or they take no creditable part in it, and for that very reason cannot possibly begin to understand it.

Our best salesman was a young man not yet a party member. He is an itinerant chimney sweep and steeple jack, and natural propagandist. We picked him up near Columbus, Ohio, and soon he became convinced that we represented an organization worth tying to. He at once applied himself to selling our reading matter and by the time we reached Pittsburgh he had a definite formula worked out which, with him, usually got results. Here is the wording he used as nearly as I could get it: "Good morning. I am Mr. John F. Leдney (we called him Lenin for short) representing the Communist International with headquarters in Moscow, with which the Communist Party of the United States is affiliated, and am making my way from San Francisco to New York, advertising the DAILY WORKER and selling Communist literature. This issue of the Workers' Monthly I have now for sale will make you acquainted with the conditions of the workers all over the world, and the labor struggles in the United States where the Communist International is trying to bring all the workers into the united front to make conditions better for the masses of labor thruout the United States and the world today. If you buy this issue of the Workers' Monthly, you will thank me many times for enlightening you on the labor question. This issue is 25 cents. Thank you! I will see you when the revolution is over."

Scarville Good Propangandist.

This merely illustrates what can and should be done. When our literature begins to accumulate on our headquarters' shelves, and is becoming out of date due to a failure to move, we should get busy and move it. Our movement needs the money; the masses need the reading. We should practice salesmanship. We all acknowledge the workers must free themselves. And we know they must do more than talk. They must use the art of printing. They must buy the printed word. We who lead must sell the printed word. To buy, to sell, to read, to act. By this constant activity over and over and over again we eventually reach the masses.

At Pittsburgh, Comrade Scarville, a Negro comrade, is the outstanding propagandist. Comrade "Roberts," one of our original party from Frisco, is hiking back to the Pacific coast and should arrive within three weeks. Comrade Polk, expelled from the barbers' union in Chicago, for militant activity in the interest of the rank and file, is accompanying us as far as New York. Ben Deitsch, an auto mechanic, comrade of Pittsburgh, has greatly assisted us when in trouble with our auto. Numerous other comrades and sympathizers respond splendidly in times of necessity, realizing as they must, that our methods contribute to a solution of our problems in reaching the masses. It is hoped to spend some time among farmers. This may form the basis of another sketch.

A good book on Communism will make you a better Communist.

IMPERIALISTS PLOT COUNTER REVOLUTION IN SOUTHERN CHINA

SHANGHAI, China, Sept. 17.—Persistent rumors say that a reactionary Chinese general, Chen Cru-ing Ming, who once supported the Canton government, has left here for Hongkong with a view to obtaining material and money from the British and to form an army to attack the Canton national revolutionary government.

It is known that the policy of the imperialist powers is to extend a bait of concessions—or the appearance of concessions—to the Pekin government, in order to get its military power to smash the Canton center of nationalist revolution and opposition to imperialist domination.

Sacred Relics Go Up in Smoke.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 17.—Seven persons were rescued early today and a dozen families, residents of a nearby apartment house were routed from their beds when fire of undetermined origin totally destroyed the rectory of St. Francis Assisi church, Germantown. Many thousands of dollars worth of sacred relics and famed paintings were destroyed. The church, directly across the street, was untouched by the flames. Five firemen were overcome by smoke before the blaze was subdued after a two hour battle.

Build the DAILY WORKER with subs.

COMMUNIST PRESS DAY ISSUE WILL BELONG TO WORKER CORRESPONDENTS; SEND IN CONTRIBUTIONS NOW!

A Communist paper is entirely different from any other kind of newspaper in that it does not publish stories about the struggle under capitalism by the observer, but from the one who lives it. That is what is meant by Worker Correspondents. A worker correspondent writes about the things he lives thru, about the conditions in his shop, about the struggle for better living conditions engaged in by himself and his fellow workers. That makes a Communist paper a real live, fighting workers' paper. That is what we aim to develop in the DAILY WORKER.

The DAILY WORKER will publish a special Communist Press Day issue on September 21. This issue will be different from all other special issues published for the reason that it will contain news articles, stories and letters from workers in the mine, mill, factory, shop, store, farm and wherever workers toil for a living under capitalist exploitation.

We invite you to send in yours. This is not confined to Workers Party members only, but to all our readers. Whether in the form of a letter, story or news article, send it in at once. Don't think you must use high fallutin words or write long academic philosophical treaties. That is just what you should not do. Write as you would to a friend, tell it as it appears to you. Be brief and to the point. Write plainly and on one side of the paper only and send it in now!

DETROIT FAKERS AND COPS STILL WORK TOGETHER

Martial Law Still Rules Carpenters

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 17.—Evidently a jurisdictional dispute has arisen between the police forces employed by Hutcheson's agents in Detroit, for Sunday night the state cossacks, whom executive board member Potts had commanded for some time, were replaced by Detroit harness cops and plain clothes men in command of Jack Walsh, a renegade who was put into office as business agent by the left wing and now acts as understudy to Potts.

Evidently Detroit's coppers and carpenters are of a mind as to outside interference is concerned, but while the coppers have gotten rid of the usurpers from Flat Rock and Lansing, the interference from Indiana in the affairs of the carpenters of Detroit continues and their forces remain divided by the general office fat boys.

Apprentice a Fine Mechanic.

When some of the members whom the police are employed to exclude tried to gain admission, Jack Walsh tried the heroic stunt and tried to put them out. Before his squeals attracted his uniformed reserves, poor Jack had received a fine beating at the hands of one of the apprentices in the organization.

The flying squadron was called and five left wingers were arrested and taken over to the hoosegow by orders of the reactionaries.

Hardly a Promise.

They were held a half hour and then discharged. In discharging them the inspector in charge said: "If you promise not to go back there I'll let you go." The quintet assured him that they'd be back "there in ten minutes."

On returning to the hall it was found that plain clothes men were inside the union almost continuously, tho members were excluded. When asked by the police why they insisted on sticking around, the excluded members explained that they wanted to talk to the rank and file, to which the uniformed dumbell replied. "This rank and file, HE won't be around here all night."

Landlord Speaks Up.

The landlord who owns the hall and entertains the same private property regard toward it as do those labor fakers toward the union, has been threatening to expel the local unless they dispense with the police. Potts and Walsh will have to propose that both their interests depend upon a brutal subjugation of the workers, and an acceptance by the workers of the proposition that private property in unions as well as buildings must be at all times respected.

The murmurs of discontent in Local 19 of the carpenters is growing and before long these lackeys of the bosses will reap the whirlwind their deeds are now sowing.

Mother Bloor in Perth Amboy.

FORDS, N. J., Sept. 17.—Comrade Mother Bloor will be the principal speaker at our open air meeting on Saturday night in Perth Amboy, at the corner of Smith and Elm streets. Every party member and sympathizer is urged to be on hand to assure the success of the meeting.

McNamara Indicted by Scab

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 16—John J. McNamara, a leading figure in the trial fourteen years ago in Los Angeles, when he was accused of bombing the Los Angeles Times building, faced trial again here. He is under indictment charged with threatening a strikebreaker engaged in the construction of the Elks' Home in 1924. McNamara is business agent of the local Iron Workers' Union.

MILWAUKEE HAD SPIRITED I. L. D. CONFERENCE AND MASS MEETING; LAID PLANS FOR FUTURE WORK

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 17.—Much enthusiasm was expressed by the delegated representing a number of labor organizations who attended and organized the International Labor Defense Council in Milwaukee.

A delegate from the Juneau Society G. U. G. was very much impressed with the work and he promised to give himself to that activity in his organization, which consists mostly of ex-brewery workers and union men. A number of fraternal organizations pledged monthly contributions to the council.

The following resolution was passed:

"Resolved, This International Labor Defense Council of Milwaukee composed of delegates from working class organizations recognizes the necessity for unity of effort in defense of class war prisoners, men and women persecuted by the capitalist class for their activities in the labor and revolutionary movement and subscribes to the program of the International Labor Defense Council.

This conference constitutes itself a unit of the International Labor Defense Council and pledges itself to carry out loyally all the tasks that fall to it in connection with the defense of all workers persecuted because of their loyalty and activity for the working class and in connection with the maintenance of their families.

The Milwaukee council will meet once a month and the executive committee will also hold one meeting every month.

The International Labor Defense mass meeting was held in the evening of the same day with William F. Dunne as the prihciple speaker. A collection of $31.20 was taken up.

The delegates attending the conference and mass meeting were from the following organizations:

Lehigh Valley I. L. D. Conference Plans Future Activities

By A. HOFFMAN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SO. BETHLEHEM, Pa., Sept. 17.—The Lehigh Valley Section I. L. D. conference with representatives from various organizations was organized with expression of determination from the delegates present to throw themselves wholeheartedly into the work ahead.

H. M. Wicks from Philadelphia, made a spirited speech after which the resolutions on the following matters were introduced and unanimously adopted. 1. Crouch and Trumbull case. 2. The Zeigler miners' case. 3. Lanzutsky and the Polish white terror. 4. Recent Bessarabian slaughter and imprisonment of 500 workers. 5. Endorsement of National Convention of I. L. D. held June 28, in Chicago. A section committee was then elected for future activities with a sub-committee divided into three city territorial groups, Allentown, Bethlehem and Easton.

Due to a fierce rain storm, the mass meeting attendance was somewhat impaired but what it lacked in numbers "it certainly made up in enthusiasm.

Preachers Seek Pension

BEARDSTOWN, Ill., Sept. 17.—Freely predicting its defeat, delegates to the 102nd Illinois conference, methodist episcopal church, prepared to vote, on a proposed new preachers pension plan.

TWENTY THOUSAND MILL WORKERS ON STRIKE IN INDIA AGAINST PAY CUT

BOMBAY, Brit. India, Sept. 17.—Twenty thousand workers employed in twelve mills, went on strike here in protest against wage reductions. Armed police are patrolling the mills, as crowds of pickets hold demonstrations.

PICKETER FINED ILLEGALLY BY CAPITAL JUDGE

Federal Laws Brushed Aside in Store Case

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—(FP)—Dorothy Ferguson was found guilty and fined $10 for peaceful picketing of the Young Men's Shop, on F. St., Washington, by Police Magistrate Gus Schuldt, on Sept. 14. She was arrested April 9 last on a warrant charging her with violation of a police regulation in the District of Columbia dated 1906, which forbids all persons from remaining in front of, or entering, any retail store "for the purpose of enticing away or in any manner interfering with any person or persons who may be in front or who may have entered therein for the purpose of buying."

The defense was based on her right, under the Clayton act, to picket the premises. Mrs. Ferguson told people passing by: "This is a non-union store and is unfair to organized labor."

Judge Schuldt, in his opinion, said, "The regulation was not passed for the purpose of preventing picketing but to save the merchants and prospective buyers from annoyance and to preserve the peace of the community." The Clayton act was passed by congress in October, 1914.

However, Judge Schuldt held that "If picketing in the guise of intimidation, interference and enticement of prospective purchasers is pursued the court cannot perceive why the offender should not come within the purview of the (police) regulation, because to hold that it only applied to merchants attempting to incite and interfere with the customers of others would place it in the category of class legislation."

Appeal will be taken on the issue as to whether federal laws that sanction picketing have any force whatever.

Menace in Fingerprint System

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(FP)—John Nicholas Beffel, co-author of a book showing that fingerprints can be forged, condemns the proposal of the national crime commission to have all immigrants fingerprinted in an open letter to Mark O. Prentiss, organizer of the commission. The plan, points Beffel might lead to the framing up of immigrants because fingerprint identifications are not infallible. Of the two men executed in this country solely on fingerprints evidence, says Beffel, there is reason to believe that one (George Brandon, electrocuted in New Jersey in 1921) was guiltless.

PLUTE PRESS FINDS "REDS" IN ANTHRACITE

Remarks on Warning Against Lewis

By PAT TOOHEY.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Sept 17.—Running true to form, the yellow brass check press of the anthracite field hastens to assure the mine operators and the Lewis machine that it, also, is the enemy of the terrible Communists.

The Communist membership and militant miners distributed many thousand copies of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party manifesto calling on the workers to stand behind the anthracite miners; to join the fight against the employers.

The manifesto itself set forth concrete demands for which the miners should fight, pointed out the solution of their many problems, and attacked the Lewis bureaucracy. This got under the hide of the local "mediums of public opinion" who immediately attacked the manifesto.

The following is taken from the Wiukes-Barre Sunday Telegram of September 13, relative to the manifesto. Headlined "Communists Active," we discover the following gem:

Communists Discovered!

"The Workers Party of America thru its Central Executive Committee is taking a hand in the miners' fight. This is the Communist group in this country and while the heading of the circular being sent out carries the admonition to "Stand By the Anthracite Miners," there is much material in the body of the manifesto as it is labeled, designed to hamper the United Mine Workers of America.

"The Communists with their boring from within methods have been fought at all turns of the road by John L. Lewis and his staff. This apparent help from their enemies however carried demands for a labor party, for nationalization of the coal mines, workers' control of the mines, and a six-hour day and a five-day week. There is also a demand for joint agreements covering the hard and soft coal fields. There is a fling in this connection at the Lewis machine and the miners are warned to guard against its treachery.

"It is a document such as has often been circulated in the field during the last seven years. The red group has been seeking to gain control and while the preamble from the edict of the Russian controlled group carries an appeal for support of the hard coal miners' cause, there is considerable poison contained in this latest dose that has been brewed by the Foster publicity bureau."

More to Come.

Truly, this is inspiring! The poor press. The worst is yet to come. More will be heard of the Communists, the Communists will continue to carry their message to the striking miners, to expose the corruption of the Lewis bureaucracy, will continue to point to the miners the only solution to their problems, continue to stand side by side with the striking miners so that their fight against the operators will be more effective so that their ranks will be more solidified.

As to the manifesto itself, agreement is found among the miners, they want unify with the soft coal fields, they want a minimum wage, they want a labor party, they want everything the manifesto demands. The Communists will continue to educate the miners for the realization of these demands.

The best way to support the DAILY WORKER is to subscribe—and get others to subscribe.

Naval Armaments After the World War

The economic ruin in Europe after the war and the desire on the part of the various admiralties to take stock of their war experience before undertaking the construction of new armaments has, during the first years following the war caused a certain stoppage in the work of naval shipyards. Only America and Japan (which hardly suffered at all from the war) commenced to carry out their colossal ship building program, vying with each other for the first place in the Pacific Ocean naval forces.

In 1921, the Washington congress took a decision to bring the American fleet up to a strength equal to that of the strongest fleet in the world, i. e. the British fleet. Great Britain in reply published its new program which included the construction of four new super-dreadnaughts. The Japanese government drew up the famous program known as the "8-8" according to which the fleet should include 8 first line battleships and 8 super-dreadnoughts not more than 8 years old.

This tremendous program was to have given Japan almost the second place among the fleets of the world. The Japanese cruiser "Takao" appeared as an unprecedented giant of 45,000 tons with a speed of 34 knots and fitted with eight 17-inch guns. Such is an example of the naval construction activities that began to take place almost directly after the peaceful declarations of Versailles.

The Washington Conference.

In 1921, America considering the correlation of forces of the different powers at that time to be very advantageous for her, convened the Washington conference in order to "fix naval armaments at definite and stable dimensions." Great Britain, the U. S. A., France, Japan and Italy sent their representatives to this conference. At the opening of the conference President Harding delivered a remarkable speech in which he declared that "Our conference bears witness to the awakened conscience of the civilization of the twentieth century. The wearied world is thirsting for new relations, and humanity demands a stable peace."

The Sleepy Conscience.

The results of the work of this "awakened conscience" at the Washington conference were that it was decided that Great Britain and the United States might possess 525,000 tons in large battleships, Japan 315,000 tons, and France and Italy 175,000 tons. With regard to cruisers, torpedo boats and submarines, here the "awakened conscience" already placed no limit to the total sum permitted for displacements, altho the representatives of Great Britain tried to come to an agreement for the complete curtailment of submarine construction which for the British themselves are a dangerous weapon against trade.

There have been two more conferences on the question of limiting naval armaments since the Washington conference; in 1923, the conference of South American republics in Los Angeles, and in 1924, the conference of the minor naval powers at Rome. Neither of these conferences arrived at any result.

More Battleships.

Meanwhile, Great Britain, no longer threatened by Germany, and no longer faced with the new rivals with whom agreement had been arrived at in Washington, set about carrying out colossal naval construction. The imperialist interests of British capital in the Mediterranean, the Indian Ocean and the Pacific Ocean compel British strategy to concentrate all its attention just on the Mediterranean basin the key to all the most important traffic routes: Gibraltar-Malta, Suez, Perim, Aden, Singapore, Hongkong. For this, further construction of large battleships was necessary. Great Britain, having already at its disposition 22 battleships (i. e. battle cruisers and dreadnoughts) with 15-inch and 13.5-inch guns, at the commencement of 1923, laid down the keels of 2 new super-dreadnoughts in the shipyards of Armstrong-Whitworth and Cammel Laird—the "Rodney" and "Nelson" with a tonnage of 35,000 with 16-inch artillery (9 guns each); in addition Great Britain has begun the construction of 11 cruisers and a number of torpedo boats, aircraft carriers and submarines. Already at the commencement of 1925 she has the following warships ready:

Battleships—22 (not including two under construction).

Cruisers—52 (in addition to those being constructed, the new program, July, 1925—provides for 18 additional cruisers).

Aircraft carriers—eight.

Torpedo boats and destroyers—207.

Submarines—66 (beside those under construction and included in a new program).

Scrapped the Junk.

It is necessary to remark that all figures and data in these tables concern the most powerful and up-to-date warships for, between November, 1918, up to 1923, the British have sold for scrap 35 battleships, 82 cruisers, 375 torpedo boats, 101 submarines and 240 other boats with a total displacement of 1,600,000 tons. In this absolutely free of any out-of-date war-manner the present British fleet is ships. All those which have accumulated during the years of the war and preceding the war, have now been discarded.

France, threatening and threatened by Great Britain in the Mediterranean, which connects her up with the French colonies, is here threatened also by Italy and Spain who in 1923, concluded a "naval agreement directed against France aiming at protecting the freedom of the Mediterranean." The French imperialists are not lagging behind the continued naval armaments of their rivals. In this connection we have the absolutely categorical statement of Dumergue himself (in his Cherbourg speech in 1925) where he said: "The desire for peace has induced France to conserve its naval strength in a condition corresponding to the world position of the republic and the necessity for safeguarding the tremendous coast line and the colonial dependencies" In addition to 6 battleships, 6 cruisers, 58 torpedo boats and 45 submarines. France has fixed a ship building program for 6 cruisers at 10,000 tons each, 3 cruisers at 7,880 tons, 21 destroyers at 2,326 tons and 36 torpedo boats at 1,430 tons and also 52 submarines. Such are the tremendous increases of the French fleet in that very Mediterranean which J. F. Horrabin correctly described as: "…. the British roadway leading from the west to the east crossing, in the Mediterranean Sea, the French road from North to South. And where their roads cross, their interests cross, especially when the only policeman standing at the cross roads is the doll called the League of Nations."

Wall Street's Bulldogs.

The U. S. A. no longer constructing its pre-Washington giants has now at its disposition 18 battleships (of which 3 were launched in 1920-21, armed with 16-inch guns) 31 cruisers, 267 torpedo boats destroyers and 56 submarines (of which 10 cruisers, 249 torpedo boats and 56 submarines have been launched since the war). Not content with this, the government has presented a draft bill to congress for the construction of eight more 10,000 tons cruisers.

Japan has at its disposition 10 battleships (of which two were launched in 1919-20, with 16-inch guns) 8 cruisers, 21 light cruisers, 84 torpedo boats and the same number of submarines. She is continuing to increase the fleet, by adding new cruisers and torpedo boats. By 1928, the Japanese fleet should include 25 large new cruisers as against 10 new cruisers (launched since the war) of the U. S. A.

Italy, which economically considers itself almost as an island state, completely dependent upon sea communication* declares quite openly as to the necessity for occupying "a corresponding position on the Mediterranean paths essential to her." Possessing already 5 battleships, 8 cruisers, 61 torpedo boat destroyers, and 41 submarines, she is putting thru a new construction program for 1923-28 during which period the government should construct 5 cruisers of 10,000 tons each, 20 large destroyers and 20 large submarines. Spain which has friendly naval relations with Italy and which already possesses 2 battleships, 3 cruisers, 3 light cruisers, 10 torpedo boats and 10 submarines is building 2 more cruisers, 3 destroyers and 6 submarines.

We will not trouble to consider the naval armaments of the minor states since the picture becomes quite clear without this. Naval armament after Versailles is being carried out at just the same rate as it was during the preparation for the 1914 war.

* NOTE:—The tasks prescribed for the recent maneuvers of the Italian fleet are characteristic: a group of transports from the U. S. S. R. carrying Russian wheat and oil proceeding from the Black Sea to Italy has to be met by the fighting squadron which endeavors to escort them safely under the threats of the hostile French fleet.

Plan for the Reorganization of the Workers (Communist) Party

ADOPTED BY THE PARTY'S CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

I. IDEOLOGICAL CAMPAIGN.

1. There is to be printed a series of articles in all party papers dealing with the problems of reorganizing the party on the basis of shop nuclei. These articles are to be written by C. E. C. members, district organizers, and the leaders of the various language sections of the party.

a. The C. E. C. members will write from the general party viewpoint and specifically from the point of view of their special departments. For example, the heads of the Agitprop, industrial, etc., departments are to emphasize the influence of party reorganization on the particular field of party activity for which they are responsible.

b. The district organizers are to write of shop nuclei from the specific angle of the application of the party's reorganization plan in their respective districts.

c. The language section leaders are to write from the viewpoint of the special conditions characterizing the party's activities among the working masses of their respective languages.

2. The party shall issue a pamphlet on reorganization to be translated also by the leading language sections. This pamphlet shall contain the following:

a. The new constitution.

b. The Comintern organization letter to our party.

c. Organization charts.

d. Special foreword on party reorganization by the organization department.

3. The organization department shall publish a series of articles on the party constitution, in which there will be presented an analysis of every section thru a concrete application of the various provisions. These articles are to be featured prominently in every language organ of the party.

4. The organization department shall have a special press service for the entire party press. There shall be a special section in the DAILY WORKER given over to the organization department. This press press service shall deal mainly with:

a. The progress of party organization.

b. The organizational and political experiences of specific shop nuclei.

c. Letters and reports from shop nuclei members themselves covering their various activities.

5. In every district there shall be called general membership meetings addressed by special C. E. C. representatives. The subjects of these meetings shall be:

a. Bolshevization.

b. Party reorganization.

II. DEFINITIONS.

1. Shop Nucleus.—A group of party members, not less than three in number, working in the same shop, or, sometimes from a group of factories.

2 Street Nucleus (International Branch.)—A group of party members, otherwise unattached, united on a street or neighborhood basis regardless of language grouping.

3. Sub-Section.—The next highest organizational unit which can be made up as follows:

a. Entirely of shop nuclei within a given industrial or working area.

b. Of shop and street nuclei (International branches) within a given industrial or working area.

c. Entirely of street nuclei (International branches) within a given industrial or working area or a given territorial, residential area.

Each of these units of the party, the shop nucleus, the street nucleus (International branch) or the subsection, is to have general and periodic meetings of all the members of the component units.

4. The Form of Party Organization Shall Be:

a. The shop or street nucleus (International branch) as defined above.

b. The sub-section as defined above.

c. The section, a given industrial or working area of the city consisting of a combination of sub-sections or containing isolated shop nuclei and street nuclei.

d. The city.

e. The sub-district.

f. The district.

g. The national organization.

III. ORGANIZATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

1. The C. E. C., in consultation with the district committees, shall appoint special Party Reorganization Commissions for the various districts to co-operate with the organization department of the C. E. C. in the campaign for party reorganization. This shall be done immediately by the New York and Chicago districts.

1. The C. E. C. shall, in consultation with the various language bureaus immediately appoint a special reorganization commission for each language section to co-operate with the organizational department of the C. E. C. in party reorganization.

a. The C. E. C. shall appoint representatives to every language bureau. These representatives are to attend the language bureau meetings regularly, make reports to the C. E. C. on the activities of the various bureaus, and see to it that every bureau regularly submits minutes and reports of its activities to the C. E. C.

3. The organization department of the C. E. C. shall call conferences in the various cities in the districts, of shop nuclei and branch organizers, industrial organizers, and branch and shop nuclei secretaries. Such conferences shall be called first of all in the New York and Chicago districts.

a. At these conferences of party functionaries there is to be a more detailed and thoro discussion of party reorganization led by C. E. C. representatives.

4. The comrades present at these conferences of party functionaries are to report back to the units they represent which are to hold meetings especially arranged for receiving these reports. Special preparations shall be made to secure the maximum attendance at these meetings which shall be devoted to a discussion of the campaign for party reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei.

5. The organization department of the C. E. C. and the district reorganization commissions shall arrange for a temporary division of New York and Chicago cities into a definite number of sections.

6. Membership meetings shall be held in each of these sections.

a. Every member present at the branch meetings to which the functionaries reported shall be given a certain number of names and addresses of comrades absent at the branch meetings and shall be responsible for bringing these absent comrades to the section membership meetings.

7 The comrades attending the conference of party functionaries shall be divided into committees temporarily representing the various sections of the cities.

a. These comrades shall be charged with the taks of organizing and mobilizing the section membership meetings.

b. These comrades shall check up the attendance at the section meetings of the members of their respective branches and shall arrange to visit personally every one of their absent branch comrades and secure from these absent comrades the necessary information for party reorganization purposes.

8. At these special section membership meetings the following shall be the procedure:

a. Talks on party organization by C. E. C. District Reorganization Commission and in certain cases language section representatives in their respective languages.

b. Every member present at these section membership meetings shall fill out a blank answering the following questions:

1. Name.
2. Age.
3. Address.
4. Occupation.
5. Trade union affiliation.
6. Name and address of place of employment.
7. Name and address of any other comrades you know to be employed in the same place of work.
8. How long in the party?

c. Special registration committees will be appointed at these section membership meetings for each language group in order to facilitate securing the necessary information at these meetings for party reorganization.

d. Special prominent publicity for these section membership meetings shall be given in the DAILY WORKER and the respective language papers.

9. At these section membership meetings there are to be elected temporary section committees for carrying on further reorganization and other party work.

10. As far as possible there shall be formed at these section meeting shop nuclei which shall start to function without delay.

10.-A On the basis of information gained at these section meetings, street nuclei (international branches) shall be organized as quickly as possible.

11. Wherever necessary the District Reorganization Commission, in co-operation with the national organization department, shall divide the sections into sub-sections.

12. As soon as we have organized in a particular section, a definite number of shop nuclei, the remaining comrades not members of shop nuclei, shall be organized into street nuclei (International branches) or

a. If deemed advisable, shop nuclei shall be formed of party members working in a number of shops and factories within a given area in a section. Such a shop nucleus shall aim to develop at the earliest moment regular shop nuclei. Such a form of shop nucleus can often take the place of street nuclei and often lays the basis for regular shop nucleus organization.

Efforts shall be made that sub-sections shall not contain over 50 members. Sub-sections which contain more than 75 members shall be further sub-divided. The maximum of the street nuclei shall be 25 members, and shall be sub-divided when they exceed 25.

13. The provisional section committee shall, as soon as the reorganization of the section is completed or nearly completed, call a conference of delegates from shop nuclei, street nuclei or sub-sections, for the purpose of electing permanent section committees.

14. In cases where sections have been divided into sub-sections delegates conferences shall be called in these sub-sections to elect permanent sub-section committees to direct the party work in this sub-division.

15. In the subdivision of industrial areas special care must be taken to consider also the efficacy of the party apparatus in functioning in parliamentary campaigns.

16. By the first of December, 1925, reorganization of New York and Chicago districts will have been completed. Any member of a present territorial branch not in a shop or street nucleus will then no longer be considered a member of the party.

a. Special efforts shall be made by the section committees to draw in every party member thru making a card index and having a follow up system.

17 In general the same plans will be applied in all other cities of the New York and Chicago districts as well as the other districts in which there are city central committees. Details will be worked out for these centers by the Org Department and the District Reorganization Commissions.

18. Unattached branches shall be handled separately.

19. A city executive committee shall be elected in each city where there is a city organization and no district committee and then the city central committee shall cease to exist.

20. It is absolutely necessary that in all cases where party members know of other party members working in the same places with them, they should immediately take the initiative to get together and organize themselves into a shop nucleus. The comrades should then inform the district organizer who will arrange for official approval of these shop nuclei.

21. In special cases of need, where shop nuclei do not have sufficiently experienced members, the section committees shall attach temporarily to these shop nuclei experienced members from other party units in order to train and to help these shop nuclei members.

22. Wherever possible, shop nuclei functioning in plants employing fair-sized numbers of workers, shall get out at regular periods, mimeographed bulletins for these factories. Wherever comrades are attached to shop nuclei, they should be so attached also with the end in view of helping the nucleus in such propaganda work. These bulletins with increasing strength are to be developed into regular factory papers, mimeographed or printed. The initiative of the shop nucleus itself in this work must be constantly stimulated.

23. Every nucleus organizer shall fill out special activity reports at each meeting of the shop nucleus. These activity reports must be filled out and read before the close of every shop nucleus meeting. The reading of these activity reports must be made a permanent point on the order of business of every shop nucleus. These activity reports are to be mailed without and read before the close of every or district organizer as the local conditions demand.

24. The plan herewith proposed for New York and Chicago shall be the model plan for the other districts. While the C. E. C. is concentrating on the reorganization of te New York and Chicago districts the comrades of the other districts are expected to proceed with the reorganization in various divisions of their own districts.

Statement of the Central Executive Committee W. P. Regarding the Jewish Convention

THE convention of the Jewish section of the Workers Party took place in New York City on September 5, 6 and 7. Close to 100 delegates participated in the convention. The convention unanimously adopted the resolution introduced by the Central Executive Committee on the political tasks of the party, but did not accept the proposal of the representative of the Central Executive Committee, Comrade Ruthenberg, that the bureau elected by the convetion shall consist of an equal number of representatives of the two groups in the convention. It elected a bureau consisting of eleven from the group which was apparently in a majority in the convention and seven from the group which was apparently in the minority. The Central Executive Committee of the party has thoroly considered the results of the convention and has decided that four members from the minority group in the convention be added to the bureau so that the bureau will consist of eleven members from each group with a C. E. C. representative as the chairman, with a decisive vote.

The basis for this action of the Central Executive Committee are:

1. The date on which the convention was held.

2. The credentials committee report and the lack of clarity as to the real relation of forces in the Jewish section.

3. The development during the political debate on the report of the C. E. C. and

4. The decision of the Communist International and the general party situation.

The following are the facts in reference to each one of the points.

The Date of the Convention.

PERMISSION was given to the Jewish section prior to the national convention of the party to hold its conference on September 5, 6, and 7. The Jewish section was made an exception insofar as the holding of language section conferences was concerned because the bureau of the Jewish section argued that it was necessary to have the conference immediately in order that the situation of the Freiheit might be given consideration and a campaign initiated to raise funds to safeguard the Freiheit. It appeared, however, that the convention devoted very little time to the Freiheit. The question came before the convention about ten minutes before the final adjournment at one o'clock on the night of September 7, and the only action in relation to the Freiheit was the adoption of the resolution initiating a campaign for funds.

The greater part of the delegates to the convention of the Jewish section were elected before the close of the national convention of the party. It is quite clear therefore, that the members of the Jewish section in sending in their delogates to their language conference were unable to take into consideration the results of the national convention particularly that not the decision of the Communist International which so vitally influenced the actions of the national convention. That the results of the elections would have been quite different had the Jewish convention been held three or four weeks later as the other language conferences are being held, is indicated in the fact that during the convention itself delegates supporting the apparent majority of the convention in two instances would not follow this majority any further because of the decision of the Communist International and the party situation.

The Central Executive Committee therefore, concludes that the delegation elected before the results of the national convention and the decision of the Communist International became known did not correctly reflect the views of the members of the Jewish section as they have developed since they have been informed in regards to those matters.

2. The Credentials Committee Investigation.

THE convention was called to order on Saturday afternoon. On Sunday at eleven o'clock, the credentials committee had not yet been able to agree upon a report and the convention had not been permanently organized.

The minority group in the convention contested twelve of the delegates of the majority and the majority group contested six of the delegates of the minority.

It was apparent that no agreement could be reached with reference to the contested delegations and the danger existed that the work of the convention would be still further delayed. The representative of the C. E. C., Comrade Ruthenberg, who arrived on Sunday morning, therefore proposed that all the delegates from both groups, contested and uncontested, be seated in the convention and the convention proceed with its work, leaving the final action to be taken on the contest to the Central Executive Committee of the party.

The Central Executive Committee finds on going over the contest that there appears in relation to the convention of the Jewish section the same discrepancies and irregularities which appears in relation to the district conventions preceding the national convention of the party.

The apportionment of delegates to the convention was based upon the months of April, May, June and July. The inclusion of the month of July at a time when it was known that a convention was to be held made possible irregularities in regard to the purchase of dues stamps which gave a number of branches a larger representation than they seemed entitled to. For instance, the branch in Detroit purchased no stamps at all for the months of April, May and June and in the month of July purchased 150 regular and 40 dual stamps and received representation in the convention thru three delegates on the basis of these stamps purchased during the last month of the convention period. Similar conditions exist in relation to three or four other branches. The Jewish propaganda committee of the Young Workers' League which is an appointed body, established by the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers' League, were given three delegates to the convention. As an appointed committee, it was not entitled to this representaton. There was also raised the question of the representation of fifteen branches which have an average of six members and most of which sent proxies to comrades in New York. Twelve of the fifteen branches were represented by delegates supporting the majority in the convention. The second category of branches, seventeen in number, had an average membership of fifteen members and also sent seventeen delegates to the convention of whom fourteen supported the majority in the convention. It will be seen from this that out of the total of 56 delegates supporting the majority of the convention, twelve came from branches of five members and fourteen came from branches of fifteen members. On the other hand, there were 23 branches with 61 delegates which averaged 25 members per delegate and of the 61 delegates 37 supported the minority in the convention. A tabulation of the membership represented shows that the 40 delegates of the minority represented branches having 1,028 of the members of the Jewish section whereas the 56 delegates of the majority represented branches with only 823 members of the Jewish section.

Leaving aside the irregularities in the purchase of dues stamps, it appears therefore, that the minority in the convention actually represented branches containing the majority of the members of the Jewish section.

3. The Political Debate.

THE struggle against opportunism in our party represented by Loreism is one of the major situations before the party. Loreism in the past had a particularly strong position in the Jewish section. As far back as 1922, the Central Executive Committee was compelled to wage a very determined struggle against the Loreist element in the Jewish section which almost resulted in a split of the Jewish section. Other manifestations of Loreism made themselves felt in the Jewish section.

The Central Executive Committee introduced in the convention a resolution providing for a determined, relentless struggle against the remnants of Loreism which exist in the Jewish section. This resolution provided that the former leaders of the Lore group in the Jewish section could not be elected to the bureau of the Jewish section and stated openly that their past activities had been a detriment to the growth of the Jewish movement and to the Bolshevization of the Jewish section. The resolution of the Central Executive Committee was an uncompromising one demanding a declaration of war against further manifestations of opportunism in the Jewish section.

During the debate on this resolution the Comrades Saltzman, Siegel, Wiener and London, who by its terms were denied the right to election to the bureau of the Jewish section, were given the floor to state their position. These comrades acknowledged their errors in supporting Loreism. In defending themselves in relation to the errors they stated to the convention their relations with the majority in the convention, particularly the negotiations which had proceeded between the majority group in the convention and their group in an effort to have them support the majority group. The fact in relation to proposed agreement alliances and organizational arrangements were publicly stated before the convention and were not challenged by the delegates of the majority group in the convention in the debate that followed.

The Central Executive Committee is of the opinion that the facts brot out in this discussion indicated that the majority group in the convention had followed a thoroly opportunistic course in their relations with the Lore group in the Jewish section. Even if only one-tenth of what these comrades stated in the convention were true, the majority group would be condemned of opportunism such as is not permissable in a Communist Party.

A contrast to this, altho the Saltzman, Siegel, Wiener, London group cast their vote with the minority delegates in the convention, there was no compromise on the question of determined, continued struggle to eliminate the last vestiges of Loreism from the Jewish section. The C. E. C. resolution prohibited their election to the bureau. They were told by the C. E. C. representative that their acknowledgement of the errors were not sufficient, but that they must prove over a period of time that they had really recognized their errors and show by their actions that they could follow a correct Communist line. "Not words, but deeds" must show they had really given up their former views and understood and could carry in practice the line of the party and of the Communist International.

The Central Executive Committee believes that the debate on the liquidation of Loreism, aside from the other factors in relation to the convention warrants it strengthening that group in the Jewish section which had shown by its actions that it will not compromise in the struggle against Loreism.

4. The Party Situation and the Communist International Decision.

THE task which is before the Central Executive Committee of the party at the present time so far as the inner party situation is concerned is to unite in one solid block all the Communist elements in our party. The party is passing thru a period of crisis thru the fact that it is eliminating from the party the poison of Loreism. The future alignment in the party must be that of a solid block of Communist elements united in the struggle to Bolshevize the Workers (Communist) Party as against the right wing opportunistic elements which remain in the party.

Out of the present factions in the party there will come as a result of the unification of the Communist forces in the party a united party capable of greater action, and a greater clarity and understanding within the party.

The Central Executive Party is of the opinion that the action taken in relation to the Jewish section will aid to bring about this result. It is of the opinion that the putting of the two groups into the same bureau on an equal footing will create the best possible basis for unification of the Communist elements into a solid block. It is further of the opinion that the situation will also create the condition which will make possible the carrying out of the views of the Communist International in relation to our party in the Jewish section of the party.

The Jewish section is one of the most important and conscious sections of the Workers Party. The support of this section in the great task of the reorganization and Bolshevization of our party is essential to the work of the Central Executive Committee. The Central Executive Committee calls upon all members of the Jewish section to give a united support to the decision of the Central Executive Committee and to take up the task of reorganization and Bolshevization, and of the work among the masses to make wider and strengthen the influence of the Communist Party among the Jewish workers of this country.

The Central Executive Committee
Workers Party of America.
C. E. Ruthenberg, General Secretary.

Get Ready for Reorganization

WITHIN a few days the Organization Department will announce its plan to mobilize the membership for the reorganization of the party into shop nuclei and international branches.

With the beginning of this campaign to reconstruct our party, a series of articles on organizational questions will be printed in every organ of the party. Questions and problems confronting our members in the rebuilding of the party will be answered and analyzed in the DAILY WORKER by Comrade Jay Lovestone, head of the Organization Department, and other party members.

The DAILY WORKER will also establish a special section for the Organization Department. In this section there will be printed articles on the progress of the organization campaign, the experiences of the comrades in the work of organization, and letters and reports from comrades giving their experinces in carrying on the party's activities thru the shop nuclei.

These articles will be living articles, and of intense interest.

Watch these columns closely.

Boston Stonecutters Fight Ill Health Imposed by Bosses

By ESTHER LOWELL
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

BOSTON, Sept 17. — Journeymen stone cutters of Boston are affiliating with the Workers' Health Bureau to help them get health protection on their jobs. Nelson Mottola, business agent of the local, says that he has at least four or five men out of the 100 members of the union always on the sick list.

The pour men, those who work on molds of cast stone, are ill mostly because they are employed constantly in damp sand. One young worker is crippled up with rheumatism after every few months' employment. The workers who are forced to use pneumatic tools on both natural or cast stone suffer from nervous ailments due to the tremendous vibration and from silicosis, which too often goes into tuberculosis. Altho Massachusetts law supposedly provides compensation for silicosis, both granite workers and stone cutters sicken and die without any ever receiving compensation.

What Do You Say?

ONE of the features of the special issue of the DAILY WORKER for International Press Day, Sept. 21, will be the publication of replies to a questionnaire addressed to all the readers of our Communist daily. This day has been especially set apart in the drive for the Bolshevization of the Communist press. Every DAILY WORKER reader must join in this effort. Here are the questions:

1. Why do you read our Communist newspaper, the DAILY WORKER?
2. What shortcomings do you find in the DAILY WORKER, politically or otherwise?
3. What criticisms have you as to make-up, contents, display, etc., etc.?
4. Can you act as a worker correspondent for the DAILY WORKER?
5. What experiences do you meet with in getting others to subscribe for and read the DAILY WORKER?

Sit down today and write your reply to one, two or all of these questions and then mail them in to the Editor, the DAILY WORKER, 1113 West Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 17.—The convention of Railway Carmen now meeting at this city is attended by about 700 delegates.

As usual, President Ryan and a horde of vice-residents and various types of "me-toos" are standing pat for the hoary principles of craft separation and political reaction of the regular union bureaucracy.

But there is a left wing. Brother Scott Kipple of St. Paul is leading about fifty left wing delegates in a fight for amalgamation, a labor party, opposition to class collaboration schemes such as the B. and O. plan and for many progressive measures.

While the left wing is numerically overwhelmed, the official machine is having no happy time as the left wing delegates are spunky and full of fight for their program which cannot be answered by the reactionaries.

"Bill" Green, the successor of Gompers as head of the A. F. of L., has spoken, but said little. He mildly criticised capital for not "playing fair" and aid that labor will not obey the anti-labor injunctions of courts, but he upholds capitalism of which capitalist courts are a necessary part and which are inevitably anti-labor. Keating of the railway union's paper Labor emitted his customary drivel.

Upholstered Colonel Bewails Revolutions of "Backward" Peoples

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 17.— Col. James E. Edmunds in an address before the American Legion, declared that there were eight hundred millions of black, brown and yellow men who have learned to demand the higher standards of living.

The colonel deplored the fact that congress was loathe to spend a few score millions of dollars to maintain and enlarge the army, which he claimed was now a skeleton and asked that women use their influence as individuals and organizations with their representatives in congress to insure enforcement of the defense act.

Mr. Edmunds received his military title while serving on the governor's staff.

Pennsy Industry Kills 195

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 17.—(FP)—Pennsylvania industry killed 195 workers in accidents during August. One hundred and thirty-four were permanent disabled and there were 15,007 cases listed under the heading of temporary disability. So reports the state workmen's compensation bureau.

Boy Falls to Death in River

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Six-year-old Harold Bernstein, missing youngsters, was hurled to his death in the East River because he would not be bullied by bigger boys, police learned today.

LEWIS AND PINCHOT CONFERENCE PREPARES ARBITRATION BETRAYAL OF THE ANTHRACITE MINERS' STRIKE

United Mine Workers and his oath as officer of the union.

After the conference Monday at Governor Pinchot's summer home at Milford, Pa., the governor issued the following statement:

"Mr. Lewis and I have had what to me has been a very interesting and knowledge-imparting conversation. We have each agreed that what was said by the other shall be held confidential. I may say that in addition to our discussion of the anthracite situation, we have gone into the matter of freight rates for the western and central Pennsylvania fields to tidewater and the Great Lakes. Because of my very great interest in this matter I have been especially glad to get the benefit of Mr. Lewis' point of view."

Just why all the secrecy is something that needs explanation and the miners are preparing to demand of John L. Lewis why he enters into a conference whose purposes are so questionable as to necessitate a promise of secrecy.

But regardless of what Lewis may give as an excuse, the evidence all indicates that Lewis is preparing the ground for a sell-out of the miners' demands on a basis of compromise, and this is decidedly the correct evidence from Lewis' statement given to the press along with Governor Pinchot's. He said:

"I greatly appreciate the intense interest of Governor Pinchot in the anthracite mining situation as exemplified in our very interesting conversation of today.

"The mine workers and the public should recall the great service rendered by the governor in a similar controversy two years ago. While the purpose of my visit here was in no way related to the possibility of public intervention in the present controversy, yet I feel that the exchange of information will be greatly valuable in any future settlement that may take place.

"I heartily approve of the action of the governor in interesting himself in the question of freight rates as affecting the interests of the coal industry in Pennsylvania."

That the ground is being laid for a compromise betrayal of the anthracite miners' demands is not the impression merely of the Progressive Miners in the Tri-District. Such outstanding organs of capitalism as the New York Times comments thus on the possibility of another treacherous "arbitration" of the miners' demands by Governor Pinchot:

"While the governor again emphasized that his conferences are not intended as preliminaries to intervention, the impression is strong among observers that both he and the two men he has talked with, feel their meetings may have more consequences than merely to furnish the information which Mr. Pinchot says is at present his only objective."

Bitter comments are heard from rank and file miners of the Progressive Miners' Committee movement, pointing out that Lewis' statement is a direct invitation to arbitration, which has been condemned by Lewis himself at the beginning of the strike.

While the miners are prepared to hold out indefinitely, it is pointed out, Lewis is surrendering at a time the strike is only two weeks old.

Lewis, when "arbitration" was urged by the operators before and at the beginning of the strike, condemned it, and stated very definitely that the anthracite miners had gotten their belly full of arbitration two years ago and wanted no more of the same.

Yet Governor Pinchot was the one who was directly responsible for the last arbitration sell-out, of which Lewis complained of double dealing, saying that when he had left the arbitrators at 11 o'clock one night with a tentative acceptance of certain minimum awards to be granted the miners, these awards had been cut in two before the next morning when the final judgment of the "arbitrators" was made public. He insinuated that the operators had brought influence to bear on the arbitrators over night.

Now, say the miners, Lewis talks of the "great services rendered by the governor two years ago." The miners are bitterly opposed to arbitration and if Lewis accepts any compromise of their demands they will condemn both traitors and arbitrators.

To rouse the strikers of the anthracite to a realization of the dangers they face of betrayal and to rally them for determined struggle for victory the Progressive Miners' Committee is announcing a series of mass meetings thruout the anthracite region of which the following is a partial list of dates, places and speakers:

Place	Time	Sept.	Speakers

West Scranton	Evening,	26	Gitlow, Zalpis, Toohey

Other meetings are to follow later, and the committee announces that Zalpis and Buknis will speak in Lithuanian, while all meetings will be addressed by other spekers in Italian, Russian and other languages.

Miners also want to know from Lewis just what they are to gain from the class collaboration scheme of helping the bituminous operators of central and western Pennsylvania get "freight rates reduced." The capitalist press is openly stating that miners' locals of the sceond and fifth districts are going to "intervene in the interest of lower bituminous rates if they can do so legally and make common cause with the operators."

PROPOSE SAVING $33,000 OUT OF CITY JANITORS

"Cut Wages," Demand Church-going Hypocrites

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 17.—The Taxpayers Association, a dummy organization of the Citizen's Alliance put in a bid to take over city hall janitorial work at a saving of $33,000 a year. The proposal was brot before a public hearing of the finance committee of the city council held to discuss wage reductions for city workers.

These christian ladies and gentlemen protested the wage that the city janitors are getting, as being too high. It is $125 per month. They want to cut it down as low as $60 per month, by substituting women workers for the present janitors.

These social hypocrites, said that a great injustice was being done the janitors who work for $90 per month, while the city janitors were paid $125, as they were compelled to pay taxes to help support the higher paid city workers. According to their sophistry, one would think that they were deeply concerned about the welfare of the taxed janitors, who are propertyless, and, consequently, pay no taxes.

Janitors are Peons

Data furnished the writer by the Janitors' Union reflects some interesting light on the subject of janitors' wages in Minneapolis. In the first place, only a very small number of them are paid $90 a month those in big office buildings. The vast majority fall far below that wage.

The wages range from $65 to $70 a month. There are a great number of janitors who take charge of the building for the use of an apartment.

In most cases the wife and older children of the janitor are included in the hire of the janitor. So that all the labor power of the janitor's family is at the disposal of the apartment owner.

What the Move Is

The propaganda of the taxpayers' association is a screen to cover the capitalist aldermen in the city council who are determined to slash the wages of the city workers. This must be done under cover of camouflage. It is supplied by the Citizens Alliance.

The attack upon the wages of the city workers, is, morever, another step taken by the capitalists, to lower the general standard of living for all Minneapolis workers. It is recognized by the capitalists that once the wage levels of the city workers are lowered, the other workers will be deprived of their living standards without much difficulty, since the wages of the city workers were regarded as a sort of general scale for common labor.

Smith Smashes Union.

It is now becoming very plain to all the city workers, just what the action of Paul J. Smith means, in reference to his splitting up the solid compact organization of the City and County Employes' Union last spring.

Following closely upon Smith cutting up of the union, the capitalist are also adopting Smith's isolation tactics, in their war on the city workers. They first select one section to lick. Then, section after section will follow. Since Smith has divided up the city workers into so many slices, the capitalists are taking his slices and chewing them up.

The labor fakers who stood by, while Smith committed this organizational crime, are now spilling crocodile tears on behalf of the city workers.

We think that it is not amiss, to remind the city workers, that crocodile tears are perfectly worthless to deal with the crisis; a strong union putting up a united front against the capitalists, would be an instrument that could stop them.

It is to the credit of the Communists, that they fought the Paul J. Smith policy of breaking the solidarity of the city and county workers.

Scandinavian Museum Directors

MOSCO, U. S. S. R.—A group of directors of the Scandinavian museums, who attended the recent Scandinavian congress, have come to Leningrad to inspect the museums. The group includes Prof. Wattergren, director of the Swedish National Museum; Prof. Schleman, director of the Danish Royal Museum, and others.

Hod Carriers Arrested in Strike

DERBY, Conn., Sept. 17.—(FP)—Three members of the Hod Carriers and Building Laborers' Union were arrested in the strike to bring wages up to 67½ cents from 60 cents an hour. The union is waging a fight in some of the Connecticut cities against the open shop conditions prevailing for the laborers.

A combination of oppression and knowledge is a powerful one.

NORMAN Hapgood is no longer interested in the Soviet government. The novelty of the experiment is wearing off and the jaded liberal is on the lookout for new thrills. Hapgood sees England as the champion of liberalism. The tories carry out advanced "socialist" programs, he says. Between British liberalism and Italian fascism, the philosopher can be perpetually entertained says Hapgood. This is the width and depth of Hapgood's brain. He is a typical Hearst scribbler.

HAPGOOD fails to see, or does not want to see, the underlying economic cause that produce a proletarian dictatorship in Russia, a fascist-capitalist dictatorship in Italy, a pseudo-democracy in England. He sees only "ideas" floating in space. Not the clash of economic forces but the intellectual warfare between different conceptions. This is where our shallow bourgeois "thinkers" fall down. When capitalism in Britain gets seriously worried, it will attempt to prolong its life by a dictatorship, just as it did in Italy, and as it did in Germany when it was threatened by revolution. Capitalism operates in all countries under whatever form that suits its dominent section best. That is about all there is to Hapgood's nonsense on democracy and dictatorship.

Dispute Between Bricklayers and Trowelmen Still On

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(FP)—No peace settlement was reached at conferences between the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union and the Operative Plasterers' and Cement Finishers International Association, say officials of the latter organization. Two more building strikes have occurred in the dispute, bricklayers quitting jobs on the St. Nicholas convent and the new St. James church, both in Atlantic City, when plasterers began decorative work.

Perth Amboy Juniors Carry Off Honors at Youth Day Celebration

By JAMES SZEPECY

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Sept. 14 (By Mail)—Perth Amboy celebrated International Youth Day, with a meeting and entertainment at Workers' Home, 308 Elm St., in the evening.

Comrade Weisbord of the Y. W. L. spoke on the significance of International Youth Day and the Junior movement.

Comrade Esther German of the local Frederick Engels Junior group acted as chairman of the meeting in a capable manner.

The meeting was opened by the Frederick Engels Junior group saying the workers' pledge and singing The International.

Comrade Peter of the Junior group recited the Juniors call.

The program also included the singing of revolutionary songs by the Juniors, such as, Hold the Fort, The Young Guards, Preacher and the Slave, Working Men Unite, etc., singing being led by Comrade M. Skapinetz of the Junior group.

There was also a one act play called The Builders, the program given by the Juniors. The Perth Amboy Juniors true to their slogan are always ready, were certainly ready for Youth Day. They were applauded many times for their singing and acting.

Striking Capmaker of Minneapolis Is Honored with Jail

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 17.—Sam Smoliack, a striking capmaker at the Alco Cap Co., 122 North 4th St., was arrested yesterday on the picket line. The boss and the foreman swore the warrant out for his arrest.

The charge is based upon alleged "intimidation." Smoliack is charged with calling the scab foreman "dirty strikebreaker." He was released on $25.00 bail.

The strike against the Alco Cap Co. was declared a couple of weeks ago, when the boss locked out 11 union capmakers, members of Local No. 12 of the Capmakers' Union.

A steady picket line is maintained. The boss has a constant attendance of police to intimidate the pickets. Smoliack's trial comes up Friday.

Springfield Miners to Hear Corbishley Tell Zeigler Story

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 17.—Henry Corbishley, president of the Zeigler, Ill., local union of the U. M. W. of A.—although deposed by the Farrington sub-district machine—will speak at the Carpenter's Hall in Springfield on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Corbishley tells the story of how the K. K. K. has joined with the officials of the miners' union to break the union and has even murdered miners in their union hall.

40 Cents For Skilled Workers.

Holland, Mich., Sept. 17.—Skilled woodworkers and machinists in and about Holland, Mich., are being paid 35 and 40 cents an hour, according to an experienced worker who applied at many shops for a job at 45 cents and was told everywhere that his price was too high. The Holland chamber of commerce has successfully kept automobile plants out of the neighborhood so far. It fears that wages will go up in the other industries if the concerns locate here.

Non-Partisan Teaching

Attached to the Summers' annual appropriation bill of the District of Columbia, is a provision that no portion of the money appropriated under the bill shall be paid to a school official who permits (1) the teaching of disrespect for the holy bible; (2) the teaching of partisan political views; or (3) the teaching that ours is an inferior form of government.

This is quite interesting but not strange. It simply confirms the Communist contention that this is a class government. There is nothing immoral in a capitalist government taking steps to perpetuate its existence. What is more or less amusing or disgusting according to the state of a person's intellectual digestion, is the holy horror expressed by the teachers over this debauching of the political virginity of grand and glorious America.

The American Federation of Teachers rise on their heels in patriotic wrath and repudiates the suggestion that any American teacher could be even suspected of harboring contempt for the bible, or entertaining political views, not to speak of teaching them and above all biting the feeding hand, that is creating the impression that the government on whose payroll they happen to be is anything else but what Mr. John Joseph Babbitt says it is on the 4th of July.

So outraged were the feelings of those teachers that they issued a statement so that all the world might know where they stand at this Marne of intellectual freedom. This is what they say:

> "We object to legislation that inhibits freedom of teaching, not because we desire to retain the opportunity to challenge the religious or other convictions of American citizens, but because such legislation tends to establish the principle that those in control of the state may at their pleasure pass laws to force citizens to accept the views of those in power in any field of thought at any time. So far as we know, no teacher in the city of Washington has the slightest desire to teach disrespect for the holy bible. We oppose this provision because we believe it is meant to be used as a club to frighten teachers, while the law is established to control their thinking in some other field."

The teachers say more and wind up with the following gem: "Our confidence in our government leaves no room for fear of criticism." No doubt the "dignity and professional spirit" of the teachers is considerably damaged by the financial precaution taken by their paymasters. They feel insulted because there is so little confidence reposed in them. It is indeed regrettable that any government official should be so stupid as to cause those worms to turn, if only to reiterate their loyalty to their masters.

Non-partisan teaching! Who ever heard of it in a class state of society? Capitalist education in some form or other permeates every capitalist institution in some form or other. In a proletarian state like Russia proletarian education is equally omnipresent. Perhaps your intellectual dignity rebels against this "horrible" fact. But you must grapple with reality. If you are a worker you must choose between capitalist education and proletarian education. If you are an intelligent class conscious worker you will choose the latter. Non-partisan education is a myth not yet exploded.

Dollars and Wooden Legs

Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations, may receive the following consignment from Paris in a few days: one tin hat, seven wooden legs, one American decoration.

Those articles are relics of the world war and were sent to Borah by a French patriotic organization as a protest against the insistence of the American government that France pay her war indebtedness to the United States. No doubt this gesture was made with the connivance of the French government.

The tin hat was worn by a French soldier at the battle of Verdun. The German artillery men put the tin hat on the soldier. He is now buried. The seven wooden legs were worn by seven French soldiers, who have no more use for them, because the soldiers died from injuries received in saving "civilization," French francs, and Morgan's dollars. The decoration was the property of a French soldier who is now so sore on the American government, that it would burn a hole in his vest if he wore it any longer.

The quarrel between the French and American governments over the debt is only a quarrel between thieves. There is no morality on either side. The French capitalists fought the German capitalists for pure self-interest just as the British fought for "poor little Belgium" and for the same reason that prompted the House of Morgan to line up with the allies. The American government loaned the allies about ten billions of dollars, in order to "crush German militarism," really to save American imperialism and the dollars the House of Morgan had invested in allied victory.

France used part of the money borrowed from the United States to "save civilization" to finance wars waged by Poland, Rumania and other countries against Soviet Russia and also to finance campaigns against the people of Morocco and Syria. France is now spending millions of dollars "saving civilization" in Morocco.

The United States is spending millions keepng the Flipinos n subjection and sending cruisers and marines to protect Morgan's investments in South America and in China.

Between the imperialisms of the United States and France, there is only a choice between two evils. One is greater than the other, because one is stronger than the other. The United States is using the debt as a club over France as she is using it over England and Italy. She wants to weaken her imperialist competitors. France is fighting for a favorable settlement of the debt question so as to be in a better position to hold her own in the imperialist scramble. Wooden legs, tin hats and tin decorations will not be accepted by the United States in lieu of cash. Those things had their day. The real losers in the world war were not the capitalists of either the victor or vanquished nations but the men who sacrificed their lives for their masters and their dependents who lived to mourn their loss.

It's pretty tough on the Oregon senator who was arrested for carrying some whiskey under his skin, when Andy Mellon, who is in charge of prohibition enforcement owned a distillery and pays income tax on the profits.

Lore Proves Himself Guilty

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN.

LORE still contends that he is a good Communist working in harmony with the Comintern, but as soon as he attempts to prove the correctness of his contention, he succeeds in proving the exact opposite. He proves not his own contention, but the contention of the Comintern and of our own party, namely, that Loreism is opportunism.

Lore's So-called Defense.

HOW does Lore defend himself? He does it either by directly evading the issues or by beclouding them with irrelevant matter, which is the same as evasion. Lore does not dare (not for the present, at least) to restate and defend openly his position on those fundamental points which the Comintern and the party are attacking as opportunism.

The resolution of the Parity Commission on Loreism is quite specific. It enumerates all the chief manifestations of Loreism and proves them to be opportunistic deviations from the Leninist line of the Comintern. The resolution says in effect: Lore holds social-democraticviews on the potentialities of the revolutionary class struggle in the United States. He still lives in the world of 1910 and sees no changes in the economic and political situation of America. Lore underestimates the role of our party and would reduce it in practice to a propaganda club. Lore supports the right-wing in the Comintern. Lore holds opportunist views on the colonial question and on the alliance between the workers and poor peasants. Lore is opposed to the centralized political and organizational leadership of the Communist International. Lore merely tolerates the Comintern, but does not accept it.

What is Lore's answer? He publishes in the Volkzeitung a series of articles which by their evasions, confusion, and insincerity confirm everything that was ever said about Loreism by the Comintern and by our party. More than that. By these articles and by the way he treated party decisions during the last six months, Lore has been preparing a political and organizational base from which to fight the Comintern and its American section. And when the party convention goes ahead and takes the only course open to it, namely, the expulsion of Lore from the party, Lore assumes the pose of a martyr and begins to complain of maltreatment.

A Communist Party is a serious proposition. Those who take it seriously do not play hide and seek with it, do not diplomatize with it, and least of all do they undermine its prestige and influence. And these are precisely the things that Lore has been doing.

The party refused to be deceived by the polite diplomacy of Lore. And what else is it but diplomacy of the worst kind to maintain even now, as Lore does [illegible] he is not fighting the Communist International? It may not be open war (not yet) but it is at least "a state of war" as the late Woodrow Wilson would have said.

In his editorial of Sept. 1st, Lore writes the following: "The assertion that I am now, or have been in the past, leading a struggle against the C. I. is untrue." Is it, though? To support consistently the right-wing in the Comintern against its recognized Leninist leadership is, in the opinion of Communists, leading a struggle against the C. I. To advocate persistently views and ideas which go contrary to C. I. policies (colonial question, agrarian, China, McDonald government, etc.), this, too, a Communist considers as struggling against the C. I And, last but not least, Lore's opposition to the centralized leadership of the Comintern is a fight against the Comintern. In this instance, as in many others, Lore seldom engaged in a frontal attack on the C. I., but it was an attack just the same. In the language of Loreism, it was refusal to accept "blindly" C. I. decisions, opposition to "mechanical" control and leadership, appeal for "freedom" of opinion, a plea for "more democracy", etc., etc. But, in reality all this liberality was nothing else but an opportunist cloak to cover up real opposition to Comintern policies and tacticss.

The Opportunist Veil is Becoming More Transparent.

NOW, since Lore has been expelled from the party, the veil covering his opportunism has become a little more transparent. Lore is gradually opening up to the warm rays of "freedom" from party discipline and is exhibiting some very interesting ideas.

For instance, he now pleads guilty (ironically, of course) to the charge that he has been opposed to the reorganization of the party on the shop nuclei basis. He now admits, what he never openly admitted before, that he did not believe in this form of organization. He now goes as far as to say (Volkszeitung, Sept. 12) that complete reorganization of our party on the basis of shop nuclei would spell death for our party.

For this frankness Lore should be congratulated. It is about time that he speak out clearly and plainly so that everybody can hear and understand. And when this happens there will be very few comrades in our party, even of those that have been following Lore in the past, who will doubt the wisdom of the decision of our last national convention to expel Lore from the party.

Lore says, he is not fighting the Comintern. No, he is doing something worse. He is trying to destroy its influence in the American party. Here is a piece of opportunistic wisdom from the pen of Lore in the Volkszeitung of Sept. 6:

"We stand for a centralized party and for a centralistically organized Communist movement. But we say that of these organizational questions (referring to the last C. I. decision—A. B.) the party membership knows better than the most eminent heads in Moscow or their representatives here . . . . The comrades in Moscow cannot know and understand the situation in the United States as well as the Communists in the United States."

Lore tells the C. I. to keep its hands off the organizational questions of our party. Excellent Communism, isn't it? Then he proceeds to advise the C. I. to "limit itself to laying down lines of principle and to look after the carrying out of these principles", advice given with much grace and liberality.

Here is a classic example of opportunism. Leaving aside for the moment the manner in which Lore speaks of the Comintern ("eminent heads", "comrades of Moscow", etc.) what is the substance of the above quotation? It is this:

Lore separates mechanically (and in the good old style of the mensheviks and opportunists the world over) questions of organization from questions of policy and principle, and then tells the C. I. where to get off at. He says to the C. I.: On questions of principle your advice is welcome, but on questions of organization—nothing doing!

This point of view has nothing new in it. It is an old menshevik conception. It is precisely the point of view that the Bolsheviks of Russia were militantly fighting against as far back as 1903. It is this point of view that formed the main base of struggle of the late Two-and-a-Half-International against the 21 points of the Communist International. It is an old song, sung by all opportunists to various tunes and with various modulations, but always having the same leit motiv: Do not mix in our internal organizational affairs.

It is important to note that the "organizational" question to which Lore refers in his editorial and of which he wants the Comintern to keep its hands off, is the question of party leadership nothing more nor less. According to Lore's conception of centralization, the Comintern has no business to interfere in determining the leadership of one of its sections.

In other words, Lore grants the C. I. the right to adopt theses and pass resolutions, i. e., "to lay down the lines of principle", but the C. I. has no right to determine when necessary the kind and nature of the leadership that is to carry these theses into life. This conception of centralization is even more opportunistic than the one held by the two-and-a-half-international. It is almost the same as the one prevailing in the second international.

Such is the ideology of Loreism. This is the kind of "realistic" Communism that Lore has been fighting for in our party until he fought himself out of the party. The party convention made no mistake in putting an end to this sort of activity in our own ranks. Bolshevism and opportunism are incompatible.

FOSTER SPEAKS AT MEETING OF NEEDLE TRADES

Left Wing Leaders of All Unions Present

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 17.—William Z. Foster will be the principal speaker at the mass meeting to be held on Friday evening, Septmber 18, at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth street, which marks the opening of the third national conference of the needle trades section of the Trade Union Educational League.

Remarkable Growth.

The recent struggle in the Garment Workers' Union has indicated the remarkable growth of the left wing in this city and the enthusiastic interest of the workers in the program of the Trade Union Educational League.

This interest is stimulated by the prospect of a growing crisis in the needle industry, which will vitally affect the wages and living standards of the garment workers. The meeting is open to all furriers, cloakmakers, capmakers, millinery workers, dressmakers, journeymen tailors, clothing workers, and garment workers in general. Admission is free.

Among the speakers at this unusual meeting will be the following noted figures in the needle industry: Ben Gold, manager of the joint board of the Furriers' Union; Sam Lipzin, members of the executive board of Local 5 of the A. C. W. A.; Max Sillinsky of Cleveland, general organ of the Journeymen Tailors' Union, and former candidate for general secretary of that organization, who received over one thousand votes in the last election; M. Levin, ex-secretary of the Philadelphia joint board of the I. L. G. W. U., and M. Ziebel of the Millinery Workers' Union of this city. Phil Aronberg of Chicago will be chairman.

Everyone of the speakers is a veteran of the class struggle and is well known in the fight against the bureaucrats of the right wing and against the bosses in the garment trades. It is suggested that workers come early to this meeting as the wonderful program wich has been arranged makes it possible that the late comers will not find seats easily.

MUSICIANS' STRIKE DETHRONES 'VAGABOND KING'; CREW ALSO OUT

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 17.—(FP)—The Vagabond King lost his throne at the Shubert Theater in New Haven when the entire stage crew, consisting of carpenters, electricians and stage hands, walked out in sympathy with the visiting orchestra, members of the musicians' union, called out by the national office of the American Federation of Musicians.

The strike of the musicians is called to enforce demands for a $50 weekly minimum for the rank and file of the orchestra, with $75 for the leader, and a guarantee of 35 weeks' work a year. The sympathetic strike of stage workers has the support of the respective internationals.

The musicians' original demands for $55 with $85 for the leader, were pared down in a compromise but the unien stood pat for the 35 weeks guarantee and when the Shuberts refused the theater shut down. The management had to refund $2,000 to patrons who had tickets for the show the first strike night.

Worsted Strikers in Mass. Reject Compromise Offer

HOLYOKE, Mass., Sept. 17.—(FP)—Holyoke Worsted Mills strikers, out for a 15 per cent raise and the 48-hour week rejected an offer employers made thru Fred L. Knight, commissioner of the state board of arbitration, for a 2½ per cent raise now with another 2½ per cent October 1. The strikers declare they average 25 per cent less than the textile workers elsewhere and that they have been compelled to work 52 hours a week.

Wage Cutting Mills Paid Big Tax

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 17.—(FP)—The Manville-Jenckes Co. cotton goods makers, which led the 10 per cent wage cutting a year ago, also led the state in textile profits for 1924, the income tax records indicate. Manville-Jenckes paid $126,246 tax as compared with $87,695 for the Guerin Mills.

SWEATSHOP WORK OF CHILDREN IN N. Y. CONTINUES

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(FP)—Sweatshop work of little children is still a fact in the New York tenements. Katherine H. Amend, visiting nurse tells of visiting a tubercular Italian girl whose father had been injured while working on a subway.

"Twice I went to the old rat's nest where they live, quite late in the evening. They were not afraid of inspectors at 10 at night and the hall door was open on account of the ghastly heat. Two tiny rooms and a closet bedroom; a pale, watery gaslight in the sweaty room; piles and piles of cheap pants, half finished; Mrs. Salinave doggedly sewing, half asleep; Mr. Salinave pulling bastings and dripping perspiration, Josie sticking a needle in and out and trying to keep her lids open in a gray green face, Paula snuffling rebelliously and fastening on buttons, Johnny sitting on a stool at his mother's feet with a half-sour bottle of milk clutched in her fist, the baby wailing and nuzzling for food."

Only five of the mother's 15 children had survived. Miss Amend comments: "Scenes like these occur and will occur as long as labor is allowed in homes where children live. No complaint could be made because these children were found at work only during unofficial visits and when in the confidence of the family. The family had to live and no agency could be induced to help them as long as the parents could work at home. The income earned by all working together was an existence minimum, so the parents could not be blamed for making the children help. No law could prevent work behind closed doors."

Introduction of Universal Education

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—The committee appointed by the government to work out plans for the introduction of universal elementary education in Soviet Russia has completed its labors and submitted its report to the State Planning Commission (Gosplan). According to these plans, universal education is to be effected within a period of from 5 to 10 years.

AVERT IMPENDING CRISIS!

ONLY $5,419.23 RAISED SO FAR IN RESPONSE TO DANGER SIGNAL

DAILY WORKER DEBTS WAIT FOR SECOND HALF OF QUOTA

WITH the first flush of confidence given DAILY WORKER readers by the quick response of workers to the danger call sent out by their paper, a false feeling of security has arisen. The $5,000 has been raised, this means only that the most immediate pressure of debt was relieved. The emergency will not be over, until the second $5,000 is forthcoming.

To get $10,000 in two weeks: this was the need of the DAILY WORKER. The two weeks will be over tomorrow and yet only half the amount is on hand. Remittances received to date total but $5,419.23.

Those DAILY WORKER readers and those branches of the Workers Party who have so far failed to help save the DAILY WORKER will be the ones to bear the blame for its stoppage, unless they immediately take action to avert the crisis They will suffer not only from the loss of the paper, but from the knowledge that they themselves were responsible for it,—thru their negligence.

Following is the list of loyal workers and organizations who have put themselves on record Thursday of having given "all they could" and "as quickly as they could," to SAVE THE DAILY WORKER.

Textile Workers in New England Organize Against Wage Slashes

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—(FP)—A step that may lead to further strikes against wage cuts in the textile industry was taken by the United Textile Workers' Union, at a meeting of the emergency board consisting of national executive officers of the union. The board instructed organizers present to notify workers to get in touch with international officers immediately whenever in their opinion there was a chance to restore former wage scales.

Plans for further improving the commissariat in the American Thread Co., town at Willimantic were outlined and Organizer Kelleher was dispatched there to carry out the plans. The feeding of these strikers now out 28 weeks against a 10 per cent cut, is a serious problem for the organization.

Weavers Locked Out

BROCKTON, Mass., Sept. 17.—(FP)—Seventy-five weavers were locked out of the Everlastick Mills when the management heard rumors of strike talk against the 10 per cent wage cut.

FIGHT BARRING OF COMMUNIST

SEAMEN WINNING STRIKE AS BIG SHIPPING COMPANY GRANTS THE FULL DEMANDS OF I. W. W. UNION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 18.—The general strike of the seamen called and led by the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union of the I. W. W. has won a partial victory when yesterday the first break in the ship owners' resistance was made by the French and Danish Steamship company completely capitulating to the demands of the I. W. W., granting a $15 wage raise for all categories, the eight-hour day (three watch system), 60 cents an hour for overtime, better food and comforts and so on.

On the basis of the agreement signed by the company, it at once shipped a full crew out of the M. T. W. hall for the steamer Bornholm, which had been tied up since the strike began. The agreement, of course, affects all ships of this company which is one of the largest trans-Atlantic shipping concerns.

Mystery of the Majestic.

Another item of shipping is of the first importance is the apparent disappearance of the great White Star liner Majestic, the mystery of her whereabouts showing that the I. W. W. and Communist pickets who hailed her at the docks when she brot in a yellow socialist cargo in the form of Morris Hillquit, and the continuous wobbly picketing since then, has had an effect on this ship, one of the

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

POOR old Kellogg got himself into another jam when he dutifully obeyed the hint of the British foreign office, to bar Comrade Saklatvala, the Hindu Communist and member of the British parliament, from the country. The British rulers' dear souls wish to retain a reputation for liberality in the matter of free speech as long as they can afford the luxury, but they don't like refractory men like Saklatvala to go abroad and shed a little light on the way things are going behind the imperial curtain.

JAMES RAMSAY McDONALD and Arthur Henderson are coming to this country shortly. No effort will be made to cancel their visas. It is quite likely that MacDonald will receive an official welcome. He is a socialist and his views on India are kosher. Ditto, Mr. Henderson, who will speak for the socialist party. Those gentlemen may arrive in this country on scab ships if there are any available. Saklatvala is a Communist and his main business, in fact his only visible means of recreation, is devisnig ways and means to overthrow British imperialism and incidentally all imperialism.

SAKLATVALA is from India, which has often been called the key to the British imperial arch. You know what happens to an old stone bridge when the keystone is pried loose. That is what will happen to the British empire when India is jimmied loose from the rest of the structure. A pile of ruins will be the result, with the British ruling class under the ruins. There is a good deal of sympathy for the Hindu nationalist movement in the United States, and Comrade Saklatvala would be sure of a good audience for his Communist views on the situation in India.

THIS is not the first time that the American government has stepped in to assist the British in persecuting Hindus. The conduct of this government towards Hindus during and immediately after the war was notorious. Towards Ireland there was a different attitude because there are millions of Irish votes in the United States, yet a few Irish republicans were treated roughly by Washington on orders from the British government. The threatened deportation of Mayor O'Callaghan of Cork was an example of the willingness of the American government to aid the British ruling class in keeping their subject peoples in the yoke.

WHILE Kellogg was in London as ambassador, it is reported that he did everything except act as potboy to the British aristocracy. He might have essayed that function but for the lively competition. Other American ambassadors to the court of St. James found themselves in complete accord with the empire's attitude towards "inferior races" but they were not without some culture which enabled them to mix on terms of equality with the "superior" British

BRITISH TRADE TIED UP TIGHT BY SEA STRIKE

1,000,000 Tons Held Up; Owners Frantic

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., Sept. 18.—The crew of the Royal Mail company's liner Arlanza, due to sail today from Southampton to Buenos Aires, refused to accept the wage cut of $5 a month and left the board of trade office without signing on the articles. The British army transport Derbyshire which was supposed to leave for India, Wednesday, with military units, is tied up here also.

Capitalist authorities now admit that the "situation is alarming," since the strike threatens to tie up the supply of raw material for Britain and may cause a price raise of commodities. Also, German, French, Dutch and Scandinavian companies are taking advantage of the British strike and are making bids to capture British trade.

Idle Ships Ruin Empire Trade.

Fully one millions tons of British shipping are tied up in seventy ships held up by the strike at South African, Australian and New Zealand ports. Thirty-three overseas ships with a total tonnage of 325,574 are lying idle in Australian ports alone. Melbourne is panic stricken by cables from England that liners running to Australia may cease until the strike is over.

Shipping company officials met in London Wednesday and ordered a drastic curtailment of sailings, because they had to, the strikers having ordered "curtailment" previously. The companies admit it will be many months before shipments return to normal, even if the strike ended at once.

Cargoes Rotting.

Many ships due to sail under the "curtailment" order are figuring only to get away with "scratch" crews taken on at the last moment. The White Star liner Homeric, which left Southampton Wednesday for America, got away only by shipping British fascist scabs with no knowledge of seafaring at the scab hole in the picket line at Cowes Road. Serious financial losses are being inflicted on exporters and perishable cargoes for importation are rotting in dominion ports. A serious shortage of fruit is certain.

MINERS' INTERNATIONAL MOVES TO STOP SCAB COAL SHIPMENTS

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Sept. 18.—The Miners' International in conference at this city is seeking to prevent the export of coal from Belgium to the United States during the anthracite strike, and has ordered an investigation as to whether shipments of Welsh anthracite are being made to the United States.

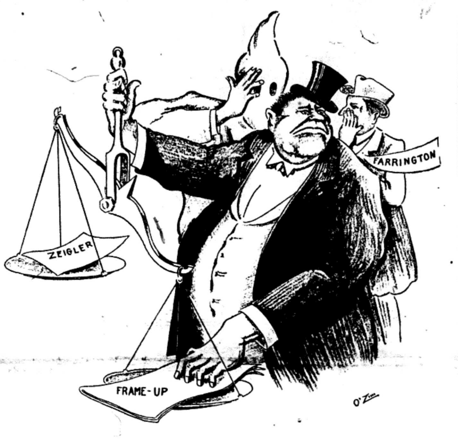
Reports from New York say that large coal dealers are planning to import 50,000 tons of anthracite a month from Wales if the strike in America is not settled in two weeks.

Hoover Aid Admits Soviet Union Shows Big Progress

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—Soviet Russia shows "improvement all along the line," Colonel William N. Haskell, former head of the American relief in Russia, said today upon his arrival in Berlin from Moscow, where he has made a several weeks exhaustive study in conditions.

100 PER CENT AMERICANISM



BRITISH TRY TO USE CHINA AGAINST U. S.

Will Give Up "Rights" Upon Conditions

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 18.— That Great Britain is realizing that her imperialist interests make necessary that she hold out some bait to the Chinese to offset those baits offered by American imperialism and the Japanese, not to speak of the influence gained by Soviet Russia, is seen in the announcement today by Austen Chamberlain concerning Britain's attitude toward China.

That any "concessions" have a good stout string attached is, of course, a feature of the announcement to be read in between the lines. Chamberlain, foreign minister in the tory cabinet, said:

Two or Three "Ifs."

"We are ready to surrender our special rights in China, if China can guarantee our people ordinary protection and common justice. Great Britain has no territorial ambitions.

"Great Britain is willing to carry out the letter and spirit of the Washington conference upon two conditions: First, there must be initial good will and the putting aside of little suspicions engendered by those who see opportunity in other people's troubles, without regard for the prosperity of China herself. Second, China must make peace with herself and be united under a central authority."

Dig At Yankee Imperialism.

While the capitalist newspapers try to interpret that the arrow directed at "those who see opportunity in other people's troubles means Soviet Russia," political observers are chuckling at this artful ambiguity which covers the real shaft directed at American imperialism which has deliberately played the Chinese against Britain to gain a foothold for American interest in China.

The other condition that "China must be united under a central authority" sounds logical to the unthinking, but the sinister meaning of it is that Britain demands that the Pekin government, as a condition precedent to release from the clutches of Brtain, wipe out by force of arms if necessary the Canton South China Republic, which is the center of all real nationalist revolution. In other words, if China "wants to be free" it must destroy the only force which guarantees its freedom.

KELLOGG FALSELY QUOTED SPEECH, IS SAKLATVALA'S CHARGE

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 18.—America is getting a worse and worse name for intolerance owing to the United States officials, Shapurji Saklatvala said in commenting on the action of Secretary of State Kellogg in barring him from the United States after he had been chosen as a delegate to the interparliamentary union in Washington. "The American workers are sure to see the meaning of Secretary Kellogg's action."

"By preventing my entering, Secretary Kellogg has abused his power. He has grossly interfered with the rights of the interparliamentary union, as a delegate to which I was to speak in America. I shall go to America if I can."

"If I got to the United States I would prove Secretary Kellogg a liar and a defamer in ten minutes. The speech of mine in the British parliament quoted by Secretary Kellogg has been falsely reported. Mr. Kellogg is deceiving the American public. Kellogg's act is illegal."

Saklatvala sent a telegram of protest to Senator William McKinley of Illinois, chairman of the American group of the interparliamentary union.

Japanese Diet Building Burns

TOKIO, Japan, Sept. 18.—Both houses of the temporary Japanese parliament building were burned today. The building, a single story wooden structure, covered five acres near the center of the city. The cause of the fire is unknown.

BURY PROGRESS AT ILLINOIS LABOR MEETING

Steamroller Flattens Everybody But Bosses

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept 18—The Illinois State Federation of Labor Convention proved Wednesday that it is the most reactionary ever held by voting down any measure that would challenge the capitalist system or even make an attempt to scratch it a little.

Every resolution that contained any clause which mentioned struggle was overwhelmingly defeated by the reactionary machine controlling the convention.

Scab Unionist Heads Committee.

The resolutions committee of which George Slater of the scabby United Garment Workers' Union is chairman, does not report favorably on any resilutions that smacks of progress.

"The committee recommends nonconcurrence," is repeated again and again by Harry Scheck, Clown cigaret peddler ousted from the Pressmen's Union. Instead of discussing the merits of the resolutions all the lickspittles of the Walker-Olander machine attack those who have introduced the resolutions and play upon prejudice and ignorance.

Overgaard Fights for Labor Party.

The first resolution defeated was No. 21, introduced by Delegate Overgaard, Machinist Lodge 390, Chicago, for organizing a labor party.

Delegate Overgaard reviewed the struggle the railroad workers went thru, the fight against the infamous Daugherty injunction and the present struggles that organized labor is faced with.

He pointed out that organized labor will not gain anything by begging capitalist politicians for favors as they always turn against labor after

WORKERS PARTY TO HOLD HUGE PROTEST IN NEW YORK AGAINST THE BARRING OF SAKLATVALA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The Workers (Communist) Party is holding a huge demonstration in Union Square here, Monday evening, Sept. 21, at five o'clock, to protest against the refusal of Secretary of State Kellogg to admit Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British parliament, to this country.

Saklatvala was a delegate to the interparliametary union to be held in Washington early next month, but his passports were revoked by the Coolidge administration at the request of the British government.

The Civil Liberties Union has sent Secretary of State Kellogg a telegram protesting the action of the state department.

The Workers (Communist) Party, local New York, has issued a statement, showing that Saklatvala was barred because he is the champion of all workers oppressed by British imperialism, and calling on all New York workers to attend the mass meeting on Monday. The statement follows:

The Will of Morgan

"The barring of Shapurji Saklatvala, the British Communist member of parliament by the state department from entrance into the United States to attend the inter-parliamentary conference in Washington next month as an official delegate is a blow aimed to

NATIONS' LEAGUE ACTS AS LACKEY OF IMPERIALISM

Must Await Masters' Voice, Admission

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 18.—That the league of nations is merely the servant of the European imperialists, particularly the British empire, was again demonstrated when the British delegate told the league assembly that they must wait before acting on a "disarmament" conference until the allied premiers meet and formulate an anti-Soviet agreement, the so-called "security" pact. The allies will meet at Lucerne on October 5, and the Hindenburg government has been invited to send representatives.

Sir Cecil Hurst, the English delegate, admitted the failure of the league to take any independent action. "I am convinced that the league's position and prestige would be seriously endangered if its efforts in the direction of disarmament constituted nothing but an unbroken series of failures," he continued. "We cannot risk a third failure."

The league of nations functions as the lackey of the world imperialist powers, in dominating the small and weak nations and exploiting colonial peoples, and hatching anti-Soviet plots. Hurst's speech shows that the league takes its orders from the capitalistic governments.

FORMER ESTATE OWNERS MUST LEAVE UKRAINIA, IS ORDER OF SOVIETS

MOSCOW, Sept. 18.—The Soviet government of Ukrania has issued a decree ordering the expulsion from Ukrania, by January 1, of all former estate owners or lessees, together with their families. Only those who have served in the rad army will be permitted to remain, a news dispatch reports.

SAKLATVALA WAS BARRED FOR HIS SPEECH ON INDIA

British Fear Exposure of Colonial Mis-Rule

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 18.—While the state department clung to its contention that Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British parliament, was barred from attending the interparliamentary union, to which he was a delegate, because of his "Communistic attachments," it is now definitely known that Saklatvala was denied admittance because of a request of the British government.

Itself unable to prevent Saklatvala's coming, and afraid that he would expose the fearful exploitation of the workers of India by British imperialism, the Baldwin government asked the state department to deny the Communist a passport.

Secretary of State Kellogg, after a conference with President Coolidge, acceded to this request.

Exposed Imperialism

Several congressmen declare that in the next session of congress they will attempt to have a law passed curbing the autocratic powers of the secretary of state to bar foreign visitors.

Senator Borah of Idaho, who criticised the exclusion of the Indian member of parliament, made public what Washington generally considers the real reason for Britain's aversion to his visiting the United States.

In a speech in the house of commons, Saklatvala flamingly denounced British mis-rule in India, in which he contended that if Britain practiced in England what she is practicing in his country "There would not be a man or woman who would not rise and fight to the bitter end to proclaim their rights.

Saklatvala's Crime

"British imperialism must go if humanity is to progress. You call us 'seditious' when we protest against these things. But when you rise in revolt in this country against the ruling classes it is called 'the spirit of democracy.' In India, it is 'sedition, conspiracy and propaganda.'"

Commenting on this, Senator Borah said:

"I think anyone who reads his speech will conclude that Saklatvala's crime was discussing conditions in India."

One of the utterances of Saklatvala to which Kellogg made objections was, "We declare that war is a part of the capitalist system and can therefore only be abolished with the overthrow of capitalism. This means that the whole working class movement must be organizationally and ideologically prepared to fight war by the transformation of the imperialist war when declared into the civil war and the seizure of power by the working class."

I. L. G. W. JOINT BOARD DELAYS REINSTATEMENT IN BIG SHOPS

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 18.—The work of reinstating the discharged workers is proceeding slowly, according to the report of the Joint Committee of Action, and altho about one-half the shops have been settled, this affects only a small percentage of the workers out on strike. The larger shops have not yet been adjusted and therefore the majority of the workers are still not back on their jobs.

The Joint Committee of Action did not send pickets to the shops yesterday morning, and peace negotiations are now waiting for the joint board to fulfill its promise to reinstate all workers who were discharged during the past 15 weeks for their support of the Joint Committee of Action.

FAKE 'LABOR' SHEET BACKED BY OPEN SHOP

Pretends Friendship to Progressives

By TOM RAY.

(Secretary Progressive Miners' Committee, District 5, U. M. W. of A.)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Spt. 18.—All available scab herding agencies are being utilized by the bankers, the steel kings and the coal barons who have now completely concentrated their united forces in the long planned effort to annihilate the United Mine Workers in the Pittsburgh district and drive union men from the territory.

One of the foulest reeking scab papers of the country calling itself the "National Labor Tribune," published at Pittsburgh, Pa., and owned and controlled by the chamber of commerce, in its issue of Sept. 10, quotes parts of the program advanced by the Progressive Miners' Committee of the district.

Scab Sheet Under False Colors.

It quotes these parts as the devil quotes the scripture leaving out the central and most important point, namely, our call to prepare for an active fight against the attempts of the operators to enforce the 1917 scale and to destroy the union. This scab sheet makes its own interpretations and proposes in almost every one of its articles that the miners leave their union and go back to work at reduced wages.

The National Labor Tribune is being sponsored by the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce with has made great efforts to split District No. 5 from the United Mine Workers' organization. The paper is being paid for by the coal operators and sent to as many rank and file coal miners as can be reached. It makes a pretense of roasting the union officials while in reality making a deadly attack against the union.

Chamber of Commerce Pretends Friendship.

No thinking coal miner has the least bit of doubt about the intentions of the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce or for that matter, the chamber of commerce of any other city. It is the avowed enemy of the mine workers and the working class as a whole organized for the purpose of facilitating the exploitation of the workers.

For the members of District 5, U. M. W. is no other choice but to fight not only this splitting attempt of the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce but all its efforts to destroy our union.

Progressives Always For Union.

The stand of the Progressive Miners' Committee has always been clear. It has constantly worked for a more united and more powerful union, one that can meet the enemy on equal terms and that has been the endeavor of all militant miners.

In this present situation where the operators try to open one mine after another to be manned by scabs and destroy union conditions, we demand that the union officials take the initative to make active preparations to resist the 1917 scale. We demand a militant fight against all the encroachments upon our working conditions and to meet the attack with an offensive, a real campaign of organization to make every mine a union mine.

Many Constructive Demands.

We have demanded and reiterate that measures must be taken for unemployment relief for the many jobless miners to be initiated by our officials. The shorter work day with no reductions in pay and compensation to those for whom work cannot be found to be paid out of the industry and the funds to be administered by the union. We also demand that the union officials cease their disruptive policy of expulsion of militant members and reinstate those expelled.

Any union officials who refuses to help in obtaining or who opposes these measures which are needed by the rank and file miners, we brand as reactionary and traitors to those whose interests they as officials are pledged to serve.

But when the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce tries to utilize our criticism of the officials for its own purposes to destroy our union, we declare most emphatically that we have known the chamber of commerce ever since its inception to be the deadly enemy of the workers and we will fight until it with all other capitalist institutions serving to help exploit the workers has been abolished together with capitalism itself.

biggest afloat. The I. W. W. strike committee's bulletin says:

"The Majestic left her dock at 2 p.m. Saturday. We know she was anchored off Sandy Hook until some time Sunday night and was therefore, delayed about 36 hours. This delay alone cost the White Star line some $24,000. When it was reported she had left Sunday evening, we made it our business to scan the wireless reports daily. But up to date (Sept. 17) we find no word from the Majestic in any wireless report. It seems peculiar that a ship of the Majestic's size and importance is not mentioned in any report. We are, therefore, led to believe that the Majestic must still be in port, or if she is at sea, where is she?"

It should be said that such great liners as the Majestic usually report their bearings every two hours by radio. Is the Majestic tied up yet off Sandy Hook, or is lack of reports due to fear that British sailors are watching for her at Southampton?

Whatever the Majestic is doing, the surrender of the French and Danish company to the demands of the strikers shows the power of the strike and cheers the seamen for further struggle.

The following is the scale signed by the company; and the usual old scale on the average ship before the strike:

Class of Work	New Scale	Old Avg.
Boatswain	$90.00	$75.00
Able seamen	77.50	55.00— 62.50
Ordinary seamen	62.50	40.00— 50.00
Oilers	87.50	72.50— 75.00
Water tenders	87.50	72.50— 75.00
Firemen (coal)	80.00	62.50
Wipers	72.50	45.00
Stewards	130
Chief cook	120
Second cook	105
Galley man	65.00	40.00
Mess boys	60.00	35.00— 40.00

In the case of the above company the new scale, however, represents a $15 wage raise all down the line.

Captain Walks Out.

The captain and the chief engineer of the Major Wheeler quit Thursday. They refused to sail with a scab crew and stated their disgust in plain language.

The entire crew of the Walter Jennings, one of the Standard Oil's tankers, walked out when she docked Wednesday. Most of the crew which was unorganized joined the M. T. W. at once. The crew of the Sucherico waited until pay day, then they walked out and picketed their own ship. The Clyde, a British tanker, arrived Wednesday and half the crew which had been shanghaied in England, walked off as quickly as the gang plank was down. The Rolf still has a captain all by his lonesome.

Long List of Struck Ships.

The M. T. W. lists the names of 21 ships tied up with all crew on strike, and 12 ships affected 50 per cent or more. From Hoboken comes word that the colored steward department of the steamer Western World, one of the Pan-American liners, all quit on hearing that there was a strike. Sailors and firemen are coming out.

Among other ships striking are the Roosevelt and the steamer Minnesota, the latter one of the largest freighters in the world. Baltimore strike headquarters indicate that men are coming off ship in that port with practically no resistance at all.

Didn't Expect Wobbly Strength.

Undoubtedly the United States shipowners have been taken completely by surprise by this typical I. W. W. seamen's strike which has been in progress in New York for the past week with other ports coming in line one by one.

The real significance of the I. W. W. seamen hurling themselves into the breach in the ports of this country in behalf of international solidarity did not penetrate the usually alert brains of these American shipping interests until they read the startling dispatches from abroad and later learned that the French and Danish Steamship company had seen the light signed up and shipped a full crew for their ship, the Bornholm, which has been tied up here in New York since the strike began.

The owners realized that the French and Danish Steamship company not only had been unable to ship crew but understood further that if it did ship, and shipped scabs it would be unable to unload.

JAPAN IN DESPERATE EFFORT TO BOLSTER YEN, EXPORTS GOLD

TOKIO, Sept. 18.—Lifting of the embargo upon gold exportations is forecasted as the result of an announcement that the government intends to ship four million yen in specie to the United States, to bolster up the exchange rate, thereby hoping to reduce the unfavorable trade balance. Further shipments of gold to the United States and other countries is expected, and it it understood that the government is prepared to export twenty million yen in gold, if necessary.

RIGHT TO TEACH SCIENCE BEFORE SUPREME COURT

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 18.—The famed SScopes evolution case, involving the right of a state to prohibit the teaching of any science conflicting with the biblical story of the Divine origin of man was formally before the Tennessee state supreme court today for adjudication.

The case reached Tennessee's highest tribunal on a defense appeal from the virdict rendered by a jury of farmers, at Dayton, Tennessee, last july, holding John Thomas Scopes, youthful high school professor, guilty of violating the anti-evolution law. The appeal was based on allegations that Scopes was convicted in violation of his rights under the constitution of Tennessee and the United States.

The bill of exceptions also argued that Scopes' rights were violated by presiding Judge John T. Raulston in the jurist rulings excluding the testimony of scientists from the trial and in permitting the opening of court with religious prayers. The prncipal contention of the defense, however, was that the conviction violated Scopes' consttutonal rghts of freedom of speech and religious liberty.

The papers were probably the most voluminous ever filed before the state supreme court.

DETROIT, Sept. 18.— Three men were electrocuted and a fourth is near death today when workmen on the new St. Thomas Catholic church and school dragged an elevator guy wire across a high tension street light wire.

FRENCH CAN DO NOTHING MORE AGAINST RIFF

Must Dig in Now for the Severe Winter

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Sept. 18.—In spite of the optimistic reports of the French war office, it is generally admitted here that the French troops in Morocco will be forced to spend the severe winter in North Africa in the positions they now occupy.

The rainy season will soon set in, and the troops sent to invade Morocco in the interests of the French bankers are looking forward to a winter of hardships.

Riffians Attack Spanish

The Riffians have again attacked the Spanish garrison landed at Cebadilla Beach, Morro Neuvo paninsula, inflicting heavy losses on the Spaniards under cover of darwness.

Due to the Riffian fire and the rough sea, the Spanish-French fleet in Alhucemas Bay was unable to come to the support of the landing force.

The Riffians also launched a surprise attack on Qued Hamine.

Heavy Losses of French

The French have dropped circulars from their airplanes, offering $25,000 for the capture or murder of Abd-el-Krim or his brother.

Reports continue to circulate about the heavy losses sustained by the French in their ttack on the heights of El Bibane.

President's Air Inquiry Board Is Meeting in Secret

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Sitting behind closed doors, the president's air board today plunged into a preliminary investigation of naval aeronautics.

The air grand jury summoned Secretary of Navy Wilbur, who presented a vast array of documents relating to the present flying policies of the navy.

School Strikers Play Game with Authorities Who Threatened Arrest

BOONTON, N. J., Sept. 18.—The 325 boys and girls on strike at the Boonton high school have returned to school for one day. They propose to balk the authorities in their attempt to arrest them on the charge of truancy by staying out for short periods at a time, they announce, until Albert F. Davis, their principal, has been reinstated.

RICHARD FORD, JUST PAROLED, FACES ARREST

Victim of Famous 'Ford and Suhr' Trial

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 18—Richard Ford, interpid leader of the Wheatland, Cal., hop-pickers' strike of 1913, just paroled after serving 12 years in San Quentin penitentiary on a framed-up murder charge, faces another indictment in Yuba County. Ray Manwell, the district attorney in Yuba County, is the son of E. T. Manville, former district attorney, who was killed during a strike riot provoked by armed thugs and deputy sheriffs at Wheatland during the strike. He has given a statement to the press in which he says he will bring Ford back to Marysville, the county seat where the original frame-up occurred, to face a charge alleging the murder of Deputy Sheriff Thomas Reardon who was killed in the same melee as the elder Manville along with two strikers.

Ford was associated with Herman Suhr in the leadership of the strike. Both were sentenced to life imprisonment. Suhr is still in San Quentin. Both have made frequent applications for parole and were methodically turned down until several days ago when the parole board released Ford.

Son Seeks Revenge.

District Attorney Ray Manwell had several times asked the parole board to inform him when either of the two prisoners were realeased. The board, however, failed to inform him of the parole of Ford. Manwell learned about it in the press and immediately prepared to take Ford in custody. It is obviously a pure case of revenge coupled with the dissatisfaction among employers' circles generally and among the hop-ranch owners and lumber camp barons particularly with the release of Ford which they had vigilantly opposed for years.

That Ford and Suhr were in no way responsible for the riot that resulted in the deaths at Wheatland is attested to by a petition signed by the twelve jurors who convicted them and which was presented to the parole board on behalf of Herman Suhr last December. The petition, in brief stated: That Suhr (and therefore Ford) did not commit the actual killing, that he did not countenance violence and that public feeling was much inflamed.

Framed-up Trial.

The strike led by Ford and Suhr was called against the Durst hop ranch in Yuba County in August, 1913. The Durst family had gained a bad reputation and were infamous for their ill-treatment of the hop-pickers. On a Sunday in August a mass meeting was called in Yuba. A sheriff's posse charged the meeting and shots were exchanged by both sides. The charge was led by District Attorney Manwell and when the smoke cleared, he, Deputy Reardon and two strikers lay dead. The trial of Ford and Suhr followed and stands as one of the most dastardly frame-ups in the annals of the workers' struggles.

I. L. D. Busy.

Austin Lewis, famous western labor lawyer who was associated with the defense in the Ford and Suhr trial is in receipt of a wire from International Labor Defense in Chicago which asks the details of the new developments and offers to assist in defending Ford against the vengeful trial and re-sentence that faces him.

QUALIFIED WORKERS IN BUILDING TRADES ARE NEEDED IN U. S. S. R.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 18. — In 1922 a group of building trade workers went to Soviet Russia to build houses for the workers. This group is asking for more people and machinery in order to be better able to enlarge their activities in the building industry.

A group of Detroit sympathizers of the Soviet Republics have organized themselves under the Cooperative Construction Co. of the United Socialist Soviet Republics and they ask any comrade or sympathizer interested in the reconstruction of the U. S. S. R. to join the organization.

Only qualified workers in the building trade will be accepted, such as, carpenters, bricklayers, etcf; each member paying $5.00 initiation fee and $1,000.00 membership fee for the purchase of machinery for their trade.

Information can be obtained from the secretary of the organization, Aaron M. Katz, 1610 Collingwood Ave. and at Carpenters Hall, Alger & Oakland on Thursdays at 7:30 p. m., where the executive committee of this organization meets

Let U. S. Labor Take the Lead in Fighting the Bosses in the Pacific

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, L. M. Karakhan, the Soviet ambassador to China, gets ready to leave Moscow for Pekin, the metropolis of North China, where he has ably and long represented the workers and peasants of the Union of Soviet Republics.

That the imperialist powers are anxious that Karakhan should not return to China is clearly seen in the views expressed by their press. Reports have been assiduously spread that Karakhan would take Chicherin's place as Soviet commissar of foreign affairs, upon the latter's retirement. Others that Karakhan would be assigned to some European post. But none of these rumors, like practically all those originating in the imperialist capitals, has had any basis in fact.

Karakhan returns to China telling the international bandit powers that the Chinese customs conference, to meet in Pekin, Oct. 26, hangs like a two-edged sword over their heads, so that when it falls, it will cut no matter which side is held downwards.

Since the foreign invaders must have more money out of China, the customs conference must necessarily raise the tariffs. This might appease some classes in China, if the Chinese government got the increase. But the additional loot will be carefully put into the pockets of the same robber nations that sent their uniformed murderers into the streets of Shanghai several months ago to shoot down the workers and students protesting against the intolerable industrial conditions prevailing in the foreign-owned textile industry.

Increased tariffs to pay interest on loans that have been forced upon them, as the result of past wars of aggression, will not help soothe the ruffled temperament of the Chinese people. It should and will have just the opposite effect.

The interests of American imperialism will be represented at both the customs conference next month and the meeting of the commission to inquire into the question of extra-territorial rights of foreigners in China. In fact Secretary of State Kellogg has just suggested the place, Pekin, and the time, December 18, for the holding of the latter gathering.

This commission on extra-territorial rights should have been held three months after the adjournment of the Washington disarmament conference in 1922. But the 13 powers, either signatory to or otherwise adherent to the Washington meeting called by Harding, have made no move, and probably would not move now except that militants in China are demanding that they get out altogether. They must find some excuse to stay and enjoy the territorial rights they have forced the Chinese to accept.

• • • •

American workers, therefore, may well consider this situation, that the United States is taking the lead in the present anti-Chinese campaign as is revealed by the part that it is playing in both the customs conference and the commission on extra-territorial rights. Under cover of a fake friendship for the Chinese people, the United States will continue its commercial and financial conquest, if it can, of this great republic. It can do this more easily than other capitalist governments, since it lays claim to no territorial rights in China. But this makes it all the more dangerous as an enemy of the growing Chinese liberation movement.

• • • •

The fall and winter months ahead will see the eyes of American labor more and more turned toward the orient, as the imperialist problems of the Pacific pass in review, showing the workers of all countries bordering the earth's greatest ocean the increasing necessity of labor solidarity to combat the capitalist plunderers. The interests of America's workers are the interests of the Chinese workers; against the capitalists of both countries.

POPE PLANNING WORLD DRIVE ON SOVIET RUSSIA

Roman Opium Joint to Train Dope Peddlers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 18.—The pope is organizing a world-wide attack on Communism and on the Soviet government, according to a statement made here today by an official of the catholic men's association, which is holding a convention in this city.

Efforts are being made to bring the Russian orthodox church back into the papal fold. It broke with Rome 1,000 years ago.

The vatican had a mission in Russia carrying on propaganda against the Soviet government. When it came to the conclusion that it could not succeed, it withdrew and openly avowed its intention to assist in the overthrow of the Soviet government.

The papal spokesman at the conference charged the Soviet government with having established a "caricature church, which inculcates atheism in the minds of the people," Keeler said.

Training Stoolpigeons.

"The holy father is particularly solicitous for these people," Keeler added, "and feels that now is the time for the Roman church to take aggressive action. He has caused the erection in Rome of a seminary for the education of priests who, when the time is opportune, will go into Russia to preach reunion.

"It is quite probable that in a few years, the vatican council will reconvene, and at that time that holy father hopes to receive the Russian request for reunion," said Keeler.

Keeler urged that catholics in America fight vigorously to halt Communism.

SUPPORTERS OF DE VALERA MOB FREE STATERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HOBOKEN, N. J., Sept. 18.—With threats still rumbling in Irish republican circles to stage another demonstration against a party of visiting Free State exponents, three men and two women were arraigned in court today and convicted as alleged members of the crowd which yesterday attacked General Richard Mulcahy, former commander of the Irish Free State army.

Four of the prisoners, including two women, were released with suspended sentences for disorderly conduct. Patrick Keeman, was ordered held for the grand jury for atrocious assault and battery but released on his own recognizance.

Members of the mob carried banners with inscriptions derogatory to Mulcahy and the Free State.

During the excitement one of the pier police turned in a riot call.

FRANCE TO LOSE SYRIA BECAUSE OF MOSUL FIGHT

Imperialism Trembles at Spread of Revolt

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Sept. 18.—The Painleve government is alarmed at the delay in the settlement of the Turkish-British controversey over possession of the Mosul oil fields. The French government fears the spread of the movement against foreign imperialism and the complete loss of the mandate over Syria, where the Druse revolt is still as strong as ever.

The situation in Syria is such, it is believed, that the French will not be able to crush the Druse revolt this year, and France will eventually have to evacuate Syria because of the terrific expense of keeping the natives in subjection.

Once Syria is freed from French domination, the inhabitants of Iraq are expected to rise against the British as are the Arab and Jewish workers and peasants of Palestine.

The league of nations council reports that it has not been able to make any decision on the dispute over the control of Mosul as yet.

FIFTY STRIKING PARENTS DEMAND BETTER SCHOOLS

An indignant exclamation of "Oh" came from over 50 parents who waited on the building and grounds committee of the board of education yesterday afternoon when Ambrose B. Wight, assistant superintendent told the trustees that the children only had about six blocks to walk to the location where the portables have been removed.

The parents were there to protest against the removal of the Eugene Fields school portables to a location a great distance away and in a traffic congested district. Mrs. Charles B. Severn, chairman and Frank Hauser spoke for the parents. When they were thru John C. Christenson, architect spread out a map and advanced some lame arguments about there not being enuf space to store building material. The map showed more than ample empty space around the former site.

"They are determined to make you take it whether you like it or not," was the way J. Lewis Coath, trustee, explained it when one of the parents asked why the same method used for storing materials in the crowded loop districts was not employed there.

After lengthy discussion Miss Heffren moved that the board begin looking around for suitable location east of North Clark street and not more than three portables be placed at each site. The parents did not ask the trustees what they have been doing all the time the children were on strike.

Train Leaves Tracks

DANVILLE, Ill., Sept. 18.—Passenger train 1, westbound on the Toledo Peoria and Western railway enroute from Effner on the Indiana state line to Peoria, jumped the tracks between Watseka and Crescent City last night, and altho the entire train left the rails and ran over 400 feet on the ties, did not turn over and outside of a severe shaking up, none of the passengers were injured.

Traffic was delayed for many hours.

DEMAND BITUMINOUS STRIKE AND BEWARE OF LEWIS BETRAYAL IS CALL OF PROGRESSIVE MINERS

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

Brother miners of the anthracite, we are on strike for a few pennies increase in wages and a few minor changes in working conditions that will help us to live a little more like human beings, and which will save us the awful fate that has overtaken our brothers in the bituminous field. Our brothers in the soft coal field are unemployed and starving. They have been in a state of semi-starvation for the last three years and most of them are starving since the signing of the Jacksonville agreement that was saddled on our necks in Florida, by Lewis.

While our brothers starve, the coal operators in conjunction with the other capitalists, have moved the coal trade from the union fields to the non-union fields, in their effort to destroy our union in the central competitive field. To be more able to slash our wages and destroy our working conditions. During this process of destruction our president John L. Lewis, has quietly stood by and permitted our brother miners, with their wives and families to starve in the bituminous field without raising the slightest protest to save us or our union from destruction.

Terrible Decline in Union.

Less than two years ago 70 per cent of the soft coal was produced in the union field and only 30 per cent produced in the nonunion field. Now 70 per cent is produced in the non-union field and 30 per cent produced in the union field. At the tri-disrtict convention last June, Lewis stated that a general strike may be called to enforce the Jacksonville agreement, and the anthracite miners at the convention showed by their behavior that that must be done.

Since that time Lewis has refused to even mention it or do anything about it, but on the contrary, Phillip Murray, the vice-president of our union has stated that there is no intention to call a general strike, thereby assuring the operators that they have nothing to fear from our fake leadership, and once again notifies the American miners they can starve and die for all he is concerned.

Use this Opportunity.

Anthracite miners, the most favorable opportunity is here not only to win the anthracite strike but also to enforce the Jacksonville agreement, save our starving brothers in the soft coal and save our union. We demand that Lewis call a national strike of the miners to enforce our demands. The miners must be on their guard against the treachery of Lewis and the gang of traitors at the head of our union.

We must remember the surrender to Judge Anderson by Lewis, at a time when we had a victory within our hands. The combined capitalist forces in the United States could not lick us in that strike. The railroads were crippled, shops were closed down, while a famine existed thruout the country for coal.

Our victory was conceded by every one, it was recognized we were victorious on every hand, that nothing short of a miracle could offset that victory, when John L. Lewis stepped to the front and surrendered to the injunction of Anderson thereby doing in one day what the combined forces of capital could not do in six months—defeat the miners.

Fight For Nationalization.

Brothers, our only hope for relief from our trouble in the coal mining industry is nationalization of the mines with workers' control. Every convention of the United Mine Workers has indorsed the policy of nationalization and we now demand that our leaders fight for nationalization or resign the positions they have prostituted.

In this struggle we must solicit the active support of the workers on the railroads. An alliance must be formed between the miners and the railroaders. No coal must be moved in the anthracite that will interfere with the striking miners, or help to defeat them in this battle. All workers in America are urged to rally to the support of the coal diggers who are bearing the brunt of the attack of organized capital.

The progressive miners in the anthracite are organised to fight for the following program:

Increase of wages.

The checkoff and complete recognition of the union.

Improvement in working conditions.

Six-hour day, five-day week.

Nationalization of mines with workers' control.

A labor party of the workers and farmers.

Workers rally to the moral, financial, and active support of the anthracite miners. Their fight is the fight of all the workers.

aristocrats. Kellogg being just an animated chunk of protoplasm with only enough knowledge to enable him to amass wealth, had to become a rubber mat for the British aristocracy to wipe their feet on.

IT was no difficult task for the British ruling class to get this flunkey to cancel Saklatvala's visa. And silent Cal was a willing partner in the deal. Cal is afraid of anything that has not already appeared in the columns of the Ladies' Home Journal. But cancelling Saklatvala's passport does not mean that he will have no audience for his views no India. Already more intelligent capitalist politicians, like Senator Borah, realize that the dumbbell Kellogg has committed another blunder. His Mexican note was one. The Hungarian Karolyi was heard to better advantage because Hughes gagged him while he was in this country than if he were given freedom of expression. The truth about India will be heard here despite the slickness of the British government and the subserviency of the state department. Communists may be barred from this country, but Communism cannot.

IT looks as if Lloyd George sees in the crisis thru which Britain is passing, a brilliant opportunity to work his way back to power. The thing is by no means impossible. Lloyd George is by all means the most versatile capitalist political trickster in England. It is rumored that several members of Baldwin's tory cabinet have formed a caucus with the object of forming a coalition government with Lloyd George at the head. The names of Churchill, Birkenhead, Horne and a few others are mentioned. Those men are pure careerists and are not politically stable. Their presence in Baldwin's cabinet does not bode well for its longevity.

THE next big fight in the British labor movement will take place when the labor party conference meets at Liverpool. The Communists will not be directly represented in the conference, but as they are firmly rooted in the trade unions many of their best speakers will be at the conference representing their labor organizations. Several labor party locals have sent resolutions to the conference demanding the withdrawal of the clause in the constitution which excludes the Communists from participation in the labor party. There is a strong possibility that the resolution will carry, tho it is also possible that the leaders of the labor party may illegally deny the rank and file of the labor party a voice in determining the point.

ACCORDING to a statement made at the national conference of catholic men held in Washington, yesterday, the Roman catholic church will make a determined effort thruout the world to conquer Bolshevism by bringing the Russian orthodox church back under the Roman standard after 1,000 years of separation. It was stated that the pope is bitterly opposed to "the Soviet religious monopoly" (whatever that is), and is anxious that the Russian church be brought back into the fold. We never doubted the organ grinder's intentions and are not the least bit distressed by the sad news.

PHILLY STARTS I. L. D. WORK IN GOOD SPIRIT

Other Cities Have Successful Send-off

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 18.—A large delegation of workers mostly from permanent branches of International Labor Defense, attended Philadelphia's defense conference and launched a promising local Sunday afternoon. An executive committee of 15, representative of all sections of the workers' movement here was elected to direct the work of the new unit. Eight unions and seven Workmen's Circle branches sent delegates to the conference.

In the evening, William Weinstone spoke to an audience whose enthusiasm showed that workers' interest in Labor Defense and class war prisoners is reviving under the influence of International Labor Defense's propaganda and activity. This mass meeting, following the wholly successful conference gave International Labor Defense a send-off that will make the Philadelphia labor movement and the workers here generally participate actively in the necessary task of amnesty and labor defense.

Engdahl in Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 18.—J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, spoke to an enthusiastic Labor Defense Day demonstration at the Finnish Hall here. Several hundred persons cheered assent to Engdahl's demand for the release of the more than one hundred class war prisoners in American jails. The mass meeting was preceded by a conference of workers' delegates who assembled in Moose Hall to form a Minneapolis unit of International Labor Defense. More than twenty permanent branches of I. L. D. that had been previously formed, sent delegates as well as unions and other workers' organizations.

Jack Bradon was elected secretary of the Minneapolis local of International Labor Defense and an executive committee was set up to direct the work of bringing home to the labor movement in Minneapolis its obligation to the prisoners of labor and to defend all persecuted workers.

Defense in Capitol.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 18.—An International Labor Defense conference convened here last Sunday afternoon and set up a defense unit of workers in the nation's capitol. A number of International Labor Defense branches had already been formed and these were consolidated into a city unit. The conference laid plans for amnesty campaigns in Washington and for the raising of funds for the Zeigler miners and other urgent cases calling for the help of the workers. An executive committee was elected to supervise this work and instructed to immediately prepare for defense campaigns.

Under Gary's Nose.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Sept. 18.— In the heart of Gary's domain in the Lehigh Valley, workers' delegates from organizations in Allentown, Easton, Phillipsburg and Bethlehem assembled to start Labor Defense activity in this section—where it is so badly needed. The conference constituted itself as a permanent section of International Labor Defense, organized for intensive work and adjourned to a mass meeting in the evening at which H. M. Wicks spoke. The mass meeting was enthusiastic and listened with great attention to Wick's description of the need for the workers' defense.

CHANG CANNOT SELL CHINESE TO THE BRITISH

Treason Will Fail Says Soviet Organ

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, (By Tass)—Commenting editorially on the last shooting at Tientsin the Izvestia interprets it as an endeavor of Chang Tso-lin to prove his ability to establish order in China and create a government that would be acceptable and desirable to the great powers.

The Moscow leading organ considers, however, that Marshal Chang's plans are unrealizable. The majority of the Chinese bourgeoisie is still in favor of persevering in the anti-imperialist struggle. A bloc is quite possible between the Chinese working and peasant masses and petty bourgeoisie against Chang Tso-lin, in whom on the other hand, America has no faith, as she looks upon him as a pro-Japanese agent.

The present movement against foreign capitalism in China, the Izvestia concludes, is at the same time a struggle for creating a truly national all-Chinese government capable also of freeing the country from native warlords and, generally, militarism.

all workers fighting capitalist and imperialist oppression."

"Our government in this action allied itself with the British oppressors of India, Ireland, Egypt, China and Morocco. The action is a clear and public demonstration that our government in Washington is an instrument of the House of Morgan which is establishing the rule of imperialism over the oppressed peoples of Europe and Asia, as well as over the workers of the Philippines, Porto Rico, Hawaii and Mexico."

Czarist Allowed to Enter

"Grand Duke Cyril who wishes to thrust the workers back into the thralls of Czardom found no trouble in entering the United States, but Saklatvala who fights for the overthrow of black reaction and who symbolically sums up in his own person the union of the workers and oppressed peoples thruout the world, is excluded by our so-called democratic government."

"The white-guardist Haller, butcher of Polish labor and the enemy of Soviet Russia is welcomed by our government, but Saklatvala, the champion of British and international labor cannot enter the United States. Abramovitch could come to America in order to conduct a campaign against Soviet Russia, in behalf of international imperialism, but Saklatvala, the friend of the Russian workers' republic is barred from coming to America."

Excluded Because Workers' Champion

"Saklatvala, a Hindu by birth, has always been the champion of the exploited Indian peoples within the British parliament and within the ranks of the British working class. That is why he cannot enter America. A Communist and internationalist, he has battled valiantly for the freedom of Ireland, of Egypt and of the oppressed nationalities of the British empire and of the world. That is why he is excluded by our state department."

"A member of the British left wing, his repeated election on the ticket of British labor for the district of Battersea is a symbol of the growth of the left wing within the labor party, and its recent victory at the Trade Union Congress where the British labor movement took such gigantic steps forward in condemnation of British imperialism, Dawes plan, in advocacy of trade union unity, in defense of Soviet Russia and in their declarations of working class rule in Britain. That is why the agents of Wall Street making up our government in Washington are opposed to his coming. It is because the American government, expressing the interests of Wall Street fears that the American workers will learn what is going on in England and raise their voices together with all forward looking workers to demand the unity of labor, to condemn the persecution of foreign-born labor in the United States and the oppressed peoples in other countries to expose the rule of American and foreign capital in China, India, the Philippines, Mexico and other colonies, that the American government has barred Saklatvala."

Communist Demands

"The Workers (Communist) Party of America representing the interests of all exploited workers of America, protests the decision of Kellogg, former ambassador to Great Britain and now secretary of state of the United States. It demands the admission of Saklatvala and calls upon all workers to demand the free entrance of Saklatvala into the United States. It points out that in this action against Saklatvala are involved the liberties of free speech for all workers in this country and it calls upon them to participate in the demonstration of protest to be held on Monday evening at 5 p. m., in Union Square to demand:

(1) "The admission of Saklatvala into the United States.

(2) "To demand international trade union unity, to demand the freedom of India, China, Philippines, Haiti Porto Rico, Morocco and Syria and all oppressed peoples from the imperialist yoke.

(3) "For a labor party in the United States.

(4) "Against the immigration restrictions.

(5) "Against the new campaign of foreign-born workers.

(6) "For international working class solidarity.

"Greetings to Saklatvala, champion of exploited workers and peasants thruout the world!

"Long Live the British Communist Party!

"Long Live the Communist International!"

Shutting Out Ideas

Secretary of State Kellogg instructed U. S. officials in London, to cancel the visa granted to the British Communist M. P. Saklatvala who was preparing to come to the United States for the purpose of attending the sessions of the world inter-parliamentary congress.

The reason given by Kellogg for his action, is that Saklatvala—who by the way is a native of India—delivered a speech in Britain recently in which he vigorously denounced the empire and joyously anticipated its dissolution, asserting that such a desirable denouement would come to pass by the use of physical force on the part of Britain's slaves at home and in her colonies.

No doubt such language was not relished by the British government but the radical wing in the labor movement is strong enuf to force the government to allow a certain freedom of discussion. Saklatvala was not put in jail for his speech in Britain. But it bars him from the United States.

The British government did not dare refuse Saklatvala permission to visit the United States. It got the United States government to do the dirty work. Recently Sir William Johnson Hicks, British home secretary, suggested diplomatically that Washington would be justified in refusing Saklatvala a visa. The hint was taken.

Fascists, yellow socialists, Hungarian white guard hangmen, agents of the bloody Bulgarian Zankov, czarist refugees and bandits are cordially welcomed to the United States, but the representative of a party that stands for the emancipation of the workers of the world from capitalism is not welcome. Against Communism the robbers of the world are in agreement no matter how they quarrel among themselves. The American government can keep out Communists but it cannot prevent Communist ideas from permeating the American workers and poor farmers.

A Half Truth Is Sometimes Better Than Nothing

It is generally agreed that a half truth is the most effective kind of a lie. There are exceptions, depending a good deal on who does the lying, and the liar's motive. This is one of the exceptions: It is an excerpt from an editorial paragraph written by Dr. Norman Thomas, of the League for Industrial Democracy, for the use of all labor editors who may care to use it. The Doc is a well known socialist.

It reads: "France or the present French government has plenty of sins to answer for. But there is a nobler side to France. The socialists and even more vehemently, the Communists (tho we say it who do not love the Communists) have carried on a courageous fight against French imperialism in Morocco."

The truth of the matter is that the socialists decidely did not carry on a courageous or any other kind of a fight against the Morocco adventure. Their position was so cowardly and disgusting that even mild British socialists of the George Lansbury type cried out in protest against their treachery. The socialists could have overthrown the Painleve government on the Riffian issue if they had any desire to fight against French imperialism.

On the other hand the Communists openly called on the French soldiers to refuse to march against the Riffians. They openly sympathized with Abd-el-Krim. They denounced the imperialist adventure from the rostrum of the chamber of deputies in words that burned and stung the French ruling class. And for their fight, 200 of the leading Communists were arrested and many of them are now awaiting trial on charges of treason.

This is a little more of the truth, that the Rev. Doc. Thomas did not feel like spreading before his readers. What he gave us however was a little more than we expected. That is why we say that half of the truth is sometime better than nothing at all.

Pinchot and Lewis

Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania and President John Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America had a little chat a few days ago. They talked about the situation in the anthracite region as it affects the dispute between the miners and the operators over wages and working conditions. They also talked about "the interests of the coal industry" as befitting men who take seriously their positions as pillars of the capitalist state.

After the private conversation both celebrites made oracular public statements. This is another way of saying that their statements said nothing, but hinted much.

Pinchot said that he found Lewis a very interesting and informative fellow. Lewis said: "I greatly appreciate the intense interest of Governor Pinchot in the anthracite mining situation as exemplified in our very interesting conversation today. The mine workers and the public should recall the great service rendered by the governor in a similar controversy two years ago."

What's this? Is it possible that Mr. Lewis is preparing the way for an arbitration proposal? At the beginning of the strike Lewis declared that the miners had all they wanted of arbitration, that they got their fingers burned once and at least knew enuf to keep at a safe distance from the fire. Evidently Lewis is ready to trust the fate of the miners' case to the tender mercies of a capitalist politician. The miners should be on their guard.

It was rumored that a Chicago bootlegger, jailed in Waukegan, was a popular figure on the streets while he was supposed to be in durance vile. The bootlegger liked the publicity and offered to give ten thousand dollars to his favorite charity for a little more of the real stuff. He must be a "go-getter."

The Spanish woman who increased the population by one at the age of sixty-eight, was unlucky that she did not operate in the middle ages. She could easily have organized a new religion on the strength of her accomplishment.

Silas H. Strawn has left for China to represent the American government in various matters affecting the interests of Wall Street in that country. The name suggests what a drowning man grasps at.

The Standrad Oil company lost a million dollars thru a fire in its Roumanian oil wells. The flivver drivers of Nome, Alaska, will help John D. survive the calamity.

N. Y. DEFENSE READY TO AID CLASS VICTIMS

40,000 Workers Represented in Conference

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 18.—Here in New York where there have been all sorts of defense organizations created for the purpose of defending the victims of the various drives launched against labor by the agents of capitalist class terror, many skeptics thot it an impossible task to consolidate into one organization this fundamental work. Since Sunday, however, it has become plain to all those interested in the struggle of labor against tyranny that under the banner of the International Labor Defense such an organization is actually in existence.

A check-up of the total number of workers represented by the various organizations participating in the conference of last Sunday reveals the fact that more than 40,000 workers were involved in the meeting. This is a very conservative estimate.

A Committee of Action.

The personnel of the local executive committee and the organizations they represent leaves no doubt in the minds of those informed on defense activities in the past, since the dark days of the beginning of the world war, that those workers who fall into the clutches of the legalized thugs of the ruling class, and those now suffering in prison, and the families dependent upon these workers will have an effective organisation behind them in their struggle.

Prominent among the members of the executive committee are two women who have for years been in the forefront of the defense work in this city—Rose Baron and Mrs. Kate Gitlow. Representing the I. W. W. is Richard ("Dick") Brazier, himself one of the victims of capitalism during the war hysteria. Others are Lena Greenberg of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, L. J. Shader of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union; L. Noffbauer of the Architectural Iron Workers' Union; W. Feinstein of the Window Cleaners' Union; K. Fabricant of the United Council of Working Class Women; J. Kossov of the International Labor Defense Branch No. 3; R. Moore of the Elevator Operators' Union; M. Spavik, for Workers' Union No. 10; A. Waxler of the Hungarian Sick Benefit Association; A. Levitz of International Workers' Defense Branch No. 2; S. Reisel of the Brotherhood of Painters; A. N. Shalupsky, Max Rishen, J. Scheinen, W. Cohen, and N. Sharnow, representing various branches of the Workmen's Circle.

This committee, representing as it does a cross section of the labor movement in New York, is already laying concrete plans for the purpose of consolidating all defense work, and of building up a powerful organization that will leave its impress upon every struggle in which workers face the ordeal of capitalist courts.

Best of Legal Defense.

To obtain the best legal defense for persecuted workers and to at all times work under the advice of experts in handling workers' cases will be one of the principal aims of the organization. Furthermore, a great deal of energy will be devoted to relief of prisoners and their dependents in order to alleviate as much as possible the horrors endured by those already in the clutches of the bestial tyrants who run the prisons of this country.

On the committees are also members who are familiar with the white terror in other countries and who will be able to aid in forwarding the work of defense and relief of those victims all over the world who have dared challenge the ruling cliques of their own lands.

Defense Ball Arranged.

Among other things, the committee has arranged for a Defense Ball that is to be held in this city on October 17. This will be one of the biggest affairs of its kind ever staged in New York and will be a means of bringing together large numbers of defense workers and their sympathizers. Special features are being arranged for this occasion and it promises to be one of the events of the coming winter in the labor movement here.

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

IRISH HOLD ELECTION USING BALLOT THREE BY FOUR FEET, 76 RUN

DUBLIN, Sept. 18—Probably the most complicated election ever held is taking place in the Irish Free State today. One and a half million voters are casting their ballots for nineteen members of the Free State senate.

Every voter who went to the polls was confronted with a ballot three feet long on which were the names of 76 candidates.

The total cost of the election is expected to be nearly $500,000.

Bury Progress at Labor Meeting

getting into office. Organized labor will never gain anything substantial until it has organized itself economically and politically independent from the capitalist class.

Opposes Capitalist Politics.

"The American working class must become conscious of its own political power, and you will be on the road to a militant labor movement, not by following the policies of 'supporting your friends and punishing your enemies' proposed by John Walker but by organizing your own independent labor party based upon the trade unions and all working class organizations," said Overgaard.

Delegate Lowrie, who peddles honey to labor unions, insisted that the LaFollette movement was a labor party and questioned the sincerity of the resolution.

Reformed Yellow Socialists.

Chas. Wills, who has collided with Overgaard in the past over political issues, and others, stated that the resolution was not introduced in good faith and it came from "sinister sources." Outside of the usual blah-blah this windbag contributed nothing to the discussion.

"Socialist" Flora, from the carpenters, as usual attacked independent political action but insisted that he is as good a socialist today as he was 20 years ago. (After all, what was he then?)

Berger and Hillquit and the rest of the S. P.'ites will insist upon the same but their rotten deeds are against them.

A Qualified Reactionary.

Delegate McKabe of Painters 180 supported the committee's report but with his sweet voice defended Overgaard's sincerity. He believed that there was no "selfish motives" behind the resolution. It sounded very nice, but the argument was rotten in general.

"Honest John" was the last speaker due to the fact that someone moved the previous question after he delivered his masterpiece of demagogy. He stated that 30 years ago he used to fight as hard for such things as Overgaard was doing now, but that he has changed his mind.

"Honest John" Contradicts Himself.

He said he respected people who fought for their ideas; but then he turned around and played on prejudices and ignorance with the usual allegations that stoolpigeons and agents of the bosses are infesting all these movements and that if we had a labor party such would be the case also. It would be destroyed by such forces.

He never proved anything, simply insinuated. The next minute he tried to show how different the situation is in Europe; that in Belgium, Switzerland and other places they don't elect presidents like "we" do here and they have no primaries like here, altho admitting our primary system is rotten.

How he draws the conclusion that, therefore, we should have no labor party the writer fails to see and so does "Honest John" probably, but he gets away with it.

Amalgamation.

The next resolution reported on was on amalgamation which was also introduced by Delegate Overgaard. Naturally, Slater and the rest of the committee also killed this, altho at the present time it is more necessary for the labor movement than ever before, in the face of the coming open shop onslaught and the weakened condition of the unions in the most important industries like railroad, metal, building, etc.

Andrew Young, delegate from Local 705, O'Fallon, Ill., defended the resolution. He stated, "that it should not be a question of who introduces it, but whether it is necessary. The rank and file wants it. If you go and ask the membership of the local unions they will have nothing against it, but will be 100 per cent in favor. I realize that this is not a convention of the rank and file, but I appeal to all who are working to defeat the committee's report."

The usual ridicule was made use of by the reactionaries and the same Red scare was used to poison the delegates to vote against their own interest and against the interest of the labor movement as a whole.

When Delegate Overgaard attempted to secure the floor on this resolution again one of the good servants of the powers that be, who regards conventions as a good vacation, again moved the previous question and so amalgamation was buried.

Steam Roller on Unity.

Resolution No. 23 asking for an endorsement of the British and Russian efforts for international trade union unity, also introduced by Overgaard, was regarded as the "worst one," and only Ed Nochels of the Chicago Federation of Labor was given a chance to pull off his usual indignation and recommend that everything that emenated from Communist or other like "suspicious" sources should be put in the waste basket.

No one was given a chance to defend the resolution not even the delegate who introduced it as again the previous question was called for and "Honest John" is a stickler for parliamentary rules especially if they are applied against his opponents.

The last resolution to be killed before the day's session ended was No. 24 introduced by U. M. W. No. 2650 of Belleville which calls for election of A. F. of L. officials by the rank and file

Rossell Running Amuck.

In the excitement the terrible "Reds" were again blamed and Delegate Rossel, Machinist 366, launched into a personal attack against Overgaard whom he claimed did not represent the machinists' union and, lo and behold, he made a great exposure, stating that Overgaard was running for editor of the Machinist Journal during the nomination of officers of the I. A. of M. and that if he would have been elected this journal would have been "turned over to the Communists."

Overgaard called attention to the fact that he had not introduced resolution No. 24 and that he was duly elected to represent his local in this convention and pointed out that Rossell did not know what he was talking about in general.

Works for Capitalist State.

This old faker has not seen a work shop for the last 15 years. He is working as a factory inspector. So he has a chance of seeing other people work. His particular desire is to go to conventions from his local and have a good time and display, when necessary, his child's brain.

After this funeral of progress was over the convention adjourned to go sight seeing upon invitation of the business men in the city. One delegate remarked, after the session, that it is a good thing that there is a Red or two in the convention or it would be "too darned dead."

ILLINOIS FAKERS VOTE AGAINST RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA; FOR BEER

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 18.—The Illinois State Federation of Labor here today voted down a resolution favoring the recognition of Soviet Russia, offered by Andrew Young of O'Fallon, Illinois, representing the O'Fallon Mine Workers' Union local.

The federation endorsed a resolution favoring light wines and beer.

The resolution favoring the adoption of the child labor amendment by the legislature was passed, this measure affording a lot of impossibly reactionary labor fakers to make a show of being "progressive" by speeches and applause, although the machine of Gov. Small, who has been pictured as "labor's friend" by these same fakers, knifed the child labor amendment in the last legislature.

Even "Honest Johnny" Walker was not so honest as to support it then, and there is no reason to believe that the fakers have had a change of heart since that time. The measure will probably be hidden hereafter with some camouflage of a few speeches and empty resolutions.

ARMY OFFICERS BARE SCANDALS IN WAR FOR JOB

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Another American army scandal broke here and caused a furore in military and navy circles.

Maj. Gen. Harry L. Rogers, former quartermaster general of the army, has preferred charges against his successor, Maj. Gen. Wm. H. Hart, before the war department. He charges that Gen. Hart, while a colonel in his department in 1922, "maliciously and disloyally" conspired to prevent his re-appointment as quartermaster general, and plotted to obtain his own (Hart's) advancement to the post.

In the conduct of this conspiracy, according to Gen. Rogers' accusations, Gen. Hart instigated a series of articles bearing on the divorce proceedings then in progress between Gen. Rogers and his wife. Gen. Hart is accused of furnishing to Mrs. Theresa Howard Dean, a feature writer, material out of which she fashioned a number of articles uncomplimentary to Gen. Rogers by comparing his divorce case to the notorious Stillman case.

FINNISH BRANCH LEADS MILITANTS IN EFFORTS TO SAVE DAILY WORKER

Four Thousand Dollars Needed Next Week to Raise Total Required to Pull Thru.

FRIDAY, the Finnish branch of the Workers Party of Chicago leads the ranks in the fight of loyal workers to save the DAILY WORKER. Two hundred dollars was donated by this branch to help the English Communist organ overcome the immediate financial crisis. Besides this, the Finnish district committee of the Workers Party of Ohio contributed $50, the Daisytown, Pa., Finnish branch, $25, and these, along with other Finnish branch remittances received, make their efforts for the DAILY WORKER amount to over half of Friday's total.

From Pacific coast cities, too, come letters containing good-sized checks, showing that distance isn't any barrier when it comes to helping the workers' press. Workers Party units out west are bending all their energy to the cause.

How workers not connected with the party are affected by the DAILY WORKER'S danger call is illustrated by the following note from San Diego, Calif.: "I am an ex-sailor in a government institution for the last five years as a patient of tuberculosis, without compensation. Since I am soon supposed to 'get my pie in the sky,' I am enclosing a dollar (of which I haven't got many) to help save the paper that teaches other poor workers how to get theirs on earth."

Despite these conspicuous examples of good work, however, only $6,006.65 has been raised to date. The instability of the DAILY WORKER carries over into next week, waiting upon the last minute efforts of those party branches who have not yet risen to the demand of the situation.

British Labor Breaks With Imperialism

By EARL R. BROWDER.

"THE British Trade Union Congress, meeting at Scarborough, adopted a resolution pledging opposition to Britist imperialism and favoring the right of self-determination for all peoples within the empire even to the point of complete separation."

When the cables brot the above news last Saturday, few people realized at first glance that this is probably the greatest political event since the Russian revolution.

British imperialism is a central pillar of the capitalist system of the world.

The British labor movement has hitherto been a central pillar of the empire.

When the MacDonald "labor government" was in office it continued all the traditional policies of imperialism, threatening, jailing and killing the Hindus, exploiting and humiliating the Chinese, bombing the natives of Iraq, etc. It was so imperialistic that every imperialist move of the Baldwin government since then has been specifically "justified" by reference to labor party precedent.

And now, almost without warning, this fundamental support of imperialism is withdrawn by the Trade Union Congress, by the overwhelming vote of 3,082,000 to 79,000.

A Repudiation of MacDonaldism.

THIS is much more than a repudiation of Ramsay MacDonald. It is much more than a rejection of J. H. Thomas, et al. It is a departure from, a distinct rupture with, MacDonaldism—the whole theory and practice of the Second International, of the "Empire Socialists," of the reformists and traitors of the proletariat of all lands.

Well may the bourgeois press scream in alarm. "'British organized labor has surrendered to Bolshevism," is the judgment of the most conservative circles in England, according to a wireless dispatch to the New York Times from London.

The British bourgeoisie is astounded. It weeps copious tears, alternating with stormy threats, while it points out that "the program laid down by the Scarborough Trade Union Congress is diametrically opposed to the official program of the British labor party."

"Moscow won the battle of Scarborough; will she win the battle of Liverpool?" queries the New York Times correspondent, calling attention to the October conference of the labor party at Liverpool.

This is the key to the current events of the next few weeks. MacDonald, fresh from his long visit with the king at Balmoral castle, is going to make a last desperate struggle for king and empire at Liverpool, with the able assistance of the entire capitalist press.

The London Morning Post charges the congress with "having bowed so slavishly to Moscow as even to allow Zinoviev to write the resolution." No doubt Zinoviev has written many things of that nature, but the formula against which the Morning Post rages—"self-determination even to the point of separation,"—is that of Vladimir Ilyitch Lenin. The British trades unions, in repudiating MacDonaldism, are adopting Leninism.

The Revolutionary Forces.

WHAT has brot about this tremendous change? Surely not just the able propaganda of Harry Pollitt, Tom Mann, and the Minority Movement, effective as that has been. The explanation is that the British empire is no longer able to bribe and corrupt the workers by giving sections of them a share in the booty. Instead, the labor movement has witnessed constantly growing unemployment and misery, wage-cuts and union-smashing campaigns—all directly traceable to the effects of imperialism.

A. B. Swales, chairman of the Trade Union Congress, expressed this in an article written before the congress, in Trade Union Unity (September issue). He said:

"The British empire, by its very nature, makes it possible for the employers to divide up the workers and other toilers such as the small peasantry, into different camps. Hence, up till now, it has been an easy game to the employers to use one section of the workers, particularly the dependencies in crown colonies, against the workers of the mother country, and vice versa, so that on the one hand it was the business of the colonial slaves to work below any possible standard, and on the other hand it was the business of the workers in uniform to fight all the enslaved nations struggling for their freedom.

"The main business of this conference should be to put an end to this, and to bring together the workers and the oppressed against their common oppressors.

"It is a great tragedy that the enslaved nations which are fighting for their freedom look upon the British empire as a whole, and consider all of us are responsible for their sufferings. But we must clear ourselves of this responsibility. This conference must declare openly and clearly that the working classes of our country are in no way responsible for the crimes committed by our ruling class."

The economic forces undermining the empire are dealt with by A. A. Purcell, who is the chairman of the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam). Here are a few sentences from his article, "Against Imperialism—Trade Union Unity."

"What actually has the empire meant and what does it mean to the workers? What does all the wealth of the Indies mean to the slum-dwelling workers of the East End?

"Take Lancashire . . . For generations the most hideous wage-slavery has existed there . . . Those Lancashire workers have piled up millions for the mill owners. What for? So that the selfsame owners can establish mills in Bombay, Calcutta, and Cawnpore, in Shanghai, in Egypt, to carry on the same process of exploitation with the workers in those places, denying by that very act the workers of Lancashire the means of obtaining a livelihood.

"Right well and truly has it been said that the British empire is one huge slave plantation of the British ruling class."

And then listen to John Bromley, M. P., general secretary of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen:

"The British empire, which may by its expansion in the past have made work for the workers of this country, is now turning in on itself, feeding on its own center, by virtue of the product of sweated goods made by slave labor, underselling the products of the British worker, and throwing him into unemployment by the utilization of the very capital which he created."

The Fascist Peril.

AND what is the reaction of the bourgeosie to these developments? It is in the direction of white terror and fascism.

In the London Daily Herald of Sept. 2, in the column next to the announcement that the unemployed registered for August was 1,343,700 or an increase of 194,622 over a year ago, there is an exposure of a secret army order, creating a new police force to be controlled by the army.

An announcement was issued the same week that the National Citizens Union is enrolling "volunteers" to "maintain national services in emergency."

The functions of the newly-created war department constabulary are exposed in one of its regulations, which reads:

"No member of the war department constabulary may also be or remain a member of any trade or similar union, association, or society, other than any association formed within the constabulary in accordance with rules approved by the competent authority."

Then, in addition to many organizations on the lines of the Citizens' Union and supplementary armed forces of the state, the fascist movement is growing at a great pace. The labor movement is slowly awakening to its menace. Thus is to be found in the Labor Weekly of Lansbury, a pronounced pacifist, the following letter:

"Sir, As one in daily touch with 'business men;' I am compelled to spend my working hours in an atmosphere of class hatred, and the reality of the danger of fascism is constantly being brot home to me. There are two mistakes which many socialists make in regard to this movement: that it will not have the support of respectable, law-abiding members of the commercial classes, and that it is aimed only at the Communists. These ideas are soothing to the 'constitutional' socialists, but they have no foundation in reality. My business friends and acquaintances are heart and soul with the fascisti, and will support them in the most drastic and violent action against the 'Reds.' They will stop at nothing: no scruples of justice, humanity or fair play assail them when their class consciousness is roused. Any treatment of a 'revolutionist' is justifiable; he is beyond the pale. And, unfortunately for our labor 'moderates,' they class as revolutionary any genuine leader of the working class or any genuine action in defense of that class. The tragedy is that many of these business men are lovable and upright personalities in private life, charitable and generous, according to their lights, and soft-hearted enuf to the sufferings of the poor when a concrete individual case comes to their notice.

"The plain lesson of my experiences is that we shall have to reckon with a really serious fascist movement some day—probably at the next big strike, if not before. I would therefore plead earnestly with all who have the labor cause at heart that they prepare to meet this danger while they have still time. Force must be met by force. Fascism is purely and simply a military organization, and is not amenable to argument. It can only be successfully countered by a similar organization on the other side. With luck, we shall have nine months to perfect our arrangements, so there is no time to be lost. The thing must be properly organized on a national basis, and I would propose that the T. U. C. General Council take up immediately the creation of a labor defense corps, centrally controlled with local headquarters under each trades council. The fascist organization is a splendid example for them to follow as regards details. The immediate objects of our defense corps would be:

"(1) Maintaining order at all working class public meetings.

"(2) Providing a permanent bodyguard for all labor leaders threatened by the attentions of the B. F.'s.

"(3) Protecting strike pickets from fascist violence.

"I trust that other readers will be able to make valuable suggestions to supplement and improve this scheme."

The Big Show-Down.

TO what point are all these forces leading in Great Britain?

Without attempting a profound analysis at this moment, it is possible to draw a few conclusions:

1. The British proletariat has broken loose from the moorings of "class collaboration" and nothing, not even MacDonald & Co, can restore its former conservatism.

2. It is definitely absorbing and expressing as its own the fundamentals of Leninism.

3. The British bourgeoisie is preparing for a revolutionary upheaval and is mobilizing armed forces to repress it, while at the same time trying to pacify the enraged workers.

4. The economic position of the empire makes it almost impossible that "concessions" can be made before next May 1st, which will avoid a decisive struggle.

5. It is quite probable that the big show-down will begin next May Day (appropriate time!) when the present agreement with the miners will expire.

YOUNG MINERS! FIGHT IN FRONT RANKS AGAINST THE ANTHRACITE OPERATORS!
YOUNG WORKERS! SUPPORT THE ANTHRACITE MINERS IN THEIR STRIKE!

MANIFESTO OF THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

IN Pennsylvania 150,000 anthracite miners are on strike against the attempts of the coal barons to force lower wages and worse working conditions upon them. Altho profits for the anthracite operators have been greater than ever before during the past ten years, conditions for the miners have been growing continuously worse. Despite the many great struggles carried on by the United Mine Workers, wages have always lagged behind the rising cost of living during this period.

Already living under such conditions, the men who do the work in the anthracite cannot accept any wage cuts and at the British Imperialism and the Soviet Union

By E. H. BROWN.

THE 1914-1918 European war, and political consequences thereof, left three great contending forces for world supremacy. First, there was Great Britain, a tremendous factor yet, despite a gradual weakening since pre-war days. Secondly, the U. S. A., the greatest imperialist rival of Britain and which, after the war, is perhaps the most powerful of all imperialist powers. And last but not least, and deeply feared by both America and Britain, is the U. S. S. R.

There are two great struggles taking place before our eyes—the fight for world supremacy between Great Britain and America and the fight for world supremacy between these countries and the Soviet Union. It is of the struggle between Britain and the Soviet Union I wish to treat in this article.

GREAT BRITAIN is the center of a world empire—a center of vast colonial exploitation. British imperialism is the forerunner of all other imperialisms. Whilst half the present capitalist world was still sleeping in its feudal bed, British capitalism was rapidly at work annexing for its own sole use vast areas containing almost unlimited sources of raw materials and cheap labor power. At the outbreak of the world war in 1914, she had largely developed these areas, and a most formidable world imperialist force was the result.

The Soviet Union is also a world center. Not for colonial exploitation and oppression, but for those forces which fight against world imperialism. It is also a growing factor in the world economic battle. In both these activities economic and political it is brot into conflict with British imperialism. We have not far to seek to find expression of this conflict and which, on examination reveals that it is a life and death struggle.

TAKE first of all the period immediately after the Russian revolution—the intervention period. During the days when the revolution was menaced by successive military counter-revolutionary attacks, we find that the British government made direct attacks and supported Kolchak, Denkin and Wrangel to the extent of 100 million pounds of ready money. In addition all the surplus stores from the European battle-front was handed over to these brigands.. That was deemed to be a fair price to keep the keys of the Kyber Pass out of the hands of a Communist government. Quite early the British bourgeoisie anticipated what would be the result if the peasant masses near the northern frontier of India, saw the contrast between Soviet policy to the peasants and the policy of British imperialism.

Then later we see the conflict expressing itself in the refusal of the British bourgeoisie to agree to the opening of normal trade relations with Russia.

Baldwin, Chamberlain Take a Hand.

EVER since the Baldwin administration in Britain assumed excutive power the keynote of its foreign policy has been to create a bloc of western and central European states against the U. S. S. R.

The reason for this is not far to seek. British imperialism, weakened by the tremendous material loss during the European war; faced with more serious competition and loss of markets in all parts of the world; burdened by an over capitalized and worn-out industrial system at home; is reeling under an economic crisis never before equalled in its intensity and fraught with such grave dangers of a complete break-up of the whole system.

In order to wage successful economic warfare against its formidable world competitors, and to save its privileges and profits at the same time, the British capitalist class must subject the masses of workers and peasants, both at home and in the colonies, to an ever greater measure of exploitation. These workers and peasants reply with increasing organization and vigor in fighting against this exploitation. The fight takes many forms: strikes, boycotts, national independence campaigns, and even open armed struggle.

In these fights the toiling masses of the British empire find common ground with the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia. The British bourgeoisie know this quite well and clearly realize that the ever advancing economic and political prestige of the U. S. S. R. is a direct menace to its own future.

THEREFORE, the recent campaign against the U. S. S. R. was launched. The initial steps were taken at the moment when MacDonald—under pressure from the masses—was negotiating a trade treaty with the Soviet Union. His weak minority government, which had been used to ratify the Dawes plan was swept from office and prevented from obtaining a majority at the polls by the issue of the infamous forged letter purporting to come from Zinoviev. With this the British yellow press received its cue. It followed the above-mentioned forged letter stunt with fearful slanders against Russia at the time of the Esthonian rising. Then came a greater volume of lies and forgeries following the lamentable Sofia explosion. Until right up to the present moment, this press attack has continued. For sheer unmitigated lying it has far surpassed, even the anti-German press campaign of 1914-1918—a campaign dictated then by the exigencies of the war period. The right wing labor and trade union press has ably assisted its bourgeois colleagues.

But underneath this open press hostility there has been governmental action. Refusal to appoint an ambassador to Moscow, curtailment of visas to trade representatives, refusal to extend the trade facilities act to Russia, the financial blockade; all these were preparatory steps to the complete break of diplomatic relations at the opportune moment.

The Campaign Widespread and Serious.

AND so the offensive continued with ever more ominous actions. Intrigues for an anti-Soviet bloc—pouring of munitions into Esthonia—British fleet in the Baltic, etc., all show the serious end which the British cabinet had in mind.

Then it next became necesary to test the effect of all these efforts upon the other western European capitalist states and also to ascertain what would be the effect of a break of diplomatic relations with Russia, upon the "leaders" of the British workers and upon the British working class generally.

China afforded a pretext. Once again it was discovered that "Bolshevik plots" were at the root of the trouble in China. Britain was represented as a civilizing force with great interests in China all of which was threatened by the influence of Zinoviev. A Soviet trade representative in China was arrested to give "local color" to the story. Chicherin (the Soviet minister for foreign affairs) then wrote drawing attention to the seriousness of the step contemplated by the British government and the Baldwin cabinet met to consider the next and final move.

IN the British conservative government—the executive officers of British imperialist policy—one can distinctly detect two tendencies. The first is the arrogant sword rattling tendency of the Curzon school which is led by Birkenhead. The second is the more subtle and realistic school which is under the domination of Baldwin and Chamberlain.

Baldwin and Chamberlain would like to declare war on Russia but they are restrained by a knowledge of the internal situation at home.

Not being strong enuf themselves to wage this warfare they pursue a policy of trying to persuade other countries to undertake the task. This is in line with traditional British foreign policy.

The Birkenhead group of die-hards—the future fascist leaders—saw their opportuntiy. They tried hard to drive the British government to a complete diplomatic rupture with the U. S. S. R. It suited the policy of the Baldwin-Chamberlain group to give them plenty of rope. Indeed, they went so far as to declare at one time that Birkenhead was voicing the policy of the British government.

If that is so, why was the policy of Birkenhead not carried to its logical conclusion? Especially when MacDonald, Thomas, Clynes and Co., had shown they would support this policy. First, because the Soviet government showed no weakness. It quite clearly knew its own strength and the strength (or weakness) of its opponents, and second, because the British workers once again made it quite clear that they would resolutely resist any intervention against the Soviets. Again, the rest of the European states showed openly that they were not prepared to accept suicide to further the interests of British imperialism.

This explains the "climb down" of Chamberlain. The British imperialists once again—as in Chinese affairs recently—récognized its impotency and weakness.

BUT sufficient has been written to convince readers that whilst the attempt has failed this time no effort will be spared to create the necessary opportunity for striking a blow at Russia. It seems certain that the British imperialists are out for open war if at all possible.

Up to now the British workers have consistently demonstrated their friendliness to the Soviet Union. But in the future the "demonstrative friendliness" of the past will not be enough.

We shall have to show to the British imperialists that we learned the lesson of the Russian revolution. In 1917 the workers and peasants changed an imperialist war into a victorious social upheaval. Our watchword from now on must be: "When British imperialism declares war on the Soviet Union it signs its own death warrant and the British and colonial workers must play the part of the hangmen."

Morocco, the Key to the Mediterranean

The war in Morocco has entered on its ciritical stage. The French government of the left bloc is exerting all its forces in order to avoid a military collapse and to bring to an end the "colonial expedition" against the Riff people; an "expedition" which, in an unexpected manner, has become converted into a "great war," as the president of the French Republic, Painleve, was compelled to admit after his return from his visit to the Moroccan front.

In the course of the month of July the French government resorted to a series of exceptional measures for the purpose of further carrying on the war. On the 10th of July the French chamber of deputies, after passionate debates, granted by 411 votes against 29 with 150 abstentions, 183 million francs for war operations. On July the 12th, after long negotiations in Madrid, an undesstanding was arrived at with regard to Franco-Spanish co-operation in Morocco and as to joint action against the Riff people. At the same time, there is taking place a change of command in the French army in Morocco, according to which Marshall Liauton, the former commander-in-chief, only retains the general politcial leadership, while Nolin, the representative of the French war office, is entrusted with the military leadership. In addition to this, Marshall Petain, this hero of the French national bloc, who distinguished himself during the imperialist war by his defense of Verdun, has been sent to Morocco in the capacity of an extraordinary commission for war, "in order to organize victory." During the last few days great reinforcements, the strength of which is being kept secret by the French military staff, have been dispatched to Morocco. A plan of simultaneous action against the Riff troops from the Spanish and French zones has been discussed.

In order to prepare the ground for this action, rumors have been put in circulation according to which France and Spain have made peace offers which, it is alleged, have been rejected by Abd-el-Krim. The patriotism of the French soldiers is being stirred up by their being told that the Riff people are relying upon German and Bolshevik support. The French forces are going over to the offensive and reckon upon ending operations before the autumn rains set in, which will render all military action impossible.

In spite of the reasoning tone of the government communications, the French newspapers admit those great difficulties which the French military forces will have to overcome in view of the fierce resistance of the Riff troops and the revolts of the Kabyl tribes in the rear of the French. The attitude of those powers which, while at present remaining neutral, are interested in the war, is causing even greater uneasiness in the French press. England, which is also supported by Italy, is raising the question of the necessity of a new international conference to solve the fate of Morrocco, basing its attitude on the fact that the Moroccan question has acquired international importance in the post-war period.

The successful struggle of the Riff troops for independence has entirely changed the relations of forces in the northwestern corner of Africa, where the interests of those powers who are fighting for hegemony in the Mediterranean cross each other. France viewed with pleasure the gradual ousting of Spain from the northern zone during the last four years, and reckoned that it would be able to come forward as claimant to the "Spanish heritage." In this, French diplomacy appeals to Point 4 of the Anglo-French secret treaty of 1904 regarding Egypt and Morocco, which provides that in the event of Spain not fulfilling the obligaitons laid upon it in the "Spanish zone" in Morocco, the original Anglo-French agreement over Morrocco comes into force. This agreement is interpreted by the French in the sense that if Spain loses control over the zone allotted to it, or should the Spanish troops evacuate this zone, the control of this zone passes automatically to France, which can then unite the whole of Morocco under its rule.

The French plans diametrically oppose the interests of England, as the northern coast of Morocco owing to its geographical position is of great importance in the world scheme of the defense of the British empire. England's position as a great power in the Mediterranean, apart from the naval bases at Malta and Cyprus, is based in the first place upon the control of the Suez Canal and the Straits of Gibraltar. The latest "howitzers" are easily able to bombard Gibraltar from the Spanish coast, and the question of its defense is beginning to encounter great difficulties. The commission consisting of English war specialists recently sent to Gibralter has reported that the prospects of organizing the air defenses of Gibraltar are likewise exceedingly poor, as there exist no suitable landing places.

The British admiralty has therefore of late observed with uneasiness that the English strategical positions in the most vital parts of the Mediterranean have been growing weak. Therefore England cannot reconcile itself to the idea that the French flag is perhaps to be hoisted on the southern shore of the Straits of Gibraltar, which for England would mean a far greater danger than the flag of weak Spain. The military interests of England are compelling it to active intervention in the Moroccan question for the purpose of consolidating the English influence on the southern coast, on the coast district of the Spanish Moroccan zone. The military collapse of Spain suited English interests, which explains the somewhat benevolent attitude of the English government towards the Riff people.

Tammany's Triumph in New York

By H. M. WICKS

THE outcome of the primary elections of September 15 establishes the undisputed control of Tammany Hall over the democratic party of New York. If one views the conflict as one between personalities it means that the ignorant shyster, Hylan, has been defeated by the corporation hireling State Senator James J. Walker, whose record reeks with infamy as lawyer for dispensers of rotten meat—the packing house trust. Mentally Walker and Hylan are equals; both utterly devoid of brains or ability, hence both ideal figurheads for political machines. From another point of view the outcome appears as the triumph of the political machine that is known thruout the world and the synonym of the most loathsome political venality known to mankind. And the daily press and those who read its editorials view the outcome as the personal triumph of Governor Al. Smith and the humiliating defeat of William Randolph Hearst who is Hylan's sponsor.

Unquestionably it is Tammany's victory. A typical triumph, wrought thru the mobilization of its wardheelers, criminal hangers-on, pickpockets, dope peddlers, proprietors of houses of assignation, pimps, priests, gangters, bootleggers, bishops, labor fakers, public and private whores—with Governor Al. Smith as spokesman for them all.

But behind this menagerie assembled at the Fourteenth street Wigwam stands the towering shadow of the House of Morgan.

The real contest was between the petty bourgeois Hearst-Hylan combination within the democratic party and the banking combine. The mayor of New York and his sponsor, Hearst, imagined they could challenge the House of oMrgan—or bluff Tammany into acceptance of Hylan for another term. Once before a representative of the petty bourgeoisie assailed Tammany after the Wigwam became the private property of Morgan. That person, now almost forgotten, was Sulzer, governor of the state, who was impeached in 1913 by a Tammany controlled state senate and legislature.

Issues Forgotten

JUST as Sulzer tried to wage a struggle against Tammany on the clean government plea. Hylan raised the issue of the 5-cent fare on the transportation lines of New York. But Tammany never fights on issues. It did not raise any issues when it boosted Hylan into the mayor's quarters at city hall, and it required none to eliminate him. The mayor of New York has never been considered a legitimate off-spring of Tammany, but he was the best timber available at the time.

Hylan is the bastardized offspring of William Randolph Hearst and Tammany. In 1917 the Wigwam was confronted the task of defeating a republicant administration that was then in office. John Purroy Mitchell was republican mayor, but was defeated in the primaries by one Bennett. It is generally conceded that the defeat of Mitchell at the republican primaries was engineered by Tammany who feared a conflict with Mitchell. Tammany had no outstanding candidate, but Hearst had long been grooming Hylan. At a strategic moment Hearst yanked Hylan out of obscurity and impose him upon Tammany as the price of a united party. The fact that Hylan was an intellectual zero did not dismay Tammany and Hearst. Expert publicity men write his speeches and Hylan intoned them before audiences. The battery of Hearst papers proclaimed the candidate a man of unsurpassed ability and exemplary virtue. The result was an astounding victory.

After the victory Hylan remained Hearst's man, and only secondarily and as a matter of expediency the agent of Tammany.

Within the democratic party Hearst is the defender of the thoroly rotten petty bourgeoisie of the Eastern section of the United States—small fry industrialists, department store owners, petty shopkeepers and a strata of professionals. Paradoxical as it may seem, Hearst, who is a multimillionaire with vast holdings in Mexico in addition to his immense newspaper properties, is unquestionably the spokesman for and political leader of this section of the democratic party in the East. On the other hand Tammany Hall is the political machince thru which the House of Morgan has controlled the democratic party since 1910. The deep-going conflict of interests between the two economic groups in the democratic party was bound to express itself in open warfare sooner or later. In 1921 when Hylan ran for reelection the Wigwam was forced reluctantly to endorse him because of the political situation in the state of New York, which was at that time controlled by the republican party. Again the hall stood for the Hearst-Hylan combination for the sake of party unity.

Smith and Hylan in the Arena

THE successful campaign of 1922 which elected Al. Smith as governos and his re-election in 1924 against the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt Jr. on the republican ticket, made Tammany Hall arrogant. Feeling itself secure it determined to eliminate Hearst and Hylan, inasmuch as this combination had embarassed the Wall Street holdegs of stock in the rapid transit system. Finance capital, in control of Tammany Hall, felt that it was not receiving sufficient political advantages to enable it to get the full benefit of its investments in public utilities in the city of New York. In addition to the purely local situation, the continuation of the Hearst-Hylan control of the city had an unhealthy effect upon the national welfare of the party, as was clearly revealed during the Madison Square convention of the democratic party last year when Hearst fought against the nomination for president of the United States, of the attorney for the House of Morgan John W. Davis.

After openly breaking with Hylan and opposing his candidacy with that of State Senator James J. Walker, Tammany discovered that the Hearst-Hylan group was capable of waging a fierce struggle to maintain power. Seven years of control had resulted in creating a powerful machine loyal to Hylan. Since Walker was unknown it became necessary for Tammany to call into the fray Governor Al. Smith, who entered the arena like a gladiator, full armoured with the language of the gutter which he handles with admirable abandon. His opening salute, challenging Hylan to the fray was: "Watch my stuff. I'll throw Mayor Hylan into the ashcan so quickly he won't know what struck him."

Refined Political Discussion

WITH that elegance of diction so peculiar to him, Al. Smith, proceded to his task. His first javelin carried the intimation that Mayor Hylan was in sympathy with, if not actually a member of, the ku klux klan. That was too much for Hylan, so Hearst, from his California ranch, fired a broadside against Smith. The governor came back with a long tirade wherein he tried, in his own refined way, to convey the idea that he really hadn't said the Mayor was a kluxer, but that he knows that Hylan attended a conference with kluxers during the famous nominating convention of the democratic party last year. Mention of that convention was all that Hearst desired. It gave him the opportunity he had long awaited to assail the dominant wing of the democratic party which has of late treated its petty bourgeois wing in the East with almost the same contempt that it accorded the late Bryan who led the petty bourgeois elements in the Middle West.

In the opening sentence of his reply Hearst paid his respects to Smith:

"The distinguished governor of the great state of New York has taken three days laboriously to prepare a vulgar tirade that any resident of Billingsgate or any occupant of the alcoholic ward at Bellevue could have written in fifteen minutes in quite the same style, but with more evidence of education and intelligence. The Wall Street friends of Governor Smith have enabled him to remove his domicile and his refined person from the neighborhood of the Bowery but he still reverts in the manner of thot and expresion to the familiar localities of Five Points and Hell's Kitchen, if this may be said without undue offense to these localities."

After this adequate, concise and yet comprehensive description of the Tammanyite governor of New York, Mr. Hearst then cites his petty bourgeois list of grievances against the late national convention of the democratic party. First he asserts that Smith and McAdoo, after the long struggle at the national convention, met at a room in the Ritz Hotel, which Hearst intimates was paid for by the House of Morgan, and there agreed upon John W. Davis as the presidential candidate. Secondly he raises the question of Governor Smith having been put into the national convention in order to prevent the nomination of a representative of the liberal (petty bourgeois) wing of the party and eventually throw the nomination to Morgan's lackey.

With the customary hypocricy of the intellectual leaders of the middle class Hearst concludes his indictment of Smith by asserting that he cannot support such a party "while a brazen instrument of the traction interests sits in the governor's chair and claims to be the democratic leader of the state."

Hearst refrained, of course, from comparing the mental capacity of Hylan with that of Smith. The stories of the lives of these two political pawns are not dissimilar—the difference is that one of them is the pliant tool of the House of Morgan, while the other serves Hearst, the political spokesman in the East of the mercenary middle class that is always for sale to the highest bidder.

Smith closed the debate by crawling even lower in the gutter in order to appeal to his supporters, most of whom are also dominated by the ultramontane machine directed by the agents of the Pope of Rome, and whose training enables them to appreciate the governor's style of political argument. Speaking of Hylan's recent visit to Hearst's California ranch, the governor said: "While he (Hearst) and the mayor (Hylan) were out brushing flies off the cows grazing on the thousand hills, they were both engaged in shipping the bull back to New York."

Smith Accepts Bribes

THO not a candidate for office in this election, the role that Tammany imposed upon Governor Smith has revealed him as one of the lowest types of political hireling. Most politicians receive their pay from the corporations they serve in indirect ways, but the governor of New York receives some of his direct. He maintains an extravagant suite at the Biltmore Hotel, but does not pay one penny rent. The hotel is owned by the Vanderbilt family, the New York Central railroad and Armour & Co. of the meat trust.

Under the domination of Hearst, Mayor Hylan, during his seven years in office, has succeeded in building up a rival machine to Tammany. He has his own political favorities in all the various boroughs who fatten at the trough of political spoils. The regular Tammanyites had been left out in the cold and had been enduring lean years since the second inaugural of Hylan. Hence the fight in the various buroughs was a veritible guerilla warfare between the ward-heeling gangsters in both groups.

Labor Fakirs In Scramble

MOST of the reactionary labor leaders in the city and state are part and parcel of the Tammany machine. Thru this political machine the officialdom of labor allies itself directly with the House of Morgan. These officials of labor are tolerated in the ranks not because of the votes they can deliver. It is generally known that they can deliver nothing in the form of voting cattle. But since they exert influence in the labor unions they can prevent the organization of the public utility employees and other slaves in industries where Morgan has huge investments. Being politically allied with the direct agents of the Interborough and B. M. T. stockholders there is no possibility of the New York City labor officialdom taking drastic steps to injure the profits of these concerns by aiding in creating labor unions.

Among the galaxy of labor lieutenants who supported Tammany's figurehead—Jimmy Walker—were James P. Holland, president of the New York State Federation of Labor and Peter J. Brady, that garrullus blaterskite who heads the Federation Bank. Lined up with them was the whole crew of the most unspeakable traitors to the working class in control of the labor movement of the city who will sink to any depth for pay.

Communists Only Defend Workers Interests

AGAINST the powerful machinery of Tammany Hall there is but one force that really defends the political interests of the vast masses of workers in the city and that is the Workers (Communist) Party and its candidate for mayor, Benjamin Gitlow. That does not mean that there are no other candidates in the field. There is the republican party, with the millionaire scab herder, Frank D. Waterman, manufacturer of fountain pens that bear his name. Possibly Hylan, at the direction of Hearst, may launch a third ticket. Then there is the moribund socialist party, with the pulpit-pounder, the Rev. Norman Thomas, talking altruism to the workers and making vague suggestions about subway management and building in New York.

But the Communists alone come out openly in defense of the elementary interests of the wage workers. It is only the Communists who propose to use the city government as a bludgeon against the rapacity of the stockholders of public utilities. It is only the Communists who will stifle the infamous conspiracy between the labor leaders and Tammany Hall to prevent the organization of the thousands of Interborough slaves in the subways, elevated and on the surface lines of Greater New York.

Furthermore the Communists utilize this campaign to expose to the working class of this city the fact that the socialists and labor leaders will not enter into a united political struggle for the elementary demands of the workers by endorsing a united labor ticket against both old parties and their henchmen.

With the hand-picked Tammanyite and defender of the putrid meat trust on the democratic ticket, with Waterman on the republican ticket, and the insipid Thomas on the socialist ticket, the Communist have an opportunity to wage a brilliant struggle against the combination and to demonstrate to the intelligent strata of workers the fact that only a revolutionary party of labor can defend their interests.

A celebration in memory of the 20th anniversary of the Russian revolution of 1905 is being planned in Chicago by old rebels of the 1905 revolution.

The revolution of that year awakened the masses, it shook the throne of the czar, but it was not strong enuf to overthrow czarism and capitalism. As a result of that, a terrible massacre broke out, killing thousands of workers. Many were exiled to Siberia; some were more fortunate and fled to other countries.

A conference of the old rebels who are living in Chicago is being called to organize a monster celebration for the occasion. Old rebels are requested to send their names and addresses to the Chicago office of the Novy Mir, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Illinois.

Poor Farmers Not Wanted

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—(FP)—Poor men need not apply for land on government irrigation projects in the west. Secretary Work has issued new regulations that call for $2,000 minimum capital or its equivalent, and two years of practical experience on the part of the would-be farmer.

Proposed Constitution of the Workers (Communist) Party

The American Section of the Communist International.

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, General Secretary, Workers Party.

THE new constitution of the Workers (Communist) Party which follows contains two new developments of the party which are of the utmost importance.

The first of these is contained in the fact that the party declares itself "the American Section of the Communist International.

The Communist Party of America, organized in 1919, proudly declared itself the "American Section of the Communist International," but the Workers Party, up to the last convention could only declare its fraternal affiliation and acceptance of the leadership of the Communist International. With the adoption of the constitution which follows our party becomes openly "the American Section of the Communist International," and takes its rightful place with the other Communist parties of the world as an organic part of the Communist International.

THE party still retains the name Workers Party, but includes in it the word "Communist" preparatory to the change which will undoubtedly be made by the next convention of the party to complete the transition and have the party adopt its rightful name, "The Communist Party of America, American Section of the Communist International."

While unheralded in the reports of the convention this change marks an important stride forward and should inspire new pride in the party in the heart of every member of our party.

The second point of importance is that this new constitution outlines the form and structure of the party as it will appear after the reorganization of the party. Because of this fact it should be carefully studied by every member of the party.

THE party member who has a clear picture in his mind of the new structure of the party will be able to more readily fit himself into that structure. He will be able to aid in the work of re-organization, which is one of the most vital tasks before the party.

The party described in the constitution which follows is not an organization hanging in the air or existing for itself. The form of organization will root the party deep in the masses of workers. Through its nuclei in the factories, mines, mills, stores and wherever the members are employed it organizes itself where the workers are. Through its fractions in the trade unions, co-operatives, benefit societies, etc., it raeches to penetrate other groups of workers with revolutionary influence.

THE party organized, as described in this constitution, will be a much more powerful organization than the party we have, even though the party does not add a single new member. But the reorganization experience as shown in other countries will mean the rapid growth of our party. It will be a party capable of influencing a greater number of workers and of quicker action.

Every member must know this organization. Every member must study it and come to his party branch prepared to take intelligent action to quickly transform the organization of our party to that of a Bolshevik Party.

Articel 1. Name of the Party.

Section 1. The name of this organization shall be the WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY OF AMERICA, the American section of the Communist International.

Article 2. Emblem.

Section 1. The emblem of the Party shall be the crossed hammer and sickle with a circular margin having at the top: "WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY OF AMERICA" and underneath "WORKERS OF THE WORLD UNITE".

Article 3. Membership.

Section 1. Every person who accepts the program and statutes of the Communist International and of the Workers (Communist) Party, who becomes a member of a basic sub-organization of the Party, who is active in this organization, who subordinates himself to all the decisions of the Comintern and of the Party, and regularly pays his membership dues may be a member of the Party.

Section 2. Applicants for membership shall sign an application card reading as follows:

"The undersigned declares his adherencee to the program and statutes of the Communist International and of the Workers (Communist) Party and agrees to submit to the discipline of the Party and to engage actively in its work."

At the time of being accepted as a member of the Party this pledge shall be read to the applicant who shall indicate his endorsement of same.

Section 3. New members must join a shop nucleus or a street nucleus (international branch) of the Party and the application must be accepted by a vote of the membership of the unit to which application is made and the acceptance ratified by the leading committee of the territorial division of the Party in which membership is held.

Section 4. Members who change their place of work, or in case they are members of an international branch, their place of residence, must secure a transfer card from the Party unit in which they have held membership and present this card to the unit to which they transfer. A duplicate of the transfer card given the member shall be sent to the leading committee of the territorial section from which the member transfers and transmitted by this committee to the territorial section to which the member transfers.

If the member transfers from one section of a city organization to another, the transfer card shall be transmitted thru the city executive committee; if the member transfers from one city in a district to another the transfer card shall be transmitted thru the district executive committee; if the member transfers from one district to another the transfer card shall be sent thru the Central Executive Committee.

Section 5. Members of the Party who desire to leave the country and go to another country must obtain the permission of the Central Executive Committee of the Party.

Section 6. Every member of the Party who is eligible to be a member of a trade union must become a member of the union to which he is eligible.

Article 3. The Structure of the Party.

Section 1. The Workers (Communist) Party, like all sections of the Comintern is built on the principle of democratic centralization. These principles are:

a) Election of the subordinate as well as the upper party organs at general meetings of the Party members, conferences and conventions of the Party.

b) Regular reporting of the Party committees to their constituents.

c) Acceptance and carrying out of the decisions of the higher Party committees by the lower, strict Party discipline, and immediate and exact application of the decisions of the Executive Committee of the Communist International and of the Executive Committee of the Party.

d) Any Party committee whose activities extend over a certain area is considered superior to those Party organizations whose activity is limited only to certain parts of this area.

e) The discussion on Party questions can be carried on by the members only until the proper Party committee has decided them. After a decision has been adopted at the Congress of the Comintern, the Party convention, or by the leading Party committee, it must be carried out unconditionally even if some of the members or some of the local organizations are not in agreement with the decision.

Section 2. The highest authority of each unit of the Party is the general meeting of Party members, conference, or Party convention.

Section 3. The membership meeting, conference, or Party convention elects the leading committee which acts as the leading Party organ in the interim between the membership meeting, conferences or conventions and conducts the work of the Party organization.

Section 4. The units of the Party organization shall be as follows:

a) The shop nucleus, of which the leading committee is the nucleus bureau.

b) The street nucleus (the international branch) of which the leading committee is the street nucleus bureau.

c) In small cities having not more than two hundred members the shop nuclei and the street nuclei (international branches) shall send delegates to a city conference, or if the membership is not large, a general membership meeting shall be held at which a city executive committee shall be elected.

d) Larger cities shall be divited into sections and sub-sections. The shop nuclei and the street nuclei (international branches) in each of these sections and sub-sections shall hold conference of delegates which shall elect the section and sub-section executive committee. The sections of the city organization shall hold conferences of delegates which shall elect the city executive committee, except in the headquarters city of a district organization in which case the District Executive Committee acts as the City Executive Committee.

e) The city organization in each district shall send delegates to a conference which shall elect the district executive committee.

f) The delegates from the district organization shall send delegates to the national convention which elects the Central Executive Committee.

Section 5. For the conduct of special work each leading committee organizes departments, such as the Agitprop Department, Organization Department, Trade Union Department, Women's Work Department, and such other departments, the need for which arises. These departments are subordinate to the leading committee and work in accordance with its instructions and carry out its decisions.

Article 4. The Shop Nucleus and the Street Nucleus (International Branch).

Section 1. The basis of the Party organization is the shop nucleus (in factories, mines, workshop, offices, stores, agricultural enterprises, etc.) which all Party members working in these places must join. The nucleus must consist of at least three members. Newly organized shop nuclei must be endorsed by the leading committee of the territorial section in which the shop nuclei are organized.

Section 2. In factories where only one or two members are employed, these members are affiliated to the nearest working nucleus or form a factory nucleus jointly with the members working in neighboring factories.

Section 3. Party members who cannot be immediately affiliated with a shop nucleus, shall join the street nucleus (international branch) in the section of the city in which they reside.

Section 4. The nucleus is the organization which links up the Party with the workers and poor farmers. The tasks of the nucleus are to conduct Party work among the non-party masses of workers and peasants by means of systematic communist agitation and propaganda, to recruit new members to distribute and sell Party literature, to issue a factory newspaper, to conduct cultural work, to discuss Party problems, to carry on the work of enlightenment and education of the Party members in the fundamental principles of Communism. The members of the nucleus should strive for all official positions in the workers' organizations in the factory, participate in all economic conflicts and demands of the employees, interpret these from the standpoint of the revolutionary class struggle and seek to win the leadership of all the struggles of the workers by tireless nucleus work.

Section 5. The street nucleus (international branch) conducts similar work among the workers living in that section of the city in which it is organized.

Section 6. The shop nucleus and street nucleus (international branch) elects a bureau to conduct its work. This bureau should consist of from three to five members and conducts all nucleus work, assigns it to the individual members of the nucleus or international branch, as, for instance, propaganda, distribution of papers, fraction work in the trade unions, shop committee work, work among women, defense work, connection with the youth nucleus, etc. The nucleus bureau is responsible for this work and makes periodical reports to the next higher committee.

Section 7. The shop nucleus or street nucleus (international branch) bureau elects an organizer-secretary, whose duty it is to maintain the connections between the shop nucleus or street nucleus (international branch) and the next higher committee, conduct the correspondence of the shop nucleus or street nucleus and to carry out the decisions of the bureau.

Article 5. Sub-Sections, Sections and City Organizations.

Section 1. In the small cities (of not more than two hundred members), the shop nuclei and street nuclei (international branches) shall each hold general membership meetings periodically, not less often than each three months. These membership meetings in January and July shall elect the city executive committee which shall direct the Party work in such cities.

Section 2. Larger cities shall be divided into sections by the city executive committee of such cities. The party members affiliated with the shop nuclei or street nuclei (international branches) in each section of such cities shall meet in a general membership meeting once each three months to discuss general party problems. At the memberhip meetings held in January and July or at a special conference of elected delegates from the shop and street nuclei a section executive committee which shall direct the work of the Party in this section, shall be elected.

Section 3. In the very large cities such as New York and Chicago, the city shall be divided into sections and sub-sections. The shop nuclei and street nuclei (international branches) in each sub-section shall hold periodic membership meetings in January and July shall elect a sub-section executive committee which shall direct the work of the Party in the sub-section.

b) There shall also be held periodic conference of delegates from the shop nuclei and the street nuclei (international branches) in each section, and the conferences in January and July shall elect a section executive committee which shall direct the work of the Party in the section.

c) In January and July of each year, there shall be held a conference of delegates elected by the section or sub-section conferences (of representatives of the shop and street nucle) in the city, which shall elect the city executive committee, except in those cities which are the headquarters of the district executive committee. In the latter cities, the district executive committee funcions as the leading committee.

Section 4. The size of the sub-section, section, and city executive committees, shall be determined by the respective conferences which elect these committees.

Section 5. As soon as the Party reorganization progresses so that at least 25 per cent of the Party members are organized in shop nuclei, at least fifty per cent of the members of the sub-section, section, and city executive committee shall be elected from the shop nuclei.

Section 6. The sub-section, section, and city executive committees elect a secretary-organizer, who is responsible for the maintenance of connections with the next higher unit and for the execution of the decisions of the committees.

Article 6. Sub-District Organization.

Section 1. Wherever the district executive committee considers that the functioning of the Party organization will be improved, it may with the consent of the Central Executive Committee, create a sub-district organization, thru the combination of several cities. Such sub-district organizations shall hold a conference of delegates from the city organization or from shop nuclei and street nuclei (international branches) in the sub-district in January and July of each year and elect a sub-district executive committee.

Section 2. The number of members of which the sub-district executive committee shall consist shall be determined by the sub- district conference. Where the basic organizations of a sub-district are made up of shop nuclei to an extent of at least twenty-five per cent, fifty per cent of the members of the sub-district executive committee shall be elected from the shop nuclei.

Section 3. The sub-district executive committee shall elect a secretary-organizer who shall maintain connections with the next higher unit of the Party, and execute the decisions of the sub-district executive committee.

Section 4. In the city in which the sub-district committee has its headquarters, the sub-district committee acts as the executive committee of that city.

Article 7. District Organization.

Section 1. The Central Executive Committee of the Party shall divide the country into districts. Once each year there shall be held a district conference made up of delegates from the city organizations in the district and such unattached nuclei and international branches as there may be in the district. This district conference shall elect a district executive committee. Special conferences may be called by the district executive committee or by the Central Executive Committee.

Section 2. The district conference also elects the District Control Committee which shall be charged with the control of the financial accounts of all the Party units in the district and which also deals with the appeals from the decisions of lower Party units against disciplinary action.

Section 3. The District Executive Committee is the highest Party authority in the district between district conferences. The District Executive Committee must be composed partially of factory workers and should include representatives of the chief towns of the district. The district committee determines how often full meetings of the district committee are to be held. But these must be held at least once a month. The district committee where composed in part of members not residing in the city of the district headquarters shall elect an executive council for the conduct of its current business.

Section 4. The District Executive Committee elects the district organizer in agreement with the Central Executive Committee. The district organizer must have been a member of the Party for two years. If a district paper is published the District Executive Committee elects the editor of the paper with the agreement of the Central Executive Committee.

Section 5. The district executive committee shall organize such departments for the conduct of the Party work as Agitprop, organization, trade union work, woman's work, etc. As a rule members of the district committee should be placed at the head of these departments. These departments carry on their work under the direction of the District Executive Committee and submit periodic reports to the District Executive Committee.

Section 6. The District Executive Committee is responsible for its work to the district conference and the Central Executive Committee. It must submit a monthly report of its activities to the Central Executive Committee.

Section 7. In the city in which the District Executive Committee has its headquarters the city organization does not elect a city executive committee and the Party work in this city is directed by the District Executive Committee.

Article 8. The Party Conference.

Section 1. The Central Executive Committee may, when it deems it necessary, call party conferences. The delegates to these party conferences from the districts shall be elected by the district committee. The Central Executive Committee may co-opt individual party workers to attend the party conferences in an advisory capacity without voting rights.

Section 2. The decisions of the Party conference are not valid and binding on the party unless endorsed by the Central Executive Committee.

Article 9. The Party Convention.

Section 1. The party convention is the highest authority of the Party and shall be called by the Central Executive Committee at least once a year in agreement with the executive committee of the Communist International.

Section 2. Special conventions which shall have all the powers of regular conventions, may be called by the Central Executive Committee either at its own initiative and in agreement with the Executive Committee of the Communist International or at the initiative of the Communist International, or upon the demand of party organizations representing half the members of the Party. Special conventions, however, can only be called with the agreement of the Executive Committee of the Communist International.

Section 3. The call for the national convention and the proposed agenda of the convention shall be submitted to the membership at least one month before the date of the convention.

Section 4. The number of delegates to the convention shall be determined by the Central Executive Committee. Delegates shall be apportioned to the districts in proportion to the membership to be decided in accordance with the provision of article 10 of this constitution.

Section 5. The party convention shall hear the reports of the Central Executive Committee and the Central Control Commitee, decide the questions of Party program, formulate resolutions on all political, tactical and organizational questions, elect the Central Executive Committee and the Central Control Committee.

Article 10. Elections of Delegates.

Section 1. Election of delegates to all party conferences and conventions shall be based upon the number of members in good standing on the first of the month prior to the date of the election. No party member can vote in the election if more than two months in arrears in dues payments. The secretary of the Party unit shall submit with the results of the election a certified list stating the names of the good-standing members in the Party unit. No election of delegates to any conference or convention shall be valid unless 5 per cent of the good standing members in the Party unit participated in the elections.'

Section 2. The highest committee of the unit of the Party in which a conference or convention is to be held shall decide the basis of representation, that is, the number of good-standing members necessary to elect delegates.

Section 3. The shop nucleus and the street nucleus (international branch) or in case of large cities the sub-section, shall elect delegates to the city convention in accordance with the number of delegates they are entitled to based upon the certified list of good-standing members which the secretary shall send to the city convention in certifying the results of the elections.

Section 4. The city convention shall elect the number of delegates it is entitled to according to the ratio fixed for the election of delegates from the city convention to the district convention based upon the number of members in good standing in the city as certified by the shop nuclei and the street nuclei (international branches).

Section 5. The district convention shall elect the number of delegates it is entitled to according to the ratio fixed for the election of delegates from the district convention to the national convention based upon the number of goodstanding members in the district as certified by the city convention.

Section 6. The same rule shall apply in the election of delegates to section and city conferences, provided for in Article 5.

Article 11. Central Executive Committee.

Section 1. The Central Executive Committee of the Party shall be elected by the Party convention and shall consist of 19 members elected by the convention a representative of the Young Workers League and a neutral chairman with decisive vote. The convention shall also elect six candidates who shall have a right to participate in the full sessions of the C. E. C. with a voice but no vote. In case of vacancies the candidates shall become members of the C. E. C.

Section 2. The Central Executive Committee is the highest authority of the Party between the party conventions. It represents the Party as a whole over and against other. Party institutions and other institutions, organizes various organs of the Party, conducts all its political and organizational wok, appoints the editors of its central organs who work under its leadership and control, organizes and guides all undertakings of importance for the entire Party, distributes all the Party forces and controls the Central Treasury. The Central Executive Committee conducts the work of the Party fractions within bodies of a central nature.

Section 3. The Central Executive Committee elects from among its numbers a Political Committee for conducting the work of the C. E. C. between its full sessions. The Central Committee shall elect a general secretary, and a secretariat for conduct of the permanent current work, and establish an agitprop department, organization department and such other departments as the Party requires. The members of the Central Executive Committee should be the heads of these departments wherever possible.

Section 4. The Central Executive Committee shall divide the country into districts and create district organizations. The Central Executive Committee has the right to combine or divide existing organizations, either according to territory or otherwise in conformity with their political and economic characteristics.

Article 12. The Central Control Committee.

Section 1. The Party convention shall elect a Central Control Committee of four members which shall audit the books and accounts of the national organization and supervise similar control of the financial accounts of the Party as a whole.

Section 2. The Central Control Committee shall also pass upon appeals from decision of lower party units in reference to braeches of discipline. The decisions of the Central Control Committee in such matters are subject to the approval of the Central Executive Committee.

Article 13. Qualifications.

Section 1. Members of the Central Executive Committee, general secretary, editor, and all candidates for political office must have been member of the Party for two years at time of their nomination.

Central Executive Committee. The entire sum shall go to the national organization.

Section 2. Each member shall pay 50c per month dues, which shall be receipted for by dues stamps issued by the Central Executive Committee. Members whose earnings are more than $100.00 per month shall pay additional dues to the amount of one per cent of their earnings above $100. The payment of the additional dues shall be receipted for by special stamps issued by the Central Executive Committee.

Section 3. The district organization shall purchase regular dues stamps from the Central Executive Committee at 25c per stamp, the city organization shall purchase dues stamps from the city organization at 40c; the subsection organization shall purchase dues stamps from the section organization at 42½c; and the shop nuclei and the street nuclei (international branches) shall purchase stamps from the sub-section organization at 45c. Where no sub-sections exist the shop nuclei and international branch purchase their stamps from the section organization at 45c. Where no sections exist, the shop nuclei and street nuclei (international bronches) purchase stamps from the city organization at 45c.

Section 4. Special assessments may be levied by the national convention or the Central Executive Committee. No member shall be considered in good standing unless he purchases such special assessment stamp.

Section 5. Members unable to pay dues or assessments on account of unemployment, strikes, sickness, or similar reason shall by vote of the nucleus or international branch be furnished with exempt stamps. No district organization shall be allowed exempt stamps in a proportion greater than ten per cent of its monthly purchase of regular stamps, except by decision of the C. E. C.

Section 6. Members who are three months in arrears in payment of dues shall cease to be members of the party in good standing. Members who are six months in arrears shall be stricken from the rolls. No member of the Party shall pay dues in advance for a period of more than three months.

Article 16. Language Fractions.

Section 1. All members of the Party now members of language branches must become members in either shop nuclei or international branches in the reorganization of the Party on the basis of this constitution, in order to retain their membership in the Party.

Section 2. The former members of the language sections of the Party, in addition to their membership in the Party, through affiliation with the shop nuclei or international branch shall form language fractions.

Section 3. The language fraction shall consist of all the members of the Party who speak a certain language, who are members of a sub-section, section, or city organization of the Party. The units of the language fraction should be formed on the basis of the most efficient method of working among their particular language group. The D. E. C. or City Executive Committee shall decide as to the units to be formed.

Section 4. Where there is more than one sub-section in a section organization, in which language fractions of a particular language group are organized, these language fractions shall hold general membership meetings of all the members of the langauge fraction, in the section in January and July of each year, and elect an executive committee of the language fraction for the section. Where there are several sections of a city in which fractions are organized, the members of the language fraction shall hold a city membership meeting in January and July of each year, and elect a city executive committee of the language fraction, subject to the approval of the respective Party committee.

Section 5. Once each year, there shall be held a district conference of delegates from the language fractions in the party districts which shall elect a district executive committee for the language fraction. The D. E. C. for the language fraction must be approved by the Party D. E. C.

Section 6. The Central Executive Committee of the Party may, if it deems it advisable, permit the holding of a national conference of a language fraction of a particular language group. When such national conferences are held, they shall elect, subject to the approval of the Central Executive Committee, a national language bureau. In cases where the Central Executive Committee does not deem it advisable to hold national conferences of a langugae fraction, it shall appoint a national bureau for the language fraction.

Section 7. The language fraction is an auxiliary organization of the Party, for work among a particular language group. Only Party members who are affiliated to the shop nuclei or the street nuclei (international branches) and pay dues to the basic units of the Party, can be members of the language fraction of the Party. The language fraction of the Party does not collect dues, but may, with the consent of the Central Executive Committee carry on special campaigns among their langauge groups for funds to carry on the work of the language fraction. The Central Executive Committee shall also provide a definite monthly appropriation from the dues receipts for the work of the language fraction national bureaus.

Section 8. It is the work of the language fraction to carry on agitation, propaganda, and organization work among the working masses of its language group. The language fraction must also organize fractions of party members in the fraternal and benevolent organizations of its language group, as provided for in the section of this constitution dealing with the organizational question, and carry on a systematic campaign to establish Communist influence and bring these organizations under the influence of the party, ideologically and organizationally.

Section 9. The language fractions of each language group shall also organize a workers' club of their particular language group in each city or the sections of the city. These workers' clubs shall consist of both party and non-party members. The language fraction shall function as a fraction in these clubs to carry on agitation and propaganda and bring the non-Party members under Communist influence and recruit them for membership in regular Party units.

Article 17. Fractions.

Section 1. In all non-Party workers' and farmers' organizations (trade unions, co-operatives, cultural societies, educational societies, fraternal and benevolent societies, sports and other clubs, war veterans' organizations, factory councils, unemployed councils, at conferences and conventions, in local administrative bodies, state legislatures and the national congress) where there are at least two Communists, a Communist fraction must be organized for the purpose of increasing the influence of the Party in applying its policy in the non-Party sphere.

Section 2. The fractions are organs of the Party within non-Party organizations. They are not independent, fully authorized organizations, but are subordinate to the competent local Party committee.

Section 3. In case of differences arising between the Party committee and the fraction, the Party committee must investigate the question anew, together with the representatives of the fraction and come to a decision which must be carried out unconditionally by the fraction. In case an appeal is made against the decision by the fraction, the question shall be finally settled by the next higher Party committee.

Section 4. If questions are discussed by a Party committee which concerns a fraction, the committee shall accept a representative of the fraction concerned, who shall attend the meeting of the committee in an advisory capacity.

Section 1. The fractions elect their own officers who, however, must be endorsed by the Party committee in the section in which the fraction operates. The officers of the fraction are responsible for their activities to the fraction and to the Party committee.

Section 6. The Party committee, which directs the Party work in the territory in which a fraction is organized, has the right to send its representatives into the executive committee of any fracton or to recall any member of that body, after the reason for such acton has been explained to the fraction.

Section 7. Candidates for all important positions in the organization in which the fractions are working are selected by the fracton, in agreement with the Party committee for the section.

Section 8. Questions which come up for decision in the organization in which a fraction is working must be discussed in advance in the meeting of the fraction, or by its leading committee. On every question on which a decision is reached in the fraction, or a decision made by the leading committee, the fraction members must act unanimously in the meeting of the organization and vote together solidly. Members who break this rule are subject to disciplinary measures by the Party.

Article 18. Relations to the Y. W. L.

Section 1. A corresponding committee of the Young Workers League shall be entitled to send one representative with voice and vote into all sub-sections, sections, city and district and central executive committees of the Party, provided there is a corresponding Y. W. L. organization to the organization of the party to which the representative is sent.

Section 2. The Party executive committee, in the sub-section, section, city, district, and the Central Executive Committee shall send a representative with voice and vote into the corresponding Y. W. L. committee.

Section 3. The corresponding Y. W. L. organization shall be entitled to send representatives to all conferences and conventions of the Party organization. The number of representatives which shall be given to the Y. W. L. in such conferences and conventions shall be decided by the Party committee which calls the conference or convention.

Section 4. All members of the Party under 21 years of age must join the Young Workers League. All members of the Young Workers League over 21 years of age, should join the Party and must join the Party if 23 years of age or over, or be excluded from the League.

Section 5. Members of the Y. W. L. who are under 11 years of age and who are also members of the Party, shall be exempt from paying Party dues upon presentation of their Y. W. L. dues card, with dues stamp affixed. An exempt stamp, marked "Y. W. L." shall be affixed to the Party card of such member Schedule.

1. The provisions of this constitution in relation to purchase of dues stamps from the district committee and city organizations by the basic units of the Party go into effect on October first. Language branches which have not been reorganized by that date must purchase their dues stamps from the district and city organizations.

2. The provisions of this constitution in regard to the elections of the sub-secton, section, city and district committees go into effect as fast as the reorganization of the Party on the basis of this constitution take place in a locality. This provision also applies to the organization of language fractions which must be organized as fast as the Party reorganization takes place. The provisions of the previous constitution of the Party apply in a locality until such time as the reorganization takes place, except that the City Central Committee shall hold one session to constitute a City Executive Committee and then be abolished.

3. The reorganization of the entire Party on the basis of the provisions of this constitution shall be completed within six months from the time of its adoption. The Central Executive Committee is instructed to take all the necessary steps to carry out the reorganization in the period allotted.

What Do You Say?

ONE of the features of the special issue of the DAILY WORKER for International Press Day, Sept. 21, will be the publication of replies to a questionnaire addressed to all the readers of our Communist daily. This day has been especially set apart in the drive for the Bolshevization of the Communist press. Every DAILY WORKER reader must join in this effort. Here are the questions:

1. Why do you read our Communist newspaper, the DAILY WORKER?
2. What shortcomings do you find in the DAILY WORKER, politically or otherwise?
3. What criticisms have you as to make-up, contents, display, etc., etc.?
4. Can you act as a worker correspondent for the DAILY WORKER?
5. What experiences do you meet with in getting others to subscribe for and read the DAILY WORKER?

Sit down today and write your reply to one, two or all of these questions and then mail them in to the Editor, the DAILY WORKER, 1113 West Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

Our Press and Re-organization

By William F. Dunne

Get Ready for Reorganization

IN yesterday's DAILY WORKER the Organization Department announced its plan to mobilize the membership for the reorganization of the party into shop nuclei and international branches.

With the beginning of this campaign to reconstruct our party, a series of articles on organizational questions is being printed in every organ of the party. Questions and problems confronting our members in the rebuilding of the party will be answered and analyzed in the DAILY WORKER by Comrade Jay Lovestone, head of the Organization Department, and other party members.

The DAILY WORKER has also established a special section for the Organization Department. In this section there is being printed articles on the progress of the organization campaign, the experiences of the comrades in the work of organization, and letters and reports from comrades giving their experiences in carrying on the party's activities thru the shop nuclei.

These articles will be living articles, and of intense interest. Watch these columns closely.

OUR party press has an all-important part to play in the reorganization work now being undertaken in accord with the shop nucleus basis laid down for all parties by the Comintern and the attention which it must devote to all problems arising out of the change from the territorial to an industrial base should be considered not a passing and temporary phase of development but a stage in its Bolshevization.

Fundamental changes will take place in our press as a result of the change in the base of or party. The Communist press is the voice of the party and of the most conscious section of the working class. It has to give the party the lead in the tasks of reorganisation and at the same time carrv without cessation to the masses the Communist program covering every form of working class activity in the struggles against capitalism. That this places a heavy burden upon our press can be understood when we realize the difficulty it has already encountered in its double task of speaking officially to the party membership and at the same time acting as an agitational organ in the mass movement.

COULD we drop our mass campaigns for six months or a year and concentrate on the work of party reorganization we would have a formal solution of the problem which would delight the right wing elements in our party. But the party that would emerge from this cloistered period would not be a Communist party nor would shop nucleus organization achieved in such a manner be anything but lip-service to the theory of Bolshevization—a change in party structure secured mechanically, sterile and meaningless.

The reorganization of our party, if it is to be an aid to and one of the methods of building a firm Bolshevik core in the American revolutionary movement, must be achieved, not by any cessation of mass activity but side by side with, as part of and as a result of intensified activity in every sector of the labor movement.

On the party press rests the responsibility of keeping this correct idea of reorganization and the methods by which it is to be obtained before every member of the party.

Upon the party membership is the duty of reading the party press more assiduously and serachingly than ever before. Reorganization work will test every member and every unit of our party and only by careful apprisal and mutual study and solution of the important problems that arise can success be attained.

IT is certain that differences of opinion will arise—as a matter of fact they have already arisen—over details of reorganization and the role of the party during the reorganization period. In the press there must be the fullest discussion of these problems—but not in the spirit of separating these problems from the revolutionary tasks of the party as the advance guard of the whole working class. Our press must urge and the membership must respond with articles giving the detailed experiences encountered in this stage of our development always in the light of adjusting our party as rapidly as possible to the tasks which it must carry out.

How strong is the idea of shop nuclei reorganization as a mère structural change in our party I do not know but that it exists to some extent is evident. Our press must combat this wrong conception in such a manner that it dies for lack of nutrition—and speedily. The shop nucleus as the unit of our party gives us an efficient organizational base from which to carry on our Communist work but just as important is the complete proletarianization of our party that will result—not only by the elimination of non-working class elements but by the closer contact with and understanding of the needs and thoughts of the masses, the complete orientation of our party towards industry and the industrial workers as the only sound basis for a Communist party.

What are the conclusions from the above?

They are: (1) That our press during the period of reorganization must keep the attention of the party fixed on the mass movement to a higher degree than ever in order that our internal problems, important as they are for the future of our party, may not overshadow the need for constant participation in every struggle of the workers and thereby defeat the real purpose of shop nuclei reorganization.

(2) That our press must devote the greatest attention to the reorganization campaign itself and keep the membership fully informed on all its political and organizational implications.

(3) That our press must take the lead in stimulating the whole party to disciplined and continuous endeavor in reconstructing our party by discussion of all problems encountered. Especially must it concentrate on securing and publishing the experiences of the field workers who encounter the reorganization problems not as academic propositions which can be solved theoretically but who must solve internal party problems as part of the whole work of our party as a section of the Communist International—a living organism which must fight to live and fulfill its revolutionary role.

British Labor Movement and Imperialism

By G. ALLISON

One of the oustanding features of the British working class movement, which is only now being rapidly liquidated, is its exceptionally nationalist outlook. It is true that both in the political and economic spheres British labor long before the war participated in international labor conferences. It did so, however, always with some reserve, always with the feeling that we were different, higher, more advanced.

The role of British imperialism in world politics goes a long way towards explaining this fact. Before the war, except for occasional crises, the empire was able to carry on its ramifications with little serious interrruptions. Thru the medium of intensive colonial exploitation, the home employers were able to reduce the discontent of the British workers to a minimum. The labor movement both amongst the masses and in leading circles accommodated itself to this convenient arrangement. With the exception of the most radical sections British labor was unmindful of the conditions that prevailed on the continent, in the colonies, or elsewhere so long as fairly tolerable conditions could be abtained at home.

U. S. Enslaved Europe.

The post-war situation is entirely different. America has emerged as the supreme imperialistic power! She has adopted Canada, enslaved Europe, and is now casting covetous eyes at another cherished British dominion—Australia.

Britain on the other hand, has been forced to turn more than ever to her colonies and mandated territories. Egypt, India, Mesopotamia, and now China have all felt the extra pressure of British imperialism resulting from the American conquest.

But there is still a greater menace. The new Russia represents not only a boundary beyond which the frontiers of the British empire cannot extend, in addition, she is looked upon as a positive danger to the empire as it stands.

The policy adopted by the ruling class in view of all these events was a far-seeing one. Not only did she take part in the general attack on Soviet Russia, but even when it was deemed advisable to cease open hostilities and when Russia was still engaged in deadly conflict with the "Whites" Britain established herself firmly in Mesopotamia, Persia, and the Baltic states.

Britain's Real Policy.

For quite a time thereafter the real attitude of British imperialism towards Soviet Russia has been apparent. Thru the trade agreement and later thru the activities of the labor government it was fairly obvious that Britain was prepared, at least, to tolerate the existence of the U. S. S. R. and it is only now that the real policy again shows itself.

Among the real representatives of British imperialism there is no confusion. Their aim is not only to safeguard the colonies, but is directed against the very existence of the workers' republic. Thru gross misrepresentation and acts of provocation the support for Russia in Britain is reduced to a minimum and "border hostilities" maintained at highest pitch.

On the other hand we see assembled the supposed "friends" of Soviet Russia. This group which includes within it a wide circle varying from prominent conservatives to supposed left wing trade union leaders aim at a more friendly attitude towards Soviet Russia; closer relations and a trading agreement. Fundamentally these two groups are in complete agreement. The "die hards" quite openly recognize and declare their hostility to Russia, and see in her overthrow the stabilization of the empire.

The Reason for Sympathy.

The "sympathetic" groups imagine they see in Soviet Russia, a means of temporarily dealing with the serious economic situation in Britain, reviving British industry and simultaneously stabilizing the empire and liquidating all the dangerous tendencies at home.

This idea is clearly portrayed in the attitude of the reactionary leadership in the British labor movement. The war against the Communist Party and the National Minority Movement is continuing as relentless as ever, but some of these same leaders let the secret out by explaining how "illogical" it is to advocate a trade agreement with Soviet Russia and at the same time to refuse as trade unionists to join hands with the Russian unions.

If further proof is required, the recent happenings in China provides it.

Similar Attitude.

Despite the authentic information supplied by the labor press and even its own organ, the Executive Committee of the labor party decided to take no definite steps until more news on the "causes" of the Chinese rising was available and even when the sitnation was the subject of discussion in the house of commons we find practically no difference between the attitnde of the labor party and the cabinet. Both MacDonald and Trevelyan, the labor party spokesman, maintained that the duties of the government were first to safeguard the British lives in China, and then, in conjunction with the other interested imperialist powers, to establish a commission of inquiry to investigate the causes of the uprising. In other words the leaders of the labor party endorsed the aggressive policy of Britain in China and pleaded for a more scientific and less brutal form of exploiting. Chamberlain himself can wish for nothing more.

Hence we see that in actual practice the policy of the labor party is purely imperialist. It is but a short step from where it now stands to openly supporting an aggressive policy against the U. S. S. R.

Putting a Leading Question.

These facts present the Communist Party and the Minority Movement with their most important task.

To the left wing in the trade unions we must say: Are you supporting international trade union unity for the purpose of solidifying the proletarian forces for the international class struggle, or are you sheltering behind a popular slogan to hide your imperialist intentions? To the left wing in the labor party we must say: Are you for the empire or for the masses it subjects and exploits? Only by this means can we have a clear estimation of our forces. We know where the masses stand. Under no circumstances will they allow fresh attacks on Soviet Russia, but thru the treachery of its chosen leaders the British working class may find itself tacitly supporting war against Russia, engaged in by the buffer states but engineered and supported by British imperialism.

Consequently our task is clear. In fighting against the dangers of imperialist onslaughts on Soviet Russia, we have to insure that mass opinion finds organized expression, and that all the imperialist tendencies within our movement are left behind.

Only then can we feel sure that Russia is immune from the covetous hand of British imperialism.

"NA BOYKOM MIESTE" PRESENTED TONIGHT AT WORKERS' HOUSE

The Russian theater season will be opened formally this Saturday, Sept. 19, at 8 p. m., at the Workers' House, 1902 W. Division St. Under the leadership of the Russian actor L. Luganov, and with the participation of the Russian actresses Aza Namgova, Moiseyenko and others, the play "Na Boykom Mieste" by Ostrowski will be presented.

It is expected that the play will draw a big crowd.

The library of the Workers' House is now receiving magazines from Soviet Russia, also books published recently in Russia.

Young Miners! Fight Against the Bosses!

same time hand bigger and bigger profits to "those who own."

Not only is it impossible for the hard coal diggers to accept these terms, but their very lives and the life of their union depends upon a militant struggle to get their demands granted in this strike. Already the coal barons have forced down the standard of living of the bituminous miners with the help of shifting operations to non-union fields and by conducting a huge campaign against the union miners. Now that this campaign is so well under way, the operators are concentrating a huge drive on the hard coal miners aimed as much against the union as against their standard of living.

Young Miners, How Does This Affect You?

How does this present struggle in the anthracite affect the young miners?

In those fields where the union is strong and the conditions of the miners are best, the young miner finds himself equally well off. For example, in the Illinois district all young workers in and around the mines (with the exception of the trapper boys on mule haulage in a few of the smallest mines) get full pay and the miners refuse to allow any discrimination against the younger workers either in the way of lower wages or worse working conditions.

But as soon as there is any forcing down of the standard of living as there has been in the bituminous fields and in the anthracite, the young miners will be among the first to feel it and will be the first ones the operators will discriminate against. Not only this, but lowered wages and worse conditions for the miners force more and more of the youngest workers into the mines and factories when their fathers can no longer support the family alone on the small wages of a hard coal digger.

Young Miners! The fight in the anthracite is your fight. You will be among the hardest hit if this strike is not won. Get into the front ranks with the fighters, and not only see that this strike is won, but make sure that you will get your share of the victory and equal wages for equal work once the strike is over.

For a Standard Wage.

While Lewis and other fake leaders of the United Mine Workers have been busy compromising every struggle of the miners for small wage increases (as in 1922) one of the greatest evils for the miners, especially the young miners, has been left untouched. This is the chaotic system of "scales" which has been in effect since 1900 in the anthracite. All the wage advances of the anthracite miners have been based on these scales and the operators have had a good chance to do a lot of juggling of wages and have been able to discriminate against different groups of miners whenever they felt strong enuf to get away with it.

These scales are of great danger to the young miners. They offer the coal barons an opportunity especially to discriminate against the young miners, often paying him much lower wages even when doing the same work as an adult miner.

Young Miners! Fight against these scales in the anthracite. Fight not only for the increases but keep up the fight along with the progressive miners for a minimum wage of $10 a day for all miners at the face, whether they are young or old.

For Real Solidarity.

The anthracite operators are the best organized group of mine owners in the whole world. Anthracite is completely under the control of a small group of capitalists made up of a combination of banks, railroad companies and coal interests. Eight huge corporations of this type control more than 70 per cent of the anthracite field. Not only are the anthracite operators so strongly organized, but they are closely connected with the bituminous operators and will get their full support against the miners.

If the miners are to win in this strike the workers will have to show the greatest solidarity. In the past not only have union railways men hauled scab coal during strikes of the miners, but there has never been real solidarity between the hard and soft coal diggers themselves.

Though Lewis and other fakers within the U. M. W. A. have always pretended to be for solidarity. They have permitted the hard and soft coal agreement to expire at different times and have never fought for a real national agreement covering the entire industry.

If the anthracite miners lose this strike, it will be one of the greatest blows possible against the soft coal miners and all organized labor. Not only will it mean a further weakening of the miners' union, but once the operators are able to smash the resistance of the hard coal miners, they will be able to turn their attention towards forcing down the standards of the bituminous miners to an even lower level.

On the other hand, by joining in the strike the bituminous miners will have a chance to restore their old conditions and to save the union from the present position to which it has been reduced by the campaign of the bituminous operators. If the railroad workers will also support the miners, the capitalists will be met by such a united front as is almost impossible to break.

For Nationalization of the Mines and Workers' Control.

The winning of the present strike will not end the many grievances of the anthracite miners. The winning of the demands for a dollar a day increase; for the check-off, and the 10 per cent increase for miners will not put an end to the intolerable working conditions in the anthracite. It will not prevent the operators from taking the increases they are forced to grant out in worse working conditions for the hard coal diggers. It will not abolish contract labor in the mines. It will not abolish child labor in and around the mines. It will not end unemployment and all the anarchy at present existing in the industry. It will not get the 6-hour day and 5-day week for the miners and thus regulate the hours so as to give everyone employment.

It is true that victory in the present struggle will prevent the bosses from forcing down the standard of the miners for the moment, and will strengthen the union. But as long as the present powerful group of capitalists is in unchallenged control of the industry, they will be able to force intolerable conditions on the workers and the greatest grievance of the miners will remain unsettled.

The only solution for this is a strong fight against this private ownership of the mines by a few corporations and a fight for the nationalization of the mines under workers' control.

Against the Use of Troops in Strikes! Against Government Interference.

The powerful anthracite operators, linked up with the coal barons of the bituminous fields, never have any trouble in getting the co-operation of the bosses' government against the miners. First the government offers its help thru appointing a commission which is supposed to "arbitrate" and does its best to force the miners to accept only the slightest increases. Second, if this fails, the government intervenes to the extent of sending its armed troops against the unarmed coal diggers.

For a Labor Party.

The manner in which the operators use the capitalist government against the miners in addition to their use of the courts, the press, the schools, etc., makes it clear to the miners that they must fight for political organization of the working class. Only by building a labor party supported by the masses of workers in America, can we be sure of the backing so necessary in order to carry our struggles thru to victory. Only with a huge labor party representing the workers can we fight the attempts of the bosses' governments to turn our industrial victories into defeats. Only with the help of a labor party can we force the nationalization of the mines and carry the struggle thru for a workers' and farmers' government that will be a government of the workers and will not issue injunctions and break strikes of the miners as the present bosses' government did in 1919 and 1922.

The young workers who know so well what wage cuts and worse conditions mean must be the first to rally to the support of the anthracite miners. If the government should call on scabs to break the strike the young workers must be among the first to rally to the aid of the union. They will refuse to fight against the miners if they are put into uniform and called upon for strikebreaking purposes.

The young workers who know from bitter experience what a victory for the operators will mean for the young miners, must give their militant support. They must fight with the anthracite miners and help to turn this strike into such a victory that it will mark a turning point in the retreat of the working class before the huge offensive of the American bosses. Young workers, young miners, fight for these demands!

A 6-hour day, 5-day week!

Standardization of wages and working conditions!

A minimum wage of $10 a day for all miners, young or old, at the face!

Nationalization of the mines and workers' control!

No government intervention! Against the use of troops in strikes! No arbitration!

For a labor party!

Support the Progressive Miners' Committee and its program! Repudiate Lewis and other fake leaders of the United Mine Workers who act as agents of the bosses within our union!

No young workers under 18 to be allowed to work in or around the mines!

Young workers! Young miners! Support the anthracite miners in their strike. Help defeat the big open shop wage cutting drive of the employers.

LABOR ON RAILROADS FACES CRISIS

WORKERS PARTY CABLE EXPOSES EXCLUSION OF SAKLATVALA AS NEW MOVE OF WORLD EXPLOITERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, England, Sept. 20.—Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British parliament, received a cable from the Workers (Communist) Party of America, signed by C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary, exposing Saklatvala's exclusion from the United States by Secretary of State Kellogg as an attempt to stifle the protest of the workers of the world against imperialist exploitation.

Saklatvala was a delegate to the interparliamentary union congress in Washington, but the British delegation sailed without him on the liner Caronia, manned by a scab crew.

Saklatvala has demanded an investigation of the exclusion by the Coolidge administration, and characterized the action as "President Coolidge's and Secretary Kellogg's forcible and cowardly exclusion, without a hearing or defense."

Saklatvala said that quotations from his speeches, on which Kellogg claimed the exclusion was based, were either "untrue or cleverly twisted."

The cable from the American Communist Party states:

Workers Party Cable.

Shapurji Saklatvala,
c. o. Communist Party of Great Britain,
16 King St.,
London,

Your exclusion from the United States exposes the Wall Street government as the agency of the imperialist exploiters seeking to stifle all protest against the oppression of the people of India, China, Africa and Latin America. While our Wall Street dictatorship can today prevent the American workers from hearing your message of the fight of the British and Indian workers for freedom from capitalist and imperialist exploitation this action will help to arouse them to take up the struggle against the Wall Street dictatorship and to carry it forward until a workers' Soviet government can welcome you to America.

C. E. Ruthenberg,
General Secretary,
Workers (Communist) Party of America.

No Legal Redress.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The American Civil Liberties Union announces that after an investigation, it is found that S. Saklatvala has no legal redress for his arbitrary exclusion from the Uniter States by the Coolidge government. If Saklatvala came to the United States he would be turned back at Ellis Island, owing to the czaristic immigration laws which give the state department full power to exclude visitors.

The union will now attempt to fight the case by "stirring public opinion." A denunciation of Kellogg's act by the lawyer Samuel Untermyer will be issued by the union.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

MANY of the capitalist papers are following Senator Borah's lead in throwing the books into Secretary of State Kellogg, for that gentleman's action in cancelling the visa of Comrade Saklatvala at the suggestion of the British government. All the capitalist papers recognize that Kellogg's intentions are of the best, but that is the material that paves the way to hell. "Nervous Nell" has put his foot in it again. No doubt, Silent Cal who is as guilty of the "boner" as Kellogg will wriggle out of the mess.

THE worst feature of the case from the American capitalist point of view is, that Saklatvala's news value has been increased, thus enabling him to break into the press, with an ease that would not be possible for him, had not Kellogg acted so crudely. Another angle is, that the American government gets an added reputation for illiberality in the matter of free speech. This is understood in Europe as an indication of weakness. Let us have more of those blunders.

RICHARD FORD, has been paroled after spending 12 years in jail in California for deaths arising out of a labor disturbance. The district attorney of Marysville, Cal., threatens to have Ford re-arrested on another murder charge. Some California workers see a connection between Ford's parole and the labor demonstration on Sept. 7, Labor Day. If American labor had any vision of its mission or the right kind of spirit and leadership, it would demonstrate until every class war prisoner in the United States was turned loose.

WHETHER the California authorities will carry out their intention to have Ford tried on another murder charge is hard to predict. The chances are that they will. The business interests that own the legal machinery in California are the blackest in the country. Sure, Tom, Mooney, Billings and many other workers are still occupying cells in "California's bastiles. When will organized labor get busy and release them instead of allowing its leaders to indulge in idiotic love feasts with the capitalists and in equally idiotic attacks on the radical movement?

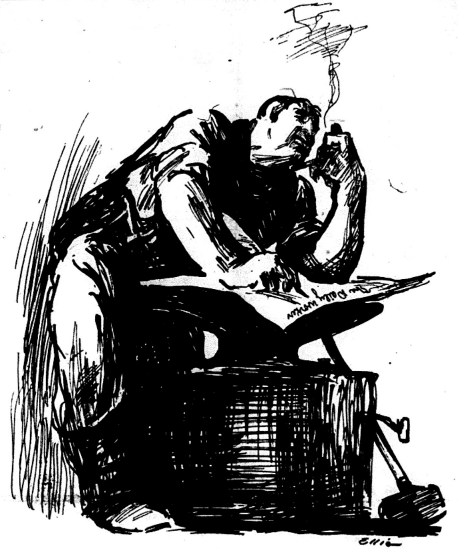
700 STEEL WORKERS IN MONESSEN MILL HANDED THIRD BIG WAGE SLASH

(By Worker Correspondent)

MONESSEN, Pa., Sept. 20.—The workers of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Co., here received a 8 per cent cut in wages.

This makes the third cut this year that they have received. This cut will effect over 700 men and only apply to the tonnage men in the hot mills.

The Worker Correspondent on the Job.



THIS is the International Press Day issue of the DAILY WORKER. Most of its contents have been written by our worker correspondents, in the shops, the mills, the mines and the factories of the nation. The above sketch is the Worker Correspondent as pictured by our worker cartoonist, Fred Ellis. Let hundreds and thousands of workers draw inspiration from this issue and join the growing army of the worker correspondents of the DAILY WORKER.

CALL FOR THIRD CONFERENCE OF THE TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE

On November 14 and 15 the Trade Union Educational League will hold its third general conference in Chicago. Representation to the conference is based upon rate of two delegates from each functioning local industrial group in the United States and Canada.

These delegates shall be elected by the local general group where such exist. Each local general group is entitled to a minimum of six delegates, including those of the local industrial groups.

The agenda for the conference is as follows:

1. Economic and Political Situation.
2. Report of Secretary.
3. Reports of National Industrial Committees.
4. Organization of the Unorganized.
5. Amalgamation.
6. The Labor Party.
7. The Class Collaboration Movement.
8. Company Unions.
9. Shop Committees.
10. The Struggle Against Imperialism.
11. Unemployment.

FASCISTS JAIL 2,000 WORKERS CHARGED WITH 'BEING COMMUNISTS'

ROME, Italy, Sept. 20—New atrocities against the Italian workers have been carried out by the fascist regime. Two thousand workers, charged with belonging to the Communist Party have been arrested. No reason for the arrests, other than a nationwide raid on Communists, was given by the Mussolini government.'

Over two hundred workers were arrested in Rome alone, and large numbers were thrown into prison in Florence, Parma and Messina.

CHICAGO LABOR WILL PROTEST RED'S EXCLUSION

Many Organizations Invited to Attend

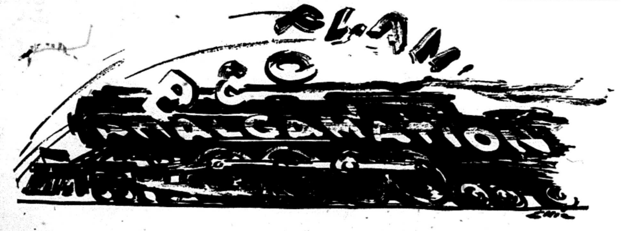
A protest meeting against the barring of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the English parliament, from America by the action of Secretary of State Kellogg, will be held in Chicago on Monday, Sept. 28, 8 p. m. at Northwest Hall, North and Western Aves. The Workers (Communist) Party in Chicago has extended invitations to labor and fraternal organizations to co-operate in this protest meeting. Among the speakers thus far engaged are William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER; Manuel Gomez, secretary of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League; Hindu and Chinese speakers.

Saklatvala was expected to attend the conference of the interparliamentary union in Washington, D. C., early next month. Evidently, however, American and British imperialism feared the expose Comrade Saklitvala would make of the situation in India, particularly, and the relations of American and British capitalism. Saklatvala has been an outspoken and fearless leader of the exploited workers of England, India, etc., and his speeches in the English parliament have often caused consternation in the ranks of the British hide bound tories.

All over America, in fact thruout the world, liberal and radical forces are demonstrating against this fearsome attempt to bar Saklatvala from America. Senator Borah, the American Civil Liberties Union are among those decrying this further evidence of the destruction of civil liberties, freedom of speech and the other actual hoaxes of capitalism.

The Chicago meeting on Monday, September 28, at Northwest Hall, is expected to draw a large audience.

THE DRIVE AGAINST CLASS-COLLABORATION



RAILWAY UNION CONVENTIONS AN ORGY OF REACTION; PROGRESSIVES BATTLE BRAVELY AGAINST ODDS

(By a Worker Correspondent)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 20.—Progress vs. Reaction is the issue at the conventions of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, and the Brotherhood of Boilermakers, meeting in this city. The convention has been in session a week. After days of oratory leveled against everything progressive, the meetings are just now getting down to business.

While in 1920, at the last convention of the Railway Carmen, the union membership was nearly 200,000 with over 1,200 delegates present, this convention is composed of 512 delegates and the report of the general secretary-treasurer shows a membership at this time of approximately 48,000.

The Boilermakers Union has likewise lost tremendously in membership, from 85,000 in 1920 to 21,000 at the present time. The organization had 215 delegates in attendance at this convention.

Machines in Action

From the moment the conventions opened it was evident that a big fight was brewing between the reactionary machines in each convention and the progressive elements supporting the railroad amalgamation movement. The biggest reactionary guns in the American labor movement were brought into action the moment the conventions were formally opened.

Every trick known to the crafty labor fakers was utilized. Beginning

MOSCOW SOVIET BANQUET ENDS SCIENCE MEET

Japanese Proposes World Unity

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 20.—The Moscow Soviet gave a banquet to the foreign professors and diplomats to conclude the Russian Academy of Science bicentenary celebration. The Soviet minister of fine arts and education, Lunacharsky, as one feature on the program, made speeches in five languages, Russian, French, German, Italian and Latin.

The banquet was held in the enormous white hall of the "Domsoyetsoff," the former Nobles' club, where in the early part of 1924 nearly a million workers and peasants filed past in endless columns to view the body of their dead leader, Lenin. One thousand guests attended the dinner.

At the reception given by the Moscow Soviet in the Opera House in the afternoon, the Japanese professor, Fukuda, was greeted with thunderous applause when he said, "The proletariat of the world unite in their motto. So have the scientists of the world united. Now I propose a third! The proletariat and the scientists of the world, unite!"

The Moscow symphony orchestra rendered selections at the opening of the banquet.

LANTSUTSKY IS GIVEN 6 YEARS AT HARD LABOR

Polish Terror Aided by the Socialists

LODZ, Poland, Sept., 20.—Stanislaw Lantsutsky, Communist deputy to the sejm (Polish parliament), was sentenced to six years at hard labor by the Bourgua court on charges of violating the czaristic laws which still govern Poland under the white terror.

In the first trial against Lantsustky, in Przemysl, the government was defeated, as the trial was before a jury. The jury repudiated the government charges by a vote of 10 to 2. This time the trial was before an appointed judge, and the verdict in such cases is prepared in advance by the white terror regime which is riding rough shod over the workers.

Sentenced for Speech.

Workers' deputies in Poland have a right to speak to their constituents, but woe to the person who dares to speak the truth. And this was the cause of the sentence. Lantsutsky spoke the truth to the workers in the city of Pabjanice, near Lodz. In his speech he called on the workers to unite in their struggle against the capitalist exploiters.

He spoke about Communism. He pointed out that the only way out of the misery inflicted on the Polish workers is the course taken by the Russian workers. He said that the Polish workers must unite under the Soviet banner with the Russian workers to fight the imperialists. This speech was made 18 months ago.

Socialist Support White Terror.

The prosecutor demanded severe punishment for Lantsustsky, on the ground that Lantsutsky "antagonised the workers not only against the bourgeoisie, but against the socialists, so that when the socialist, Kuslowski, wanted to speak, the workers refused to hear him." This was a terrible crime, the white terror prosecutor said. They cried, "Down with the traitor." The prosecutor heatedly de-

SEAMEN CHASE HAVELOCK WILSON OFF OLYMPIC; SHIPPING STRIKE PARALYZING ATLANTIC SEABOARD

(By Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 20.—The general strike called by the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union of the I. W. W. continues to make excellent headway, as may be seen by the list of ships tied up, the conditions along the waterfront, and by the responsive attitude of all crews when reached by pickets.

The temper of the seamen may be seen by the hostile treatment given the unspeakable faker of the British National Sailors' and Firemen's Union, J. Havelock Wilson, when he tried to speak to the British seamen on the White Star liner Olympic as she lay at the New York docks.

Chase Havelock Wilson Off Olympic.

Making desperate effort to hold the crew of the Olympic, who are threatening to quit any moment at the urging of the I. W. W. pickets—half the crew already having quit and joined the strike—at the close of mess Friday night, ship's officers announced that Wilson would address the crew from the Olympic's bridge.

Before Wilson could unlimber his opening remarks, several seamen in a hostile mood asked why he was in America instead of staying in England and leading the seamen's strike there against their wage cut.

Whatever his answer was, it was lost in a chorus of derisive outcries. A steward yelled out: "What will we do with him?"

"Throw him over the side! Throw

HITS BOTTOM OF REACTION AT CHAMPAIGN

Overgaard Makes Hot But Futile Fight

By WORKER CORRESPONDENT

CHAMPAIGN, ILL, Sept. 20.—The convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor concluded its session here yesterday with the singing of "America" after having voted down the resolution for recognition of Soviet Russia on Friday afternoon, and defeating only and all resolutions mentioning struggle against capitalism.

All the reactionaries, who were in full control of the convention from start to finish, demonstrated their loyalty to the capitalist state and all its institutions and pledged their support to carry out all the policies of the late Sammy Gompers, in whose honor all of them arose and stood with bowed heads for two minutes, and became very indignant when a handfull of progressives kept their seats, refusing to stand up for this great betrayer of labor.

Walker Raves Against Soviet Russia

The fight for recognition of Soviet Russia was led by delegate Androne from Bakers' Union No. 2 and Andrew Overgaard, Machinist No. 390. Androne stated that by establishing industrial relations with Soviet Russia we would be able to assist the unemployed workers in this country, due to the fact that there is a great demand for our manufactured products by Russia and that the conditions of the workers there are improving every day and are as good as they are in spite of the lies spread to the contrary by the capitalist interests.

Delegates Overgaard stated; "It is about time that the labor movement of this country cease to take its information from the Chicago Tribune and other capitalist sheets. You do not even need to take it from the Communists, whom you seem to despise so much for no reason at all. You can take it from the leaders of the British labor movement, who not only stand for recognition but are working with the Russian trade unions to bring about unity of all trade union forces in the world against capitalism.

"You are allowing the United States government to recognize the bloody Zankov regime in Bulgaria, that is guilty of murdering thousands of workers and farmers and has completely destroyed the labor movement.

"You are for recognition of the bloody regime in Poland, where workers are being shot for belonging to a trade union, and I say, that it is a shame to come to a labor convention and find it being afraid of recognizing Soviet Russia.

"We can not afford to turn down this resolution, for in spite of all the lies spread about it, Soviet Russia is the only workers' government in the world."

At this time, weeping John Walker had stepped out of his chair for the second time against Overgaard and this time he broke his own record of previous attacks. He charged the Soviet government with conspiracy to destroy the labor movement in this country through its agents, the Communists, and used the usual insinuations against the revolutionary element in the labor movement, that they received finances from all sources and especially Russia, to destroy trade unions etc., as usual not proving anything, but that he was a demagogue who at times does not know what he is talking about.

He concluded by stating that as long as the Soviet government keeps up associations with such elements and insists in destroying our labor movement and especially our dear and beloved democratic form of government, the labor movement will cease to recognize it. And so the report of the committee was adopted.

These same hypocrites would shed crocodile tears when they were told that in this great democracy children five years of age and upwards were exploited in the cotton mills of the south and textile mills of New England. In "barbarian" Soviet Russia child labor is a thing of the past.

All this inconsistency is nothing to labor fakers, of course. All the resolutions passed mean nothing to the labor movement and will not change the situation in the state of Illinois.

The usual resolutions of the union label were passed and a number of others dealing with instruction to the legislative committees in regards to its work with the Small machine.

The convention was, in reality, nothing but a love feast for the legislature in Springfield and a preliminary campaign convention for the reelection of Gov. Small and company. The progressive unionists must organise their forces for the next convention and work to bring the Illinois labor movement back on the basis of the class struggle.

him in the [illegible] united answer of a dozen or more seamen. Wilson, betrayer of British seamen saw that astorm was coming and beat a hasty and inglorius retreat off the ship under escort of burly New York police. He is reported as intending to try his guff on the crew of the Arabic next.

More Ships Lose Crews.

The I. W. W. pickets are hitting some blows at shipping, tying up four new boats on Friday. The crews of the British steamer Dunrobin, the Norwegian Utaire, and the American, Commercial Spirit (good name for an American ship!) walked off 100 per cent, as did the crew of the Thomas P. Beal.

The crew of the steamer Matinicock quit the other day and the crimps managed to ship a crew of men who were in ignorance of the strike. But when the I. W. W. pickets got one man aboard of her, the crew piled off 100 per cent.

Slide Down Hawsers.

Members of the crew of the Cedric are leaving the ship hourly. In an effort to stop the exodus, the officers raised the gangplank, but the men keep coming over by going down the hawsers. The Panama-American liner Mongolia was scheduled to leave the pier at 1 p. m. but she was still there at 8 o'clock.

Several waterfront restaurants—"ptomaine foundries," in the language of the wobbly seamen— are posting signs in their windows asking for scabs, adding considerably to the insurance rates on plate glass. All kinds of hole and corner joints are being turned into scab-herding agencies, all indications that the strike is getting tighter on the shipping companies.

To Expose Furuseth Scabbing.

The I. W. W. strike committee in a statement issued Friday declare that for the benefit of the members of the International Seamen's Union who still believe in the integrity of their officials, that the Marine Transport Workers headquarters have complete evidence of the strikebreaking duplicity of these officials and this will be published in the next issue of the Marine Worker soon to appear.

Picket reports in New York harbor alone the following ships completely without crew: American registry; passenger liner Isabelle, passenger liner Creole, passenger liner Mongolia, freighter Trader, freighter Calabasas, freighter Eastern, freighter Sucaresco, oil tanker E. L. Dohney III, oil tanker Walter ennings, freighter Dicto, oil tanker Polarine, freighter Monticello, dredge Marcel, freighter Sucherico and freighter Minnesota.

Long List of Paralyzed Ships.

Ships of foreign registry completely without crew are as follows: Danish, ferighter Rolf and freighter Diana; British freighter London Mariner and freighter Japan Prince; Norwegian freighter Fryken and freighter Vindeggend; and the Belgian freighter Mercier.

More than 50 per cent struck are listed the following: From American lines—passenger El Caston, oil tanker Durango, freighter Hawaiian, passenger Santa Teresa, oil tanker Malabar, passenger Western World, oil tanker Oil, oil tanker Frederic Kellogg, freighter Ice Hall. From foreign registry also 50 per cent struck are the great British White Star liner Olympic, the British liner Cedric and the British liner Arabic, also the British oil tanker Clyde, with the Italian freighter Vivirno.

Newark and Baltimore. Solid.

Port Newark reports that all transmarine ships are tied up, while Baltimore, Maryland reports show that even the capitalist papers admit that the tieup is one of the most complete ever seen in that port. Mass meetings are being held and effective picket work is engaged in despite police interference.

A meeting of striking seamen held last Thursday at the water front was addressed by Rebecca Grecht, of the Workers (Communist) Party. This was the first public meeting of the union addressed by a Communist. There were about 200 strikers in attendance, who received with enthusiasm every mention of the necessity for an international united front against the capitalist offensive.

Rebecca Grecht Speaks to Strikers.

The speaker showed how the attack by the ship owners against the seamen is part of the world wide assault of capitalism against the standards of living of the workers, and emphasized the need for national and international unity of labor's forces. She pointed out how the present international seamen's strike is an expression of the increasing militancy of the workers in defense of their interests, and of their growing solidarity. The seamen were urged to stand by their union in its struggle against the shipping trust, one of the most powerful capitalist combines, and receiving the official backing of the United States government.

The Workers (Communist) Party of District No. 2 stands fully behind the strike, and is backing the strikers financially and otherwise. Regular mass meetings of strikers are held every evening at South street and Coenties' Slip. All revolutionary workers are invited to attend.

U. S. Government Leads Scab Scale.

Altho the shipping board, according to statements of Admiral Leigh C. Palmer, head of the Emergency Fleet corporation, has cut operating expenses about $14,000,000 and is now running 299 ships as compared with 341 a year ago, its vessels are carrying practically the same tonnage and do a good business on all routes, says Palmer.

The I. W. W. strikers are asking why the shipping board still refuses to give the seamen better conditions and higher wages if this is the case. The usual plea that they have to compete with foreign bottoms with cheaper labor don't hold good any longer. This is clear from the fact that the French and Danish steamship company has granted all demands and now pays much higher wages and so on than does the shipping board—and if the company couldn't make profit on that basis it would not have granted the I. W. W. demands.

COMMUNISTS AID I. W. W. SEAMEN ON STRIKE AGAINST SHIPOWNERS

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 20.—The following contributions were made by Workers Party branches of New York City to aid the striking seamen of the Marine Transport Workers' Union No. 510, I. W. W., which is conducting a strike of seamen in this port:

Harlem Jewish, $31.50; Downtown English, $15; Bronx English, $16.10; Hungarian Yorkville, $8.50.

Other contributions are coming in. All funds contributed should be sent to the Marine Workers' Union No. 510, I. W. W., 105 Broad Street, New York City, as given below.

CAL ALLOWS U. S. FLIERS TO GO ON KILLING IN RIFF

Kellogg's "Warning" Comes Very Late

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 20.—Altho Secretary of State Kellogg has "warned" the American aviators, millionaires or sons of politicians and church officials, that they are violating the law by fighting with the French against the Riffians in Africa, Kellogg has not brought the matter officially to the attention of the French government.

If the Coolidge government were really anxious to prevent the American aviators from murdering Moroccan villagers, they could have put a stop to the formation of the aviation unit at the time of its formation several weeks ago.

The aviators are fighting for the French bankers against a law which prohibits fighting for a foreign army, and carries a fine and imprisonment for violation.

However, the Americans are still bombing native women and children, and dispatches from France state they have raided the village of Boukkos, "receiving honors" in the latest French communique.

The labor movement is in a deep going crisis. The reactionary trade union officialdom are showing themselves completely incapable of meeting the difficult situation. Under their guidance the unions are either falling to pieces or rotting with B. and O. plans and other schemes of class collaboration. Upon the left wing falls the full burden of giving a lead to the organized workers and of laying the basis of organization among the vast masses of unorganised. In fulfilling this task the left wing, weak in numbers and attacked on every side, has innumerable problems to solve and obstacles to overcome. To meet the situation, it is necessary that there be a great national conference of trade union progressives and revolutionaries, which shall map out the program of the left wing and strengthen its organization. The T. U. E. L. general conference offers such a meeting. Therefore, let every locality send its full quota of delegates to this third general conference, which must be made the largest and most important in the history of the Trade Union Educational League.

INTERNATIONAL SEAMEN'S STRIKE GRIPS WORLD TRADE OF BRITAIN

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The shipping companies are discussing a complete cancellation of sailings owing to the general "outlaw" strike of seamen against the wage cut of $5 per month, which the companies imposed beginning September 1. In spite of the fact that Havelock Wilson, reactionary head of the conservation N. S. U., signed an agreement to accept the cut, the members of his union are on strike.

The companies hate to surrender to the strikers, but on the other hand, the trade of the British empire is being rapidly destroyed by the strike. The threat to cancel all sailings indefinitely is probably a bluff to make the strikers think that the companies are "going out of business" rather than grant the strikers' demands. Strikers regard this as ludicrous.

From Melbourne cable reports say that new and more serious labor trouble is ahead as Premier Bruce announced the dissolution of parliament and the calling of a general election as a result of the seamen's strike. This is said to have been caused by the state premiers' failing to support Bruce's terroristic proposals and measures taken to break the seamen's strike.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Sept. 20.—Police authorities of Durban have notified skippers of British ships that they must feed the seamen who are on strike there. Taking advantage of this, the British steamer Porteurno pulled away from the dock while the strikers were at mess on board, and put out to sea.

After she was 100 miles out the firemen struck, forcing the vessel to return to Durban. Public halls and even the jails at Durban are being turned into hotels for the strikers. The shipping companies have to pay the bills, tho not doing so with any visible good will.

The skipped of the British steamer Athelfoam at the Cape Town docks has committeed suicide, the press reports that worry over the strike being the cause.

Passengers taking the chance of coming from England to South Africa on scab ships are now being compelled to cook their own food. Sailors are chuckling over the chuck some of these birds must be eating.

Workers Must Fight the Security Pact That Aids War of Bosses on Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, under the pretense of establishing an "era of good will" for Europe, the imperialist bandits of western Europe, led by the robber cliques of Paris and London, are putting the finishing touches on their proposed "security pact" that is to receive the official seal of the capitalist foreign ministers at Lucerne, Switzerland, on Oct. 5.

It is claimed that the draft of the document has already been completed and that it is satisfactory to all concerned but that takes into consideration only the capitalist governments. It takes no account of the awakening working masses.

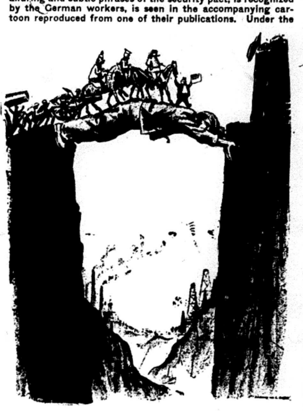
The workers and peasants of the Union of Soviet Republics were quick to see that the "security pact" was merely an instrument for achieving the security of capitalist western Europe against workers' eastern Europe. More that that. It is the creation of an alliance of capitalist nations to prepare for open war against the rule of the workers and peasants.

That this threat to the Soviet Union, hidden under the alluring and subtle phrases of the security pact, is recognized by the German workers, is seen in the accompanying cartoon reproduced from one of their publications. Under the cartoon appears this appeal: "Workers! Will you permit the capitalists to march over your backs against Russia?" Because it is over disarmed Germany, prostrate under the Morgan-Dawes' plan, that the armies of the Versailles allies must march in order to reach the western frontiesr of the Soviet Republics.



It is not surprising that the German social-democracy takes its stand, against the interests of the German workers, in support of the Luther-Hindenberg government's policy of entering the league of nations and supporting the security pact.

Everything possible has been done to win the German government of Von Hindenberg for this anti-Soviet pact. The clauses of the Versailles Peace Treaty that treat Germany as a conquered nation and as a war criminal are to be scrapped. British imperialist rule, that faces an increasing drift toward revolution at home, and that is most anxious to organize the attack against the Soviet Union, accepts its enemy of 1914 as an equal. The German menace to civilization of ten years ago becomes today the politically of the self-appointed saviours of civilization and "world culture."

• • • •

The American workers who went meekly into the world war, who assented to the imperialist Versailles Peace, who remained quiescent during the military attacks on the Russian Soviet Republic, who have not raised their voices against the Morgan-Dawes' plan, are even now aiding their class enemies by not opening an attack against the "security pact," that must have the consent of Wall Street's government at Washington, before it can really become effective.

• • • •

The gesture is made that the supervision of the pact be placed under the league of nations. But the league is the creature of the Versailles Peace of the great capitalist nations. The entrance of Germany into the league means the winning of Germany for the Franco-British war against the Soviet Union, in spite of the Rapallo treaty and in spite of the growing commercial relations between Germany and Soviet Russia.

• • • •

The biggest obstacle to the functioning of this capitalist alliance to establish its security will be found in the organized resistance of the class conscious workers within the frontiers of Germany, France and England. Let the workers of the United States take their stand against this capitalist "security pact," that is also a threat to them, and help build labor's security pact thru its own growing international solidarity. For a capitalist attack against the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union is an attack against the workers of the whole world.

INJURED MEN FIRED TO HIDE BOSSES' BLAME

Steel Trust "Safety" Talk Is the Bunk

(By Worker Correspondent.)

GARY, Ind., Sept. 20—Two Gary steel mill workers, Eddie Santon and Charles Wissenberg, were badly burned at their work and were rushed to the steel company hospital in an ambulance for treatment. These two workers were connecting an oil switch while working over live wires which accidentally became crossed, causing a flash that burned the arms and faces of the two men.

The Gary mills print a small pamphlet, The Circle, every two weeks for the "benefit" of its employes, which pamphlet seems to be very solicitious about safety for its employes, but if the officials had put in a safety device this accident would not have happened.

After this occurrence, which had endangered the lives of two men, the steel company did put in a safety device, but nevertheless they discharged the injured men after they were released from the hospital charging that the men were "inefficient."

Accident Shut Down Whole Mill.

The accident damaged the electric power system in the mill to such an extent that most of the departments using electric power were forced to shut down until extensive repairs could be made. The rolling mills and other mills in which electric power is used to operate the large steel making machinery were without sufficient power to operate from about 4:30 in the afternoon until some time after midnight.

About 8 p. m. sufficient power was obtained from an electric power plant in S. Chicago to furnish lights within the plant but it was then four hours later before the power system had been re-established so that the various mills could operate normally.

The power system breakdown also had its effect on the Gary Heat, Light and Water company which receives its power from the U. S. Steel company plant.

Workers Always Blamed.

After the accident, Superintendent Gleason appointed an assistant superintendent to make an "investigation," the result being that two men, who had been doing this kind of work for the last five years, found themselves without work because of "inefficiency."

This accident has caused many workers to ask why it is that they are always responsible for all the accidents and taking this opportunity members of our shop nucleus are telling them the reason.

Polish Minister Quits

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—(FP)—Wladislaw Wroblewski, Polish minister to the United States, has resigned while on vacation., He has been promised a good job in Warsaw or in some European capital.

Like the diplomatic representatives of Bulgaria, Hungary, Italy, Spain and Rumania, whose governments have been butchering working class agitators, the Polish minister was welcomed in Washington as a supporter of law and order, and was a social favorite.

SEVEN HUNDRED POLISH WORKERS ARE JAILED, STARVED AND TORTURED

WARSAW, Poland, Sept. 20.—Seven hundred working men, women and children have been arrested in the town of Byalestock, on charges of "being Communists." The police, agents of the Grabsky regime of white terror which is the lackey of French imperialism, made house to house searches.

When unable to find the sons and daughters, they took aged parents instead. The prisoners were shackled, taken to the town of Bielsk, and confined in an abandoned hospital.

The Polish secret police and military authorities then systematically tortured the prisoners, holding them several days without food, and finally releasing 500. The others were retained for further torture by the military police. More than one hundred further arrests were made in the homes of workmen in the town of Praga.

A STREET IN THE METROPOLIS

By ARTHUR SMITH,
(Worker Correspondent.)

A SUDDEN rush. The tall and stern-looking buildings still resound the accusing cry—murder, murder, bums, gorillas. . . The crowd pushed on toward the spot. The group of pickets surrounded by cops lost itself in the mob. Another moment—the intermingling cries of the picketing girls still vibrating in the ears—the police went into action. The clubs briskly swinging miss the victims. The onrushing crowd dart back. The pickets run. Cops and sleuths follow them in a wild man hunt. The pickets zig-zag in the crowd. Another second and six are pushed into a police patrol. Six living cells of a mighty body. . The crowd, the workers' part of the same body, look on . . . fear outshines tears . . . a flock of beaten dogs. The law takes its course.

TWENTY-NINTH STREET, New York City. The news reaches here in no time. "Yes, one of the gorillas hit him on the spine. . ." No, the police did not arrest them, so the news went. "They are still there, I mean ours . . . "—"And what did ours do?" "Why, the police were right down on us. We could not do anything."

The pickets murmur in suppressed voices as they march past the preyful eyes of gangsters and police. No plan . . . action shall give advice. By intuition the line sways around. Scabs are coming.

The gangsters rush on. The two cops attempt to hold the pickets back. Persuading words, warnings and threats break thru the noise. The fight is on. Cries, cheers and jeers. A part of that mighty body in action. Blows are exchanged. The powerful fist of labor sounds the hollowness of a gangster's head. The cops finally break thru the crowd. The last of the gangsters are still holding on. The cops mingle in. A blow, and one of them is brot to his senses. The usual procedure of police, van and ambulance, follows. This time, however, gangsters are taken to the hospital, and ours . . . well, you know.

ON the opposite corner. On a building in process of construction, high above the street level human flies move in haste. For whom? It does not matter. "For how much?" dictates the speed. The street underneath is not conscious of those above. But now it stops.

A small piece of humanity, still alive is whirling down thru the air. Buildings resound as the body strikes the ground.

Debris . . . a human life cut in two . . on top of the debris. Police. Ambulance. The breathless silence is broken. The hustling begins . . . on the street and above it.

The building has been put up in three months. Short three months . . . and how many lives?

The Needle Trades need more buildings. Slaves build them, to give other slaves a chance to make a living in them. And so it goes. Slaves and other slaves defending property produced by slaves. Money kings. And the struggle goes on.

Above the street level, risking their lives for a piece of daily bread—the masons. On the streets exposing themselves to the sluggers and police brutalities, the needle workers.

AT the headquarters. Here pulsating life of struggle is felt and witnessed. A buzzing bee hive. Groups going out to picket, others coming in. Telephones ring. Questions are asked, reports taken, money paid in and handed out. The office rooms and hall ways filled with enthusiastic workers. The fight makes them feel equal to the opponent. It is the spirit of life . . . a fighting chance, is all needed. New groups are coming. One almost forcing out everyone in the room. It's the workers of a shop on strike. Their leader with bandaged head and face, except for his eyes and mouth. He tells a short tale. "Gangsters came up to our shop. Several girls there sympathized with you, brothers. They never did anything wrong. The gangsters wanted to throw them out. Called them names. I interfered. Told them to go back where they came from. They turned on me and beat me up. We went on strike and here we are." The girls and the men stood by nodding their heads in approval. So it was.

The shop has been with the "machine" all the time. Now they are with us . . . the "machine" gave them the push. And the leader drawing money from his pocket, said: "To punish myself for my wrong stand I decided to donate ten dollars to your defense fund." The ranks followed him. . . .

BLOOD and material sacrifice, to defend their daily bread, here, and blood and material sacrifice to gain their daily bread, over there at the building.

GARY STEEL MILLS CUT MEN'S WAGE

Steel Trust Bosses Are Gouging Workers

(By A WORKER CORRESPONDENT)
(Gary Shop Nucleus)

GARY, Ind. Sept. 20.—The steel workers are finding out about Judge Gary's prosperity. The "Hot Mill" of the American Sheet and Tin Plate company has put over a wage cut of eight per cent in the wages of about 500 men.

Because there is no union there isn't any remedy for it or way to fight it. This shows how badly the steel workers need a union, an industrial union. Not having any, the men do just what the bosses want, most of them take it. The rest get disgusted one by one, and one by one they just quit and "go somewhere else." That's what the bosses want. There isn't any collective fight.

This "Hot Mill" employs mostly Negroes and Mexicans. The steel trust is importing hundreds of Mexicans. The U. S. steel kept 500 Mexican workers in a Gary hall, with army cots to sleep on and in very bad conditions for some time. Finally they got them moved into houses. But the houses aren't much better.

In the plate and job mill department of the American Sheet and Tin plate company, there is a boss—a mean, miserably mean, strawboss. His name is J. Kopsk. But the men call him other names that sound worse than that. This skunk comes around to a worker and says, "Say, let me have a few dollars!" And he gets the loan from the workers one after another. Then he never pays them back what he "borrowed."

This strawboss had better watch his step and fork over that money. The Negro workers are afraid not to loan him money when he asks for it, and are afraid to ask him for it once he gets it, because they fear getting fired.

Getting fired in the "Hot Mill" means too much. Not because they pay you good wages. But because when you go to work you have to learn the trade—break in—on your own time. And you work for a week or two for nothing.

There are 14,000 Negroes in the Gary steel mills and most of them are proletarians, but few of them know of the Workers (Communist) Party and how it teaches labor to free itself from such capitalist slavery as it now suffers by a revolution of the working masses, united all-together, in the army of toilers.

DAILY WORKER READERS RESPOND TO APPEAL OF TONY STANFL, MINER

In answer to the appeal of Comrade Tony Stanfl of Mystic, Iowa, many readers of the DAILY WORKER sent messages and money to help this miner who has been left in the state of an invalid as the result of disease contracted while at work. A worker from the printing trades in Detroit sent special medicine.

A check for $35.00 was forwarded to Comrade Stanfl Monday, including the following donations:

A. Frederickson, Ferndale, Mich. $2.00; J. A. Ueker, St. Louis, Mo. $5.00; South Slavic br., W. P., N. S. Pittsburgh, Pa. $3.00; C. Kroll, New York, N. Y. $5.00; W. F. Miller, Chicago, Ill. $2.00; A. B., Zanesville, O. $1.00; M. Wilgus, Saranac Lake, N. Y. $1.00; E. Israelson, Chicago, Ill. $5.00; Chas. Erickson, Cicero, Ill. $1.00; Ed. Shantz, Chicago, Ill. J. Devine, Cleveland, Ohio, $3.00.

MINERS STRIKE FOR 1923 SCALE IN COKE REGION

General Strike Talked in Bituminous Field

By STANLEY KITTA.
(Worker Correspondent)

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 20—The attempt of the coal and coke companies to introduce the 1917 scale after the "starvation cure" of unemployment is rousing the anger of the coal miners who are striking against the attempt.

There are 500 men out at the Jamison Coal and Coke company, 300 out at the Washington Coal and Coke company—striking for union wages according to the Jacksonville agreement and for recognition of the union and of union rights.

The Independent Coal and Coke companies are paying the 1917 scale and even lower in the coke region. The miners have been on strike since September 9 in some mines. The Hillman's Republic, Iron and Steel and the Sheet and Tube company's mines are liable to join the strike for the 1923 scale.

PHILADELPHIA OFFICIALS BUILD "INDEPENDENCE" DAY STRUCTURES UNDER "OPEN SHOP" CONDITIONS

(By Worker Correspondence.)

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 20.—Preparations for the hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the declaration of independence are going on in Philadelphia in scab fashion with a 10-hour day and non-union pay for the workers doing the necessary construction. A big delegation of Philadelphia labor men put the issue before Mayor Kendrick.

"Unless conditions change for the better the proposed Susqui-Centennial will prove to be a curse," John A. Philips, vice-president of the International Typographical Union and a member of the delegation told the mayor.

Not only is the patriotic festival being prepared for under the "open shop" plan, but big city engineering jobs are on a similar basis. The Municipal Stadium, the Delaware Bridge and the Broad street subway are being built with the 10-hour day and non-union wages. Of the subway work John M. Ritchie, local represntative of the American Federation of Labor, told the mayor:

"Men employed there work a 10-hour day, six or seven days a week. Union scale of pay is not recognized and some men work 12 and 14 hours daily at straight time pay. Carpenters on the subway receive 55 and 60 cents an hour as against the union rate of $1.12. Cement workers, iron workers, machinists and blacksmiths also are paid at rates far below the standard set by the labor unions. Many of the laborers of these projects are brot to Philadelphia by alluring advertisements that are scattered over the country and not all of the thousands lured here can be given work on the contracts."

Mayor Kendrick said he was hearing these facts about municipal labor conditions "for the first time."

POLICE FAVOR N. Y. YELLOW SCAB TAXIS

Discriminate Against Independent Drivers

(From a Worker Correspondent).

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 20.—A number of complaints have been made by tax drivers and independent taxi owners regarding the activities of members of the police department connected with the office of Deputy Police Commissioner John Daley, who has charge of the licensing of both the driver of the cab and the taxi and also the supervision of the taxicab industry in this city.

Taxi Meter, a weekly trade newspaper, in an effort to prove the authenticity of the statements made, investigated the source of the complaints and was rewarded by securing affidavits, one of which is printed below:

State of New York } SS:
City of New York }

On Sunday, August 23, while standing at Surf and Stillwell Avenues, Coney Island, New York, two policemen attached to the hack bureau of the police department inspected several independent taxicabs, and stripped two men for having a broken seal on their running gear of the taxi meter equipment.

I called the attention of the two officers to five yellow taxicabs with seals missing. The following taxicabs mentioned: 030692, 029237, 030340, 030316, 029207.

The two policemen took no action on these Yellow company cabs, saying they had nothing to do with it.

I complained to Commissioner Daley in this matter and at a hearing held on the 25th of August, at 10 a. m., after I had presented my testimony, Commissioner Daley said he did not think it was right for independent taxi men to give the policemen any orders and dismissed my complaint, taking no action in the matter.

Hylan Family Interested.

It is a well known fact that relatives of Mayor Hylan are financially interested in the Yellow Taxi corporation. Carrol Sinnott, the brother of the secretary and son-in-law to the mayor is one of the traffic mangers of the Yellow Taxi corporation. In view of this state of affairs, it is not strange that there is discrimination on the part of the administration in favor of the Yellow Taxi corporation.

Pullman Porters Hold Organization Meeting in D. C.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—(FP)—Pullman porters on railroads entering Washington are being solicited to join the union of their trade, the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, which is to hold a mass meeting in the capital on Sept. 24. Roy Lancaster, secretary-treasurer of the organization, who has been conducting a membership campaign in New York, will be the chief speaker. Others will include Rienzi B. Lemus, president of the Brotherhood of Dining Car Employes, and Prof. Neval H. Thomas.

BOSTON STORE ROBS WHITE COLLAR SLAVES BY ABOLISHING COMMISSION ON DAY OF SALE, PAY IS PITIFUL

(By WORKER CORRESPONDENT)

On the fourteenth of September the Boston Store had a bg sale, celebrating the 13th anniversary of the basement, where usually second grade material is sold. A good profit was made on this sale, even tho the prices were somewhat cheaper than for the better grade of goods.

The head of the basement department, Bob Steinman, worked out a scheme by which the workers paid for the difference in the prices charged at the sale and the usual prices. Usually the salesmen do not get wages, but work on commissions, getting between three and seven per cent commissions.

Steinman, afraid the workers might make a decent wage during that sale, proposed his plan to the management of the store. He proposed that the salesmen should not get any commission on the day of the sale but should get paid $3.00 to $4.00 for that day instead of the usual commission.

The management gladly accepted the plan by which the workers were robbed of several hundreds of dollars. The salesmen were looking forward to the sale, expecting that after the dull summer season, when they make but $6.00 to $14.00 per week, they would make up for this period of starvation to some extent. But they were left out in the cold by the robbing tactics of the Boston Store.

The salesmen are angry, but can do little, because they are not organized into a union. Some of them are now agitating for union conditions and a union organization.

COAL STRIKE IN WEST VIRGINIA LOST DUE TO SPINELESSNESS OF UNION LEADERS; PICKETERS JAILED

By REGINO MYROSKI
(Worker Correspondent)

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 20.—As might have been expected, the struggle between the coal operators and the miners in this section is resulting in the latter's defeat. True, the coal strike has not been declared at an end, but morally it is—most of the strikers having returned to work at the 1917 scale. There are still a few valiant fighters who are holding out, but the probabilities are that they also will be forced to return to work at the reduced scale—they cannot afford to let their families starve.

Thruout the whole struggle the fight was unfair. Everything was in the favor of the capitalists—courts, press, etc. The miners were organised in April, when they struck, and joined the U. M. W. of A., but whether they can remain members of that organization and secure employment at the local mines is a question.

Spineless Union Officials.

A good portion of the defeat is due to the spineless leadership of the Lewis gang. Instead of doing something worthwhile, and helping the miners out during their life and death struggle, all that the Lewis crew did was to hold a few meetings presided over by the local preachers and other pillars of the capitalist class.

Naturally, the strikers got nowhere with the exception that when some of them picketed the house of a scab the representatives of the "law" succeeded in arresting them and indicting them under the Redman act. The first one tried was sentenced to 10 years in the state penitentiary. The other cases were continued to the September term of court.

Speaking of the trials, the September term of court has commenced, but nothing is heard of those cases. What has happened? Have they decided to put them off still longer? No one seems to know and the court is not giving out information.

Picketers Get Jail Terms.

Oh, yes, some harmless picketing was done here. Even tho it was harmless and ineffectual the capitalists were loathe to see the workers have even that much privilege and so some of the pickers were arrested and given jail sentences and fines. And now these same picketers report that they are blacklisted. Those who were arrested while picketing won't be able to secure employment at any of the local mines. But what can one expect in the "Snake State"?

One may occasionally read fairy tales about this being the "Land of Promise" and all the rest of the bunk, but is it? If you worship the dollar sign and lick your master's boots.

The Party and Its Press -

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, General Secretary, Workers (Communist) Party.

WITHOUT its press, the party would be in the position of a mute. It is thru its press that the party reaches out to its members and the masses and mobilizes them for action.

The party press should in every news article, editorial, or general article, be an expression of the party. Every line of a party newspaper should express to the working class the ideas and policies of the party. A party newspaper should be an interpretation of the daily events from a Communist viewpoint. The reader of a party newspaper should be made to feel in the material he is reading an entity—the purpose of the party, its interpretation of capitalist society and its program of action against the existing social system. When our press attains such coherence and unity then it will really become a Bolshevik press.

We are far from having attained this ideal. Our 25 weekly or daily newspapers are far from being a unit, expressing the same views, interpreting events in the same manner and carrying on the same campaigns. Quite the contrary is the fact. One might think from reading our papers that they represent 25 different organizations in place of one united centralized Communist Party. This is not only true of our press as a whole, but even individual papers have not yet reached that development which makes them an entity which day by day expresses the views and interpretations which flow from one definite, central, established, set of principles.

THE organization and mobilization of our papers as an instrument of the party, daily and weekly, expressing what the party has to say regarding current events, what the party is asking the workers to do, and the inner life of the party is one of the big tasks before the party. We must give our press a centralized direction. Our papers cannot be the expression of the view of the individuals who happen to edit a particular paper, but must always express the view of the party.

Our papers must become the instrument of the party in relation to all campaigns which the party initiates among the workers. It too often happens now that the party issues manifestos and sends organization instruction to the party units and these are printed in the party press and then our papers forget about the campaigns. There is no initiative on the part of the editors of the papers in support of these campaigns. When the party begins a campaign all the party papers should day by day, week by week, print news articles and editorials concerning what the party is trying to do in an effort to arouse the workers in support of its struggles.

WITH a press that has nearly 200,000 readers we have a powerful instrument. We have not yet learned how to use that instrument efficiently. We have not learned to make our press speak as one must in support of the party. With the establishment of the Agitprop of our party we are taking a step toward this end. We must continue our efforts until we have made of our many party papers one unified instrument which responds quickly to whatever the party proposes to the masses.

The celebration of International Press Day should be for the party the beginning of a conscious effort to improve the party press and make it one mighty weapon which it can, in the struggle of the party against the capitalist class and for the Communist Party.

SEND MARINES TO NICARAGUA TO AID BANKERS

Coolidge Protects Wall Street's Loans

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—(FP)— No love for the liberal regime of President Salorzano has prompted the state department in sending the gunboats Denver and Tulsa, with 800 sailors and marines each, to "restore order" in Nicaragua. Salorzano, faced by sudden armed revolt by the old Chamorrista party, appealed to the American minister for help, and orders were quickly sent to Balboa that the two shiploads of armed men should sail at once for Bluefields and Corinto. But Washington's motive is simply one of protecting American bankers' loans, and the regular payment of interest on these loans.

Latin-American political intrigue is complex enough, and the intrigue of Wall Street, through Washington, in the affairs of Latin republics is a web of treacheries and reverses—all looking toward one end, which is the disciplining of these Latin-Americans to work hard and patiently for the bankers, and to take orders from Washington.

Bankers After Interest.

Salorzano, while a mild liberal, was willing to pay the interest on all the American loans, and to arrange for new loans at generous rates of interest. When the Chamorro family, representing the big landowners who formerly acted as a government for Wall Street, kidnapped the Salorzano cabinet and upset the whole country without any prior understanding with Washington, it was time for firm disciplinary steps.

Possibly the mere show of force will be sufficient, this time, to persuade the Chamorristas that the bankers cannot stand for the economic waste involved in a new civil war. Two or three years of fighting would probably lead to a victory for Salorzano in any case, and the bankers would have to wait a while for their interest.

On the other hand, there are in Washington a number of experts on Central American affairs who point out that the Chamorro uprising has come promptly and most fortunately on the heels of the withdrawal of the American marines from Nigaragua, where they have been stationed since they were sent in to overthrow the Madriz government in 1910, and to defeat the Mena government in 1912.

If it were the purpose of the Washington authorities to show that American marines are necessary to preserve peace in Nicaragua, then it could not have done better than to have first withdrawn the marines and then discovered the inefficiency of the new Nicaraguan constabulary, which is officered by Americans selected by the state department.

Marines to Overthrow Election.

President Taft sent the Paducah to Bluefields in May 1910, where it landed marines and prevented the capture of the town by government forces who were beseiging a rebel force. President Madriz had refused to make a treaty with the United States, desired by American bankers.

On Sept. 26, 1912, the foreign minister of the government set up by aid of Taft and the marines reported to the other Central American governments: "I have the honor to inform your excellencies that on the 24th instant General Luis Mena surrendered in Granada with more or less 700 men to the commander of the Pasific fleet of the United States, Admiral W. H. Southerland, the latter promising to take him to Panama under his protection, under promise that he would not return to Nicaragua and that his forces be disarmed."

In the following January, reporting on his campaign in Nicaragua, Admiral Southerland said: "Commander Steele, chief of the California troops, was at the head of the forces in each of the encounters. . . . at the Massaya pass, at Granada, at Chichigalpa, at Leon, and in the assault on the hill of Coyotepe, and he was the first to raise the American flag on the top of the hill." He describes the engagements with "the enemy", and the final rout of the liberals, who, as the American forces poured volleys into their fleeing ranks, "seemed crazy-like, shouting and shrieking from terror."

It is the beneficiaries, in Nicaragua, of this slaughter in 1912 who are now trying to overthrow President Salorzano, who won the election last fail.

The Workers Party in Action

Lithuanians Getting Ready for Reorganization

By V. J. ANDRULIS.

It has never been my desire to talk as a member of a section. I think I express the sentiment of many active comrades of the language sections of our party. But we have language sections and it is necessary for some comrades to take care of them—to work in them. Working in them, of course, we have to talk and write about them, whether we want to or not. That is why we have to write about them now. But I am glad we do it now only to see our way clear how successfully to get along without language sections—to centralize the party.

A Short History.

The Lithuanian section is one of the oldest sections in our party. We were thrown out of the socialist party with five or six other federations and the whole socialist left wing. During the organization of the Communist Party, the Lithuanian Federation was active. It participated in the organization of the Communist Party, not only thru the activities of the over 6,000 members, but also by means of financial aid amounting to $1,500.

Then came the infamous Palmer's raids. As all of us know, the Communist Party at that time was less centralized than it is now. The blow, therefore, was hard. The Lithuanian Federation, with the rest of the party, had to work hard to develop the movement under the new conditions.

During the "underground period" the membership decreased I think, to less than half. Of course, those that left did not go over to the enemy's camps. But they limited their activities to educational, fraternal organizations and in the trade unions. There they worked with us as they are doing now.

Back to Masses Again.

The coming of the Workers Party was heartily welcomed by most of the members of the Lithuanian Federation. But at that time we had quite a numerous sectarian element and they split away from the federation. Most of them came back and those that remained outside degenerated into a small reactionary group. Thus, the federation got rid of both right wing opportunism and sectarian left tendency. Today, no Loreism, no opportunism is visible in the Lithuanian section.

Its Strength and Influence.

In proportion to the Lithuanian population in the United States, our Communist movement is strong. There are approximately about 750,000 Lithuanians in this country. Altho our section has only about 1,400 members, its influence is much greater. The section is in control of one educational organization with 6,000 members; a working women's organization with 2,000 members; a proletarian amateur-artists' organization with 1,500 members. It has a daily paper, semi-weekly, and a monthly journal. Its influence also is great in almost every Lithuanian progressive organization. When there were language locals in the U. M. W. of A., in most of these local our comrades were leaders and officers. Now it is the same in the case of the A. C. W. of A., Lithuanian locals. It is true, in two out of six our comrades were beaten, but most of us know what means the reactionaries used to beat us. Yet, in spite of that, our comrades again are regaining the positions they held in their locals.

Having that much experience in securing contact with the masses, we naturally resented every tendency to sectarianism. That is why the dropping of the slogan of a labor party was so much opposed by the Lithuanian section—so much so, that the whole section, with a very small exception, stood with the former minority.

The New Step.

I think I can safely say that as far as the Lithuanian section is concerned, the party's reorganization will meet with success. Firstly there is no opposition, neither to shop nuclei nor to international branches. Secondly, for Communist work among masses of Lithuanian workers, we already have effective means thru our other organizations, and we will effectively use these where the party's apparatus cannot be used successfully at the beginning. As far as the Communist movement is concerned among the Lithuanian workers, abolishing the language sections in our party will do no harm. On the other hand, the reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei and the international branches will centralize our party nad provide better means to reach workers in the shops. We can be sure that a stronger party working more effectively among the English speaking workers, will also more successfully reach the foreign speaking workers.

The reorganization has another advantage for those sections of our party that have other organizations. For instance, I heard a Lithuanian worker say, many times, when asked to join our section: "I belong to your organization that also is doing Communist work like your section." Some probably used this as an excuse for not joining the Workers Party—but there are many to whom it is difficult to explain that an educational organization is not a revolutionary party even if it is Communistic. But it will be easier to show to many a worker the difference between the centralized, Bolshevized revolutionary party and its semi-Communistic auxiliary organizations. It will be easier to show them that unless they are members of the revolutionary party, they cannot be Communists.

We therefore face the reorganization mainly only with problems how to get every member of our section into either shop nuclei or international branches. This depends much on our press and organizing ability. For the Bureau of the Lithuanian section, I can say, that it is getting behind the reorganization campaign with concentrated energy and strong determination. The other problem is: how to make the nuclei and branches effective in their work. Our party is composed of many different language speaking members. That is a difficulty. For many years this social-democratic federation-system psychologized the membership; so that now it is difficult to undo it. But we have to overcome it. Recalling the many difficult moments our party successfully overcame, we can be sure of our success in overcoming the language difficulties.

Get Ready for Reorganization

IN yesterday's DAILY WORKER the Organization Department announced its plan to mobilize the membership for the reorganization of the party into shop nuclei and international branches.

With the beginning of this campaign to reconstruct our party, a series of articles on organizational questions is being printed in every organ of the party. Questions and problems confronting our members in the rebuilding of the party will be answered and analyzed in the DAILY WORKER by Comrade Jay Lovestone, head of the Organization Department, and other party members.

The DAILY WORKER has also established a special section for the Organization Department. In this section there is being printed articles on the progress of the organization campaign, the experiences of the comrades in the work of organization, and letters and reports from comrades giving their experiences in carrying on the party's activities thru the shop nuclei.

These articles will be living articles, and of intense interest.

Watch these columns closely.

PHILADELPHIA MEMBERSHIP TO DISCUSS REORGANIZATION

BIG preparations are afoot in the Philadelphia district to make the general membership meeting to take place September 26, the biggest and most successful meeting ever held in the district. The general membership meeting of the district, to discuss the Bolshevization of the party and its reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei, will take place Saturday, September 26, at 6 p. m., in the Machinists' Temple. Comrade W. Weinstone, district organizer of the New York district, will represent the Central Executive Committee and will lead the discussion at this meeting.

All Philadelphia members should be present at this meeting in order to secure a better understanding of the party tasks at the present moment.

Oppose Freight Increase

The state of Illinois will oppose an increase of five per cent in freight rates asked by western railroads when hearings before Chairman Clyde B. Aitchison of the interstate commerce commission are resumed here, it was announced.

GENERAL MEMBERSHIP MEETING IN NEW YORK ON FRIDAY, SEPT. 25

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—A general membership meeting will be held on Friday, Sept. 25, at 8 p. m., at the Manhattan Lyceum, 66 E. 14th St. Jay Lovestone will report for the C. E. C. on the work of the national convention and the immediate tasks of the district with regard to bolshevization and reorganization of the district. All other meetings are called off for this day and every party member must attend the membership meeting.

MEMBERSHIP OF PARTY APPROVES CONVENTION ACTS

Pledges Loyalty to the Decisions of the C. I.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—At a general membership meeting of the Workers Party of this city, called for the purpose of hearing the report of the delegate to the national convention, the following resolution, introduced by members of the D. E. C., was unanimously carried: "Resolved that we will whole-heartedly carry out the decision of the C. I. and that we will work earnestly for the purpose of liquidating the factional struggle, and we will adhere strictly to the decisions and instructions of the new C. E. C., and diligently work for the Bolshevization of our Workers (Communist) Party."

Resolution Adopted at the General Party Meeting Held Sept. 11, in Seattle, Wash.

We, the members of all branches in Seattle of the Workers Party of America, in mass meeting assembled this day, Friday, Sept. 11, 1925, in the Record Bldg., after considering the report of our national convention and the decision of the Comintern, and after mature deliberations resolve and declare that we reafirm our loyalty and pledge our unqualified support to the Comintern and highly commend our Comintern for its Communist guidance in its endeavors to preserve our party by bringing about harmony and unity in our ranks.

We unconditionally approve of the actions of the Comintern in choosing and turning over the leadership of our party to the group of comrades whom it considered to be nearest in its approach to Communist ideology and understanding and who are trustworthy of such leadership.

To the best of our knowledge most of these comrades represented in the Ruthenberg group have had years of experience in our party and the revolutionary movement in America, and in our opinion are trustworthy of such leadership.

In accordance with the decision of our Comintern we pledge our undivided support and loyalty to the Central Executive Committee as constituted under the Ruthenberg group leadership and pledge our assuranc that we will continue our efforts in the building up our party and movement and help rally the mass of the workers to the Communist standard.

The above resolution has been adopted by unanimous vote of the members.

money talks to everybody. It is almost as convincing as their beer. It has a special appeal for jail guards, sheriffs and such folk. Cook county jail has been changing wardens recently almost as often as Terry Druggan changes his silk shirts. But the new ones are constantly getting into trouble because of Terry's persuasiveness.

LAST Friday a group of newspaper men visited the jail to learn for themselves if Messers Lake and Druggan were there or not. Like the "nine blind men of Hindoostan, to learning much inclined (who) went out to see an elephant, tho all of them were blind, that each by observation might satisfy his mind" the newspapermen would not take no for an answer and the warden, that is the warden of the day, took a chance and hoping for the better, prepared for the worst. And the worst was not slow in putting in an appearance, in the person of Frankie Lake, who was running down the stairs, evidently about to take his morning stroll along Michigan boulevard. Druggan was in his cell because he did not care to walk out. The door was open.

IF the class war prisoners in various parts of the United States read his, they will have something to think about. The cases of the two millionaire bootleggers are not isolated ones. Had they been "respectable" business men and not outlawed gangsters, no notice would have been taken of the affair. Former Governor McCray of Indiana, is having a nice easy time in Atlanta, Georgia. He got away with millions of dollars. A worker who gets in bad with the government for organizing his fellow slaves, gets five to ten years and no favors.

TODAY is International Communist Press Day. The press is the principal propaganda weapon of the Communist movement and it must be constantly improved, in order to become more and more effective for the giant task ahead of it. The Communist press does not depend entirely on its staff writers and editors. A Communist press that has to do this falls short of the mark. The DAILY WORKER aims at becoming a mass paper and it can only reach this goal thru the co-operation of the workers in the industries.

EVERY worker, and particularly every Communist worker should determine from this day to send in the news of what is taking place in his shop or place of employment. It is the news and not what the reporter thinks that is interesting and instructive. One worker correspondent declared that what took place in the shop was too local and did not excite his enthusiasm. He preferred to tell us about the Dawes' plan, which is a very important matter, but we do not know what is going on in the shops and we depend on the workers in the shops for that information.

Strikebreaking Labor Department is Pretty Busy; Many Cases Up

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—On Aug. 22, 1925, there were 32 strikes before the labor department for settlement and in addition 22 controversies which had not reached the strike stage. Total number of cases pending, 54, eight of which are new. The eight new cases may be compared with nine and 10 for the first and second weeks preceding. The new cases involve plumbers and steamfitters, printing pressmen, clothing workers, dredgemen, foundrymen, coal miners and textile workers.

INDIA'S STEEL WORKERS GAIN UNION, REPORT

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—Organized labor of India, recently defeated in the Northwestern Railway strike and now fighting on the textile factory front in Bombay has won recognition in the steel industry without a strike, according to papers arriving in New York from Indian ports. The new deal affects the 25,000 workers employed by the Tata company, a group of Indian capitalists who have a virtual monopoly of the iron and steel industry in the peninsula and who never before have recognized a labor union.

The Labor Association of Jamshedpur, the union getting recognition is affiliated with the All-India Trade Union Congress. The city of Jamshedpur is the steel producing center, 20 miles out of Calcutta.

The workers there were said to have been primed for a strike when the company conceded three main points—the reinstatement of Sethi, an organizer discharged for his union activities; recognition of the union and the promise of a system of union dues collections equivalent to the American check-off, if the union desired it.

For Progress in Education.

The American Federation of Teachers has announced thru its secretary, F. G. Stecker, that it will sponsor the educational bill slated to come up in congress which recommends educational ataches to foreign countries.

TRADE LOSS IF GERMANY JOINS NATIONS LEAGUE

Big Opportunities Now in Soviet Union

MOSCOW, (By Tass)—The press here draws attention to a letter written to editors of Berlin papers by a German merchant resident in the U. S. S. R., who, among other things, deals with the question as to how Germany's entrance into the league of nations might affect her trade relations with the Soviet Union.

The author points out that the actual economic position and the economic development of the Soviet Union for the past six months or so, as well as favorable crop prospects, offer alluring openings for German industry, which, given a favorable political juncture, can largely develop and increase exports to the U. S. S. R. thanks to the growing purchasing capacities of all the layers of the population, more especially the peasantry, of the Union.

On the other hand, the writer warns the German public lest an eventual decrease of exports to the U. S. S. R. as a result of Germany joining the league might prove the more dangerous that export trade profits are the only source from which Germany can honor her reparations obligations.

TERRIBLE TRAIL OF BLOOD AND DEATH OF COAL MINERS; WHOLE CITIES OF DEAD AND INJURED

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

In the production of coal since 1906, 50,000 miners have been killed in the United States, according to the figures of the bureau of mines recently published. Since 1912 coal production has cost the lives of 34,000 miners. Since 1916, 21,000 lives have been lost. In 1924, the last available official figures show that 2,871 miners lost their lives in the pits of this country.

Wholesale Slaughter.

The U. S. bureau of mines' figures show that an average of 2,500 men were killed each year for twenty years. In 1906, 484,000 men were employed 300 days, and 2,658 were killed, making a rate of 5.49 men killed per thousand that year. That the coal mining industry has made no appreciable progress in safeguarding the lives of the underground slaves is seen in the following comparative figures.

Killings on the Increase.

From 1916 to 1920, there were 4.03 miners killed out of every thousand that were employed 300 days in each year. From 1920 to 1922, the killing rate was 4.06, an increase of .03 per thousand men employed. The official figures for 1924 are not yet complete but those at hand show an enormous increase in life lost in the mines over 1923.

For instance, the figures show there were 4.31 miners killed per million tons produced in 1924, as against 3.87 miners killed per million tons produced in 1923. The figures for the first five months of 1925 already indicate an increase over 1924.

City of Cripples.

Two thousand five hundred miners killed and over 100,000 injured per year is the toll in human lives in the mining industry. Thousands of the injured would have been better off had they been killed outright at the time of their injuries. Thousands of the injured live in misery for years racked with physical suffering, and mentally tortured by the sight of their loved ones in semi-starvation. Broken backs, broken ribs, crushed legs and feet, burned with gas, and others with internal injuries from which they will never recover are a sample of the injuries received in the coal mines in this country.

Lawyers like Vultures.

Coupled to this terrible suffering many miners totally permanently incapacitated are hounded by coal company lawyers in an attempt to have them settle their claims against the coal company for a few dollars in violation of the state compensation law, which specifically states the amount that shall be awarded the injured, sometimes three and four times the amount offered the victim by the coal company lawyers.

Trick the Victims.

The coal company lawyers take every advantage of the injured victim, every legal technicality to beat them out of their legal award. The writer has known miners injured in the mines in Illinois that have had their cases against the coal company continued for over two years before they could get a hearing before the arbitration board.

Finally, when it came before the arbitration board for hearing and decision, it was disagreed upon and appealed, then again appealed, and finally referred back for a new trial, which many times has resulted in the starving victim accepting fifty per cent of what he was entitled to under the law, to be able at once to get something to eat for his starving children.

No Sympathy for Destitute.

The same kind of treatment is given to the widows and dependents of the fatally injured miners. In most of these cases a petition is made to the board for a complete settlement, better known as a lump sum settlement, that the dependents may be able to enter some kind of business with whatever amount they get instead of waiting for it to be paid them in small doles per week.

After waiting until the operators are ready to give them a hearing on this case they generally get a lump sum settlement, but after it is whittled down, with percentage cut off, in favor of the coal operator, because of his "kind heart" in permitting the lump sum settlement, the victim is permitted to go his, or her way badly shorn, and the lump sum is a very small lump indeed.

Capitalist Press is Silent.

The terrible suffering amongst the miners and their families as a result of injuries to the bread winner is a phrase of life in the mining communities seldom mentioned. When you consider the fact that over 100,000 injuries of major or minor degree happen in the mines thruout America each year, you will readily understand the intense suffering amongst the miners, and understand the conspiracy of silence of the capitalist press in keeping this condition from the public.

One other reason the enormity of this suffering is so little understood, is because the accidents are scattered over the entire country, and it is only in cases where there are large explosions and appaling loss of life that we ever hear of them at all.

Cities of Dead.

To understand the actual suffering among the miners and their families let us gather the coal mining accidents that happen thruout America into two coal mining centers. One city with a population of 2,500 miners with their wives and families, and another wth a population of 100,000 miners with their wives and families.

Witness, then, at the beginning of each year for the last 20 years a city of 2,500 miners with their wives and families in the fulness of life, looking forward to a happy home, as most miners do, dreaming of the time when they can give to their children an education, and a better start in life than they themselves had.

View this city at the beginning of each year, full of life, and the same city at the end of each year, a city of the dead—the 2,500 miners completely wiped out, killed at their toil in the bowels of the earth, a city of two thousand five hundred now stilled in death, a city of widows and starving children, fatherless and in despair, their spirits broken, their hopes and aspirations crushed, twenty-five hundred slaves crushed into profits for the coal magnates of America.

100,000 Crutches.

View another city, one with one hundred thousand miners at the beginning of the year, healthy and strong with hopeful outlook on life, in the course of one year become injured, some of them maimed for life, some whom would have been better off had they been killed outright at the time of the injury.

Witness this city of 100,000 miners, their wives and families suffering untold misery, and existing in a state of sem-starvation and despair. If you can picture this condition of affairs in our mining communities, you can readily understand the terrible life in the mining industry in America.

Twenty-five hundred slaughtered and one hundred thousand injured every year, for the last twenty years or a total of 50,000 killed and around 2,000,000 injured for the same period—20 years. Little progress has been made in safeguarding the lives of the underground slaves in the last two decades. The main causes are the same today as twenty years ago despite the fact that there have been many preventive measures discovered.

Rockdust Lessens Explosions.

One of the main causes of the fatalities is due to gas and dust explosions. A few mines in a few states have made an attempt to lessen the danger by rock dusting, but the most of the companies have refused to use it, declaring that it is "too expensive."

It is claimed by many coal companies that if the state forces rock dusting in the mines, it will put them out of business as they will be unable to compete with the other states that do not have to rock dust the haulage ways, so the merry round of killing goes on. It is cheaper to kill coal miners than to make any effort to safeguard their lives with rockdusting.

Nationalize the Mines.

There is only one remedy for this continuous killing of coal miners in America and that is nationalization of the mines with workers' control. The first consideration of the mining industry must be service, instead of profit, but before this can be accomplished, the workers must be organized politically. They must build from the trade unions, and all other organizations of a working class nature, a labor party for the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government.

COUPLE SPENT MILLION FOR LIVING EXPENSES IN FIVE YEARS; DIVORCE

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The declaration that Thomas H. Symington and his beautiful wife, Ida May, spent $990,000 for living expenses alone in the five years that they lived together was made to Supreme Court Justice Isador Wasservogel, today by Max D. Steuer, counsel to Mrs. Symington.

Steuer's statement was made in his argument of his client's motion that her husband be ordered to increase her alimony from $18,000 a year which she is now drawing, to $60,000 a year, pending decision of Symington's appeal from the judgment in his wife's favor at the trial of his divorce action last spring before Justice John Ford.

with James McSweeney, president of the "open shop" chamber of commerce of Kansas City, followed by Pres. Green of the A. F. of L., who read a lenghty paper, sometimes in his excitement getting his sheets all mixed up and floundering around from one subject to another; turning in with Noonan of the Electrical Workers' Union, and James Davis, secretary of labor in the strikebreaker Coolidge cabinet, and other lesser lights, all delivering the typical stereotyped speeches, jumping about and swinging their arms in all directions in a frantic effort to terrify the delegates while they were lambasting every progressive thought and movement on earth.

After handing each other verbal bouquets, such as: "my good friend," "your worthy president," "his wonderful personal character," "wise and efficient leaders," "their supreme wisdom," etc. etc., they all without exception, poured forth a flood of lies and villification against the progressive element in the American labor movement.

The unions, they said, were never in a healthier condition than they are now, wages were never higher, and in general painted a rosy picture of the "prosperous" condition of the American working class.

Progressive Program

The biggest issues before these conventions was the progressive program advocated by the supporters of the railroad amalgamation movement. Among the measures supported by this group was amalgamation of all railroad unions into one industrial organization, an immediate joint campaign by all railroad trades to organize the vast number of unorganized, general increases in wages for all railroad workers, opposition to the "B. & O. plan," so-called labor banking, recognition of Soviet Russia, and international trade union unity.

As against this constructive program the reactionary officials had nothing to offer. Not a practical suggestion was made in the reports of the officers to regain the lost membership or give the organizations a fighting policy.

Constitutional amendments on amalgamation had been initiated in the Railway Carmen's Union during 1923, which received twenty times as many indorsements as was required by the constitution but the grand lodge absolutely refused to send the proposition out to a vote of the membership. This was one of the most flagrant violations of the law of the union that had ever been witnessed in this organization. A great number of delegates had been instructed by the local unions to support this particular proposition and they were determined to have it adopted by the convention.

In their desperate attempt to stem the rising tide of the left wing in these two unions, organized tactics were used to terrify the delegates and build up a wall of blind prejudice against the progressive movement and the constructive measures it stands for. One speaker after another said amalgamation was imported from Europe, particularly from Moscow, that the Knights of Labor, the A. R. U., I. W. W. and O. B. U were demonstration of its impracticability.

They had been apparently informed before hand that amalgamation and the progressive program of the railroad amalgamation movement would come before these conventions, and they were all well prepared with stock arguments to confuse the minds of the delegates. Perhaps never before was the stage so well set and the reactionary machine, both inside and outside of the Carmen's and Boilermakers' unions, so well oiled and organized.

Going to Rounds

While the boilermakers and carmen's conventions were in session in this city, the convention of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Waymen is meeting in Detroit. Similar bulldozing tactics are being used in all conventions. Most of the speakers, delivering the same speeches, are making the rounds from one convention to the other in a concerted attempt to use the big stick and browbeat the delegates into line with their reactionary policies.

Progressives Were Organized

After three and one-half days of red baiting of the progressive delegates the conventions finally took up the various propositions before them. Believing that they had the progressives crushed, by that time, one of the first measures taken up after disposing of the officers reports were the amendments dealing with amalgamation.

However, they found the progressive element well organized and in the Carmen's convention the proposition was debated from 9:30 a. m. until adjournment at Friday session. Delegate after delegate pointed to the Shopmen's strike of 1922-23 showing the necessity for amalgamation, and stating that their membership was overwhelming in favor of bring all unions under one head. Others stated that as soon as amalgamation would be brot about that tens of thousands of workers now on the outside could be brot back into the various unions. raft unionism was a dead issue was the the keynote of all progressives.

Progressive Rally 100 Votes

At the close of the debate the officialdom one after another took the floor pouring a stream of lies and falsifications about amalgamation and the progressive railroad workers that were supporting it. They thundered that amalgamation and Cmmunism were synonomous and if adopted by the convention it would destroy trade unionism on the railroads. For an hour they again plunged into a red baiting campaign attempting to frighten the delegates into voting against amalgamation or any other progressive measures.

After refusing to permit a roll call vote which had been voted upon and carried the day previous, the question was put and altho no count was made, the progressives claim over a hundred votes in favor.

The same tactics were used by the machine in the boilermakers convention where the reactionaries succeded also in defeating the measure.

The progressive delegates were not disheartened by their defeat under such circumstances. After the conventions had adjourned they stated that the rank and file of the unions were for amalgamation and the fight had pust begun. They were determined to carry on the struggle in the future among all trades and come to future conventions in larger numbers and better organized.

CHICAGO CITY CENTRAL DISCUSSES QUESTION OF PARTY REORGANIZATION

The City Central Committee, Local Chicago, at its meeting Wednesday, Sept. 16, held a long and enthusiastic discussion led by District Organizer Martin Abern on the plan of reorganization on the shop nuclei basis for this district and the city of Chicago.

This was the last meeting of the C. C. C., since the adoption of the new constitution automatically abolishes the C. C. C. Dozens of questions pertaining to the reorganization, functioning of nuclei, how to organize workers' clubs, party language fractions, building trades and migratory workers were asked. The effectiveness of shop nuclei and street nuclei and many other matters were put to the meeting. The reorganization in Chicago district is to be completed by December 1. Prior to that party membership meetings, branch meetings, section membership meetings and at the same time actual reorganization will take place.

Speedy reorganization, if to be properly effective, was stressed. The comrades showed themselves in a spirit to go forward swiftly with organizing our party on shop nuclei basis, which would present itself as a first step toward Bolshevization of our party.

Russian Branch W. P. Will Open School at Philadelphia

A Russian school for children and adults will be opened by the Russian branch of the Workers Party of Philadelphia on Monday, Oct. 5. Good teachers have been engaged. For the beginning the school will be open twice a week, Monday and Wednesday, from 8 to 9:30 p. m., at the Peoples' Home, 521 York Ave., near 5th St. All who wish to learn the Russian language are invited to join.

DAILY WORKER BUILDERS MEET MONDAY, SEPT. 21

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—No collection will be taken at the meeting of the DAILY WORKER Builders Club of New York at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th street, New York, this Monday evening, Sept. 21. In this respect the meetings of the DAILY WORKER Builders will always be different from all other meetings, as it is one of the fundamental principles of the DAILY WORKER Builders' Club not to collect funds from each other within the ranks, but to so organize its campaigns as to raise funds for the DAILY WORKER from others.

The organizing committee will propose rules for the conduct of the club, a board of directors will be elected to co-operate with the manager of the DAILY WORKER New York agency in arranging future affairs and campaigns, and the next specific effort of the DAILY WORKER Builders' Club will be decided upon to lay the foundation for the publication of a DAILY WORKER in New York at the earliest practicable date.

J. O. Bentall will speak on the future of the DAILY WORKER Builders' Club, and L. E. Katterfeld will report on the results of the work for the year just ended.

$3,500 MORE NEEDED TO SAVE DAILY WORKER FROM DANGER; THIS WEEK IS CRITICAL TIME

RESPONSE to the danger call sent out by the DAILY WORKER two weeks ago fell $3,500 short of the amount needed to get the paper past the period of financial crisis. Only $6,511.75 of the $10,000 required was raised.

Unless the rest of this sum comes in immediately, the call must be repeated in a more drastic form. So far, those branches and those DAILY WORKER readers who have given, have been unsparing in their desire to help. Their spirit has been like that of the Ukrainian branch of Minneapolis, which writes, "Our quota is only $8.00; but we herewith send $20.00."

But hundreds of others must be heard from,—hundreds whose names have not yet appeared on the daily record of Communist standard-bearers.

Saturday, the Brownsville English branch of New York lead the list of militants,—not only forwarding a check of $105.00, but promising to follow this with another equally large, resulting from a branch vote to raise $5.00 a member.

Rats and Sinking Ships

It is a well known fact that rats desert ships that show a tendency to sink. The unsteadiness of the British tory government is illustrated by the report that several members of the cabinet backed by the powerful publishers, Rothermore and Beaverbrook, are leading a political conspiracy against Baldwin, to put David Lloyd George, liberal leader at the head of a new coalition government.

Lloyd George claims that only a solution of the land problem can save the British empire from disaster. He now comes forward with a proposal to nationalize the land with compensation to the owners, extension of facilities for state credit to agricultural communities, reclamation of unproductive areas and a development of a small holdings policy.

Behind the demagoguery of Lloyd George is a scheme to enlist the agrarian elements on the side of the capitalists in the struggle against the industrial proletariat. The British ruling class have no better tool at their disposal for this work than Lloyd George. His were the slogans that bamboozled the workers into putting their energies into the manufacture of war munitions when the German military machine threatened the empire.

The men whose names are associated with Lloyd George in the proposed coalition government are among the closest supporters of the fascist movement in England and the most outspoken enemies of Communism and the Soviet government. They are Winston Churchill, Birkenhead, Sir Robert Horne and the newspaper magnates Beaverbrook and Rothermere who cook up all the Bolshevik scares for British consumption.

The proposed political move shows that despite the tremendous majority secured by the tories in the last election, their strength has been shaken by the many crises thru which England has recently passed. The victory of the miners and the leftward swing of British labor is undoubtedly the strongest factor in bringing the charlatan Lloyd George out of comparative obscurity again.

The British working class will undoubtedly keep a close watch on this mountebank's movements.

The Seamen's Strike

Very encouraging news is coming from the headquarters of the Marine Transport Workers' Union, of the Industrial Workers of the World in New York. Already some ships have signed up under a new agreement with a considerable increase in wages and better working conditions. That the shipping companies signed up their crews in the M. T. W. hall makes good reading.

There is much more to this strike than a mere increase in wages. There is the very important matter of international solidarity. When the British seamen who were betrayed by the traitor Havelock Wilson wentt on strike they sent a call to the American seamen to aid them. The M. T. W. did not take much time to reach a conclusion. Their reply to the communication was a strike.

In the meantime Andrew Furuseth and Victor Olander, officials of the Seamen's Union affiliated to the A. F. of L. were waving their wooden swords and threatening a war of extermination against the Communists. They are now twiddling their thumbs while the ship owners are compelled to come to terms with the Wobblies, who were wise enuf to leave the job of fighting Communism to the capitalists. The Marine Transport Workers' Union not only won an advanced position for themselves in the international army of labor, by their class conscious courageous action, but they also made substantial material gains for the seamen who followed their lead. Which proves that belly crawling to the boss may be a good thing for labor fakers but not for the rank and file.

The strike of the M. T. W. and the partial success won by it to date establishes that organization as the only mass organization of American seamen that is willing and capable of leading the seamen in their struggles for wages and working conditions. The American seamen no doubt will give their answer to Andrew Furuseth, that whited sepulcre of hypocrisy, the American ally of the notorious bootlicker Havelock Wilson of Great Britain, by lining up with the Marine Transport Workers' Union, the union that fights the employers nationally and internationally.

Andy Mellon's Melon

Andrew Mellon is secretary of the treasury in the Coolidge cabinet. When he is not reefing his brow over the problem of liquidating his liquor business, he is enjoying himself and bringing happiness into many wealthy homes with new schemes to slash the income tax payments of the ruling classes.

The Chicago Tribune, under the caption "The Popular Gardener" recently carried a cartoon depicting the G. O. P. represented by Mellon, in a garden with his pruning knife followed by a group of happy children, labelled "the tax payers." A disconsolate jackass representing the democratic party is looking mournfully over the fence. A big melon representing boodle saved by Mellon's tax reduction scheme is laying alongside a sign marked "Andrew Mellon Patch."

Men and women of wealth, whether they are democrats or republicans rejoice over the success of Mellon's tax reduction schemes. Even Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., declared recently that the rich man is entitled to relief from "over taxation." Mellon is their man, and rich prohibitionists will not begrudge Andy's ventures in booze provided he can save them enuf on their income tax to make possible a trip to Europe where champagne is cheaper and more accessible. Andy Mellon is concerned with making an easy life easier for the ruling class, and automatically making a hard life harder for the working class.

Cardinal Hayes of New York declares that to test "nearly every human relation from the cradle to the grave by an economic valuation" is a reactionary step. There was a time when the cardinal's successors tested every theory by the rack, the thumbscrew and the iron maiden. We prefer the ways of science.

The Chicago Tribune now mourns that Americans swallowed all the allied lies during the war. Yes, and the few who did not like the diet were thrown into jail, with the aid of the Tribune.

THE TASKS OF THE COMMUNIST PRESS

By JAY LOVESTONE.

TO talk of the role the Communist press plays in the class struggle, is to talk of the role of one of the most powerful weapons employed by the revolutionary proletariat in the struggle for the abolition of the bourgeois order and the establishment of a Communist society.

The capitalist press is an integral part of the state apparatus of the exploiters. The capitalist press is part of the whole mechanism. Side by side with the army, the naval forces, the institutions for mis-education, the bourgeois newspapers and magazines are used by the ruling class to maintain itself in power.

IN fact, the development of a class press serving against the workers is as much a criterion of the power of any national capitalist group as is the development of its spy system and military apparatus. The press of the exploiting class functions all the more effectively, with all the more cunning, as the bourgeoisie tighten their grip over the proletariat. The press serves the capitalists as a fountain source for new strength, for winning over new allies, for poisoning the minds of the workers.

The poison pen of the employing class is one of the most dangerous foes that the proletariat has to contend with in its struggle.

IN the United States, the capitalists have developed what is perhaps the most effective subservient press in the possession of any ruling class. We do not speak here merely of numbers. Nor do we speak here merely of the influence that one or a handful of the so-called national newspapers wields in this country. We speak here of the extremely dangerous role and the almost immeasurable dynamic part played by the American press in mobilizing sentiment for the exploiters and against the workers. Truly, the American press has altogether too often succeeded in painting the American government as a government playing a neutral and non-partisan role in the struggles of the working class. The poison pen of Wall Street has on many occasions served to paint the devils of our ruling class as saints in whose hands the safety of our working mass rested.

One need only recall the part played by the capitalist press in the great national strikes of 1922. We have not forgotten the myriads of sticks of dynamite that the railway workers are supposed to have employed during the 1922 shopmen's strike. The outrages attributed to the striking textile workers were indescribable, even by the bourgeois press. The coal miners, of course, were not spared. In the present anthracite strike, we see the entire capitalist press loyally serving the interests of the operators against the miners thru the skillful propaganda that is now being made. The anthracite miners are supposed to be receiving high wages. The anthracite miners are supposed to have big bank accounts. Last but not least, the country's coal bins are just overfilled with anthracite.

UNDER these conditions, it is clear to the workers that they must build their own press. But precisely because it is so necessary for the workers to have their own press, it appears that the difficulties are not realized by the workers who suffer most from the lack of a press of their own.

A working class, to succeed, must have a fighting press. It must be a press which speaks for the workers as effectively and as unflinchingly as the best of the bourgeois papers do for the capitalists. Class interests, the interests of the working man, must be paramount and must serve as the only source of inspiration for a fighting proletarian press. This, in effect, means that a fighting proletarian press can serve and live only as an organ of a disciplined political group of workers. A real proletarian newspaper thrives only to the extent that it wins the confidence and support of the working masses. This can be won only if the workers' press sets the pace and serves as a sort of a lighthouse for the struggling workers. Such a press must be the mouthpiece of a revolutionary political party, for unless day in and day out the press proclaims the interests of the workers in all their struggles, and gives to these struggles the broadest possible basis, it cannot play a decisive role in the class struggle.

AND here we consider the Communist press. A Communist press finds nothing too small, nothing too insignificant in the struggles of the workers, to explain, to interpret, and to utilize as a means of arousing the interest of great masses of workers and mobilizing them against their exploiters. Concretely, the Communist press has the following principal tasks to achieve if it is to be worthy of being called an organ of a section of the Communist International. The unification of the workers, the coordination of the sundry class conflicts, the giving of a political character to these struggles, are all objectives of a Communist party, the achievement of which depends to a great extent on the effectiveness of the Communist press.

Specifically, a Communist newspaper should strive to:

capitalist government and the bourgeois order. This must be done not thru mere abstract formulations of grievances against the ruling class, but thru such propaganda as will broaden the outlook of the workers, as will deepen the hatred by the workers of their bosses, for the tangible everyday experiences these workers go thru. In short, the propaganda of a Communist press must take root in the objective, in the concrete conditions, in which the working class finds itself at a particular time.

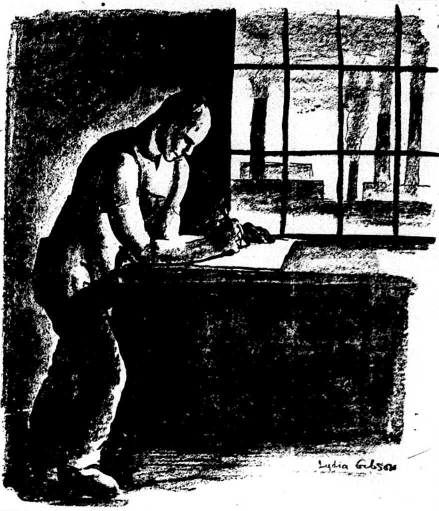
2. Make clear the traitorous role played by the labor lieutenants of capital, the reactionary trade union bureaucracy. This must be achieved only thru bringing to light the actual misdeeds of these misleaders of the working class.

3. Be a leader of the workers in advancing their ideolgey along class lines. A Communist press must be a red press. It can never be a yellow press. A Communist press should never pander to the prejudices, to the political backwardness, to the bourgeois notions with which the masses of workers may be afflicted at a particular period. On the contrary, a Communist press must resolutely and openly wage an unceasing campaign against this poison put into the body of the working class by the bourgeoisie.

4. A Communist press must strive to elevate the theoretical knowledge of the workers. A Communist press must encourage the development of revolutionary theory among the workers. A Communist press must systematically educate the workers, particularly their leaders, in Marxism and Leninism.

OUR Communist press will develop itself into a real leader and teacher of the American workers to the extent that all our newspapers and magazines succeed in these four main tasks. Our Communist press in America will become a real steel rod in the lives of our proleturist, only when it suceceds in embedding itself deeply into the hearts of the working masses thru estabisihing its leadership on these four avenues to the revolutionizing of our presently politically backward working class.

THE SOURCE OF OUR NEWS



The Bolshevization of Our Foreign-Language Press

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN.

THE Bolshevization of our press is only one phase of our general task—the Bolshevization of the party. Hence, the Bolshevization of our press will proceed at the same rate of development as the Bolshevization of the party as a whole. The sooner we make our party a real Bolshevik party, the sooner shall we have a real Bolshevik press.

Special Problems of Our Press.

However, the Bolshevization of our press offers some special problems. This is particularly true for our foreign-language press. And it is these special problems of our foreign language press that we are going to discuss in this article.

Our foreign language press must become more American.

In what sense? Naturally, not in the sense of the imperialist jingoes, or the American legion, or the ku klux klan. Their conception of Americanization is not ours. To them Americanization means loyalty to capitalism, submission to the government of Morgan and Rockefeller, betrayal of the workers and servitude to the capitalists. While our conception of Americanization is the exact opposite. It is closer contact with the life and struggles of the American working class, more attention to and a better understanding of the problems of the class struggle in the United States, closer unity between the foreign-born and native-born workers of America, and, above all, a more intensive and a more effective struggle against the rule of American capitalism.

We must be frank about the shortcomings of our foreign language press. We must say very definitely that most of our foreign language papers do not live in the world of the American class struggle. They are busying themselves with nearly everything under the sun but the lives, sufferings, hopes, ambitions and struggles of the American workers.

Considered from the point of view of newspapers, our foreign language papers are not bad. That is, they carry lots of news, good feature articles, etc., all of it of great interest to the readers. But consider the quality of this material from the point of view of the class struggle in the United States and from the point of view of building in America a mass Communist Party and you will have to conclude that most of this material, particularly the treatment of it, is no good.

Our foreign language press must become more American. It must reflect and explain the struggles of the workers in the United States first of all and only then, as a secondary proposition, devote its attention to the particular interests of the respective language groups. The duty of a Bolshevik is to fight, first of all, the capitalists of his own country. A Bolshevik press has precisely the same duties.

Our foreign language press must become more political.

This is true for the party as a whole. In this instance, as in many others, our press merely reflects the general political immaturity of our party. We must become more political.

Merely to report a political news item is not enough, altho it is very important. It is also not enough merely to express indignation or joy, as the case may be, at a particular event in the class struggle. What is decisive, what really makes a newspaper a political organ, is the lead and direction it gives to its readers for concrete political action in a given situation.

Some of our foreign language papers carry a good deal of political news, internal and foreign. Nearly all of them publish editorial comments and special articles on political events. But very few, if any, are giving real, systematic direction to the masses as political organs of a political party.

The editors of our language press forget at times that the task of our papers is not alone to entertain, not only to educate, but mainly to crystalize sentiment and opinion among the working masses for definite and concrete political struggles against capitalism. We seem to be losing sight of the fact that our papers are organs of a political party whose motto is: Fight against capitalism; first, last and all the time. Our press organs must therefore be fighting organs. They must be able to extract practical lessons for the workers from every given situation. They must be able to extract practical lessons for the workers from every given situation. They must bring forward party policies and impress them upon the workers for action in every phase of the class struggle. Our foreign language press must become more political.

A Better Party Press.

Our foreign language press must become more a party press. Here we touch one of the weakest (or, shall we say, sorest?) spots in the make-up of our press. Every language paper is a kingdom by itself. Of course, they all owe loyalty to the party. None of them will ever think of consciously going contrary to party policies and decisions. But all this is besides the point. The fact of the matter is that our foreign language press is not a party press in the real sense of the word. First, there is no uniform political line in our papers. There is no political agreement, consistency or uniformity even within the limits of one paper. Every political writer has a policy of his own. It is clear that such a condition cannot be permitted to exist in a Communist Party.

Second, the life of the party is very poorly reflected in our press. Judging by the amount of space that our party life is given in our press, by the treatment it receives, and by the general way in which it is handled, one would think that the party is a sort of a fifth wheel. This is not only bad, in a general way but absolutely detrimental to the growth of our party and of our press.

Third, the Central Executive Committee has, up to now not really directed and managed the affairs of our foreign language press. There has been no unifying and centralizing organ to transform our foreign language press from an aggregation of so many papers into a unified whole serving in a concerted manner the task and struggles of the party.

The Bolshevization of our foreign language press must begin by correcting these defects of our press. There will be created, as part of the Agitprop department, a special bureau to centralize and co-ordinate the work of our papers. Party editors and party writers must meet in periodic conferences to familiarize themselves with current party policies and to bring about the maximum co-ordination and agreement in the carrying out of party campaigns.

The Agitprop department will arrange to unify the political line of all of our party papers.

To Bolshevize our foreign language press means at this moment to make it more American, more political and more party.

Chicago Group of Novy Mir Worker Correspondents

The Russian Branch of the Workers Party and the Worker Correspondents of the Novy Mir.

By M. A. SKROMNY.

THIS is the first Worker Correspondents' issue of the DAILY WORKER. It is the beginning of a new era in the labor press, the revolutionary press of this country.

The revolutionary press in the English language has lacked the worker correspondent, altho the revolutionary press in foreign languages has had them for many years. The present issue is a great step forward.

The workers correspondents of the Russian Communist daily, the Novy Mir are proud to greet the English speaking comrades with such an achievement. The Chicago group of workers correspondents of the Novy Mir has been in existence for years. In fact, the first issue of the Novy Mir some thirteen years ago contained correspondence from Chicago workers. Later on a group of these correspondents was organized. For the past few years this group has been functioning as a well organized body. From a mere column once in a while the group has secured a full page two or three times a week in the Novy Mir.

The group of the worker correspondents is not only seeing to it that all important events shall be recorded in the Novy Mir, but is actually participating in these events. At all important events of the Russian colony a worker correspondent is found not only as a correspondent but also as a delegate playing an important role, as for instance in the recent convention of the Russian children schools.

Lately the Chicago group of the Novy Mir worker correspondents decided to make another bold step. We decided to open a school for worker correspondents where the "green" workers will be introduced to the mysteries of newspaperdom. Another innovation will be the Living Newspaper which will be issued periodically. Detailed arrangements for this are being made at the present time. It will be quite a big job, but we are going to do it just the same. It would be much easier for the DAILY WORKER to conduct such a school than it is for us, and we expect to see this done.

In the meantime we are proud of the things that have already been done by the DAILY WORKER in the field of inducing workers to write. We hope that our daily will keep on in the same direction. We wish it more success and power!

Long live the DAILY WORKER!

LARGE [illegible]RRIERS' UNION IN NEW YORK DEMANDS SAKLATVALA BE ADMITTED TO AMERICA AT ONCE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 21.—The large Furriers' Union, Local No. 1 of this city, has passed a resolution demanding that Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British parliament, be allowed to enter this country to attend the inter-parliamentary union convening in Washington.

The resolution declares that Saklatvala is an able champion of the oppressed workers of the world, and protesting against the action of Secretary of State Kellogg in excluding him. The resolution follows:

Kellogg Attacks Aliens

WHEREAS, Secretary of State Kellogg has instructed the London consul general to revoke the visa granted to Shapurji Saklatvala, a member of the English parliament representing the organized labor movement of that country, at the interparliamentary union at Washington, D. C., and

WHEREAS, Secretary of State Kellogg discloses in his public statement the fact that this move is but the beginning of a general policy on the part of the Coolidge administration to discriminate against alien labor coming to our shores, so that the more timid and submissive elements may be preferred and thus furnish cheap and obedient slaves for the American employers and also for the purpose of undermining the living standards of the American workers, and

Saklatvala for Workers

WHEREAS Shapurji Saklatvala has won a place among the British workers and among the workers of the world by his valiant struggle on behalf of the exploited workers of English imperialism in the Far East, in India, in China, in Egypt and particularly in Ireland, and

WHEREAS Shapurji Saklatvala has stood in the British parliament on repeated occasions, ably defending the

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE socialist New Leader of New York was very peeved because members of the I. W. W. and several Communists met the Majestic on which Morris Hillquit arrived in port, carrying banners, which commented acidly on the socialist leader's patronage of a ship that crossed the ocean with a scab crew. There was no strike, said the Leader. It was an "outlaw strike" and all the ships that were able to sail carried crews supplied by Havelock Wilson, the Major Berry of the British Seamen's Union.

WE are not concerned with what the socialists think of a strike, but if anybody thinks the "outlaw" seamen's strike has no kick to it, he had better consult the Australian government. So serious is the situation there that parliament has been dissolved and a general election called as a result of the strike. Premier Bruce gave as his reason for asking for dissolution, that the state premiers did not carry out his drastic measures to break the strike.

ONE of those measures was the deportation of all active strike leaders. This is easier said than done. It takes ships to deport people and as most of the ships in Australian ports are tied up, Bruce's orders could not be carried out even if the state premiers and other officials were willing. This seems to us sufficient proof that the "outlaw" strike is only outlawed by the labor fakers.

IT is rather strange that the federal authorities should begin to deport Chinese captured in this country in connection with an alleged outbreak of alleged tong fighting. This drastic action has never been taken before in such cases. There is more than a suspicion that the deportations are not directed against Chinese gamblers

ITALY AND SOVIET UNION IN MOVE TO PROMOTE MORE TRADE

MOSCOW, (By Tass) — In connection with general measures for developing trade relations between the U. S. S. R. and Italy, special care is given to establishing close and permanent connections with the Italian corn market.

It is being projected that the Italian commercial fleet will take part in the corn exportation service of the U. S. S. R. A director of "Exportkhleb," the state's corn exporting organization, is leaving for Italy for respective negotiations.

WORKER CORRESPONDENTS WIN PRIZES FOR PRESS DAY STORIES

PRIZES were offered for the three best stories from worker correspondents for yesterday's special issue for International Press Day.

The contest brought such a hearty response that many stories of unusually high caliber were left over for today's and following days' issues. Those printed yesterday were among the best.

A CHOICE of five dollars worth of books for the best story goes to Otto Wangerin, a worker correspondent in a field of battle. His story of the railroad workers in convention at Kansas City, Mo., not only gave the issues involved but in a brief, simple worded story gave a picture of the forces in the organization and the problems of the workers involved. So vital was his story—so timely and worth while that it stood out in an issue that contained other outstanding stories, and earned the place of the leading story for the day.

THE second prize of a choice of three dollars worth of books was won by a story of a very high order, written by a worker correspondent also fortunate enough to be on the ground of an important session of labor, Andrew Overgaard, who himself led the Communist fight in the convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, gave a clear cut picture of the fight of the forces of progress in the labor unions against those of reaction.

Both these worker correspondents were favored with unusual opportunities by being present where events of real importance to labor transpired. But both also were so ably written as to be deserving of special mention.

THE third winning story, giving the writer a choice of two dollars worth of books was of an entirely different character. It was written by a member of a shop nucleus, Frank Buckley, and came with the breath of the steel mills on it. Here was a question of wages, conditions and—the boss. Particularly a type of story that reflects the lives of the workers in this country.

These stories are winners. The others in the issue deserve special mention of their merits, since every one printed was of decidedly high order. More of these—EVERY DAY—will soon make the DAILY WORKER a Communist newspaper that will stand out among the best in the world. Another page of worker correspondence on page five today.

SAKLATVALA BAN SHOWS FEAR OF IMPERIALISTS

"Trade Union Unity Has Plutes Scared," Gitlow

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept., 21.—Benjamin Gitlow, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, who is scheduled to speak this evening at a protest mass meeting in Union Square against the exclusion of the Communist member of parliament, Shapurji Saklatvala from America by Secretary of State Kellogg, issued a statement showing that Great Britain fears the growing influence of the Communist Party.

"The panicky nature of Kellogg's exclusion order is to be attributed in great part to the fear inspired in the British and world ruling classes by the great march to the left recently made by British labor at its trade union conference," Gitlow said.

World Exploiters Unite.

"The conference declared overwhelmingly for world trade union unity and against the imperialism of the British empire. It is only natural that British and American imperialism should respond with this further demonstration of their own unity against the workers and oppressed nations of the world.

"By this act the United States government again declares its solidarity with the enslavement of Ireland and

CRIBBEN-SEXTON POLISHERS STRIKE TO UNIONIZE SHOP

Demand Recognition of Shop Committees

Forty metal polishers employed by the Cribben & Sexton company, stove manufacturers, at Sacramento Blvd., and W. Chicago Ave., laid down their tools and are picketing the plant in their struggle to win recognition of their union and an increase of wages.

"We have but four major demands in this strike," stated John Warlik to a representative of the DAILY WORKER, "and they are: First, the recognition of the Metal Polishers' Union and the right of the polishers to organize. Second, the recognition of a shop committee. Third, the restoration of the $1 per hour day rate. Fourth the readjustment of piece work prices, so that it will be possi-

PLOT TO ASSASSINATE SOVIET UNION'S MINISTER TO AUSTRIA

VIENNA, Sept. 21.—With the arrest of a former officer and a soldier in General Wrangel's anti-Bolshevik army, the Austrian police have run down the details of a plot to assassinate the Soviet minister to Austria. The assassins confessed having received money and weapons from Lieutenant Borodin, who lives in Bulgaria and is believed to be in the pay of the Zankov government.

The arrests have created a sensation here. It is reported that the assassins have confessed involving agents of the British government in the plot.

REFUSE 'REDS' FREE SPEECH IN OLD FORGE

Burgess Denies Workers Party a Permit

By AUGUST VALENTINE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OLD FORGE, Pa., Sept. 21—The scheduled mass meeting of the Workers Party in Old Forge, co-operating with the local group of the progressive miners will take place at the time set despite the interference of the local authorities.

The burgess of Old Forge, a capitalist lackey, has forbidden the meeting and refused the party a permit to speak on the streets. The meeting was scheduled for "Public Park." We find however that "Public Partk" is owned by the Jermyn Coal company. Of course the Jermyn officials would be only too glad to grant the park to the Reds for a meeting!

"The Reds? Nothing Doing."

Yesterday, as the party representative, I called on the burgess with regard to the permit. I found him behind the bar in his hotel, one of the many he owns or controls in Old Forge. At his side was a bottle of pick handle with a schooner of beer nearby as a chaser. Asked about the permit the burgess said "Can't be done. The Reds? Nothin' doin.' Anything but the Reds."

Constanza at the present time is attempting to get re-elected burgess of Old Forge, and the results of the primaries are to be thrashed out in court. Frank has spent at least $50,000 on the primaries, supported by the Jermyn Coal Co. and the scum of Lackawanna County politics. Old Forge is a "wide open town." Frank owns half the joints in town and controls the other half.

The Communists are determined to go thru with the proposed meeting. The burgess, the worst law violator in the county, advances the alibi that the traffic is too heavy to permit street speaking. He forgets that every medicine faker, and holy roller

GREAT BRITAIN ORGANIZES ARMY OF CHINESE FASCISTS TO WAR ON KUOMINTANG AND SOVIETS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, Sept. 21.—In Manchuria Great Britain is at the present moment paying increased attention to General Chang-Tso-Ling whom the Times calls "the strongest figure of modern China," and its future ruler.

The endeavors of Great Britain are directed towards transforming Manchuria into a citadel for the struggle against the Soviet Union. It has therefore set itself the task of heightening the tension between Soivet Russia and Chang-Tso-Ling. There is now not the slightest doubt as to the fact that during the recent conflict with Chang-Tso-Ling concerning the East China railway, Great Britain stood behind this "uncrowned king" of Manchuria, and tried to turn the East China railway into a weapon against the Soviet Union.

At the present time there is definite information that Great Britain is taking a number of measures for increasing Chang-Tso-Ling's army. British banks are granting Chang-Tso-Ling credits for an order of 40,000 rifles from Birminghan factories; at the same time the British are trying to use Russian white guards for the organization of a strong nucleus within Chang-Tso-Ling's army, with a view to forming reliable detachments for the struggle against the national liberation movement.

British Building Army

The organization of these detachments has been enthrusted to General Nitchaev, Malinovsky (representative of the Hetman Semenoff) Colonel Orloff, and Nikolai Merkuloff (former members of the "Priamur government").

In the beginning it is proposed that these detachments consist of about 5,000 men, and should be well-armed and equipped at the expense of the British.

In Pekin, British agents are taking steps to reorganize the Chinese state police. The foreign instructor, Mutte, has been entrusted with carrying out this reorganization in order to render the state police capable of preserving the "law and order" necessary for the British, and for fighting against the Chinese liberation movement.

In Southern China the British agents are again organizing the famous bands, "paper tigers" with whose aid the British Government tried to overthrow the government of Sun-Yat-Sen in Canton last year. The bands are being organized for the struggle against the Kuomintang from the remains of Chang-Tso-Ling's detachment, and are being armed with British carbines and machine guns.

Armed Against Soviet Union

In Shanghai the British consul entered into an agreement with the Chinese fascist groupings supporting them in the organization of a society "of revenge on the national traitors." This society is of a terroristic nature. Its aim is to "clear out" all well-known political leaders at the head of the Chinese liberation movement. The president of this society, is an agent of the British secret police.

The aims of all this policy are very far-reaching. The British newspapers recently have spoken quite openly of the fact that Great Britain is endea-

RIFFS SHOOT DOWN OVER TWENTY FRENCH AIRPLANE PILOTS

SPOKANE, Washington, Sept. 21—The Riffians have shot down twenty French aviators within a short time, Col. Charles Sweeney, American in charge of the Lafayette escadrille which is aiding in the imperialist slaughter in Morocco, writes his sister who lives here.

"The Riffs are excellent infantry and first class shots," writes Sweeney. "You may judge that when I tell you they have already shot out of airplanes from 500 to 1,000 feet up and going 100 miles an hour, over twenty French aviators."

CAL TO DEPORT MILITANTS WHO ARE NOT NATIVE

White Terror Rule Is Applied in America

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 21—The United States government has started a campaign against Communists and militant workers in this country which many believe is another step in the spreading of the European white terror to this country. "Secretary of Labor Davis announced that all foreign-born Communists now in the United States will be deported "as fast as the government can lay hands on them.'

The new step of the Coolidge government, representing the American bankers, follows closely on the heels of the action of Secretary of State Kellogg in barring the Communist member of the British parliament, Shapurji Saklatvala, from this country.

It is well known here that Sir William Joynson Hicks, home secretary of England has asked the world imperialist powers to unite in a concerted drive against workers who are opposed to the exploitation of their class by the capitalists.

Afraid of Workers.

The Baldwin government has been unable to stem the growing unemployment in England, and has been forced to cut the unemployment doles. The Communist Party of Great Britain has gained tremendously in influence, and the Minority Movement and the left wing in the trade unions have considerable power.

The British imperialists fear the profit system is not long for this earth, and now the Coolidge government, afraid of the spread of demand for workers' control of industry in this country, is co-operating with the British imperialists in this new drive on the Communists and the working class.

Outlaws Militant Workers.

Secretary Davis declared that "mere membership" with any organization "planning the overthrow of the government" will be grounds for deportation of foreign-born workers. Davis said that foreign-born Communsts, "are being deported whenever their presence in this country comes to the notice of the immigration authorities."

Solicitor Risley of the labor department declares that he interprets the immigration laws to mean that "an alien of Communist political faith many not lawfully enter or remain in this country and is subject to exclusion or deportation."

Coolidge and his Wall Street government have made it plain that his government will continue the policy of deporting any foreign-born worker who champions the cause of the working class.

Schooner Sinks, Crew Saved

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.— Bringing the crew of the schooner Benjamin A. Van Brunt, which collided with her near Cape May Sunday morning, the U. S. navy cruiser Milwaukee docked at the Brooklyn navy yard. The schooner sank shortly after the collision. A dense fog was blamed for the accident, the schooner was enroute from New York to Galveston.

AMERICAN VESSEL ENTERS PORT OF LENINGRAD FOR FIRST TIME SINCE WORKERS GAINED POWER

LENINGRAD, U. S. S. R., Sept. 21—The first ship flying the American flag to enter this port since the revolution, the American freighter San Antonio, has arrived here. The freighter carried a cargo of sugar.

WORKERS OF ENGLAND APPLAUD SAKLATVALA'S EXPOSURE OF WORLD IMPERIALISM'S MISRULE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, England, Sept. 21.—The workers of England have registered their strong protest against the exclusion from the United States of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British parliament, who was denied permission to enter the country to attend the inter-parliamentary union convention at Washington.

Thousands of Saklatvala's constituents attended a meeting addressed by the Communist, and several thousand others were unable to jam their way into the meeting hall at Battersea. They unanimously voted support to Saklatvala in his fight against British imperialism on behalf of the working class.

"As long as the wicked and criminal rule of Great Britain in India, Africa and China continues the workers of the west will be in danger," Saklatvala said.

A resolution was unanimously passed denouncing America's treatment of Saklatvala repudiating the false charges made by the Coolidge officials, and expressing the hope that "the sense of honor and justice among the American masses will ultimately prevail to permit Saklatvala to go to America."

Speaks to Overflow Throngs

After the indoor meeting, Saklatvala addressed a great overflow gathering outside. The huge crowds carried Red flags and sang revolutionary songs.

The tremendous demonstration for Saklatvala disproves beyond a doubt the propaganda which has been spread broadcast in the American kept press that Saklatvala's constituents had repudiated him. They showed that they were solidly behind Saklatvala's attack on imperialist mis-rule in India and the other colonial colonies.

Laborite Protests

Only one of the labor party members of parliament in the group of delegates to the union would express his protest at the exclusion of Saklatvala. Pethick Lawrence said, "I am sorry Saklatvala is not in the party, because, tho I differ widely from his opinions, I think it would have been well that all shades of opinion in the house of commons, extreme or otherwise, should have been represented."

The party sailed on the steamer Coronia, manned by a scab crew.

Saklatvala's protest to the American consul in London remained unanswered and the British government will probably ignore it, having instigated the barring of the Communist.

No Free Speech in U. S.

A writer in the Evening Standard declares, "America, in the sense of countenancing freedom of opinion, never has been a land of freedom. It is a land of property, with all the force of law and public opinion at the ready disposal of things as they are. Minorities never have had any rights worth mentioning in the United States. There is freedom of speech there, but the thing spoken must always agree with the view of the majority."

METAL POLISHERS STRIKE TO WIN WAGE INCREASE

ble for a polisher to earn $1.10 per hour.

"At present it is impossible for a polisher to know what he will make working on the piece rate basis. Every job has a different piece rate and sometimes the worker will get but an average of 75 cents an hour. We want to change this so that he will be able to earn a decent wage."

The Cribbent and Sexton company employs about 600 workers in its plant manufacturing the Universal stoves, ranges and furnaces. It is considered one of the largest plants making stoves in the middle west. This company systematically opposes all attempts on the part of its workers to organize. The molders are the only ones in the shop that have an organization, which numbers 150 workers. The metal polishers' organization was smashed by the Cribben and Sexton company three years ago. The metal polishers are again reorganizing and intend to carry on the fight until their demands are granted.

The company attempted to cut the day rate from $1. an hour to 85 cts. and piece prices were arranged to suit the convenience of the company. This firm pays its laborers but 42 and 45 cents an hour, stove mounters receive but 75 cents a stove and the high wage for one who breaks his neck is about $5.00. The company also employs a number of women in its enameling department. The women enamel various parts of the stoves and ranges and work on a piece rate basis. By working very hard they are able to make about $25 a week. The company is having more and more of its work sent into the enameling shop so as to eliminate the polishers as much as possible.

The strike of the polishers has come at the time of the year when the Cribben and Sexton company is in its busiest season. The company is sending its work to the Chicago Plating Company, formerly known as the Cooperative Plating Co., 351 West Superior St., where efforts are being made to turn out the Universal ranges and stoves. The superintendent, is visiting the homes of many who have applied for work in the past year endeavoring to round up enough scabs to carry on production. So far his efforts have met with failure due to the mass picketing of the polishers from 6:30 in the morning until 5:30 in the evening. The pickets carry a large banner with the inscription "STRIKE ON, This Stove Shop Unfair To Metal Polishers; DON'T SCAB."

The superintendent has treatened to revoke the strikers' insurance policies. The company has a policy issued for every worker in the plant. After one has been there three months, he is given an insurance policy. After he has been in the employ of the company one year, in case he dies, his family receives $500. After two years he receives $600. The graduation keeps on until in his tenth year he is entitled to $1500.

The strikers have a meeting every morning in the hall at 736 North Albany Ave., which is just across the street from the shop in which they worked.

The present superintendent of the company was formerly a superintendent of the slave-driving Western Electric and also an assistant superintendent of the Edison Appliance Co., manufacturers of the Hotpoint electric appliances, known in Chicago to be a rat shop. Efforts are being made to hire men through the Edison Appliance Co. and send them to the Cribben and Sexton plant to scab on the striking polishers.

METAL POLISHERS' HEAD APPEALS TO ORGANIZED LABOR FOR STRIKE AID

By JOHN WERLIK

Business Agent, Local No. 6, Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers Union.

The Cribben and Sexton Co., manufacturers of the Universal gas stoves, ranges and furnaces has definitely refused to grant the polishers buffers, and platers in its employ, the right of union representation.

Crude in his tactics and use of terms, Vice-President Smith of the Cribben and Sexton Co. abruptly ended a conference Friday morning at which a good sized delegation of strikers were present with their business agent and international union president.

The strike called against the Cribben and Sexton Co. bids fair to develop into another "Buck Stove and Range" fight, which is very well known to organized labor in America.

The Metal Polishers' Union has the backing of the Chicago Federation of Labor and the entire labor movement of Chicago.

A delegation is to be sent to the American Federation of Labor convention in Atlantic City, Oct. 5th, to lay the entire matter before the American Federation of Labor convention.

The International office at Cincinnati is sending out letters to over forty thousand local unions all over the country, notifying them of the action taken by the Cribben and Sexton Co.

In the meantime the union is asking organized labor to remember the refusal of the company, which manufacturers the Universal stoves, ranges and furnaces to deal with organized labor.

BITTELMAN SPEAKS TONIGHT AT NORTH WEST SIDE BRANCH

Alexander Bittelman, member of the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, will speak tonight on the "Reorganization of the Workers (Communist) Party" at the educational meeting of the North West Side English branch. The place of the meeting is the Workers Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Boulevard, in the rear of the building, up one flight. The members of the branch are urged to bring their friends. Every member is duty bound to attend. The time is 8 p. m. sharp.

TWENTY-ONE shots from a 75 centimetre gun were fired last Sunday in honor of the American flag at a German celebration held in Chicago. Only seven years ago, 75 centimetre guns were spitting death at German soldiers in the name of democracy and civilization. To say a good word of the Germans at that time, was to risk lynching and to qualify for a jail sentence. But today German labor is sweating under the Dawes' plan and German capitalists are the dutiful servants of the House of Morgan. Naturally, the Germans are again a cultured and civilized people and old man Nietzsche is conveniently forgotten. The million and a quarter Germans who fell in the war have nothing to worry about; neither have the one hundred thousand American workers.

BISHOP William Montgomery Brown intends to appeal his case before the general convention of the protestant episcopal church, which meets in New Orleans next October. The bishop does not take the bible literally and is therefore, charged with heresy by his former co-workers in the lord's vineyard. The bishop is fortunate that he did not upset the theological apple cart away back in the twelfth century or therabouts. His godly co-religionists would soon have his hide decorating a cathedral door as a warning to others. It is a safe bet that many prominent church officials are sorry those days are no more.

THE Chicago Evening Journal, evidently fishing for subscribers among the Irish population of Chicago, pays tribute to Col. Charles Sweeney, the American aviator who is at the head of a scabby collection of adventurers fighting against the Riffians. The Journal indulges in nonsensical compliments to the "fighting race" and suggests that Sweeney's appearance on the scene bodes ill for Abd-el-Krim. We hope that one of Abd-el-Krim's sharpshooters puts a bullet in the filthy human rat, who has sunk so low that he knows of no better way to amuse himself than by dropping bombs on Riffians women and children. Those who know Sweeney's antecedents are not surprised at his present occupation. His father shipped the first train load of scabs into Cour d'Alene, Idaho, during the big strike there many years ago.

THE Irish have no reason to be proud of vermin like Sweeney, or any of those who lend their services to the ruling class for the purpose of keeping others in subjection. Fortunately, there are among the Irish men and women who fight on the side of freedom from the oppressed. While the capitalist press praises the Sweeneys, the Crowes, the Devers and others of that ilk, they have the same scorn and hatred for the Connollys and Lehanes that they have for the revolutionary leaders of all races who throw in their lot with the exploited and persecuted. The Journal's eulogy of the fink Sweeney may give patriotic Irish morons a thrill, but it will only fill intelligent Irish workers with disgust.

Great Britain is Organizing Fascist Forces in Far East

vouring to create a bloc against China in the East, and simultaneously against the U. S. S. R. Strong rumors are abroad that Chamberlain is negotiating with the Japanese ambassador, Ishi on this matter, and that he is discussing with him the question of a general attack of the allies on China (presentation of an ultimatum to the Chinese government), and the sharing out of China according to spheres of influence between Great Britain, United States, Japan and France.

British Will Fail

However, it is very doubtful that British imperialism will be able to realize its plans in view of the present situation in China. The attempts to carry out these plans will only bring China and U. S. S. R. still closer together, and then the words of the Japanese newspaper will be justified "if the Chinese lion and the Russian bear unite, there is not one force in the world to cope with them."

War Office Fires Mitchell for His Charge of Neglect

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 21—Col. William Mitchell has been relieved of his post as air officer of the eighth corps area, it was announced officially in orders issued at Ft. Sam Houston today.

The order relieving Col. Mitchell was issued by Maj. Gen. Ernest Hinds, commanding general of the eighth corps area, and states that the air officer will stand relieved from staff duty until further notice.

PEKING PUPPETS CRUSH CHINESE STUDENT MOVE

Forbid Protest Upon Shanghai Affair

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKIN, China, Sept. 21. — An illustration of what pressure of foreign imperialism is doing to compel the Chinese government at Pekin to suppress the nationalist revolutionary movement in return for promises of loans and ultimate concessions on tariff and territorial issues, may be seen by the government's autocratic prohibition of students' demonstrations.

The students have planned a series of demonstrations in all cities to protest against the coming certain whitewash of the imperialist butchery of their comrades at Shanghai on May 30. One diplomatic commission already found the British police troops and the American chairman of the Shanghai municipal council to blame.

Imperialists Insist on Whitewash.

But this did not sit well with the imperialists, so they—led by Britain—are naming an "investigation" commission of hand picked lawyers to do the job all over again and, incidentally, to see that whitewash is spread on thickly.

To protest against this disgraceful affair, the students' demonstrations were called. But the Peking government, now become thoroly subservient to the imperialists on this issue, has prohibited all demonstrations and in Pekin the police were stationed at the hall where the mass meeting of students was to take place, and prevented any one entering. This is applying methods in China of the great Yankee "democracy." The students could only parade the streets, but they did that several thousand strong and they have learned another lesson than what they are taught in the schools.

Feng and Chang Threaten War.

The Pekin politicians are disturbed at the news that General Feng Yuhsiang, who has allied his armies to the cause of the Kuomintang party for nationalist liberation, may try to occupy the province of Shansi from his present position in the provinces of Honan and Shensi.

Shansi is known as China's "model province" and its holding by Feng would mean a solid block of northwestern states under his control. To prevent this, the imperialists are sending their tool, Chang Tso-lin, with his army westward, the troops being those of General Chang Tsung-chang of Shantung province. War may ensue on the Shangtung-Honan borders.

Conscription of Workers for New War, the Plan Before Next Congress

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Wall Street's military satraps, from their swivel chairs in the various departments of war, at Washington, D. C., announce they have almost perfected their proposals for the selective service law that is to "round out the national defense act."

"Selective service" is the polite name for conscription, the drafting of men, whether they will it or not, to be led into the next war's slaughter house, like so many sheep driven to the killing pens of Chicago's stockyards.

All plans are to be submitted to the next congress, to be converted into the necessary legislation, so that not a moment will be lost in the mobilization of man power immediately the war drums begin to beat for the next murder of the millions.

• • • •

Never before in its history has the nation seen such war preparations as one may witness at the present time. Industry is being mobilized, transport plans are considered, the battleships versus the airplane discussion rages with greater heat than is aroused in the consideration of any other problem, while the carefully laid plans for conscripting man power for the next blood-letting, shows that no time is to be lost in making good on the casualty lists immediately the quarrels of American imperialism burst into flames.

• • • •

The national defense act provides in detail for industrial mobilization. These plans have been perfected.

But evidently the war department felt that the memories of the last war were too fresh to raise any considerable discussion of the mobilization of cannon fodder for the next war.

The smell of human carrion rotting upon the battlefields was too recent not to leave its after effects.

But evidently the warmakers are satisfied that they can now put their plans into law in preparation for the next "national emergency." It is in the hands of a servile congress to declare when this "national emergency" exists, and then the president may proceed to draft forthwith for military service all male persons between 18 and 30 years of age, or such other age limits as he may fix, "without deferment on account of industrial or agricultural occupation."

• • • •

From 18 to 30 years of age, the youth of the land, the youth of the working class may be taken, under penalty of prison or death for refusal, to fight the next capitalist war of their imperialist masters.

They may be sent across the Pacific to war on Japan, or into Asia to crush the struggling Chinese republic. They may be sent into Mexico, to smash any resistance there to Wall Street's rule. They may be sent into Europe to collect the interest and the principal of the great loans being made to bankrupt capitalist Europe. This is all the more likely if the workers of additional European nations decide to rid themselves of the capitalist oppression that burdens them and establish their own Soviet rule, repudiating the debts of their late master class.

• • • •

Or the youth of America, impressed into Wall Street's new war, may be sent against the frontiers of the Union of Soviet Republics, in another desperate effort to overthrow the power of the liberated workers and peasants and restore in Russia the deposed reign of capitalism.

• • • •

American capitalism has all of these possibilities in mind when it provides, in the law of the land, for the conscription of man power for the next war. Whether American youth will again meekly submit to become fertilizer for foreign fields remains to be seen.

• • • •

That is something that should engage the attention of the whole working class, just as it worries the warmakers of the capialist class.

When the workers fight in the next war, let it be on behalf of their own interests; which will be against the capitalist class, in the struggle to establish their own proletarian power.

Saklatavala Ban Shows Dread of the Imperialists

India, aims a new blow at foreign-born workers by extending the rigor of its immigration exclusion laws, makes a further denial of freedom of speech, and brings sharply before the American workers the issue of international trade union unity."

Protests against the exclusion of Saklatvala came from many other sources. The Friends of Freedom For India issued a statement denouncing the barring of the Communist M. P., and the Furriers' Union, Local No. 1 also demanded Saklatvala's admittance to this counrty

Borah Against Gagging.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept., 21.—Senator William Borah of Idaho has indicated he will make an issue of Secretary Kellogg's gagging of foreign visitors and barring of foreign radicals when congress meets in September. He proposes a law forbidding the state department to exclude aliens because of their political views.

Borah declared the exclusion from the international gathering in Washington of the only spokesman of 300,000,000 workers in India will be resented by the people of India, and will cause the British empire a heavy price. He charges that Kellogg intervened in a political dispute within the empire, and identified the United States with British imperialism.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 21.—Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., won from Roy F. Wilcox, his nearest rival in the senatorial primaries, by 96,197 votes, according to figures issued today from the office of the secretary of state.

LaFollette polled 178,031; Wilcox, 81,834. Woodward had 40,366 and McGovern, 18,478.

ALL BRITISH SHIPS STRUCK IN NEW YORK

I. W. W. Announces Gains on Picket Line

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 21.—The shipowners, confronted by the unexpected solidarity of the seamen called on strike by the Marine Transport Workers of the I. W. W. in unity with the strikers of Great Britain, Denmark, South Africa, New Zealand, and Australia, are bewildered by the sudden sweep of the walkout.

The M. T. W. has evolved one of the best of picket systems known for conducting the different task of covering the harbor of Greater New York with efficient picketing squads. Strategically placed over the waterfront, and around the most prominent scab recruiting offices, the M. T. W. pickets spread the news of the international general strike of seamen.

Ready and Willing.

Ordinarily, the seamen are quick to respond. Peaceful persuasion is easy. As soon as the situation is explained in a few words, all men who are not scabs by nature walk out. Efforts to recruit scabs are being made by every sort of joint on the water front. But officers are quiting frequently in disgust at trying to break in inexperienced and irresponsible scab crews.

Saturday, the pickets brot off the crews of seven ships and things were lively along North river when the crew of the Dunrobin, a Britisher, walked off 100 per cent, followed by the whole crew of the Norwegian ship Utsir, and the American ship Commercial Spirit.

Crimps who refilled the struck ship Matinicoke, with a crew who had not heard of the strike. When the M. T. W. pickets got to this crew—they, too, walked out 100 per cent. The Edgar Bowling crew who arrived in port Saturday, needed only official notice of the strike and out they went on a moment's notice

All Out But Cripples.

An M. T. W. picket boarded the Danish steamer Anna Jensen at Staten Island. After a little conversation the crew all left but one fireman. He seemed a little too crippled to shinny over the side. Forecastle conditions were horrible on this ship. Also another Danish tub, the Nordhavet, reached port Saturday and 75 per cent of the crew tumbled off at the first call.

The I. W. W. strike commitete announces with some justifiable pride: "We take great pleasure in announcing that we have every British vessel in port tied up here, with practically no crew aboard."

Wall Street Journal Praises Union Scab.

The strikers are calling attention of the British seamen to the gushy praise of the Wall Street Journal of Monday's edition, given to Havelock Wilson, the reactionary faker of the National Sailors' and Firemen's Union. Loud guffaws of laughter with a streak of anger at the traitor Wilson are had over the following passages from a column of boosts for him by one Herbert N. Casson:

"This Nationel Sailors' and Firemen's Union is a legitimate and well-managed organization. It is strongly opposed to strikes. At its head is J. Havelock Wilson. He has fought the Communists for years and is very highly esteemed by both the sailors and the shipowners of Britain."

Speaking of the sneaking on board the Majestic of a crew of scabs as she left Southampton, the Wall Street Journal writer says:

Union Scabs "Quick and Efficient"

"The main fact to notice about this incident is that all the 150 strikebreakers were union men. This victory of a legitimate trade union over a rabble of Communists has made a strong impression upon the wage workers of Great Britain. In fact it was the quickest and most efficient instance of strikebreaking that the British people have ever seen."

"When you wants a strike broke 'quick and efficient,' you gets a crew of union scabs," chortled a Limey from a British ship as he went on to the picket line with an N. S. U. card in his pocket beside the other pickets carrying the red card of the M. T. W. of the I. W. W.

STRUGGLE IN THE AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS IN MONTREAL AGAINST THE UNION BUREAUCRATS

By JACK HOLTZMAN.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—After a long period of apathy and pessimism, the Montreal clothing workers, organized in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers fo America, have started an intensive drive against the union leaders who have deliberately attempted to destroy the organization.

This is the first time in the last few years that the broad masses of the membership have thrown their hats into the ring and have come out in open warfare against those who are responsible for the present bankrupt condition of the organisation.

For a considerable time there has manifested itself sharp divisions in the organization, that led to heated discussions and almost physical fights. The organization has been divided between the Communists and the class-conscious workers on the one side, and the union bureaucrats and their henchmen on the other. A bitter struggle growing sharper and sharper has been taking place between these two factions.

Officials Class Collaborators.

Until lately, the union bureaucrats and their lackeys were the rulers. Thru intimidation, crookedness and the shadiest methods, they were able to retain their power. It was nothing for them to conjure up false charges, to set race and nationality against each other. The personal ambitions of the leaders were set far above the welfare of the organization. These tactics brot utter demoralization into the ranks of the workers. The bureaucrats started in with their well-known plans of co-operation with the bosses. They began by helping out individual bosses to get in more work in the shops.

This was of course, said to benefit the workers, but what this really meant was, that the union did its utmost to encourage competition between the workers of the various shops.

Those workers who made an attempt to uphold union conditions were threatened that if they made a move, the other union shops would take away their work. The workers feeling themselves helpless, started to rush their work and lost themselves completely. This rush made for shorter seasons and soon the bosses were able to put into effect wage reductions and make the workers work overtime for straight time, this adding to the already large number of unemployed in the trade.

Bosses Take Part in Union Affairs.

Well-paid workers were sent down from their jobs, and others on a lower than union scale were put in their places. Every attempt to sustain union conditions was openly fought by the yellow clique in control. The bosses were of course, highly pleased with these "sane," "reasonable" labor leaders.

It is a well-known fact that the bosses themselves took an active part in the internal affairs in the union. In times of election they agitated their workers to vote for the leaders and in some shops even intimidated the workers if they would not do so. The ignorant workers, trained by the union leaders to put their immediate personal interests above those of their class, began to violate all principles of class solidarity and voted and worked for the rotten administration.

This led to mistrust in the shops. Hostility and suspicion between the workers themselves developed to a dangerous degree.

Here is just one illustration of what the officials would do: After the masses, unable to endure this any longer, had forced one of the officials to resign at a public meeting, and after this same official had stated that he would remain loyal and true to the organization, etc., he went up into a shop, made a compact with the boss to fire a worker and put him in his place.

Serving the Bosses.

The "machine" men would become shop chairmen in the shops and then use their power in the bosses' service. They would tell the workers that in this way they would be able to bring more work into the shops, but what their actions really meant was that all union conditions would become actually non-existent. These elements themselves were well paid, and when the organization was forced to take a stand, they would be among those who would come out in opposition to the organization.

Such was the situation that the officials had created. But at union meetings, when they had to give reports they would say that everything was O. K. Those who dared to criticise or suggest betterment were called "disrupters," and attempts were made to expel prominent members of the "left."

Membership Revolt.

But such a situation could not keep on indefinitely. Amongst the membership a strong feeling of discontent against the acts and policies of the leadership developed. The more class conscious elements began to drift more and more to the "left" in their sympathies. The state of the treasury began to reflect the lack of confidence of the workers in their union leaders.

Then, when the bank balance began to diminish, the over-fed cynical faces of the bureaucrats began to show signs of uneasiness. The bosses who had played such a love-fest with these union lackeys when they needed them, no longer caring, started to openly flout union conditions and union authority.

Rank and File Gagged.

Then did the yellow clique realize that they had overplayed the game and one fine day they declared that an organization campaign must be put thru. But the workers had awakened from their apathy and indifference. Their past experiences had taught them what kind of organization campaigns these charlatans carry on.

It does not take long before all gains made are criminally destroyed by them. The joint board had decided to call a mass meeting of all members. To guarantee themselves against rank and file opposition, "the boys" were called together, and the joint board decided that no discussion would take place.

Thousands came and demanded the right to have their say. Neither the protests, nor stormy scenes that kept up for hours, changed the plans of the officials. The result was the rank and file broke up the meeting. The leaders, fearing that their hour was at hand, did not allow any further calling of mass meetings.

No Confidence in Yellows.

Weeks passed, the bureaucracy continued to block the calling of mass meetings, and thus the favorable period for an organization campaign thru a strike, was lost. The situation in the trade became worse and finally the clique was forced to capitulate to the rank and file, and now too late for a strike that could possibly meet with success, a mass meeting supposedly for such a purpose was called.

About 3,000 tailors assembled and declared that having no confidence in the present leadership, and knowing their fake stoppages of the past, they were against a strike with them as leaders, they therefore demanded the resignation of all officials and that the joint board call for new elections.

The yellow clique sneered at this step of the masses of the membership, and the joint board which is constituted not according to members, but according to locals, made it possible to give them a majority against new elections.

Officials Forced to Resign.

Then the locals themselves took things into their own hands. Locals 209 and 167 which represent two-thirds of the membership called another meeting and here a packed hall showed that the wishes of the rank and file were not to be trifled with. They made it clear that the officials must go and so strong was the pressure that several officials got up and resigned at the meeting.

The enthusiasm that is manifesting itself now that the workers see a change of having real working class leaders is wonderful. One big shop in the city, John W. Pecks, taking advantage of the present situation declared an open shop. A hundred percent strike was the result. The workers at a big mass meeting decided to tax themselves a dollar a week while the strike lasts. And the results of the collections in the shops have exceeded all anticipations. Moreover a committee was elected to make sure that this money should only be used for the strike. This all proves how well workers respond, when they are actively brot into the fold of the organization.

Rule or Ruin.

But the end is not yet, only the first round has been won. At the last joint board meeting, after the uproarious mass meeting had taken place, a motion was made that all officials resign. This happened. New elections were decided upon, but it is significant that altho it was common knowledge that several old officials were going to run against the Communists, at this meeting they suddenly changed their minds and decided to put up no opposition. It became obvious at this meeting, that their policy is to crush the organization if they cannot rule.

Their reasoning is this, the season is near the end. There will be no work. No work means no dues. The bosses, thanks to the efforts of the bureaucrats, will make an offensive against the union and these bureaucrats are convinced that the lefts will not be able to withstand the storm of capitalist combat. At the same joint board the number of officials were cut down to two business agents and a French organizer and the pay of all officials is to be cut down $10 a week.

Attempt at "Red" Scare.

On the eve of the new elections another mass meeting was called by the two big locals, and here the bureaucracy made its final attempt to frighten the membership. Moscow and the Third International were the epithets hurled right and left by the angry raving bureaucrats, but all this will avail them nothing.

The broad masses of the membership must not slacken in this fight to cleanse their union from all shady elements and to make of it a fighting weapon against the boss. Only with a new fighting revolutionary leadership will the chaos in our organization be stopped. We know the task is not easy, we know that the yellows and the bosses will unite against us, but we also know that within the working class themselves lies the power to fight and overcome all these obstacles.

Cleaning Up Needed.

All members must become active, we must not allow only a few to do our work. The methods and plans outlined by the Communists and the progressives must be studied by all the members. Joint meetings of all language locals must be held as often as possible. When it is timely the locals must be amalgamated. Little isolated locals are a menace to the interests of the whole organization, they become nests for the bureaucrats to carry on their foul purposes. Portional representation to the joint board must be established. It must not be that two or more joint board members should have more power than the whole organization. Officials must not get more than workers in the trade in pay.

A union is not a business concern to fatten politicians and swell their bank accounts. The shop chairman must represent the interests of the shop workers and not be the arbitrator between the boss and the workers, and certainly not be the bosses' representative.

Fellow workers, study all these points carefully, we can preserve the gains of our organization, our union must become an instrument to serve us against the boss. The struggle of the Montreal clothing workers for a clean fighting organization will this time surely be crowned with success, and with this a new chapter will begin in the history of the Montreal clothing workers' movement.

MINN. MACHINISTS SHARPEN HATCHETS FOR "B. & O." BILL

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 21.—At the last meeting of the Capital City Lodge, Local 459, I. A. of M., the membership voted for the recall of "B. and O. Bill" Johnston, who stole the election from Anderson.

Also the local sent a strong letter of protest to "B. and O. Bill" concerning his statement that the T. U. E. L. is a dual organization.

Also, Local 91 of the I. A. of M. of Minneapolis, at its last meeting, voted to sustain the recall of "B. and O. Bill," who, being licked by the rank and file in the recent elections of the I. A. of M., declared himself elected by illegal methods.

I. A. M. LOCAL PLEDGES AID TO ANTHRACITE

Lodge 536 Passes Resolution of Support

The following resolution is among the first, if not the first resolution reported to the DAILY WORKER as being in support of the striking anthracite miners by a local union of the other trades. It comes from a machinists' local of East Pittsburgh, Pa.:

• • •

Resolution on the Anthracite Strike.

"Whereas, more than one hundred and fifty thousand members of the United Mine Workers of America are on strike in the anthracite coal field, and

"Whereas, these workers are demanding an increase in wages, full recognition of their union and better working conditions against the efforts of the coal operators to reduce wages and enforce worse working conditions, and

"Whereas, the struggle in the anthracite coal fields is the result of resistance by the coal miners to the general campaign of the capitalist employers to reduce wages and enforce worse working conditions, which has already resulted in wage reduction for millions of workers, and

"Whereas, the successful resistance to this campaign by the coal miners will stiffen the resistance of the workers in other industries to similar efforts and aid in creating a general fight of the workers against the attempt of the capitalists to reduce the standard of living of the workers, and Government Strikebreaking.

"Whereas, the federal and state governments have in the past strikes in the coal fields intervened to use the governmental power in the interest of the coal bosses, notably President Wilson thru securing an injunction against the Miners' Union in 1919, President Harding thru calling upon governors to fill the mines with soldiers in 1922, and both the federal and state government in the anthracite strike of 1923; now, therefore,

"Be It Resolved: That we pledge our support both morally and financially to the anthracite miners in their strike, and be it further

"Resolved, that we demand that both the federal and state government do not intervene in the anthracite strike, and that neither in any way use the governmental power against the struggling workers of the anthracite miners and to mobilize the workers generally for resistance against the attacks of the employers upon the standard of living of the workers.

"Adopted by Lodge 536, I. A. of M., East Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Otto Yeager, President.
"Morris Schindler, Secretary."

They Call in Bosses and Politicians, but No Amalgamationists

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21—Efforts to end the jurisdictional fight between the Bricklayers' & Plasterers' unions, which has tied up many thousands of dollars of construction work in New York, Chicago and Washington, will be made at a conference of the national board of jurisdictional awards here on Sept. 22, it was learned today.

Secretary of Labor Davis and Secretary of Commerce Hoover will address the conference, which will be attended by many noted architects, contractors and building trades officials.

Million Autos in Illinois.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 21.—Automobile licenses issued in Illinois up to August 30 totalled 1,065,000, it was announced today. Figures given out show that more than $62,000,000 in license fees have been collected since 1917, more than enough to pay off the $60,000,000 good roads bond issue of the state.

SEAMEN MUST NOT SCAB IN ANY LANGUAGE—COMPREHENDE USTED?

The following is the strike call of the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union, No. 510 of the I. W. SUGARY WORDS FOR EVERYBODY AND A QUESTION

By JOSEPH W. SMITH
(Charter Member, Waiters' Local 30)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 21.—I greet the DAILY WORKER and thank you from the bottom of my heart for the unrelenting battle you have put up in behalf of my brothers who have put up a grand fight in the cause of the working class.

They are deserving of praise for the unselfish and clean fight they have made single-handed against the powerful interests, the Industrial Association, which has crushed many local unions in this city.

But they met their Waterloo when they picked on waiters, who do not know when they are licked. The waiters of San Francisco know no creed or color or race hatred.

Those in charge of the strike deserve great credit for the manner in which they have handled it in the face of lots of abuse. They have stood their ground and outguessed the bosses and the powerful Industrial Association.

I hope the waiters do their part to support the DAILY WORKER that helps them defeat their exploiters.

The editor of the T. U. E. L. Section wishes to say that the writer of the above letter is a little bit too sugary all around. Tho he may have reason for his laudation of those in charge of the strike of the waiters of Local 30, there is a long road yet to travel until we see perfection. For example, are the waiters of Local 30 in favor of amalgamation and other progressive issues?

We have a decidedly different picture of Local 30 and its leadership in the form of a letter from another member of said local, but we are not publishing it because the writer did not honor his statements with his signature. Yet we must say this last letter is full of definite statements, figures, etc., which seem to detract somewhat from the bright halo of perfection hung around the domes of some of the Local 30 leaders by Brother Smith.

We are entirely impartial in the matter, having only the interests of the rank and file of the Waiters' Union at heart, and we think that when any brother writes us he should tell the truth without fear or favor, be it good or bad, and have the guts to put his John Hancock to it. If he doesn't want us to publish his name we won't do it—but he should tell us. Praise or blame must be merited. And no anonymity.

COMPANY UNIONS WILL FIGHT TO KEEP BOARD; HOLD SCAB CONVENTION

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 21.—Sending 48 of their officers to St. Louis to hold a convention, the company unions on 15 railroads inaugurated their fight on the Howell-Barkley rail bill. The bill is supported by the railroad unions and is intended to substitute negotiation between carrier and union for the present procedure of the U. S. rail labor board which has simply been an auxilliary of the open shop movement.

The 48 company unionists met in the most expensive of St. Louis hotels, appointed a committee to fight the bill and adjourned. Their press agent described the gathering as representing "nearly" 100,000 men "who did not strike in 1922 or men who took the strikers' places in the unsuccessful walkout." The committee that will lobby against the proposed rail labor measure is designated "The Associated Craft Employes."

SHOE WOREKRS' BITTER STRIKE FINALLY WON

Nearly 18 Weeks of Struggle Ended

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 21.—The militant shoe workers of the Shoe Workers Protective Union struck the shop of B. W. S. Shoe Co. and won after 17½ weeks of bitter struggle against tremendous odds. This victory marks another gain for the militants in their drive for the organization of the unorganized in the shoe industry—an inspiring example of what solidarity, and a determined will, can achieve for the working class.

In a meeting held at the headquarters of District No. 2, 325 Washington St., Brooklyn, the long struggle was reviewed by the chairman of the strike committee. Brother Trubewits pointed out that the workers struck the shop 100 per cent but were unsuccessfull in preventing a full crew of scabs from taking the place of the strikers. Then the struggle assumed a bitter and uphill character. The hired thugs of the boss had to be fought tooth and nail. Access had to be had to the scabs which was extremely difficulty as the scabs were brought in automobiles and the entrance to the shop was well guarded by the police.

Despite all that the shoe workers did not lose courage. They contributed heavily to the strike fund. Those workers who procured jobs elsewhere contributed 10 per cent of their wages to the strikers. Finally the scabs were pulled down and the boss was compelled to give in.

Organizer Cosgrove of District No. 2 then conferred with Silinsky who acted as mediator for the company. The conference lasted until 1 a. m. after which as answer was to be given by the strikers the following day. The answer was for settlement.

A resolution was introduced by Secretary Shader of Dist. Council No. 2, expressing recognition of the services of the active members.

Elections for shop chairman for each of the department then took place and the following were elected:

Brothers Miller, chairman of the Cutters; Shapiro, chairman of the Fitters; Harry Barclay, chairman of the Lasters; Meyers, chairman of the Wood Heelers; Andy Riggio, chairman of the Finishers; and Trubewitz, general shop chairman.

GANGSTERS SLUG AUTO WORKERS' UNION ORGANIZER

By GUSTAVE OBERGFELD,
(Workers Correspondent.)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 21—An organizer of the auto workers was assaulted at 104th St. and First Ave., while talking to an employe of the Standard Auto Body Works, Raskin Bros., about organizing the shop.

The United Aircraft and Vehicle Workers of America, Local 49, is again trying to organize the workers in the commercial auto body shops and has delegated Edward Krulich, a popular member of the local, to bring the information directly to the men in the shops.

He had been at this shop before and told them he would come again. The man Krulich was talking to at the time of the assault, stated that he noticed an auto across the street with four men in it. Three men came out and one of them came up behind Krulich and without a word of warning struck him a blow on the head with an iron bar, then all three jumped into the auto and sped away.

Krulich was picked up by the police and taken to the Harlem Hospital being unconscious for four hours. He is now at his home in a very critical condition. The doctors are doubtful of his recovery.

WORKERS PARTY GIVES OUT COAL STRIKE LEAFLET

One Hundred Thousand Are Distributed

One hundred thousand manifestos, dealing with the anthracite miners' strike against the attempt of the mine owners to compel them to accept lower wages and worse working conditions, have already been distributed, according to the announcement issued by the National Office of the Workers (Communist) Party.

To win the strike, the miners need not only militant and true leadership, but also the support of the American workers, particularly from unionists of allied industries, such as railroaders, transport workers and others.

Political Problems Involved.

The strike brings the miners and the whole labor movement face to face with a situation that must be solved and the sooner the better; nationalization of mines, workers' control of industry, labor party, etc.

The leaflets deals with all such phases of the situation and is a splendid piece of literature for distribution, not only among miners and railroaders, but the workers generally.

Money Orders for Leaflet.

Many of the party units have availed themselves of this opportunity to speak, thru these leaflets, to the American working class, at the time when they are eager to listen and consider. Other units not having ordered any of the leaflets as yet, are expected to get busy at once.

The leaflets are the best of all means with which to reach the workers with a Communist analysis of the conditions responsible for the strike and a Communist message and encouragement to the strikers and others. Place your orders now with the Supply Department, National Office, Workers Party. Price, $2.00 per thousand.

Hold All-Russian Church Council

MOSCOW, (By Tass)—The first of October is the date set by the Synod for the third all-Russian council of orthodox churches.

The council will sit in Moscow with the participation, besides, the supporters of the Synod (head organ of the so-called live church), also of representatives of the oriental patriarchs. The arrival is expected of the newly elected universal patriarch Vassili.

Protests Saklatvala Ban.

LONDON, Sept. 21—The executive committe of the Indian association in London has issued an emphatic protest against the action of Secretary of State Kellogg in barring Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British parliament, from the United States, where he was to act as a delegate to the interparliamentary union in Washington.

PITTSBURGH WORKERS PARTY MEMBERS TO MEET SEPTEMBER 25

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 21.—The Pittsburgh district membership meeting to take up the question of Bolshevization and reorganization of the party, will be held Friday, Sept. 25, 8 p. m., at the Labor Lyceum, 36 Miller St. Party members thruout the district should make all possible efforts to attend this meeting. Admission by membership cards. Robert Minor will be present representing the C. E. C.

The Workers Party in Action

Build "The Daily"---Build the Nucleus

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

IN discussing the question of the Communist press and party reorganization, three natural divisions present themselves:

First.—The press and the party under the present, geographical form of organization.

Second.—The press and the party during the time of transition from the geographical to the shop nuclei form of organization.

Third.—The press and the party under the new form of organization with the shop nucleus as its basic unit.

An Argument for the Change.

THE difficult and well-night impossible struggle to build a mass Communist press, under the geographical form of party organization, is one of the strongest arguments that can be used in favor of the change.

Where contact with the masses is developed, in cases of strikes, or the concentration of effort upon some shop or industry, the contact is usually lost when the strike has passed, or the special campaign comes to an end as it must. There is no nucleus left in the shop or industry directly concerned to continue and develop the interest of these workers in the problems of the working class as a whole. They fall back into their usual rut, until stirred again, while the geographical branch, based primarily upon the election campaign divisions of the capitalist class, reverts to its former isolation if it ever managed to escape from it. In the performance of its routine duties, the DAILY WORKER committee of the branch, except during special drives, usually reports "no progress," a report that is usually accepted without much comment. Success in winning worker correspondents for the DAILY WORKER under the present organizational form has been absolutely nil.

Workers gathered in the geographical branches do not think in terms of the problems that arise on their jobs. In the city of Chicago, for instance, where the DAILY WORKER is published, strikes have come and gone, important problems have time and again faced the workers, but no worker has ever thot of writing about his needs and grievances. When asked to do so, he instinctively feels that that is the exclusive duty and task of the editorial staff of the paper.

During the Transition Period.

One of the first problems that presents itself during the period of transition is to firmly establish the newly organized nucleus and to increase its strength. A geographical branch may hibernate and carry on a casual existence. But the shop nucleus that remains inactive, will dry up and disappear. Only the struggle will keep it alive.

The Communist press is the quickest and easiest weapon at hand in solving the problem of activity for the newly created shop nucleus. It is not enough to concern the nucleus with the getting of new readers, thru the securing of subscriptions, the sale of individual copies, or the distribution of bundle lots of the paper. Stories of shop conditions, or the problems of the industry, must be sent in for publication, by the worker correspondents of the nucleus, who must be its most active because best informed members. Thus the workers will be introduced not only to the DAILY WORKER, but to the Workers (Communist) Party and its struggle for the workers nationally, and to the Communist movement internationally. The campaigns for the organization of the unorganized, for amalgamation, for the labor party, for the protection of the foreign-born, against child labor will help lift the gaze of the worker from the narrow limits of his own job, so that he can be won for the struggle of the whole working class. Only in this way can the worker be continually interested in the Communist press that cannot, even if it were desirable, always engage itself in detail with the immediate job problems of every worker.

The Communist press is therefore, the builder of the shop nucleus during the period of transition. The shop nucleus that fails to recognize this will not make much headway, if it succeeds at all. It would be well for every shop nucleus to put the utilization of the Communist press as the first order of business at its first meeting, and keep it there.

Under the Shop Nucleus.

ONCE the shop nucleus takes root, its struggle may be said to have only begun.

Getting new readers, getting the renewals of old subscribers, distributing bundles of the DAILY WORKER, is an endless task. But where can it be carried on better than on the job, where workers come in daily contact with each other?

After the worker correspondent has sent in a few stories, the work may not seem so necessary to him. Or he may feel that he has written himself out. The true test of the worker correspondent is the sending in of interesting, gripping material that will engage the attention of the workers, not occasionally at rare intervals, but often enuf to hold the continuous attention of the most backward worker. This is difficult, but it must be done, even to overcome the type of worker on strike, of whom a DAILY WORKER agent said, "If the DAILY WORKER failed even for one day to have a story abou his strike in the paper, he would boycott the paper for a week."

The awakening of the American worker to the needs of the class struggle has been a most baffling task. One of the important means to this end is the day-to-day reading of the Communist press. And it is only as the worker awakens, stretches himself and looks about over this new world to which the party shop nucleus introduces him, that the shop nucleus will grow and develop from a small group with little influence, until it greatly increases its mass contact and develops the immediate industrial struggles of the workers into the direct political attacks on the capitalist state, that must ultimately result in capitalism's overthrow.

Forward to the shop nucleus!

Forward, The Party and Its Press!

Get Ready for Reorganization

THE Organization Department has announced its plan to mobilize the membership for the reorganization of the party into shop nuclei and international branches.

With the beginning of this campaign to reconstruct our party, a series of articles on organizational questions is being printed in every organ of the party. Questions and problems confronting our members in the rebuilding of the party will be answered and analyzed in the DAILY WORKER by Comrade Jay Lovestone, head of the Organization Department, and other party members.

The DAILY WORKER has also established a special section for the Organization Department. In this section there is being printed articles on the progress of the organization campaign, the experiences of the comrades in the work of organization, and letters and reports from comrades giving their experiences in carrying on the party's activities thru the shop nuclei.

These articles will be living articles, and of intense interest. Watch these columns closely.

DISTRICT CONVENTION OF NEW YORK LEAGUE ON SAT., SEPTEMBER 26

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 21.—The second district convention of the New York Young Workers League will open Saturday afternoon, Sept. 26, at the Freiheit Gesangs Ferein Hall, 133 Second Avenue, New York City. In the evening a banquet will take place to celebrate the opening of this convention that will mark in a fitting manner the Communist work that the New York League has accomplished within the past year.

All revolutionary young workers who have in the last years been trained in the class struggle by the Young Workers League will surely be present at this banquet.

No efforts have been spared to make this banquet worthy of the occasion. Prominent speakers will address the assembled young workers. A fitting program has been arranged.

Fear of Communism Drives Rich Ladies to Notice Poor Kids

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 21.—The spectre of Communism has put the Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs into motion.

To offset the propaganda of the Communists among the youth of Minnesota, the thousands of school children thruout the state will be organized into Young People's Patriotic Leagues by the Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs, according to plans submitted by Mrs. Amy Robbins Ware.

In connection with this plan, the capitalist lady said: "The club women of Minnesota cannot sit by and let this plan of the Moscow International gain headway. What we must do is organize the school children into patriotic groups and in them work out a practical pledge to the flag and the American creed."

Since the spiritual and cultural leaders of the Minnesota Federation of Women's Club are the Tea Pot Domers, it is not difficult to surmise what they mean by the "American Creed."

LABOR DEFENSE IN LOS ANGELES TAKES BIG STEP

"If the Reds Don't Do It, It Isn't Done"

By L. P. RINDAL
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Sept. 21.—Some time ago Semptember 13th was set aside as Labor Defense Day all over the country. A conference to establish the local section of the International Labor Defense was held on the day designated for that purpose at 2 p. m. at the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Hall, 220½ South Main St.

Despite of the fine Sunday weather with excursions to the beaches, mountains and other outdoors health resorts, 50 people from different organizations presented themselves to the call of duty. We hear all kinds of talk about "democracy" and "freedom," but 128 men are still in American prisons for their activities in behalf of the workers' movement.

Robert Whitaker, member of the national executive committee of the I. L. D. and also an official of the local branch of the A. C. L. U., acted as chairman, and Comrade M. Alroff (English branch, W. P.) was secretary.

The chairman expressed as his opinion that a "red" cry will be broadcasted, but "if the reds don't do it nothing is done," he said. It was also pointed out, from the same source, that the A. C. L. U. has secured financial support as well as the service of a lawyer of national reputation. He did not care, however, to mention any names at this time. "Something will happen in California in the next 2 or 3 months," he said.

With Abraham Platkin of the Amalgamated as chailman of the credential committee all delegates from 15 organizations were seated. Among the members of the elected executive committee are A. Platkin and Emanuel Levin. The former is the treasurer. Resolutions against the criminal syndicalism law and the imprisonment of Comrades Crouch and Trumbull were passed unanimously.

A message from 150 children of the Junior Section of the Y. W. L. received prolonged applause as it ended with their motto: "We are ready."

The successful meeting in the evening of the same day is another story. An amount of $203.00 was collected to start the big fight in behalf of the political prisoners.

SPECIAL MEETING OF RUSSIAN BRANCH THURSDAY, SEPT. 24

A special meeting of the Russian branch of the Workers Party will be held Thursday, Sept. 24, at 8 p. m., at 1902 W. Division St. The reorganization of the party will be discussed.

Only members of the party will be admitted.

Chicago Membership Meeting, Wednesday, October 7th

The Chicago membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party, Local Chicago, called to discuss the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei, will be held WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1925, 8 p. m., at NORTHWEST HALL, North and Western Aves. All party members must attend. Speakers: C. E. Ruthenberg and M. Abern.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 25th, GENERAL MEMBERSHIP MEETING IN N. Y.; ALL OTHER MEETINGS CALLED OFF

NEW YORK, Sept. 21—A general membership meeting of all the branches of the city will be held on Friday, Sept. 25, at 8 p. m. sharp at Manhattan Lyceum (large hall) 66 E. 4th St., where Comrade Jay Lovestone will report for the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party on the work of the Fourth National Convention and the immediate tasks in this district in carrying out the thesis on Bolshevization and reorganization adopted at the convention.

This meeting will mark the beginning of the mobilization of the entire membership of the party for the tasks laid down for our party by the Communist International and the decisions of the National Convention.

The expulsion of Lore from the party was only a beginning in the process of Bolshevization of the party. The party must now seriously take up the work of its Bolshevization so that it may become a mass Bolshevik party capable of leading the American workers in the everyday struggles, and win them for the proletarian revolution. Connected with the problem of Bolshevization is the immediate reorganization of the entire party on the basis of shop nuclei and international branches. Comrade Lovestone will report on both Bolshevization and reorganization as well as on the concrete problems of this district in carrying out these tasks.

Every member of the party must attend this important membership meeting. All other meetings are called off for Friday, September 25. Members of the Young Workers' League are also urged to attend this meeting. Admission will be by membership card.

Every party member at Manhattan Lyceum, Friday, Sept. 25. Let us make this meeting a real beginning for the mobilization of the party, for its Bolshevization.

Membership Meeting at Philly Will Take Up Reorganization

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.— The question of the reorganization of the party is one of paramount importance. The last party convention has decided to proceed with the reorganization of the party as quickly as conditions will permit. One of the primary conditions for a successful reorganization is the degree to which our comrades are acquainted with the significance of the change. Every comrade must be made to grasp the fundamentals of Bolshevik organization.

To accomplish this task a general membership meeting has been called for Saturday evening, September 26, at the Machinists' Temple, 1239 Spring Garden street. A representative of the Central Executive Committee will speak on the question and a general discussion will follow.

This meeting will also hear a thoro report of the National Convention of the party.

Every member of the party is instructed to be present. Admission will be by membership card. Members of the Young Workers' League will be admitted on the league card. Non-members of the party will not be admitted.

Build the DAILY WORKER.

DAILY WORKER BOOSTER TELLS HOW TO DO IT

Plain Ordinary Work Is Needed, No Posing

By S. KOOSIS.

The comrades who have sent in their stories to be printed in our DAILY WORKER for the International Press Day, undoubtedly want them to be read by many thousands of workers in the interest of our Communist movement.

How are we going to widen the circulation of our press which is so important for us Communists?

As one who has been doing some practical work for our DAILY WORKER; I want to give a few hints to our comrades.

If You'll Do Your Duty.

I am certain that our circulation in New York will considerably increase in the near future. This, however, will not happen if every member and sympathizer will not actively co-operate.

So far, only a few comrades are overburdened with work, while the others are indifferent.

Some Good Plans.

The following, I think, should be done by every Communist:

1. Every comrade, whether he is a subscriber or not should see that the newsdealer of his neighborhood should carry a few copies of the DAILY WORKER by buying one or two copies there every day. These he should give to his shop mates.

2. We should all co-operate with Comrade Katterfield in becoming collectors, agents, distributors of the DAILY WORKER, etc.

3. When collecting the old copies from the newstands, we should not destroy them, as some of us do, but we should distribute them to the passers-by or deposit them in the letter boxes at the dwellings. I have done this myself and it showed good results.

Must Be Real Workers.

Once more, we should remember that one of our prime Communist duties is to build a powerful and influential press. This cannot be done unless we mobilize as Communist soldiers for this important task.

To work, comrades and we shall make a step forward towards Communism.

Hoover Mouthpiece of Big Business.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 21.—Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover issued another appeal on behalf of high profits for big business. Hoover said he did not want the government to interfere with the profit grabbing electrical monopoly, which he characterized as "legally constituted monopoly."

LONG HOURS, SEVEN-DAY WEEK, AND ROBBERY OF EMPLOYMENT SHARKS BESET GREEK RESTAURANT WORKERS

By JOHN PERRIDES.
(Worker Correspondent.)

We cooks, waiters and dishwashers in Greek restaurants live in unbearable conditions. We work twelve hours a day, without any rest, as we work seven days a week. Not only that, but we are unorganized and that is the reason the bosses exploit us mercilessly. It seems the workers are asleep and don't try to build a strong union, as other fellow workers did in New York, San Francisco and lately in Detroit.

But the worst of all, I believe, are the three employment agencies of Arminakis, Colias and Papoutsidakis, on South Halsted street. They rob and exploit the workers, charging high fees, as high as 5, 8 and 10 dollars for each job they give, and then the slaves aren't able to keep the jobs more than three days.

The workers thus continue to float back and forth between the employment agencies and these poor jobs, two or three times a week. They pay the bloody dollars to these sharks.

I hope to see somebody come across and organise these slaves on a solid rock foundation this time and free us of all these miseries. Most of these agents often refuse to refund the money, and one of them received a punch in the eye and on the jaw last winter for his thievery.

I would like to know what is going to happen to us this coming winter if somebody isn't going to hurry and do something for the Greek workers in the Greek restaurants. The time is ripe to organise a mighty strong union and fight the exploiters and parasites of the Chicago Greek restaurant keepers.

WESTERN PENN. DEFENSE BODY LAUNCHES I. L. D.

To Concentrate on Pittsburgh Cases

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 21.—Twenty-three delegates were present at the Western Pennsylvania Labor Defense and Free Speech Council conference held last Sunday, Sept. 13th, of which 10 represented trade unions and other organizations and the balance labor defense branches.

After a report of the conference of International Labor Defense held in Chicago June 28 and of the Zeigler, Illinois miners cases the council voted unanimously to affiliate to the International Labor Defense as an organic and component part.

Pittsburgh Cases

The conference then took action to initiate an immediate campaign to get trade unions to affiliate and to rally the workers in a united front for the defense of all labor prisoners. Along with this plans were laid to as quickly as possible make the necessary preparations to gather funds for the defense of the Pittsburgh cases which have been listed for hearing in October.

Resolutions were adopted in defense of Zeigler miners, against the persecution of Crouch and Trumbull, against the Polish white terror and against the trial of the 500 Bessarabian peasants.

U. P. SPEEDING UP CUTS WAGES OF R. R. CLERKS

Company Union Aids Bosses' Trick

(By Worker Correspondent)

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Sept. 21—The August report of the yardmaster at the Union Pacific terminal at Council Bluffs showed that 200,000 tons more was hauled in August, 1925, than in the same month a year ago. This additional tonnage is going thru the terminal with about 20 clerks and two engine crews less than last year.

Last year, engine crews hauled from 70 to 80 cars. This has been increased to from 100 to 105 cars during 1925.

This company is hiring many apprentices in the shops, calling them helpers. These boys are doing the work formerly done by the skilled mechanics. There is a company union in the U. P. shops and ratings are made according to the efficiency ideas of the foremen and superintendents.

Clerks to Give Up $245.14 a Year

The railroad clerks have been working on an hourly and daily rate basis. The U. P. proposes to change this to a monthly rate after Jan. 1. The clerks work only six days a week now, but after the new rule goes into effect it will be seven days when wanted, and perhaps two days a week when you are not needed. Of course, you are not paid for the time you are laid off.

The plan is this: The company union clerk is told that the company intends to multiply his daily rate by 305 and divide by 12 to get the monthly rating. This looks fair until you find out that it means seven days a week and working seven holidays free of charge to the company. The clerks work 305 days now but under the new plan they will work 365 for the same pay yearly, when paid on a monthly rating basis. This will save the company $245.14 a year on the average clerk's wages.

Reactionary Union Officials to Blame.

An intense struggle has been carried on by the Railway Clerks' Union against the "company" union on the U. P. At one time the clerk's union, including freight handlers and expressmen, numbered upwards of 2,400 in Omaha. Today, owing to "the funeral procession" of the railroad labor board, and the class collaboration, banking and bunco schemes of Fitzgerald and his retainers, the workers have lost all faith in the Brotherhood. The union is now a mere shadow of its former self.

Official Opening of Russian Theater Season Is Success

The official opening of the Russian theater season Saturday night at the Workers' House was a big success. The hot weather did not stop the crowd from packing the hall at 1902 W. Division St. The actors were all in high spirits and played well. Many of them surprised the audience by their art. As a result the Workers' House made some money which comes in so handy after the dull summer season.

A string orchestra of balalaikas, guitars, etc., is being organized at the Workers' House. All who want to join may send in their names to the Workers' House, 1902 W. Division St.

MUCH HELPFUL CRITICISM AND SOME HIGH PRAISE CONTRIBUTED BY READERS OF DAILY WORKER

Much helpful criticism and a spirit of loyalty and support is evidenced in the letters which have been received by the DAILY WORKER as a special feature of International Press Day.

One of the best letters was sent in by Israel Josephson, of Brooklyn, who says, "I read the DAILY WORKER because it has the only real labor news, believes in workers' control of industry, a labor party, and fights the battles of the workers on the basis of the class struggle. The DAILY WORKER ought to run a few articles on science, evolution and more working class poetry."

Differences of opinion with regard to the DAILY WORKER are striking in some cases. "Truthful account of facts without unnecessary fanciful trimming by reporters," says Morris Kahn, of New York City, "is what is needed."

Likes Our Accuracy.

A. B. David, of Toronto, on the other hand, says, "I read the DAILY WORKER because of the accuracy and the revealing character of its news. I will be only too glad to renew my subscription when it expires."

Dr. David also says that not enuf labor news of Toronto is printed in the DAILY WORKER.

Special Feature Sections.

Comrade Sonya Walday, of the West Side English branch of New York, believes that the paper should be more departmentalised. "I would like to see the paper less scattered in news items and better classified," says Comrade Sonya. "One-half of the third page should be a daily feature page, on Monday a women's page; Tuesday, a youth page; Wednes. educational articles; Thursday, a literary page and Friday, letters from readers. We should also have a 'News In Brief' index on the first page," Comrade Walday thinks.

Comrade Morris Kahn sends a second letter declaring that the DAILY WORKER ignores the important problem of co-operatives.

Working Class Sports.

A comrade from Los Angeles writes that we should pay much more attention to working class sports, in order to gain the attention of the masses.

More S. A. News.

H. M. L'Almeida, of New York City, believes we should pay more attention to Central and South American problems and to Mexico. L'Almeida donates one dollar to the DAILY WORKER fund.

"I read the DAILY WORKER to know the class struggle, and also co-operate with the class conscious workers toward the overthrow of capitalism," says "A Militant Communist" from Los Angeles.

J. D. Reedy of Bickmore, W. Va., says "Being a Communist, I read the DAILY WORKER for correct information."

A reader from Madrid, Iowa, Albert Gerling, writes, "I read the DAILY WORKER because I am intensely interested in human progress, and the development that is going on in all parts of the world toward a higher civilization that signifies the obliteration of capitalism. I have no criticism to offer and no shortcomings in mind."

MINERS STRIKE UNORGANIZED COKE REGION

Betrayed Workers Welcome Progressives

By WORKER CORRESPONDENT

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 21.—Between 500 and 600 coal miners employed by the Washington Coal and Coke Co. at the Star Junction, Pa., mine have come out and joined their fellow workers from the two mines owned by the Jamison Coal and Coke Co. at Perryopolis in a strike against the attempts to reduce wages.

Wages Below 1917 Scale.

What is being offered to these miners is even below the 1917 scale. Machine coal would be paid at $1.20 per car and pick coal $1.65 per car and it takes 105 bushels to a car altho the operators and their mine bosses claim the cars contain, when loaded, only 65 bushels of coal. On this wage the miners cannot live and they demand $1.75 per car for machine coal and $2.25 for pick coal.

These mines are unorganized, left to their own fate after the strike in 1922 by the union officialdom, the same as the rest of the coke region.

Welcome Progressive Leadership.

When the first miners came out a few days ago Board Member Haynes of District Five and Organizer Robertson appeared to speak to the strikers, but were told that they had better leave as the men, who had been taught a bitter lesson by their former experiences, would not trust them. They left, and the striking miners organized their own strike committee receiving assistance and guidance from the Progressive Miners' Committee of District Five.

Strike meetings are being held regularly and despite the great hostility toward the official representatives of the United Mine Workers, dating back to the 1922 betrayals, the need of organization is being discussed. The progressives under direction of Tom Ray are showing the way.

Letters from Our Readers

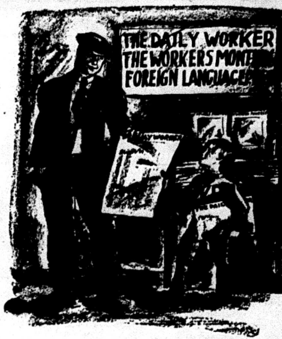
Misleaders of Workers.

To The DAILY WORKER:—Sometime ago the Union Colliery Coal company put in a ruling that the men were to remain in their working places until quitting time. But as some of the territories were ahead of turn, the company would take the motor away at dinner time to be placed in some other territories. This would leave the miners hanging around inside the damp mine inhaling foul air for no reason at all.

The men decided that they would not tolerate such a condition and went to Joe Hurley, a representative of their union executive board with their grievance. This is the kind of an answer we got:

"It would be unjust for the miners to leave their working place before quitting time, no matter if the company had taken the motor away. For there is no telling what might happen in the territories where the company had transferred the motor."

The miners not a bit satisfied with such an answer, went to the mine manager and explained the case to him and the mine manager agreed to let the miners go home before quitting time.—A Coal Miner.



FAKERS' FIGHT ON REDS ONLY AIDS EMPLOYERS

Fagan Has to Listen to Sound Advice

By IRWIN, (Worker Correspondent)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 21—While the attempts of the coal operators to establish the 1917 scale in District 5, U. M. W. of A. are becoming ever more bold the militants are the only ones to sound a note of working class solidarity to defeat their aims.

For some time a consistent propaganda has been carried on under the auspices of the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce to induce the district to secede from the United Mine Workers while simultaneously open support is being given to smash the union. The district officials, who have deliberately neglected to take the measures necessary to energetically oppose this campaign and prepare the membership for the inevitable fight, at last found themselves compelled to let up on their fight on the progressives and appear before the Pittsburgh Central Labor Union with a plea for assistance.

Fagan "Appeals."

At the last meeting of this body Pat Fagan, the district president, described this campaign, stating that so far, at two mines, at Whittset and Banning, attempts had been made to operate under the 1917 scale with the result that a few scabs were working producing coal at a cost to the operators of $50.00 a ton, while from 300 to 400 miners were picketing the premises. He appealed for what ever support could be given. No delegate seemed to know what to propose to make such a fight until J. S. Otis, who is a member of the Workers Party and a delegate from the Machinists' Union, now threatened with expulsion by "B. & O. Bill," arose to show the way out.

Comrade Otis reminded the delegates altho such trades as the building crafts had been able to maintain a comparatively decent standard of wages it was primarily due to the fact that the coal miners and the railroad shop crafts in 1922 by their struggles had withstood the rush to smash the unions at the time, even the the latter had suffered heavily.

He mentioned that other trades which had not as yet felt the attacks of the employers in enforcing the 1917 scale of wages and thus drive the first dangerous wedge into the miners' union. He stated that now the real test had come when the working class as a whole must rally to their support.

Straight Talk.

"In giving full support to the struggling coal miners," continued Comrade Otis, "We must demand that the many coal mines now closed down because, according to the operators, they do not render sufficient profits, be opened up and operated under union conditions and at the union scale of wages and that where miners cannot be put to work, measures be taken to afford unemployment relief sustained by the industry.

"If the coal operators are unable or incompetent to reopen the mines, it is time to demand that the coal mines be nationalized, however, not to be controlled by the flunkeys of a capitalist government but to be put under workers' control and management."

Comrade Otis stated further with particular emphasis that unless a campaign be undertaken in earnest and led by the union officials to make every coal mine in the country a union mine, any such demands, no matter how necessary, would remain only pious wishes. He said now that the attack has come out in the open it is high time to begin in earnest to strengthen the position of labor and bring the aims of the plutes to naught.

A motion finally prevailed to give moral and financial assitance to the coal miners and allow the executive board to put it into effect.

Art As a Weapon In the Class Struggle - -

By Robert Minor

THERE are two magazines lying on the table. One is the Saturday Evening Post, published in Philadelphia, Pa., U. S. A. The other is Bezboshnik, published in Moscow, Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Each of these papers is the finest technical product of its kind that modern mechanical invention can produce. Hundreds of men and women are giving their entire working lives to produce these two publications—expert printers and engravers, highly developed intellectual specialists, corps of business employes and managers, and—

Artists.

Centuries of slowly developed culture lie behind each of these men and women of the pen and brush. Into each of them has been poured something of the cultural accumulation from the forgotten ages of the men who carved images of the buffalo on the walls of their cave-dwellings, of the golden ages of Egypt, Assyria, China, Greece, Carthage and Rome, of the Middle Ages and of—

Modern times.

In the great and powerful United States, all of this cultural accumulation that can be adapted to the purpose is drawn out of these culture-bearers and fitted into the pages of the great and typical journal of this civilization—the paper which lies on my table. In the very printing of its title, "Saturday Evening Post"—is expressed every possible device for the maximum of effect.

On the other hand lies this other journal with the strange Russian characters spelling out the word "Bezboshnik." The very title of it is startling; it means "The Atheist." The pictures and words thruout the pages are startling, and marvelously beautiful as well as ingenious. Equally here, every device of human ingenuity is used for technical perfection; the technical craft of Moscow in this respect seems to be even better than that of the American city. And also here all of the cultural accumulation of past ages—and of modern times—that could be adapted to the purpose, is poured out in blazing brilliance of the artists. Only, it seems that to the purposes of this magazine vastly more of the cultural accumulation of mankind has been adaptable. In theme and execution the work of the artists has a thunderous boldness, destructive as fire and sword to the current standards of thought and the concept of life that we find in The Saturday Evening Post.

Two sets of artists are at work. An enormous gulf is between them.

IN the days before the revolution that made the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, and made such as Bezbozhnik in its present magnificent form possible, there existed revolutionary papers, as there are revolutionary papers now in capitalist countries. And artists wrote and drew for revolutionary papers and for capitalist papers. From the beginning of modern times there was a gulf between the work that was done for the capitalist press and that which was done for the revolutionary workers' press. The gulf widened in proportion as the class struggle developed.

Nothing is clearer today than the fact that Communist society is the legitimate heir to the cultural accumulation of the ages which finds lodgement in the artist, just as the Marxian science is the unbroken continuation of the trunk of scientific development of all the past. The effort to preserve capitalism in permanence, constitutes a preversion and constriction of science, on the field of political economy. Also art in all of its phases is perverted and constricted within the frame of capitalist society. "The bourgeoisie has stripped of its halo every occupation hitherto honored and looked up to with reverent awe. It has converted the physician, the lawyer, the priest, the poet, the man of science, into its paid wage-laborers." And it has "left remaining no other nexus between man and man than naked self-interest, than callous 'cash payment.'" It has resolved artistic talent no less than personal worth "into exchange value." Quotations from the Communist Manifesto).

In capitalist society the cultural accumulation of the ages is subjected to the test of its value as a means of enrichment, preservation and defense of capitalist society and of individual capitalists. The capacities of the artist are sifted out, and only that portion of those capacities which are adaptable to the interests of capital are developed into the artists' professions.

The more sensitive—the more able—artists tend to chafe under this restriction, this prostitution.

The workers' revolutionary movement has not the same interests to preserve—but the reverse. For this reason the workers' revolutionary movement has always exercised a magnetic influence upon artists. The definitive character of the artist is in that he to a high degree responds to and expresses in harmonious, unifying form the stimuli of life's experience. The impulse of the artist is the hunger to bring incoherent things into focus with a unifying concept. Capitalism, in its necessity to shut off, smother and obscure the meaning of life, becomes a nightmare to the artist. Communism, which has no such necessity, becomes a beautiful prospect to the artist who dares to look upon it.

In order to obtain the cash payment that enables him to live (and which may even exalt him into luxurious wealth), the artist in capitalist society must subject himself to a process of elimination of artistic qualities, comparable to the process thru which a street-walker is subjected by long practice of her profession of mock-love. The prostituted artist becomes sleek and witty, but nevertheless remains a flatulent mock-artist.

Look at these two magazines on the table again, and you will see the laborious, unjoyful, tensely skilful work of the mock artists in the Saturday Evening Post; and you will see on the other hand the comparatively released and happy vigor of the true artist in the Bezbozhnik. (This is comparative. The Communist artists have not yet been free long enough to attain full power. I have chosen these two magazines only as examples; you will find the same to be true in more or less tangible degree of all the capitalist and the Russian Communist press.)

BUT the great proportion of the world is not liberated Russia.

We must have the workers' Communist press in the capitalist countries. In these it is necessary to struggle against the conditions of all sorts which hamper the development of the workers' press.

It is clear that there comes a competition between the powerful capitalist press and the impoverished, precariously-living revolutionary press. This is in a certain degree (tho this must not be misunderstood as the liberals misunderstand it) a competition in effective expression. Its horde of prostituted artists is a powerful army of capitalist society. It becomes absolutely necessary to obtain the greatest possible degree of artistic expression in the workers' revolutionary press.

The Communist press in a capitalist country cannot offer the artist the easy prosperity, nor the finest technical service of reproduction, which the capitalist press can offer. But the Communist press, with all these disadvantages in the competition for the artist's loyalty, has something of supremely high value—outweighing all else for the most sensitive artists—the freedom from prostitution, and the positive value of a "Weltanschauung"—a unifying concept of the universe, a thing which is destroyed in the choking process to which capitalist service subjects all artists. Capitalist society cannot give any but a lame and patched-up "Weltanschauung"—a pitiful beggar of a god who must hide his sores behind tinsel rags.

The artists who serve the capitalist press are propagandists. Any expression of a concept of the universe when there are two concepts in rivalry, becomes propaganda. The propaganda of the capitalist press (in fiction, poetry, pictures, all) is a propaganda against all that is compatible with a thriving art. But because they go "with the stream" the artists who do the capitalist propaganda every day imagine that they are "not propagandists."

The artists who serve the workers revolutionary press are also propagandists, of course. All unperverted art, in the face of perverted art, is propaganda for a unified concept of the universe. In the Communist press, of course, the needs of battle compel the artist to bring his work down to less glorified proportions. But the satisfaction is great enough to attract a considerable and increasing number of artists to whom prostitution is impossible.

Art is an indispensible weapon in the class struggle—on both sides. The Communist press must develop a clearer appreciation of this. Experience shows that the workers give a value to art which is far greater than the "cultured" classes give except in some special fields. The hunger—the absolute necessity of the working class for art, is something which, under the influence of American phillistinism, Communists are likely to forget. The immense power of the prostituted art propaganda for the capitalist "Weltanschauung"—as shown by picture shows, magazines, etc.—is evidence of a compelling sort. But we, like the prostituted artists, are likely to forget that it IS propaganda. We slip into the habit of considering the capitalist press, movies, etc., as a neutral agent, as to the class struggle, to which the Communist press need but add a specialized corrective influence. If so, we are already poisoned.

The Communist press must become deeply, powerfully, artistic enough to make us understand this.

To make an effective Communist press—and to give a sounder "Weltanschauung" to the membership of the revolutionary party of the workers—are these not important parts of the process of Bolshevizing our party? The essential characteristic of true art is exactly this: That it brings an incoherent mass of fact into a unified concept. Even the smallest good cartoon or verse does this!

Let us speak a word for a higher development of art in the service of the Communist press!

Butler's Last Bray.

Every incipient fascist and ku kluxer in the United States greeted the appointment of General Smedley Butler, as director of public safety in Philadelphia a few years ago. Smedley was "devil-dog" in the marines and had the reputation of being a hard boiled apostle of capitalist "lawrenorder." He swore by the mental vacuum of "Silent Cal" that he would make the Quaker City a purgatory for evil doers; that he would have wickedness on the run in no time or less than that.

This strutting militarist, according to his press agent was wont to ride down the street in his limousine and on seeing somebody occupying the sidewalk whose face bore the dime novel resemblance to a thug, would step out of his car, jam his gun into the suspected criminal's ribs and order him to make for the suburbs. This kind of a system was expected to make Philadelphia a nice quiet city for clean minded christians, instead of the humming den of inequity it is alleged to be.

But alas poor Butler! Vice thrives unchecked in the city of brotherly love and every thug's hand is turned against the other when not lifted to deliver a sleep-inducing tap to somebody suspected of carrying a roll. So Butler is going and the wicked ones are going to stay.

Butler gave a final exhibition of his idiocy when he heard that an epidemic of robberies broke out in a certain section of the city. "Shoot to kill" was his order to the police. This reminds one of the daily threats of the Chicago police to slaughter the gunmen after each fresh killing.

Philadelphia is not yet ripe for a fascist dictator. The big business interests have not their own way in all things. They must pay toll to the politicians, who are in business for themselves. The politicians don't want to turn their balliwicks into convents.

Butler came into Philadelphia like a lion. He is going out like a jackass.

More Smoke in China

Rumors of another civil war in China are making the rounds of the various capitals. Where there is so much smoke there must be some fire.

One report is that General Feng has formed an alliance with Wu-Pei-Fu to eliminate Chang-Tso-Lin the Manchurian war lord, from public life in China. Wu was formerly the creature of British and American capital while Chang was the petted favorite of Japan.

The fortunes of war evidently have cast Wu from the arms of his former friends and if he is now in cahoots with Feng, it is very likely that he has much hope in the ability of British and American imperialism to survive the anti-imperialist nationalist revolt in China.

Feng was formerly allied with Wu against Chang. It was Feng's desertion of Wu that brot about the latter's military defeat and his partial political obscurity since then.

It appears that Chang is now the paid agent of British and American imperialism, with Japan between the devil and the deep sea. A recent statement by the Soviet ambassador to China on the prospect of another civil war in that country, created intense excitement in Washington, where the Chinese situation is watched with anxious eye. American spies in Mongolia, traveling in the guise of archaeologists have reported to their intelligence headquarters in Washington that hundreds of trucks of American make are passing thru Mongolia on the way from Russia with arms and munitions for General Feng.

It is no exaggeration to state that the events taking place in China today may lead, at no distant date to the downfall of British imperialism in the East. If this turns out to be a correct estimation of the course events in the Orient are taking, the end of the British empire is near. The fall of British power in China would waft the flames of revolution thru India and other eastern sections of the empire.

Averting a Disaster

But for the alertness of Sir Joseph Cook, representing Australia at the assembly of the league of nations, a terrible blunder might have been committed.

The league, as everybody knows is organized for the purpose of preventing wars and in other ways making for peace and harmony in the world. This is believed by everybody except Communists and other evil minded people who believe nothing the capitalists tell them. But it is true nevertheless. The New York Times and Lord Robert Cecil, are authorities for the fact.

That matter being settled, the following incident may be interesting. During one of the sessions of the league being held in Geneva, the Swiss delegates moved a resolution which would commit all those who voted for it to compulsory arbitration of their disputes. It was framed so cleverly that it almost passed by the sleepy delegates unnoticed. When Sir Joseph Cook pointed out that this would make war a rather immoral proceeding the delegates got frightened, took the offending resolution and pulled the guts out of it.

Then they breathed a sigh of relief and proceeded to discuss ways and means of averting war.

Four hundred men who fought for the kaiser in the world war marched thru the streets of Chicago last Sunday with bands playing and colors flying. Mayor Dever reviewed the parade. Do you remember the days when the capitalist press shrieked about the "Huns" and swore we would never, never, never again have anything to do with those wicked Germans? But business is business.

J. P. Morgan needed a rest, so he took a boat to England. Lest the populace should show a disagreeable desire to see the great man he went up to the upper pier on a freight elevator. When J. H. Thomas, British labor faker wished to avoid unpleasant attentions on his landing in New York a few years ago after selling out a strike, he descended in a freight elevator.

"The situation in China is grave," declared an American congressman on his return from a visit to the Orient. Yes, grave for the imperialists.

COMMUNISTS STIR MINERS IN ANTHRACITE

Raise Slogan, "Bring Out Maintenance Men"

By AUGUST VALENTINE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Sept. 21.—As the campaign of the Workers Party among the anthracite miners, who have been on strike for several weeks, gains headway, the union bureaucracy is waking up to the fact that a great awakening is taking place among the strikers, hitherto apathetic and morbid but now raising certain slogans thruout the section rallying to their side the rank and file.

Communists Raise Slogan

The Communists have raised the slogan of "Bring Out the Maintenance Men." These are the 10.000 miners who have continued work, keeping the mines drained of water, keeping the roof posted and doing other work of a like character. The Communists have pointed out in many mass meetings, among many other things, that this situation cannot continue; to insure the strike success every miner must drop tools. This slogan is gaining power among the strikers. Thru the Pottsville-Shenandoah valley this slogan is on the lips of thousands of miners.

Toohey—the "Terrible Red"

The officials are becoming worried. Instructions have been sent to the lackeys of Lewis to get the leaders of the progressive movement. First on the list comes Pat Toohey a very terrible Red who is causing Lewis so much concern in this region. It was Toohey who led the small but well organized radical delegation at the tri-district convention in Scranton in June, where the miners' demands were formulated.

It was at this convention Toohey got the goat of Lewis who in turn grandly shook his fist in the direction of our terrible Red. This was not the first convention Toohey succeeded in getting Lewis' goat, the same little thing was done two years ago at the international convention, 18 months ago at the Pittsburgh convention.

It is well known Lewis loves our Red so well, so well in fact that his lackey, Wm. Feeney, "leader" of the great Connellsville coke region strike attempted with the aid of a gang of sluggers to beat him up in a dark alley at the Allentown convention of the Federation of Labor in 1924.

Reds Here To Stay

Martin Davis, executive board member from District No. 9, informed a local union president of Pittsville he is after two ducks, Toohey and another militant, Peter Billick. It seems these two arch-Reds are very terrible people, when all that fuss is made over them. Davis said he was ordered to "drive them from the organization." We might humbly inform Mr. Davis that has been tried four times before and in every instance failed, even with Phil Murray special prosecutor on two occasions.

The Reds are here, here to stay, the Reds will be here when Mr. Davis and his gang are dead and forgotten. They might be driven from the organization but others will rise in their place and carry on the work started by them. We might inform Mr. Davis he will have a sweet time driving them from the union.

It is all too evident the Communist campaign among the strikers is successful and a great source of worry to the fakers, who the Communists do not hesitate a bit to expose and place in the same category with the exploiters. The campaign will continue, the many mass meetings arranged to date will be held, the dance goes on.

Laborite Wins Seat

LONDON, Sept. 21—The labor party gained a seat at the expense of the conservatives in the house of commons bye-elections at Stockport. The laborite, A. E. Townsend, polled 20,219, against 17,892 for the tory candidate.

MANY MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS IN PARTY'S REORGANIZATION DRIVE

The dates of Workers (Communist) Party membership meetings arranged in the party's reorganization campaign are as follows:

District Date
1. Boston—Sept. 27.
2. New York—Sept. 25.
3. Philadelphia—Sept 26.
4. Buffalo—Oct. 4.
5. Pittsburgh—Sept. 25.
6. Cleveland—Sept. 27.
7. Detroit—Sept. 27.
8. Chicago—Oct. 7.
9. Minneapolis—Sept. 27.
15. Connecticut—Oct. 4.

An organization tour of the western districts is being planned by the C. E. C. Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and other party centers of the west will arrange mass membership meetings to be addressed by a representative of the Central Executive Committee.

KELLOGG GARBLED SAKLATVALA'S SPEECH AGAINST IMPERIALISM ON BEHALF OF THE COLONIAL PEOPLES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—When Secretary of State Kellogg attempted to justify the barring of Saklatvala, Indian Communist member of the British parliament, he grossly misrepresented the latter by garbled quotations from his house of commons speech, says the Friends of Freedom for India. A full copy of the speech in question bears out this statement and shows that Kellogg pieced together isolated sentences and fragments to convey a distorted impression.

Saklatvala's speech was delivered in the house of commons July 9, before the committee on supply on the vote for the Indian office and opposed an appropriation for the Secretary of State for India. It was primarily an attack on British rule in India and avowed Saklatvala's political Communist opinions.

In his speech the Communist M. P. laid stress on the poverty and voteslessness of the Indian workers. He scored the British for denying the factory legislation and curtailment of child labor which existed at home to their subjects in the colonies. He told how the holding of a Trade Union Congress in India two years ago was prevented in Bengal by a detachment of Ghurka machine gunners sent at the request of the Merchants and the European Mine Owners' Associations. The congress was held later at another place.

ANTON JOHANSON SAYS SAKLATVALA EXCLUSION IS UNLAWFUL OUTRAGE

Interviewed yesterday by the DAILY WORKER, Anton Johanson, nationally known in the labor movement and at present the president of Carpenters' Local Union 1367, had the following comment on the action of the American government in barring the British Communist Saklatvala, from attending the Washington meeting of the interparliamentary union:

"Barring Saklatvala by Secretary of State Kellogg is outrageous, uncalled for and unlawful. Kellogg's conduct in barring Saklatvala without considering and evidence, without examination and without inquiring into the circumstances, seems to prove that Kellogg is a willing agent of the big business interests of America.

"Further, President Coolidge, in approving the exclusion, reflects the same attitude of servility toward the Wall Street bankers."

FRANCE CANNOT PAY DEBT, CRASH OF FRANC NEAR

Caillaux at Mercy of Wall Street

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.— France cannot pay a dollar of her debt to the American treasury; she cannot even balance her budget at home without repudiating 60 per cent of the interest on her 300,000,000,000 francs of internal debt, for a period of years at least.

This is the substance of the findings in a 450-page report on the French debt problem, prepared by the Institute of Economics and already submitted to the members of the American debt commission.

Even if 20 per cent were to be cut from military expenditures, the budget deficit for next year would be reduced by only one-eighth. The war in Morocco will increase the deficit, of course, but peace would not save the franc.

Members of the American debt commission, studying this report, which comes from the same source as the study of Germany's capacity to pay, published two years ago, which was denounced as pro-German—are interested in its tendency to make a farce of the coming of Finance Minister Caillaux to America this fall.

They realize that Caillaux is coming to borrow $200,000,000 from Wall Street, if he can, rather than to pay or obligate France to pay $4,000,000,000 to the treasury.

Fall Night School Term Opens.

Registration for the Fall term in thirty-one public night schools embodying seventy courses of instruction began last night and will last until Friday evening. The usual elementary and high school courses are available. There are also courses in English to foreigners.

Trolley Hits Auto.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Sept. 21.—Bert Wilson, 30, of Peru, is dead and 38 persons are suffering from bruises and injuries today as a result of a collision between an Indianapolis-Fort Wayne interurban car and an automobile near here.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 21—Estranged from her family, Mrs. C. W. Coleman of Cincinnati, a niece of Vice-President Charles G. Dawes, died in Grady hospital here early today from strychnine poisoning.

HINDUS OF N. Y. DENONUCE BAN ON SAKLATVALA

New York Stirred by Kellogg's Tyranny

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 21—"Secretary Kellogg's ban on Shapurji Saklatvala has been inspired not so much to safeguard the ignorance or the intelligence of the American people of which Secretary Kellogg is the sole trustee but to allow unhampered and unchecked the continued malicious misrepresentation about India that has been going on in this country by British imperialist propagandists."

This is the opinion given by Sailendra Ghose, secretary of the Friends of Freedom for India, an organization of exiles from British rule. Ghose continued:

"Saklatvala has a tale to tell of oppression in India where the people toil 12 hours a day under famine rations and are denied the right to vote. Not long ago Secretary Hughes, Kellogg's predecessor, and President Coolidge came out in support of the propaganda of the English Speaking Union for an Anglo-American imperial alliance. Will the American people allow the fear which this alliance has of Saklatvala's exposure of British rule in India to prevent them from getting the facts?"

Saklatvala is a Communist member of the British parliament. Support of his right to come here is from Indians of different political beliefs but united against the British oppressor, from numerous American organizations, among them the American Civil Liberties Union, the socialist party, the Workers (Communist) Party and others.

Frank P. Walsh and Ghose are slated as the principal speakers at a mass meeting of protest the Liberties' Union is calling at Town Hall and Indians and the Workers Party has held a mass meeting in Union Square.

FIELDS SCHOOL PARENTS AGAINST 'JUNIOR HIGHS'

Elementary School Is Immediate Need

The board of education did not settle all of the Eugene Fields school parents' grievances when it promised to hunt up suitable location for the portables that have been removed from the school grounds to permit the building of a Junior high school.

"What we need is an elementary school for our children and not a junior high," said Mrs. Victor Rubin, secretary of the striking parents committee and the most active member of it. "When we report back to our organization at our next meeting on Wednesday night we are going to see to it that this fact is made clear to the school board.

"For twenty-years, since they first plumped portables down upon us, they have been promising us an elementary school. If we needed it then we certainly need it more now. There are over 25,000 people in that district now. That alone should convince them that our immediate need is an elementary school, not a junior high."

The meeting will be held at 6459 Sheridan road, their usual meeting place.

The children are still out and will stay out until the portables have been moved.

SOVIET PROFESSOR, IN PARIS EXPERIMENTS, DRAWS EYES OF WORLD

MOSCOW, (By Tass) — The papers report that the valuable investigations of Prof. Vinogradsky, a Russian scholar working at the Paris Academy of Sciences, have recently attracted the attention of the scientific world. His work refers to the microbiological analysis of the soil and is a great contribution for practical agriculture establishing a sound foundation for definition of bacteriologic qualities of the group upon which, as it is known, the harvest largely depends

DAILY WORKER SAVERS MUST RUSH IN THEIR HELP

If there are any DAILY WORKER readers or any members of the Workers Party who have not yet helped in this campaign to save the DAILY WORKER, let them take the full responsibility for the failure of the drive to reach its mark within the time set. For the two weeks' period has elapsed with more than $3,000 of the emergency fund still to be raised. That the DAILY WORKER has been able to pull thru these last two weeks has been due to the valiant efforts of those whose names or the names of whose organizations have appeared in these columns.

The DAILY WORKER has not yet been saved. The ten thousand dollar emergency fund is the first step. This sum must be made available at once in order that the DAILY WORKER may survive. The next step is to make the DAILY WORKER SAFE not only for the immediate future but safe for service to the working class during the coming year.

One reader in sending in his donation said, "I am sending you this money to help make America safe for Communism." This comrade is ambitious and he knows the best way to take the first step.

SOUTHERN MOB BURNS HELPLESS NEGRO AT STAKE

Becomes Human Torch as Oil Is Applied

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ALBANY, Miss., Sept. 21.—L. Q. Ivy, Negro, was burned to death at a stake by a mob of whites.

The Negro was arrested on a description furnished by a girl, the daughter of a farmer. He was taken to the county jail.

News of the "identification" spread thru the countryside and a mob formed. When the crowd numbered 1,000 men, it stormed the jail, smashed down the doors and dragged the prisoner away from the county officers.

The mob carried the Negro to the scene of the attack, drove a huge stake into the ground and tied the Negro to the stake. Brush wood was piled around his body, gasoline spread on the wood and a match touched to it. In a moment the Negro became a human torch.

ANTHRACITE MINERS DEMAND ALL MAINTENANCE MEN JOIN STRIKE; BIG MEETINGS HEAR COMMUNISTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Sept. 22.—Big mass meetings of striking anthracite miners held in the mining towns of Shenandoah, St. Clair, Minersville and Scranton, have roused great interest in the Workers (Communist) Party under whose auspices Ben Gitlow, Pat Toohey and other speakers addressed the meetings.

Large numbers of the DAILY WORKER and manifestoes were distributed among the anthracite strikers. Considerable sentiment is backing up the demand for the withdrawal of the maintenance men from the pits to force the operators to grant the strikers' demands without delay. The operators want a long strike in order to get rid of surplus coal and gigantic stocks of inferior grades otherwise unsaleable, but now put on the market at fabulous prices.

Lewis Seeking to Sell Out.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America and in charge of the strike is clearly trying to betray the wage increase demand of the strikers and trade these demands off for the operators' granting of the check-off.

To support this move, the mayors of sixty-three towns in the anthracite region are making a common declaration asking the operators to grant the check-off.

Miners are beginning to feel the effects of the strike, and the storekeepers are adding to the pressure by refusing the miners credit for groceries. In many places other industrial undertakings will not employ striking miners.

Speak Despite Refusal

In spite of the denial of a permit to speak by the burgess at Old Forge, the Workers (Communist) Party is holuding a meeting there this afternoon.

The miners at all meetings enthusiastically support the demands of the progressive miners' committee and cheer the speakers of the Workers Party.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

ONE of the latest plots that Moscow has been found guilty of in the editorial sanctums of some American capitalist publications, is a scheme to manipulate the world wheat market in order to beggar the American farmer and make him discontented. This aim, the Bolsheviks attempt to accomplish by circulating fantastic reports of fabulous grain crops in the Soviet Republic, which policy has a tendency to lower the price of grain. The American speculators should not have any fault to find with a plot like this.

DURING the years that Russia was ravaged by civil war and famine we were told that those evils, particularly poor crops, were the result of Communist rule. Even the christian god could not stand those evil people. Now that god has either gone to sleep or become a Communist sympathiser, if the bumper Soviet crops be a criterion, the plute scribblers have changed their tune and now accuse the Russian peasants of having evil designs on the farmers of this country. Perhaps the wisest of the American farmers may see in this smoke screen an effort on the part of the speculators to hide their thievery.

LLOYD GEORGE is ambitious to get back again as the leading clown in the British imperial show. George is a versatile genius. In the land question, he thinks he has found an issue that will provide him with the motive power for a successful campaign for the premiership. But he has not ignored lesser factors. It is reported that the wily Welshman has induced his wife to put on a prohibition campaign, as a side line. If it succeeds, George will grab off the credit. If it fails, Mrs. George alone will suffer. And she is not running for office.

"BRITAIN faces as serious a crisis as ever a nation in modern history." This is the Chicago Tribune talking. The Trib. goes on to tell that the foreign commerce of Great Britain has decreased, she is no longer supreme in the shipping world; in fact, that she has suffered a steady decrease in everything except population and unemployment. To add to her troubles, the workers are becoming more and more revolutionary. This connects up naturally with the waning fortunes of British capitalism.

IT is a sad, sad story. Most of the capitalist papers and practically all the labor fakers blame the Communists for this situation. The Communists have not created those conditions. About the only thing they can do is to give direction to the struggles of the

Bosses Try to Coerce Laborers to Scab

In spite of the cold, biting wind and the drizzling rain, the striking polishers and buffers of the Cribben and Sexton Co., manufacturers of the Universal stoves, ranges and furnaces at Sacramento Blvd. and Chicago Ave. maintained their picket lines around the plant.

The pickets stand in two groups; one at the north end of the plant and the other at the south end. Every unemployed worker looking for a job is made aware of the strike by two huge banners and the ever-watchful pickets. So far not a single strikebreaker has entered the polishing room.

The company has resorted to adverblind ads and ads telling who is advertising for the polishers and buffers.. Not only has the Chicago Tribune been used by the company in its effort to break the strike, but the superintendent has also visited every one who has applied for work during PARIS, Sept. 22.—For several hours yesterday the city of Paris had great difficulty in communicating with the outside world when telephone and telegraph workers, demanding an increase of wages, walked out and left every wire dead. MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 22.—The workers and peasants of Soviet Russia are protesting en masse against the exclusion from the United States of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British parliament, by the Coolidge government. Thousands are attending the great protest demonstrations held in every part of the Soviet Union.

The Soviet press reflects the demand of the workers that Saklatvala be admitted to the United States, and exposes the Coolidge government as a tool of the imperialist bankers, who are

N. Y. TAXI DRIVERS HOLD ORGANIZATION MEET THURSDAY NIGHT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 22.—A special organization meeting of the New York taxi drivers will be held at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, 947 Willoughby avenue on Thursday evening, September 24.

This meeting, to which all taxi drivers of New York City are invited, will be held under the auspices of the Taxi-Limousine Chauffuers' Union, Local 643 of the American Federation of Labor.

JAPANESE WORKERS GIVE WARM WELCOME TO SOVIET UNIONISTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKIO, Sept. 22.—When four representatives of the trade unions of Soviet Russia arrived here today, thousands of workers assembled at the Tokio station to greet them began to sing the International and to wave red flags, entirely disregarding the law against "dangerous thoughts" which such activities indicate.

The police called out reserve forces and charged the crowds of workers, meeting with such resistance that considerable conflict resulted. Sixteen workers were arrested.

The Soviet labor delegation is composed of the labor unionists that previously had visited Shanghai by invitation of the Chinese unions. While they were in China, a number of influential Japanese unions formally invited them to visit Japan.

The Japanese police are maintaining the strictest surveillance over the Russian labor leaders and threaten to deport them at once if they "spread Communist propaganda." Apparently undismayed, the Russians announce that the purpose of their visit is to urge all Japanese labor organizations to join the movement for international trade union unity against capitalist exploitation.

NO EUROPEAN ANTHRACITE TO AMERICA DURING THE STRIKE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BRUSSELS, Sept. 22.—Striking anthracite miners in America today were given the support of the miners' international committee, when delegates from England, France, Germany, Holland and Belgium voted unanimously to reduce exportations of Welsh coal to Canada and the United States.

The report of the American miners on conditions leading up to the walkout September 1 was received and considered by the delegates before they determined their action.

FRED MERRICK GOES TO TRIAL ON OCTOBER 5

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 22.—The cases of our Pittsburgh defendants, Comrades Merrick, Horacek and eight others have been listed for trial October 5. Funds are urgently needed for this trial, contribution lists are being sent to all party units in District Five and we expect the comrades to go ahead and work immediately collecting as much as they possibly can and return the lists to the secretary of the Labor Defense, M. Rasnick, addressed to the party office, 805 James St., N. S. Pittsburgh.

The Law's Delays.

The delays attendant upon court proceedings was exemplified before Circuit Judge Jesse Holdom today when the damage suit of Mrs. Genevieve Ligregni against a taxicab company was called for trial. NEW HAVEN WORKERS SUPPORT SUSPENDED N. Y. GARMENT LOCALS

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 22.—Last week a conference took place in support of the Joint Action Committee of Locals 2, 9 and 22 of the I. L. G. W. U. of New York City. On the initiative of Workmen's Circle Branch 598, sixteen organizations were represented who elected an executive committee, and laid plans for work.

A mass meeting is planned for next Friday, Sept. 25, with speakers from the Joint Action Committee from New York. The conference resolved to do all it could in the cause of the needle workers in question. This is especially necessary, since the I. L. G. W. U. has done nothing in the last few years to organize New Haven, and by its previous mishandling of a strike produced a condition which makes organization work exceedingly difficult.

READ FRIDAY'S DAILY WORKER!

What is the National Minority Movement of Great Britain? It is not—as you might think—a movement of an oppressed racial minority struggling against repression, but a revolutionary movement of the English proletariat, the revolutionists working within the British labor unions. There is a lesson to be learned by American workers in the article written by Carl Brannin on this movement. The article will be published in Friday's DAILY WORKER. No unionist or labor radical should miss is.

STRIKE GROWS IN GULF AND THE ATLANTIC

The Spirit of Struggle Sweeps Seamen

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 22.—The pickets of the Marine Transport Workers of the I. W. W. report additions to the list of ships tied up in New York harbor. Splendid spirit is shown among almost all seafarers, who need but an invitation to join the general strike now filling the harbors of the world with idle ships and rotting cargoes.

At Jersey City the steamer Veer went out 100 per cent Sunday, also two boats from the West Coast, the Kaleckala and the West Cannon, all piling over the side with enthusiasm.

At Perth Amboy, the Norwegian ship Vaarly lost its crew 100 per cent to the strike call of the M. T. W. In Baltimore strike enthusiasm runs high. Many ships lost their crews at the first notice. The crew of the Van Dyke came over when they first glimpsed the wobbly picket line. The port captain of the Atlantic Refinery company ran all over town hunting scabs for the company's ships, offering as high as $65 for able seamen, but without success.

Baltimore and Philadelphia Out.

The Baltimore crimps who were being razzed by pickets, turned in a riot call, thinking to see the pickets locked up, but instead the wagon was used to escort the finks to safety.

In Philadelphia, the M. T. W. reports the strike progresses wonderfully, with crews coming out glad of the chance to do a little scrapping against their bad conditions and low wages. Every night the hall at 928 East Moyammensing avenue is packed with big crowds of seamen eager for speakers and enthusiastic over the strike.

The manner of the Seamen's Institute at Philadelphia has yielded to the sweep of strike sentiment and refused to ship any seamen while the strike is on. How well the strike call is working may be judged from the fact that in the dry dock of Philadelphia a Norwegian ship has recruited four successive—but not successful crews. Each time the new crew left at the pickets' call and the ship has no crew yet.

Mobile Carries on Strike.

At Mobile, Alabama, the M. T. W. secretary and another member of the M. T. W. arrested under the "anti-boycott" law at the beginning of the strike have had their cases dismissed. The strike is on full blast with ships tied up as fast as they dock.

Here in New York harbor the tightness of the strike is shown by the fact that the British liner Carmania left short handed only by taking men from several other ships, while the liner Cedric got away only with an impossible crew of forty Bowery bums who demanded and received a rate of $70 for the trip over and free passage back to the States.

Trick Backfired.

The captain of the Norwegian freighter Sokndal thot he would beat the strike by refusing to pay off the men. But the M. T. W. used a little legal action and had the ship libelled for the wages due her seamen and she is now tied up at the National Refiinery at the foot of Main street, Yonkers.

Mass meetings are held every night at South street and Coenties Slip, with meetings going on in Brooklyn attended by big crowds of seamen from all nations of the earth. Many crews now laying aboard are coming off when they are paid their wages. To prevent any trickery the names of these ships are not announced. The M. T. W. held a meeting yesterday at noon hour on the corner of West street and 14th, with one of the biggest crowds, enthusiastic and interested.

SPANISH TROOPS REFUSE TO WAR AGAINST RIFFS

Moroccans Wipe Out Whole Battalions

GIBRALTER, Sept. 22.—Spanish soldiers and sailors arriving at Algeciras on the cruiser Jaime I, which is securing provisions before returning to the fighting against the Riffians on the shores of Alhucemas Bay, report that the Spanish losses have been extremely heavy, despite contrary reports of official Madrid communiques.

Sailors who took part in the landing of forces declare the Riffians took heavy toll with their deadly fire on the landing party and on the cruisers near the shore.

Regiments in Revolt

There is much talk here of the refusal of Spanish troops to leave for Morocco. Two battalions of the foreign legion were wiped out in the fighting at Ben Karrich, near Tetuan, and an Asturias regiment quartered at Carabanchel, a suburb of Madrid, has been open revolt, rather than be shipped to the Moroccan slaughter in order to benefit the bankers.

Altho the Spanish government denies these mutinies, they cannot hide the fact that Antonio Sachapuiqo, a priest, has been tried by a court martial for "conspiracy against the government and fomenting revolt." The verdict has not yet been announced.

Mobilize Fascist Police

The entire police and gendarmerie of Madrid has been mobilized in fear of the growing revolt among the soldiers. Mutinies have occurred not only near Madrid, but at Malaga and Algeciras, ports of embarkation, it is reported.

The Spanish landing force will be withdrawn from the beach at Alhucemas Bay, as dictator Primo de Rivera now admits the position is "untenable," dispatches from Paris state. The Spanish troops are completely at a standstill, and are suffering severely under a shortage of food and the Riffian fire.

American Fliers Kill Women

QUEZZAN, Morocco, Sept. 22.—The Sheriffian escadrille, made up of Americans from wealthy families who are aiding the French bankers in their war on the Moroccan natives, will ignore the half-hearted warning of Secretary of State Kellogg that they are breaking the laws of the United States.

The American adventurers, under direction of the notorious scab-herder Col. Charles Sweeney, in their last operation, after hearing of Kellogg's "warning," bombed the peaceful villages at the source of the Agurdour river, laying waste to scores of plantations. They did not aid the military fight against the Riffians, except to kill a few women and children, and deprive other families of their food.

IMPERIALISTS, UNABLE TO TRICK CHINA, NOW SHOWING SIGNS OF PAIN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—A flat demand for complete autonomy is being considered by the Chinese government, it was learned authoritatively today.

The nationalist movement in that country has gathered such momentum that conservative leaders may find themselves unable to control it.

This was the latest development in the involved Chinese situation which trickled into Washington today and caused concern to imperialist diplomats who are now anxiously wondering what the outcome of the forthcoming customs and extra-territoriality conference will be.

The promises made by the imperialist powers to revise their treaty relations with China has not met with the general enthusiasm in China which was expected, according to American observers.

Belief is growing in China that the time has arrived to throw off the shackles of foreign domination, secured by treaties of violence and extending over upwards of 85 years in many cases.

Although state department officials and attaches at the Chinese embassy maintain a studious silence on the subject, the seriousness of the situation is generally recognized.

U. S. MINERS CAN FORCE LEWIS INTO UNITED FRONT JUST LIKE BRITISH MINERS DID THOMAS

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

Thruout the world a bitter struggle is being carried on by the progressive element in the trade unions in behalf of trade union unity and united front tactics. Not only have the progressives to fight the bosses, but they have to fight the reactionary officials of the unions themselves. Yet in spite of the enormous handicaps which the progressives have to work against, they are making rapid progress in organizing the workers for trade union unity in many parts of the world.

The British Victory.

The notable victories of the workers in Britain in the last threatened strike of the coal miners is a sample of what can be done thru working class solidarity as presented by the united front of organized labor. The workers in Britain are rapidly forging the chain that will win the workers emancipation from the slave conditions under which they now toil.

We reproduce a copy of the notice distributed amongst the workers' organizations in Britain, that was to a large extent responsible for the coal miners' victory and suggest that our readers show it to our traitorous leaders that they may learn what the united front is or ought to be.

The importance of an alliance between the transport workers and the miners of America at this time,—similar to the following agreement between the British miners and transport workers is apparent, in view of the strike of the 150,000 anthracite miners in Pennsylvania.

This is a fascimile of the order issued by the British railway unions not to touch coal if the miners were forced to go on strike. It caused Premier Baldwin and his cabinet to change their minds at the twelfth hour of the coal crisis, and made them bring sufficient influence on the coal barons to withdraw announcement of a cut in wages.

NOTICE!

LOCK-OUT OF COAL MINERS, AUGUST 1, 1925

Official Stoppage of the Movement of Coal

Official Instructions to All Railway and Transport Workers as Agreed Unanimously by a Joint Conference of the N. U. R., A. S. L. E. & F., R. C. A., and the Transport and General Workers' Union Executives, and Approved by the General Council of the Trades Union Congress.

RAILWAYS.

1. Cars containing coal must not be attached to any train after midnight on Friday, July 31st, and after this time cars of coal must not be supplied to any industrial or commercial concerns, or be put on the tip roads at docks for the coaling of ships.
2. All coal en route at midnight on Friday to be worked forward to the next siding suitable for storing it.
3. Any coal either in cars or stock at a depot may be utilized at that depot for the purpose of coaling engines for passenger and goods trains, but must not be moved from that depot to another.

DOCKS, WHARVES, ETC.

Coal Exports.

All Tippers and Trimmers will cease work at the end of the 2nd shift on July 31st.

Coal Imports.

On no account may import coal be handled from July 31st.

General.

A general stoppage of men handling coal on other classes of tonnage on Friday midnight.

WATERWAYS AND DOCKS.

All men on canals, waterways, etc., engaged in carrying coal will cease Friday midnight, with the exception of men who have coal en route, who will be allowed to take it to destination and tie up. SAFETY MEN FOR PUMPING, ETC., WILL BE PERMITTED TO WORK FOR SAFETY PURPOSES ONLY.

ROAD TRANSPORT.

All men engaged in delivering coal to commercial and industrial concerns will cease Friday night, July 31st. Men delivering for domestic purposes will cease at 12 noon, Saturday, August 1st.

LOCAL COMMITTEES.

For the purpose of carrying out these instructions the members of the organizations herein concerned shall, from each district, establish small subcommittees so as to co-ordinate policy in giving effect to same.

T. GILL (President)
A. G. WALKDEN (Sec.)

It is important that the workers note that J. H. Thomas of "Black Friday" fame, the traitor to the British Triple Alliance, even worse than John L. Lewis, signed the notice. It is important because his signature shows the rising power of the British left wing, or better known abroad as the Minority Movement. Thomas signed on the dotted line, not because he wanted to but because he knew the power of the left wing was so strong in Britain and in such a temper that no man could betray it a second time and still remain an official of the workers in Britain.

U. S. Miners Must Also Force Lewis.

John L. Lewis and the anthracite miners are in a similar position to that which A. J. Cook and the British miners were in, in the last day of July, 1925, and we ask, "Will John L. Lewis work for an alliance with the transport workers as A. J. Cook secured?" He will just as quickly as the power of the progressive miners force him to do so. No faker can challenge a real rank and file movement—and get away with it.

Sixty-six thousand votes and a discredited Jacksonville agreement will force the republican tool Lewis to work for an alliance and that very soon, far sooner than John L. Lewis really comprehends, should he desire to remain in office. The duty of the officials of the U. M. W. of A. at the present time is to bring out the whole of the miners in America and fight for a national agreement.

Since the victory of the British miners and workers generally as a result of the foregoing agreement between the workers of Britain a great impetus has been given to united front tactics in the tight little isle. So much so that our cheap fakers in the American labor movement are hard put to it to explain their position on that most important question.

Praise From the Bosses.

Mr. Easley the other day congratulated the American labor fakers that they were not like their British brothers. Mr. Easley is spokesman for big business. He is president of the National Civic Federation in Washington. Mr. Wm. Green was one of those to whom Easley referred. When labor leaders are congratulated by big business for their position with labor, there is something wrong with the labor leaders.

But we can picture our leaders in an agreement with the rest of the workers as our British brothers are. The Greens, Farringtons, Lewises and the scabby outfit that re sucking the life blood out of American labor will enter into a working agreement like our brothers across the sea with the transport workers, when the progressive miners make them.

It is the duty of all class conscious workers to work for the united front and the elemination of our fake leaders who are retarding our movement.

STATEMENTS OF AIRSHIP CREW ARE SUPPRESSED

Shenandoah Survivors' Stories "Not Evidence"

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 22.—At the naval investigation of the destruction of the dirigible Shenandoah in an Ohio storm early this month with a loss of 14 lives Lieut. C. E. Rosendahl, ranking surviving officer of the ship, protested against the introduction as evidence of original statements by the survivors. These statements, whose existence was not known generally until today, were offered by Commander Jacob Kline.

The statements were obtained immediately after the crash of the Shenandoah when Kline headed a board of inquiry which went from Lakehurst to Ohio.

Rosendahl protested against their acceptance by the inquiry board as evidence bearing on the loss of the dirigible.

There was no protest from Kline, and Admiral Jones announced the statements, pencilled on small sheets of note paper, would be admitted into the record but would not be accepted as evidence.

HOLD HUGE N. Y. MASS MEETING FOR SAKLATVALA

United Front Against Exclusion of Red

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—Thousands of workers attended the huge demonstration in Union Square called by the Workers (Communist) Party to protest against the exclusion by Secretary of State Kellogg, of the Communist member of the British parliament, Shapurji Saklatvala, from the United States, and five other organizations took part in the meeting. Resolutions of protest against this fresh atrocity of the Coolidge imperialist government were unanimously passed. The workers carried banners bearing slogans against imperialism and demanding the immediate admittance of Saklatvala.

Those organizations which took part in the tremendous mass meeting were, in addition to the Workers Party, the Civil Liberties' Union, The Friends of Freedom for India, the Young Workers' League, the Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, the International Labor Defense, and many local unions.

Socialists Conspicuously Absent.

The speakers at the meeting were Jay Lovestone, Charles Krumbein, William Z. Foster, William Weinstone, Workers Party, Arthur Garfield Hayes, Civil Liberties Union, Peter Golden, Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, Saleindra N. Ghose, Friends of Freedom for India, Herbert Zam, Young Workers' League, and Ben Gitlow, International Labor Defense.

The socialist party refused to participate in the anti-imperialist protest, Norman Thomas declining to address this working class meeting.

When Comrade Gitlow spoke for world trade union unity, and mentioned Comrade Purcell, who is coming to this country, the large crowd sent up cheer after cheer.

Working Class Slogans.

Some of the banners carried by the workers read: "Hail Saklatvala, champion of oppressed peoples," "No persecution of foreign-born workers," "Demand freedom for China, Morocco, and Syria," "The government at Washington is a capitalist government, all hail to the workers' and farmers' government," "Why does our government bar the friends of Irish freedom?" "Long live world trade union unity," "The ministers of the murder regimes of Europe are admitted, why is Saklatvala, champion of labor, excluded?" "Long live Soviet Russia." "Demand the freedom of Haiti, Santo Domingo and the Philippines." "Hilferding and Loebe, German socialists are not barred, the socialists help imperialism maintain its rule."

co-operating with British imperialism against the working class.

Izvestia publishes a cartoon, entitled, "Free America," showing Secretary Kellogg, dressed as a policeman and armed with a spiked club, occupying the place of the statute of liberty, while liberty has dropped her torch. The caption reads, "Wanted—Appropriate place to be dropped, by the statute of liberty—Barred from the United States."

Crowds Cheer Saklatvala.

LONDON, Sept. 22—At a protest mass meeting in Battersea, Saklatvala addressed thousands of workers, declaring he did not care what the capitalist press or the capitalist governments thot about his speeches before parliament. "I stand by every word," Saklatvala said amid cheers, "and challenge any honest person to face me in debate on the public platform. Great Britain has no right to rule India."

"America," said Saklatvala, "is giving a royal reception to tory members of parliament representing the capitalist power of Great Britain. They have gone there as snakes in the grass. They are glorious heroes who are going to say 'we are an English speaking brotherhood,' but they got into a blue funk, for they knew if I had told the truth in America they could not stand up and face it. Therefore they intrigued, plotted, and lied, and never came out in the open against me in Great Britain.

Will Expose Capitalism.

"I have written to America, promising that if I went I would not preach anarchy, but would expose the conspiracy of the capitalist ruling class."

Many other meetings were held thruout Great Britain protesting against the barring of the Communist. A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, addressed a meeting of miners at South Wales and spoke of the growing power of the British working class. He demanded immediate world trade union unity.

Howl Down Traitor Thomas.

At the very moment when Saklatvala was receiving a great ovation in Battersea, J. H. Thomas, labor party member and flunkey of British imperialism, was being howled down by workers in Newcastle. Thomas, who was a member of MacDonald's cabinet, and who aided in the exploitations of the British colonies, was unable to speak. He was to have addressed a demonstration staged by officials of the railwaymen's union, but was interrupted when the audience started to sing "The Red Flag." Thomas finally had to call the meeting off without uttering a word.

Anti-Fascist Alliance Protests.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—A resolution protesting against the government's refusal to admit Shapurji Saklatvala to this country was passed by the Anti-Fascist Alliance of America, at a meeting in the Central Opera House, East 7th St., attended by three thousand workers.

Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for mayor, when invited to address the united front protest mass meeting at Union Square, refused to appear, and took occasion to deliver an attack on the Soviet Union. Thomas took a stand which indirectly supported the Coolidge government.

Debs' Statement.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Sept. 22—Eugene V. Debbs, member of the International Labor Defense, issued a statement in which he denounced the banning of Saklatvala.

"In regard to the action of the state department at Washington in denying a passport to Saklatvala I have to say that I look upon it as every decent American should," said Debs, "as a flat denial of free speech, an outrage against a duly authorized representative of a supposedly friendly nation, and a disgrace to the present administration.

"It is moreover, a flagrant violation of our vaunted American traditions relating to freedom of conscience and liberty of action within the law. America under the steel clad rule of capitalism, has long since ceased to be an asylum for the oppressed and downtrodden, and has become a reservation over which Wall Street wields the scepter of autocratic power, and this accounts for the brutal action against the Communist member of the British parliament which ought to be denounced and resented (especially by the working class) by every organization, every paper and every individual that cherishes the least vestige of respect for free speech and has any decent regard for human rights in the United States."

"Sincere" Mr. Hearst.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, who has just returned from Europe, said he thot the state department had been used by the Baldwin government, "to pull chestnuts out of the fire."

William Randolph Hearst, one of the chief exploiters of the Mexican workers and peasants, broadcasts a statement in his yellow press opposing the banning of Saklatvala. Hearst, whose interests as an American imperialist clash with the interests of British imperialism, said, "it does not discourage radicalism. It simply makes conservatism ridiculous." He favored independence for India, altho he continues to enslave the Mexican workers.

Cringing Third Partyites Surrender to Old Party Leadership in New York

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the third party bubble in New York City fades completely with the announcement by Congressman F. H. LaGuardia, former president of the board of aldermen, that he would head no movement against the two old parties.

William Randolph Hearst, the ubiquitous publisher, worked hard for a third party revolt. Not that he offers himself as the standard bearer of the small bourgeoisie. The millionaire newspaper owner is merely seeking in this way to advance his own political ambitions, which include even the aspiration to occupy the White House at Washington.

• • • •

Yet the failure of the third party movement in New York City, supported by the widely read Hearst press, again exposes the cringing middle class afraid to organize to fight its own battles. When its pet, John F. Hylan, is defeated in the domocratic primaries, it meekly accepts the Tammany Hall choice, Senator James J. Walker, and promises the electorate, in LaGuardia's own words, "a liberal education in public utilities running the city, favoritism in its basest sense, and a real 'everybody-getting-his' administration."

Hylan and LaGuardia are pretty much in the same position that the late William Jennings Bryan found himself when John Wallstreet Davis was picked as the democratic candidate for president last year. Bryan had denounced Wall Street and the House of Morgan. He had bitterly assailed Governor Al Smith, Tammany Hall's choice for the presidential candidacy, as "the tool of the money interests." Yet Bryan obediently swallowed all his brave speeches and lined up the Tammany Hall outfit in support of Morgan's personal lawyer. So the loud speakers of the third party movement, Hylan and LaGuardia, now accept the old party decisions in the primaries without a whimper.

• • • •

While Bryan merely flirted with the LaFollette movement, LaGuardia was in open alliance with it, even allowing his name to go before the voters on Hillquit's "socialist" ticket, when his republican party disowned him in New York. He recently stumped Wisconsin for LaFollette, Jr.

It is, therefore, interesting to study LaGuardia's declaration that, "An independent and progressive movement must originate and come from the masses. It must not be a one-man affair and no real progressive wants to be the candidate of any one man."

That is the usual buncombe of the political adventurers who are always on hand to exploit the discontent of the masses, whenever and wherever it arises. Even with the support of 5,000,000 voters, LaFollette would not drive for a third party, going to his grave an office holder of Wall Street's G. O. P. Hylan was a candidate in the democratic primaries in New York's municipal campaign, just as LaFollette, Jr., ran in the republican primaries of the special senatorial campaign in Wisconsin.

LaFollette, Jr., had the support of masses but, like his father before him, even the most energetic efforts of the old party bosses are unsuccessful in ousting him from the political ranks of the biggest capitalists.

LaGuardia's statement when read correctly merely means that these political opportunists are always on hand to exploit, for their own advantage, the discontent arising out of new sufferings imposed on the many. In this way they act as the best agents of big business in betraying these movements of discontent.

LaFollette was capitalism's best agent in making war on the farmer-labor movement toward independent political action. Some other LaFollette, a LaGuardia, a Hylan, or a Hearst himself, will come to the front to betray again the next great revolt against Wall Street. But they will have a harder time of it.

• • • •

In the New York campaign, as everywhere else, the fight for the labor party grows in virility. The proposal for a united front working class movement against the capitalist parties was proposed by the Workers (Communist) Party. The "socialists," as usual, turned their backs against it. But it receives increasing support from rank and file workers, who will pioneer the way toward the creation of the mass movement, that will wage an intelligent fight against capitalism thru refusing to be led astray by fake third party decoys in the next crisis.

NEW VICTORIES WON BY CLOTH WORKERS' UNIO

Amalgamated Members Gain in Cleveland

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(FP)—Victory and union conditions for the workers in the Slavin Manufacturing Co. of Cleveland are reported by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers which has been conducting the strike.

Another Rochester firm signs up with the union and goes on the 44-hour week and strikes against shops in Montreal and Philadelphia are going ahead. The strikes against the big International Tailoring Co. and J. L. Tailor & Co. of New York and Chicago are continuing at a hot pace.

Spirit of Struggle Sweeps Seamen

cials of the International Seamen's Union, who are trying to get their uninformed members to sign on struck ships. As soon as the crews of the Melville Dollar and the William Penn went ashore, the I. S. U. leaders' delegates rounded up some of their members, and signed them on under the guise of being "good union men." In Baltimore, likewise, the I. S. U. business agent, one Hodgson, went to the mate of a struck ship, promised him a crew and confided that he would scab the M. T. W. out of existence. The mate being a decent fellow, gave him the time of his life.

Union scabbery is denounced by all seafarers and the I. S. U. stands to lose by it, for the demand for unity in the whole labor movement is against any scabbing at all, and especially against scabbing in the name of unionism, no matter what the excuse.

Gloom Spreads Over Britain.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The "dole" has been stopped on striking seamen in Liverpool, with the wives and children being forced to go into the poor house for shelter and food. But the men stand firm against the ship owners' wage cut, knowing they may as well fight it out on this starvation condition as to have to work and starve besides.

Shops in Liverpool are being raided, however, by desperate unemployed. The ship owners are signing on even lads of 15 years. But no active seamen will work, barring he is a natural born scab.

Sailings Cancelled, Trade Tangled.

The ship owners are daily being forced to cancel more sailings, and trade is tangled up beyond all straightening. Even if the strike ended today, months will go by before accumulated shipping could be handled. Fruit cargoes are rotting in ships held in tropic ports. Commercial agents are demanding that shipping companies do something.

Over a million tons of shipping is already accumulated in ports thruout the empire. Australian ports are completely idle.

At Sydney, twelve white and fifteen colored seamen were jailed for striking. The policy of Premier Bruce of ruthless crushing of the strike has produced a political crisis. Parliament has been dissolved and a new election is called with a direct challenge against Bruce being made by his political opponent, Walsh, an avowed Communist and leader of the Australian strikers.

All British bourgeois are filled with gloom at the seamen's strike following on the heels of the miners' victory and the going to the revolutionary left by British unions at the Scarborough Trades Union Congress.

Trade Union Congress Denounces Havelock Wilson.

At Scarborough there was a spontaneous demonstration against the leader of British union scabs, Havelock Wilson of the National Sailors' and Firemen's Union, who signed the wage cut agreement and is doing all in his power to break the strike of his own members.

The British labor leader Shinwell, finally succeeding in getting the floor to speak on the seamen's strike, Chairman Swales after objection, bowing to the clear desire of the delegates.

Winding up a skilfull and amusing statement of the case, Shinwell embarked on a scathing peroration directed against Havelock Wilson. But before he got to his name, the delegates, realizing fully at whom the string of denunciatory epithets was directed, broke into a storm of cheering and clapping.

British labor hates a scab. It has no name too ugly for a union scab.

BIG SUIT HOUSE SPEEDS WORKERS, DOCKS THEM FOR FALLING BELOW OUTPUT, PAYS STARVATION WAGES

By THEODORE MORANCE (Worker Correspondent).

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Ours, "the largest mail order house in the East," employs at least three thousand people in its two plants in New York City. The main plant on Seventh avenue easily overtops, by its sixteen stories, the other buildings of New York's factory district. As the workers troop out at six o'clock—dispirited and disheartened after the day's heavy work it seems as if all of the working population of the East Side and a good slice of Brooklyn is here made busy in supplying the East's mail orders.

The National Cloak and Suit company maintains a large employment office with a sleek employment manager and a staff of clerks hiring twelve dollar a week boys and girls. Since the labor turnover is great one can find almost every day dozens of applicants in the large and well appointed office waiting for an "interview."

This is usually the process of examining the faces of the job seekers to see if they have sufficient intelligence to be able to distinguish and protest against the appalling conditions to be found inside the building. Whereupon they are rejected. If one presents a high school diploma, one is honored with the munificent renumeration of $14-per week. Thus the "economic advantage" of a high school education would seem to be two dollars.

Thrown on Streets.

The time cards show workers who have been with the firm ten and fifteen years. And yet, if there were an efficiency campaign, as usually happens when business is not so brisk, thousands of these broken old horses would be thrown on the streets with the worst possible prospects. They surely could not count upon their experience in the National as the work done here is highly sub-divided, allowing several hundred hands to perform the same two or three operations day in and day out. The packers have several sizes of boxes and paper and wrap up their output without knowing the least thing about the postage or customs regulations or requirements, while the ones who attend to those details could not tie a knot or wrap a package to save their lives.

Hundreds of items are packed every day by the same packer, but he could not distinguish between cotton and silk goods. They are merely required to plug away at the same monotonous task every tortuous minute of the age-long day. The output of orders picked or packed is the limit and any deviation therefrom is sure to spell discharge. All the positions occupied by the relatives or friends of the stockholders are not subject to work outputs. All others must see that their hourly piles of work approach the output mark.

Straw Bosses Snap Whip.

All of the floors with their different departments are managed by department heads who are there to see that the section bosses are constantly busy driving the slaves on. These section bosses are usually chosen from the ranks, after having been tested by the department heads and proving that they are able to bring the expense account under the budget estimate—that is they must force the same worker to do the work of two or even three men. If the boss took pity on the workers and added more "help" he was deemed inefficient and demoted. He was expected to earn his salary and ten times that for the company, in "better methods of management."

Such a despicable creature could get twenty or twenty-two dollars per week. The department heads by the same analogy were also expected to earn their fifty a week by making "the section bosses" work the employees every minute of the nine hours a day—though a ten minute rest period is allowed the workers. At three o'clock the whistle gives the workers still dizzy from the grind the chance to realize how weary and knocked out they all are. The amount of rest that one gets is equal to the number of angels that can balance themselves on the point of a needle.

At twelve-fifteen every one "knocks-off" for fourty-five minutes and as soon as one o'clock blows the section boss comes snooping around with his cries of "Come on dig in, dig in" just as if he were addressing so many cattle instead of human beings. Time clocks are stationed in every department, each section has one. At all hours can be heard the punching of time cards as part time workers come in. Especially in this true of the shipping departments in which the writer works.

All part timers are paid 34c for each hour of work put in. As a result many high school and college students are "putting in time" either mornings or afternoons while some work all day while some even put in entire days on this basis. They can be laid off for weeks even. They are not paid for holidays nor are they paid for illness, just for the hours they put in. As a result part timers compete with each other in order to secure the lousy few hours for the day.

They do not get any vacation no matter how many years they work, though they get frequent lay-offs at their own expense. All work that remains from the morning is finished in the afternoon, when the schoolboys come in.

Discriminate Against Women

The regulars are almost as bad off as the part timers. They have to make outputs and put in nine hours of toil per day for the same salary that they had been getting for years. The maximum salary paid is nineteen or twenty to those who have worked more than five years. Then if the worker wants a further increase he is fired. The ingenuity of the department head is constantly being exerted to put off raises month after month. The girls are even more poorly paid than the boys. Their maximum is sixteen dollars per week or seventeen to veterans.

Penalized for "Errors"

Then there is a system of error markings whereby all possible errors are listed and checked off by auditors against the work of the employees whenever they come around to audit it. Each error means a bawling out from the department head and the error slip is forwarded with your output record to general headquarters. There if they decide that the National is not making more than 100 per cent profit on you, out you go.

The department heads are men who have purchased stock and are drawing a salary to exploit their help to the last dollar of profit. Middle classers with houses and automobiles, commuting from the suburbs to come in and further enslave us in the mornings. While most of the section bosses are drawn from the ranks the soft jobs go to those with pull. There is no advancement at all without that desideratum.

In general the lot of the worker is arduous, ill-paid and monotonous. The National's system of bosses and sub-bosses over-awes the workers of which a large proportion are either foreign or students, two groups who cannot be aroused. Were the DAILY WORKER to start a campaign it would greatly help to alleviate the rotton conditions of work under which thousands labor every day.

CARRIE FURNACE CARRIES DEATH FOR WORKERS

Capitalist Hellhole Breeds Revolt

By THOMAS, Worker Correspondent.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 22 — The Carrie Furnace of Rankin, Pa., is a part of the United States Steel corporation in which Garyism is maintained 100 per cent, long hours, speed up, small pay and no organization permitted. Born a Welsh coal miner even for me the strain was too much. After two weeks I had to quit.

The labor gang are suffering all the abuses of hard work. One man has to carry cement and brick to keep three bricklayers busy on certain days when they are repairing the furnaces. On other days they are wheeling waste away from the furnaces under terrible heat while the dust almost chokes them. There is a straw boss for every six men besides assistant foremen and foremen.

If you stand up for a moment to stretch your back or take a rest they are all on your neck within two seconds, and if you give them any back talk you will be fired right off the bat.

Carrying at the Carrie Furnace.

I spoke to a laborer who had been employed there for about two years, though few workers stay so long in that place except those having a staff job. He said conditions had been the same ever since he started. He said, "the name of this place is 'carry,' alright, I have been 'carrying' ever since two years ago. If it isn't one thing it is another."

And for that work you are paid the large sum of 44c an hour for a 10-hour day. The much boasted eight-hour day does not exist in this plant. The workers are beginning to realise that an eight-hour day can be won only thru an organized fight.

I have seen still worse examples. The men who work around the furnaces, cleaning gas tubes and cleaning waste from the ore, receive the royal sum of 45c an hour for risking their lives in the cloud of dust and gas coming from the furnaces. I worked in that plant for two weeks. When it got too hot I beat it but I shall never forget what happened to a dozen men during that period.

Workers Who Vanish.

One man who was sent up to repair a runway fell down about 150 feet and was killed instantly. One man fell down into the cumberdown (red hot ashes from the furnace) he was burned to death. Both of these accidents were indisputably the fault of the company for not supplying safety belts.

A few days later gas tubes were to be cleaned out. Men were forced to go into these tubes before the gas was properly cleaned with the result that seven men were gassed, some beyond resurrection.

They were taken to the hospital and nothing could be heard of them since, where they were, or whether dead or alive. All such accidents are being hushed up by the officials of the company.

It is a sight to see the sick parade, when every other morning those who have suffered injuries but are still able to somehow crawl back to work must do so. If they cannot walk they are brot in ambulances. This is done to keep the record of the list of accidents at the lowest possible minimum.

This company now boasts of the best record of this kind in the district. However, the cause of the large part of all accidents can be traced back directly to the slave driving conditions under which the workers are employed, driven to a point of complete exhaustion and the lack of safety appliances.

Safety All in the Speeches.

Nothing is done to protect the lives of the workers except safety speeches, in reality given for the purpose of boosting the company and praising the existing conditions. Only the strongest men are accepted for jobs in this plant. Plenty of applications but only the most husky are selected, the same as a butcher picks his cattle.

The growing line of unemployed, however, is beginning to teach the workers another lesson that the bosses have no interests in common with the workers of the mills; that their institutions, political and otherwise are created to help keep them in exploitation and that some way must be found to stop competition for jobs amongst themselves. The next thing they will learn will be how to organize.

LEWIS WORKING SECRETLY WITH PINCHOT FOR ARBITRATION AND INTERFERENCE IN ANTHRACITE

By PAT TOOHEY
(Worker Correspondent)

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 22 —Today, after the much heralded conference with Governor Pinchot, John L. Lewis and Major Inglis, moth issue statements to the effect that the conference was "very interestin," that, and nothing more.

The Pinchot-Lewis-Englis meeting can mean but one thing, especially when Lewis and Inglis rushed to accept the governor's suggestion to "caucus" and that is arbitration. All points to interference by the government. Lewis, shouting to the housetops that the miners will not submit to arbitration, have nothing to do with it, really is in favor of arbitration.

Lewis is held in check by the membership not to fool so much with arbitration, especially since the membership bitterly remembers the Wilson "impartial" arbitration board of the 1920 strike, the strike the miners lost everything they fought for.

That Lewis really favors arbitration and government interference irrespective of his loud anti-arbitration shouting can be proved by the records of his speech at the tri-district convention in July of this year.

Speaking on what might happen if the operators and "great Americans" continued to scrap the Jacksonville agreement he said, "and if this situation continues it may be necessary later on, to authorize a national shutdown of the mines of this country while the government and the coal operators and the representatives of the mine workers discuss the question of whether the Jacksonville agreement is going to be carried out."

Lewis Once Opposed Arbitration

We should remember it "may" be necessary to declare a national strike. We should also remember the government is to have a hand in the proceedings. The great mass of the rank and file are categorically opposed to arbitration in every form. Many local unions have adopted stern resolutions and have circularised the entire union membership of the anthracite fields asking them to adopt the resolutions.

Arbitration will not be tolerated, arbitration or conciliation with an impartial "mediator" the whole works. Local Union 1483, with a membership of nearly 1,000 adopted an anti-arbitration resolution as early as August 1st and demanded a shutdown of the anthracite mines in case no agreement was reached, the operators conducting an advertising campaign thru the capitalist press urging the miners to remain at work pending a new agreement.

Notified of this action of Local 1483, Lewis in a letter to the writer, as secretary of the above local union, said among other things: "I am in complete accord with the action taken by Local Union 1483 with regard to the arbitration offer of the operators."

Pinchot Playing Politics

It has been expected for a long time Pinchot would inject himself in the strike, not for any "humanitarian" motive, as he states, but as a political trick on the part of this fellow who is at odds with the state republican machine. Pinchot and Pepper both waited for the most favorable opportunity of meddling. Pinchot with the idea of swamping Pepper next year for the senatorial nomination, which is the prize he is after.

It is a generally accepted fact that Pinchot will oppose Pepper in the primary elections next year, with other rumors gaining headway he will use the senate, if he wins, as a springboard from which to project himself into the 1928 presidential contest. Especially when we consider Pinchot made a very detailed tour of the anthracite fields just prior to the strike, ostensibly to place his "giant power program before the people" but in reality to attempt bolster his power prior to the primaries next year.

Another trip will be made, this time "inspecting state institutions." Giff is getting some good advertising these days, to which he does not object to in the least. His interest in not the miserable lot of the anthracite mine workers, his interference is not for their interests.

Interference Coming

Another factor which must be taken into consideration with the expectation Pinchot will interfere, as he did two years ago, in his recent appointment of a "commission" of the state department of labor, under Landsburgh the secretary, to "determine what effect the strike has had on employment in industries other than mining, but affected by the tie-up." This move on the part of Pinchot is to have all coal strike data available prior to intervening.

Rinaldo Cappellini, speaking at Old Forge recently stated "It was but a question of time until Coolidge would interfere." All are looking for a chance to solidify their positions, Pepper, Pinchot and Coolidge. Government interference in the past has been detrimental to the mine workers. It will take a lot of explaining on the part of Lewis to the membership to arbitrate again as he has done in the past.

Operators In No Hurry

This strike in one aspect is very beneficial to the operators and for the present they are not so very much interested in its settlement. Now they have an opportunity of heaping on the market millions of tons of storage coal of a size and grade which otherwise would be unmarketable. At the begining of the strike it was estimated there was 10,000,000 tons reserve of which only 1,000,000 was of a marketable domestic grade. The storage yards of the anthracite field have depleted very much of late, and in some cases are entirely empty.

The Workers Party and the progressive miners are holding many mass meetings among the strikers. They are presenting to the miners the only practical solution to their many problem. They will raise with more intensity the slogan of "No Arbitration" "No Government Interference."

More Good News for Worker Correspondents

As announced in yesterday's issue of the DAILY WORKER, the standard of worker correspondence sent in for the special International Press Day issue, and the amount of stories sent, made the task of choosing winners most difficult, and also made it impossible to print all the stories.

However, in view of the good work done, it has been decided to award three additional prizes to worker correspodnents whose stories arrived for that issue.

Of these prizes, the first—a copy of RUSSIA TODAY—is awarded to Irwin, a Pittsburgh worker correspondent for his story in Tuesday's issue: "Fakers' Fight on Reds Only Aids Employers." The second prize, a copy of Magdeleine Marx's "ROMANCE OF NEW RUSSIA," is given to John Perrides of Chicago for his story also in Tuesday's issue, on conditions among Greek restaurant worekrs. Third prize—a copy of Trotsky's MY FLIGHT FROM SIBERIA— was won by Regina Myroski, with a story of the West Virginia coal strike, in Monday's issue.

All three stories were of real merit. They were from the job and the field of struggle against both the bosses and reactionary trade union officialdom.

The success of the contest has been so satisfactory, the interest so marked, that more contests will be held in the near future. In the meantime, as often as possible, special pages of Worker Correspondence will be printed, as in today's issue on page three.

Passengers Injured in Wreck.

HAINES CITY, Fla., Sept. 22. — Eight white passengers were slightly injured and one Negro was believed fatally hurt, when two coaches, a baggage car and the tender of the engine of Atlantic coast line passenger train No. 86, Tampa to New York, was derailed two miles north of Haines City today. Members of the train crew said the wreck was due to a spread rail.

LABOR PROTESTS EXCLUSION OF HINDU RADICAL

Chicago Labor Body Invited to Attend

The Chicago Federation of Labor has been asked to co-operate with the Workers (Communist) Party and other workers' and liberal organizations in the mass protest meeting against the barring of Shapurji Saklatvala from the United States by Secretary of State Kellogg on Monday, Sept. 28, at Northwest Hall, North and Western Aves. A letter asking support and requesting a speaker from the Chicago Federation of Labor was addressed to John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, by Martin Abern, district organizer of the Workers (Communist) Party.

In addition to the Federation of Labor, invitations have also been extended to the University of Chicago Liberal Club, the local Kuomintang organization, representing the Chinese independent national movement, the Hindu Club, and other bodies. It is expected that speakers will appear from these organizations.

The exclusion of Saklatvala from America, because he is a Communist, and especially because of his open, strong attacks against British imperialism and his defense of the oppressed colonial peoples of India, China, Africa and elsewhere, is arousing widespread protest thruout the ranks of labor and among the liberal elements, and also among conservatives who regard the action of Kellogg and Coolidge as stupid political judgment, which only brings forth more strongly the views which Saklatvala holds. Senator Borah is among the leading figures protesting at this further violation of so-called American traditions of free speech and liberty of action.

At the protest meeting Monday, Sept. 28, William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, Manuel Gomes, secretary of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, are among the speakers thus far listed. Many other prominent speakers will be on hand.

Admission to the protest meeting at Northwest Hall, North and Western Aves., is free and a large crowd is expected to turn out to listen to the fashion in which the American and British governments operate and cooperate in order that the thought and organization of the awakening working masses may be curbed.

Soldier Prisoners Escape.

Two prisoners held for court martial overpowered and disarmed a guard at Fort Sheridan and fled. One, Elmer Behnke, 35, returned. The other, Angelo Caggiano, 25, armed, with a revolver taken from the guard, escaped. The pair got out of the guardhouse by throwing a canvas bag over the head of Private William Schaffer, 14th cavalry, the guard, gagging him and tieing him hand and foot.

MELLON PLACES HIS HUGE WHISKEY HOLDINGS IN HANDS OF OVERHOLT; PROFITS FROM DISTILLERY BIG

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 22.—Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon, who is head of federal prohibition enforcement, has again transferred his immense holdings in whiskey distilleres into the keeping of other hands.

When Mellon took over his present job of enforcing the prohibition law, he placed his whiskey holdings in the hands of the Union Trust company in December, 1920.

Now Mellon's stock is in the keeping of the Overholt Distilling Co. According to the papers filed in Connellsville, Mellon's stock is to be sold, but it was announced "His stock is so extensive it will require seven years to sell it."

By that time Mellon will have ample time to change his mind and decide to stay in the profitable distilling business, after he leaves public office. The Mellon holdings include "all the whiskey now in stock," according to the papers filed here.

BRITISH UNIONS FACE TO LEFT!

The British labor movement is "turning to the left." What makes it turn? You will not know unless you read the article by Carl Brannin in Friday's DAILY WORKER. Brannin's article gives you a close up on the National Minority Movement within the British trade unions. Don't miss Friday's DAILY WORKER.

The Bolshevization of Our Press

By MAX BEDACHT.

ASIDE from the organization of the party itself, the press is the most effective instrument of a Communist Party in leading the proletarian masses in their struggles and in helping them to assimilate their experiences from these struggles. The Bolshevization of our press is that process which establishes the highest degree of usefulness of our press as such an instrument.

The task of our press determines its character. A Communist paper must be the voice, the leader and the teacher of the working and struggling masses.

To be the voice of the workers, it is necessary that the workers speak thru it. The Communist paper must not merely write about the workers, but the workers must write in it about themselves. Thru the Communist paper workers must speak to workers.

THE institution of workers' correspondents must take care of this feature. The development and systematic organization of workers' correspondents and their work is a most important task of Bolshevization. Instruction on the work of workers' correspondents must be made part of the ciriculum of all educational programs. Every party unit must help in the selection of new workers' correspondents. Every shop nucleus must develop workers' correspondents by instructing the ablest comrades out of their midst to write about their shop or factory, about the doing of some obnoxious slave driving foreman or boss, about problems and difficulties arising in the relation of the workers and the bosses or the management of the shop.

It is clear that the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei will materially advance the chances of developing workers' correspondents.

TO be the leader of the workers it is absolutely necessary to establish the closest connection between the party and the press. The political line of the party must find expression in every line in the paper. The editorials of our press must not only talk about the workers' problems and struggles. They must make the solution of these problems and the victorious conclusions of these struggles their own major task. In this endeavor the Communist press must be the mouthpiece of the party. The party, as a party of revolutionary action, must correct the tendency of its press to philosophize in its editorials about the workers' struggles but wade in and fight them instead. Only when the workers can look for more than sympathy, when they can look for guidance and advice to our press, will our papers succeed in leading the workers.

To be the teacher of the working masses the Communist press must breath Marxist and Leninist theory in every line. Not only must the Communist papers give ample space to theoretical articles, but Marxian and Leninist methods of analysis and conclusions must guide every editorial worker on the Communist paper. In the capitalist papers every item, including news items, is designed to strengthen confidence in the capitalist system. Under the guise of pure news capitalist propaganda is being diseminated in millions of capitalist news sheets daily. In a Communist paper every item, including news items, must be designed to create antagonism and hatred against capitalism. It must be designed to produce a feeling of solidarity in the worker for his class. And this result must not be achieved by doing violence to the facts contained in the items, but by a Marxian analysis and a Leninist presentation and conclusion, when a worker drops off a scaffold no chance must be left for any thot to creep into the mind of the reader that it was carelessness on the part of the worker but it must be clear that capitalism's hunger for profit prevents the use of safe scaffolds which would protect the lives of the workers.

WHAT a Bolshevik paper must teach is an understanding of the character of capitalism, a knowledge that only the workers can defeat capitalism, a determination on the side of the workers to defeat it, and a knowledge of the conditions and methods of such a defeat.

The Bolshevization of our press means the adaption of our press to the purpose of being the best possible instrument of our party in guiding the working class and in establishing confidence of the workers in the Communist Party.

Baggage Handlers Win Raise on Compromise of Strike; Fought Cut

(From a Worker Correspondent).

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—New York baggage men who move the trunks and suitcases of passengers from railroad stations have won wage increases of one dollar a week with the signing of a 3-year agreement that terminates the strike called last month against the Westcott Express and New York Transfer companies. The walkout started when the companies cut wages a dollar a week and the men are thus two dollars a week better off than if they had submitted.

Other demands are compromised, the baggage men's union waiving the 8-hour and double time for Sunday work demands and going back on nine hours a day and time and a half for Sundays.

AMERICAN AUTOS WIN HIGH PLACE IN SOVIET TEST

Reliability of Trucks Sought by Soviets

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—In the recent reliability contests held in Soviet Russia, the American automobiles were able to win more first places than those of other lands. The American passenger cars made poorer showing in these tests than did American made motorcycles and trucks. The Russian tests were carried on to determine the reliability and efficiency of the various makes of cars and trucks as Russia would like to know which she may buy and get the most service from.

In the tabulation of firsts America stands ahead with 10 points to her credit; Germany comes next with 9 1-3; Austria 2 2-3; Czecho-Slovakia 3 1-2; England 2; Italy the lowest with a score of one.

Touring Cars Compete

For general excellence the German Mercedes, the Buick and the Austrian Streyer won first prizes in the respective groups of passenger cars. The durability prize was divided. The Studebaker and the Cadillac won among the highest powered cars, the Buick and the Pierce-Arrow in the next group, and the Streyer, Austro-Daimler and the German Stroewer in the third group; the Czecho-Slovak Tatra and the French Sunbeam in the fourth group.

In the economy test the Italian Fiat, the German Benz and the Czecho-Slovak Praga and Tatra were the winners. In the speed test the Mercedes, the Benz the Austrian Daimler and the German Aga, with Fraulein Stinnes driving, took first places.

Trucks Compete

Among the trucks the Mercedes and the German Komnik divided the grand prize for the heavier type. The Streyer won in the test of the lighter type. The Pierce-Arrow and the Benz won the durability prizes; the Formag and the German G. M. C. took the economy prize and the White and the Dodge divided honors in the test of ability to traverse bad roads. The Germans won in the autobus class.

Among the motorcycles the American Indian took three prizes, the English B. Z. A. two and the French Gillette one.

The Workers Party in Action

Shop Nuclei and Political Struggles

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN

NOW that the party has made up its mind to proceed immediately with the reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei, it is important that we reformulate the role and function of a shop nuclei.

This becomes doubly necessary in view of the misconceptions that are already manifesting themselves in our midst. For instance, that the shop nucleus is a special form of party organization to connect the party with the economic struggles of the workers in the shops.

Such a conception of shop nuclei is not only wrong but extremely dangerous.

THE shop nucleus is not a special form of party organization, but its main and basic form. When the party is completely reorganized, the shop nuclei will form the foundation of the party from which everything else will follow and upon which everything else will be built. This is what is meant by the shop nucleus being the basic unit of the party.

As a basic unit of the party, the shop nucleus carries on all the party activities, not only economic, parliamentary, educational, etc., but every phase of work that our party as a political party is engaged in. How else can it be? If our party were an organization merely for economic struggles, then the shop nucleus as its basic unit would have only economic functions. Or, if our party were merely a parliamentary organization the functions of its shop nuclei would be purely parliamentary. But, since our party is a revolutionary political party of the American working class, the functions of its basic units—the shop nuclei—are revolutionary and political in the widest sense of the word.

The shop nucleus, because it is the party unit which stands closest to the masses, is precisely the means by which the party as a whole reaches and mobilizes the workers for all struggles and for all sorts of campaigns, particularly political campaigns.

IT goes without saying that special shop problems, economic, trade union, and others, will play a large part in the life and activities of a shop nucleus. The Communists organized in the shop nuclei will of course take the initiative in organizing and leading the special struggles of the workers in every particular shop. But, all this the Communists will be doing not merely as militant fighters in the cause of the workers of that particular shop but as Communists, members of the Communist Party of America. That is, they will strive to broaden these special shop struggles and transform them into general struggles of the workers against the capitalists. Moreover, the shop nuclei will bring to the attention of the workers in their respective shops the wider and bigger problems of the class struggle that originate and develop outside of the shop. In other words, the shop nuclei will function as full-fledged political units of a revolutionary political party.

THE fact that the shop is the basis of operation of the nucleus should not confine its functions merely to shop problems. It is probably this fact that is responsible for the erroneous conception of the shop nuclei as special organs of the party for economic work. The relation of the shop to the shop nucleus is in a sense the same as the relation of the territorial section to the present territorial branch. The present branch of the party, no matter what particular territorial division it may be located in, is a basic unit of the party carrying on all phases of party work in its respective territory. The same is the case with the shop nucleus. Its location and base of operations is the particular shop, but its functions are all the functions of a basic party unit.

The reorganization of the party is a big and important task. The object of this reorganization is to place the foundation of the party organization where the workers live and struggle—the shop, factory, and mine. And the first prerequisite is a clear conception of the role and function of a shop nucleus.

Get Ready for Reorganization

THE Organization Department has announced its plan to mobilize the membership for the reorganization of the party into shop nuclei and international branches.

During the conduct of this campaign to reconstruct our party, a series of articles on organizational questions is being printed in every organ of the party. Questions and problems confronting our members in the rebuilding of the party will be answered and analyzed in the DAILY WORKER by Comrade Jay Lovestone, head of the Organization Department, and other party members.

The DAILY WORKER has also established a special section for the Organization Department. In this section there is being printed articles on the progress of the organization campaign, the experiences of the comrades in the work of organization, and letters and reports from comrades giving their experiences in carrying on the party's activities thru the shop nuclei.

These articles will be living articles, and of intense interest. Watch these columns closely.

SPECIAL MEETING OF RUSSIAN BRANCH THURSDAY, SEPT. 24

A special meeting of the Russian branch of the Workers Party will be held Thursday, Sept. 24, at 8 p. m., at 1902 W. Division St. The reorganization of the party will be discussed.

Only members of the party will be admitted.

Chicago Y. W. L. Gives First Dance in Fall

The first dance of the season will be given by the Young Workers' League, Local Chicago the proceeds of which are to go both for the work of the league organization in the city of Chicago and for their weekly national organ, the Young Worker, as a part of the campaign to maintain and build the Young Worker.

The dance will be held on Saturday, Oct. 10, at the Roosevelt Hall, 3437 West Roosevelt Road.

The music for the dancing will be played by the I. Letchinger's Mid-West Syncopators beginning at 8 p. m. and continuing until one o'clock. There will be dances of all varieties.

The admission to the hall is only 35c and everyone who wants a good time and wants to help the Young Workers' League is urged to be present and bring his friends.

MANY MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS IN PARTY'S REORGANIZATION DRIVE

The dates of Workers (Communist) Party membership meetings arranged in the party's reorganization campaign are as follows:

District	Date
1. Boston	Sept. 27.
2. New York	Sept. 25.
3. Philadelphia	Sept 26.
4. Buffalo	Oct. 4.
5. Pittsburgh	Sept. 25.
6. Cleveland	Sept. 27.
7. Detroit	Sept. 27.
8. Chicago	Oct. 7.
9. Minneapolis	Sept. 27.
15. Connecticut	Oct. 4.

An organization tour of the western districts is being planned by the C. E. C. Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and other party centers of the west will arrange mass membership meetings to be addressed by a representative of the Central Executive Committee.

BERT WOLFE TEACHES COMMUNIST SPEAKERS FOR N. Y. CAMPAIGN

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Comrade Bert Wolfe, the director of the Agitprop Department of the New York district, will start a class in Political Issues for the Campaign on Saturday, Sept. 26 at the party headquarters, 108 E. 14th St.

This class, conducted by the Agitprop Department, will be a series of conferences on the political issues in the present municipal campaign, and will help to make our propaganda in the present campaign more effective. All those who are speakers and those who want to try it are urged to attend.

A successful conference of the party speakers was already held.

WORKERS PARTY MOBILIZES FOR N. Y. CAMPAIGN

To Place Municipal Candidates in Field

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—A successful conference of active party members, at which were also present all the section campaign managers, was held at the party headquarters.

The main problem discussed at the conference was how to assure the placing of the party ticket on the ballot in the present municipal election campaign, in which Ben Gitlow is our candidate for mayor. It was pointed out that there is very little time left, and the party membership must be mobilized for the work of getting signatures for the petitions to unable us to place the Communist ticket on the ballot.

The headquarters of every section will be open between the hours of 6 and and 10.30 p. m. for the comrades to come and get their petitions. The section campaign managers were instructed to mobilize the party membership for this work, which takes precedence over all other work until out ticket is placed on the ballot.

In addition to the sections the district office asks all comrades who are unemployed or who otherwise have spare time to come to the office any time during the day, and go out for signatures.

Everybody on the job for the next few days. Let us place the Communist ticket on the ballot.

Jewelry Union Loses Most of Membership

Internal dissension, leading to the withdrawal of a number of eastern locals, made the biennial convention of the Intl. Jewelry Workers' Union in Chicago in September a somewhat circumscribed affair. It was decided to attempt to regain ground, principally in New York

Conventions will be held every four years instead of biennially as heretofore provided. Detroit will have the 1929 meet. Per capita remains unchanged, a motion to raise dues having been overwhelmed. The jewelry workers reported a membership of 1,200 to the American Federation of Labor in 1924. The 1920 peak was 8,100.

Pittsburgh Membership Meeting Friday

The membership meeting of the Pittsburgh district, on the subjects of the bolshevization and reorganization of the party, will be held this Friday, Sept. 25.

The representative of the Central Executive Committee at this meeting is to be Robert Minor.

All members of the Workers Party in the Pittsburgh district must attend this meeting, partake in the discussion, and they will surely go away from this meeting with determinaton to proceed vigorously with the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei.

The meeting is scheduled for 8 p. m. sharp, at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Seamen's Strike Grips British Liners

White Star line is doing every thing possible to keep its liners from being forced to cancel sailings.

From Melbourne, Adelaide, Brisbane, Sydney and Capetown reports show that authorities are making mass arrests of strikers. But this doesn't seem to get any boats under way and seamen who can live in a forecastle of British steamers can get along nicely in jail.

The strike committee of the British seamen have issued the following circular to British labor unionists, stating their position in the so-called "outlaw" strike. It says:

"The central strike committee, who have directed the unofficial seamen's strike nationally since its commencement, sent a deputation to Scarborough for the purpose of obtaining an interview with your General Council and to place before them all the facts leading to and relating to the seamen's dispute. Unfortunately we were not able to obtain an interview as we are regarded as outside the realm of the council's jurisdiction. This being so we are reluctantly forced to issue this circular as the strike is far too important for us to allow congress to adjourn without hearing our side of the dispute.

No Alienation of Union Membership.

"We know some good trade unionists look upon unofficial strikes as leading towards the creation of new unions and the alienation of the rank and file from official decisions. We declare emphatically we are absolutely opposed to both. We were forced to enter this dispute because of our sense of responsibility to our wives and families, the trade union movement in general and as a protest against the autocratic and dictatorial methods of administrating our union affairs.

"Mr. Havelock Wilson has said the rank and file were consulted thru the branches. This is a pure fabrication to say the least, as not only were the membership in the branches not given a chance to register themselves for or against the reduction, but the executive council was not given an opportunity to vote previous to announcement in the capitalist press that an agreement had been reached by the N. S. F. U. and the shipowners. Later when the E. C. did meet and ratify the decision, those members who did protest were jeered at and scornfully laughed out of council.

Can the Shipowners Pay?

"Mr. Wilson says shipowners cannot pay. Let us see. Here are a few samples. During the first 26 months of the war the combined shipowners of Britain made £246,000,000 profit. From 1920 to 1924 inclusive the Cunard company declared 640 per cent dividends. But they paid bonus shares of 100 per cent in 1918, which makes an average total of 1280 per cent on the real capital invested. They have reserves of £1,250,000. The Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. have made a total £4,165,384 over the same period.

The White Star Line (O. S. N. Co.) made from 1920 to 1924 inclusive £5,656,410. They paid in 1916 400 per cent bonus shares and 33 1-3 per cent in 1920, which enabled them to pay an average dividend over the same period of more than 50 per cent on the company's actual capital. The P. and O. line announced £1,300,000 profit last year and the latest issue is £750,000 to Furness Withy shareholders. These profits are net profits and over a period of alleged depression.

Present Wages Mean Poverty.

"If we accept a pound and 6-6 reduction on monthly and weekly rates respectively, wages of sailors will be 6d. per hour (and less for a 31-day month) and firemen 6-4 a day for a 7-day week. Sailors are working 84 hours a week and altho the firemen are supposed to work only 8 hours a day, in the event of sickness, which often happens in the tropics, they are called upon to do "ducers"—two extra hours on each watch for no extra remuneration. Overtime is a thing of the past in British ships, 'time-off" in lieu of overtime pay is given, that is: when you get it. Stewards are even worse off as they work, many of them, over 15 hours a day for a wage of £8. 5. 0. a month.

"Only those actually going to sea seem to know the state of affairs regarding our families. A seaman signing articles for a voyage lasting 3 months or over, receives an advance note equal to one-half month's pay; and his wife or dependents also receive an equal amount (£4. 10. 0. for a sailor) for each consecutive month until he returns. Therefore, she must exist by applying to the relieving officer or find herself at the door of the pawnbrokers. The advances made by the R. O. are deducted from her husband's wages when the voyage terminates, and many are in debt when the voyage is concluded.

"This is not all: Even while in a so-called regular job seamen must wait, without pay, for the vessel to discharge and load, which is anywhere from 14 to 28 days. So the average wage does not exceed much more than 30s. a week. Therefore, he is constantly in poverty and deeply in debt before starting the next voyage. Comrades, this is why we are on strike, and we mean to continue until the shipowners and the trade union movement recognizes our legitimate and reasonable demands. Not only are we the victims of Havelock Wilson, and the signatories to this infamous agreement, but the boilermakers and electricians have also suffered drastic cuts in wages.

Retreat in Face of the Enemy.

"We have one other reason why we regard ourselves justified in taking action. This treacherous betrayer of seamen, Mr. Havelock Wilson, has also betrayed the whole trade union movement. He timed his agreement to take place when the miners were to be attacked. He has ignored completely the fact that we are affiliated to the T. U. C. and the labor party by announcing to the press, on the eve of the recent proposed lock out of miners, that this dispute had nothing to do with the seamen. He encouraged the employers' attack when many large and important unions were pressing for increases.

"He smashed the unity of the working class movement, by retreating in face of a ferocious attack, and we believe his decision was arrived at in conjunction with the masters, which was intended to aid employers to deliver a smashing blow at British trade unionism.

"Had the officials of the National Sailors' and Firemen's Union acted as they ought to have done, and remained loyal to their obligations as an affiliated body to the T. U. C. they would have consulted the general council and allied unions before accepting reductions, and we feel certain that no reductions would have taken place had they sought the cooperation of the trade union movement as the miners did.

We Refuse to be Blacklegs.

"We must also consider the international position. Sailors are internationalists as far as their work is concerned. Australia, New Zealand and in some American and French lines sailors have the 8-hour day. Australian wages are £16. 2. 6. for sailors, firemen and greasers £18. 2. 6. British rates are now £9 for sailors and £9. 10. 0. for firemen.

"We sail the same routes. Tonnage rates are the same. The Australian seamen obtained these rates by fighting under loyal leadership. Shall we be regarded as national and international blacklegs? Not if we can get the support we deserve!

Help Us Win This Fight.

"Fellow workers and delegates. This is our case. We believe it will be a crime against the whole trade union movement if no action is taken by your congress to render us all support possible. Our comrades in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa are making a magnificent and effective fight. Do you expect to let them down?

Secretary:—

COST OF LIVING IS INCREASING MUCH FASTER THAN WAGES, WHILE EMPLOYMENT REMAINS VERY LOW

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The worst August as far as factory operations are concerned since 1921, is the verdict of the Illinois department of labor on the employment situation in this state. The department says a gain of one tenth of one per cent over July is negligible for a month which is expected to start industry on its seasonal upgrade.

The most disappointing fact brought out by the survey, says the report, has been the tendency for employment to decline among the steel firms. The 120 plants distributed about the state in all the steel producing areas had 6.7 per cent fewer workers in August than they had in July. The condition of the steel industry is generally considered as an accurate business barometer.

Car Building Declines.

The car building industry also showed a decline of 13 per cent when an increase was expected. Operators in that industry are about 30 per cent less than a year ago. This indicates that the railroads are not buying. Railroad purchases are among the most important producers of industrial activity.

Altogether of the 56 industries represented in the report 28 showed increases and 28 declines during August. But the general employment situation thruout the state was saved from falling to the lowest levels by a revival of mining operations in the central and southern fields and by the continuation of building operations on a large scale.

Contractors reporting to the department stated that they had 16 per cent more workers on their payrolls in August than in the preceding month. As a result there was a smaller excess of idle workers over jobs available than in any other month of this year. The record showed 139 applicants for each 100 jobs compared with 153 for each 100 jobs in July.

Cost of Living Rising.

The depressed state of industry has not affected the general level of earnings, according to the report. Average weekly earnings in manufacturing industry were $28.18 which compares with $27.40 in July and $26.96 in August, 1924. This means a gain of about 14 per cent over the average wage in the 1921-22 depression. But in the same period the cost of living has increased 18½ per cent. As a result the purchasing power of wages has fallen nearly 4 per cent in the last 3 years.

PARENTS OBJECT TO STAND TAKEN BY SCHOOL BOARD

Children on Strike to Force Demands

NEW YORK CITY.—A conference between the parents of the 100 striking school children of public school 44, Prospect Avenue and 176th street, effected a compromise, by which seventy pupils who live in the immediate vicinity will not be compelled to make the trip to Public School 67, Mohegan Avenue and 179th street. The parents of the children objected to sending their children to Public School 67, because of the danger entailed in crossing streets where traffic was unusually heavy and a menace to their eleven-year-old sons and daughters.

Another Bronx Strike.

At Public School 61, Crotona Park East and Charlotte Place, strenuous objections are raised to the transfer of children to Public School 66, Longfellow Avenue and Jennings street. The parents' committee insist upon the board of education renting rooms nearby instead of transferring the children to another school. This question will also undoubtedly be settled by a compromise, as it is said that the school authorities fear the effects that publicity will have upon the appropriations for the various schools in the Bornx.

Strike in Brooklyn.

The strikes of Greater New York are not confined to the Bronx. In Brooklyn, the parents of 300 children refuse to send their children to Public School 216, Avenue X and East First street, which they say is two miles from the homes of the children to be transferred. In order to avoid the two-mile hike every morning, it is necessary for the children to plough thru mud across vacant lots. The school authorities of Public School 100, in Coney Island, deny that a strike exists. The parents' committee insist they will not send their children to school until they are assured that their children will remain at Public School 100.

I. W. W. Is Now Legal in Canada, Says the Agricultural Union

Conditions in Canada during the harvest are unprecedentedly favorable for an organization drive by the Agricultural Workers' Industrial Union, a unit of the I. W. W., according to the union's headquarters.

"Laws of the dominion of Canada which were formely effective against the I. W. W. have been erased from the statute books," says the union. "The I. W. W. is now absolutely legal in the entire dominion.

"Members of the I. W. W. have several times in the past year been brot into court on vagrancy charges, the officers trying to make out that membership in the organization was vagrancy. The I. W. W. won every one of these cases. Canadian justice is very strict against mob violence of the sort which prevails in some parts of the United States, and nothing of the sort is likely to take place in Canada.

LABOR FAKERS QUARREL OVER SPOILS; FITZGERALD EXPOSES PRINCELY GRAFT OF FAT BOYS

(By Worker Correspondent)

OMAHA, Nebr., Sept. 22.—A letter issued by E. H. Fitzgerald, grand president of the Railway Clerks, to officers, representatives and lodges takes a shot at Milam and Forrester who organized the outlaw union of express employes.

Fitzgerald says: "The outlaws led by Milam and Forrester have now resorted to personal attacks upon the grand lodge officers, seemingly forgetting to mention the merits of their outlaw organization, if it has any. The Brotherhood has no fear of such character assassins, which proves the point we have made that they are actuated by selfish motives only and are seeking to provide remunerative jobs for themselves at the expense of our loyal members.

"So far as we have record at this writing, there has been deflections of membership from less than a dozen express lodges. It is true that in some isolated instances special meetings have been held by members of lodges sympathetic with the outlaws and they have voted to surrender the lodge charter. In every instance, however, loyal members of each lodge are holding the charter in the name of the brotherhood and all financial officers who have improperly disposed of lodge funds will be held strictly accountable by the loyal members, under penalty of their bonds."

Death Benefits "Key to Heaven."

According to Fitzgerald, the death benefits ought to hold members loyal for a while, so he warns the shaky ones and points out their interests in the brotherhood thusly:

"In lodges where deflections have occurred, loyal members have communicated direct with the grand president or grand secretary-treasurer so that their interests in the Brotherhood including grievances, death benefit certificates, and other matters, may be be properly handled and protected. Should there be any further deflections, which I do not anticipate, loyal members of the Brotherhood should be governed accordingly."

Salary, Etc., Comes First, Then Zero.

Bureaucracy in the railroad clerks comes high. Just see what it costs for administration (of chloroform, perhaps) in this modern, very modern, craft and graft union. Fitzgerald spills the beans in an effort to shoo the loyal members away from the other buzzard. Here is a gem in union finance squandering by a per capita eater:

Continuing, Fitzgerald says: "The outlaws are making much of the vast sums of money paid in to this Brotherhood by the express members and the small returns. All money paid by these members which goes into the death benefit, railway clerk, protective and convention fund is paid out in accordance with the Brotherhood laws, for the benefit of every member. Therefore, such money as is paid in the general fund is to be reckoned with in the expenditure for the benefit of all employes. On basis of the present membership the express members pay in one year into the general fund $36,800, out of this is paid salary and expenses of a vice grand president and his stenographer, and his office rent and office expenses and maintenance of express general grievance committee which totals $14,000 annually. Also charging proportionately the salary of the grand president, grand secretary-treasurer, editor, national legislative counsel and miscellaneous expense such as stationery, telegrams, printing, etc., totals approximately $20,000, making a grand total of $34,000 of the $36,800 paid in.

"I have made no reference to proportions of salary and expenses vice grand presidents railroad division, which should in reality be paid where they spend their time for the benefit of the express membership. Every member gets a copy of The Railway Clerk free, every member, if he wishes it, gets an insurance policy free, every lodge participates in the convention fund and is entitled to a delegate, every lodge participates in the protective fund and that fund is also used to pay salary and expenses of express national agreement and wage committees.

"Let the outlaws tell the truth, it will hurt only them and not the brotherhood."

How Ortodoxy Made Heretics.

The writer had occasion a number of times to visit the clerk's union in Omaha, during its ascending period. The bible was placed prominently in the center of the room. The meetings were opened and closed with prayer. During the session practically the whole time was taken up in reading decisions of the railroad labor board. the secretary droned out these reports until the members became nervous or exhausted and left the room. Dues were paid in Omaha, but as far as the average member knew, the union was part of the railroad labor board, and they it was who gave decisions affecting pay and jobs. Apparently, members had nothing to do or say in the matter.

The effect of this was for the member to abstain from going to church, union meetings, and then to put his trust in the government gods who sat on the railroad labor board. The "Grand Lodge" and its officialdom is a patriarchate or oligarchy against whom it is sacrilege to protest or criticize. It is the old feudal system brot up to date with the grand officers and their retainers exploiting the membership. Orthodox feudal lords, praying pilferers, job holding satraps and government regulation caused the serfs to become heretics and assert their "independence." Praying, preaching and issuing of "bulls" has caused this stronghold of feudalism to decay. From 2,400 members the clerks' union has been reduced to a mere shadow in Omaha, and that applies to many railroads and towns in the country.

Amalgamation of the railroad unions and the drafting up and enforcement of demands thru their power and control over the industry is the only way to solve the problem for the clerks. It is amalgamation or annihilation.

PEACE MEETS IN I. L. G. W. HERALD CONVENTION CALL

Suspended Locals Confer with Sigman

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 22.—Altho conferences are being held between the two factions in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, thru the mediation of the committee of shop chairmen, it will be impossible to make any announcement of progress for several days to come, according to the joint committee of action. Reinstatement of the discharged workers is still far from complete.

A conference was held Sunday in the Hotel Cadillac-Yates in the very room where the trial of the expelled officials of Locals 2, 9 and 22 began in June. Possibly it will be in this same place that the leaders of the joint action committee and officials of the union will agree upon the terms of a peace plan which will be submitted to the members of the union for their approval.

Gangster Rule Fails

Indications are not lacking that the Sigman administration of the I. L. G. W. realizes that it can no longer cope with the revolt of the rank and file which Sigman's terroristic tactics against the left wing has generated. This policy of expulsions and pogroms, disfranchisement, sluggings and suspensions incited and carried on by the yellow socialist Jewish daily Forward has roused the entire membership against Sigman and everything he stands for.

That gangster rule is a failure is attested by the call issued, following the general executive board meeting on the 11th of this month, for a convention to meet on November 30th at Philadelphia, advancing the date from May 1926.

A Change in Administration

This call for an I. L. G. W. convention signed by Sigman and Abraham Baroff admits that the union is "passing through the severest crisis of its existence." Sigman tries to dodge responsibility by alleging that this condition is caused "by enemies from outside the union." But the membership has stated forcibly enough that Sigman himself is to blame.

The call mentions that the general executive board "realizes that the next convention is likely to produce a change in the administration," and mentions that Meyer Perlstein has resigned from the G. E. B. Perlstein's resignation was accepted, but a similar resignation by Joseph Breslau was not accepted. Locals are asked to vote on the proposal of advancing the date of the convention to Nov. 30th.

More Automobiles Made in 1925 Than 1924; Yet Jobless Still Hoof It

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22. — While hundreds of unemployed workers are pounding the sidewalks in their effort to find a master, the U. S. department of commerce sends out in its news service an announcement that more automobiles were produced in the first eight months of 1925 than in 1924. There were produced in the first eight months of 1924, 2,351.913 passenger cars in the United States and Canada. In 1925, for the same period, 2,516,339 passenger cars were produced.

VAN SWEARINGENS ARE AGENTS OF J. P. MORGAN, STOLE SMALL ROADS TO COMBINE WITH N. Y. CENTRAL

WASHINGTGON, Sept. 22.—(FP)—Counsel for the minority stockholders in the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad are about to bring to the witness chair before the interstate commerce commission O. P. Van Swearingen, one of the brothers whose mysterious financial backing has enabled them to form the biggest rail merger since the days of E. H. Harriman. That mysterious backing, the minority is promising to prove to the commission, is none other than J. P. Morgan & Co., financial masters of the New York Central system.

Van Swearingens Are Agents.

At one of the sensational hearings before the commission, the protesting minority displayed a chart showing the financial connection of the Van Swearingens, thru a long string of companies organized by themselves to hide their transactions, back to the New York Central.

One of their most daring feats of financial banditry, according to this showing, was the buying of their way into the board of the C. & O., followed by transfer of funds of the road from banks along its line to the Morgan bank in New York, then the loan of this C. & O. money to the Van Swearingens for the purpose of their buying the road.

They secured from the interstate commerce commission the right to issue equipment bonds for the property, secured by equipment that had actually been used and rotted and rusted away; with the proceeds of this bond sale they bought up new properties.

They raised the dividend rate on preferred stock to 7 per cent but took away all voting power; this was vested in the common stock, which they kept for themselves.

The Van Swearingens, according to the minority stockholders, are agents for Morgan & Co., and their "pickings" in the present case will be rich enough to make the late Jay Gould turn enviously in his tomb.

Germany Gives Leader of Fiery Cross Short Shrift; Shows Him Boot

BERLIN, Germany — The German prototype of the Knights of the Fiery Cross were given short shrift in Germany. Gotthard Stroschein of Chicago was given six days to pack up his bags and leave Germany. This deportation of the former Lutheran minister of Chicago, came as a result of his attempt to found an organization similar to the ku klux klan in Germany.

Otto Stroschein, father and accomplice of Gotthard, was given to understand that that kind of nonsense won't go. He is allowed to remain as he proved his German citizenship.

Gotthard is now in Warsaw, and intends to return to America at an early date.

WE REFER MR. INSTONE TO THE BRITISH MINERS' FEDERATION

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 22.—Theodore Instone, vice-president of S. Instone Co., Ltd., arrived in New York Saturday on the Mauritania. He said he expected to negotiate with American users of anthracite to ship them British coal and fuel substitutes. "We have abundant anthracite to meet any shortage in the United States," he said.

Stove Workers Picket Large Plant

the past year, and no scabs seem to be forthcoming.

Company Attempts Coercion

The company is now attempting to coerce the laborers within the plant to operate the automatic stove polisher. The laborers are not willing to do this in spite of the inducements the company offers them in the form of higher wages and better jobs.

The Cribben and Sexton Co. has done everything in its power to keep out union men. This attempt of the polishers to unionize the department in which they work is a challenge to the anti-union stand of the corporation..

Vice President Smith, who is also the general manager of the company, in no uncertain terms told the men that he refused to recognize the union or any combination that the men wanted to form.

Smash Workers' Union

At one time the polishers and buffers in the plant were organized. They maintained an organization in the plant for over twenty-seven years. During a dull season three years ago the general manager of the plant smashed the union by laying off and firing active union men. During the period of union control the piece prices were so arranged that every worker was able to make a living wage. Today, the company does not tell the men what the piece rate is on certain jobs. At the end of a hard grind the worker finds that he has made but $4 or $5 for the day's work. Not only are the workers kept in ignorance of the piece prices, but those on the day pay are forced to speed up. The work is not easy. The stove castings are placed in a chemical solution. Then they are placed under emery wheels revolving at about 2800 revolutions a minute. The dust from the castings fills the air and the men become covered with it and get it into their lungs, for the blowers and fans are not adequate.

After the emery wheel has taken off the rough surface then the hand polishers complete the job of polishing the dark surfaces. The other parts are taken to the electroplating bath and a coating of nickel is placed on the parts of the stove or range. The parts are then again handled by hand polishers.

The work of electroplating the parts and polishing the surfaces so that they shine is now being replaced by a process called enameling.

Enameling is done by women. The dressed stove parts are sent to the enameling room and th women place the enamel on the parts. They receive a high wage of about $25. The company is sending more and more of the stove parts into the enameling room as they are thus able to make more profit per stove.

Molders' Union Next (?)

The molders, who cast the stoves are members of a union. At present the molders are tied down by a contract and are not able to assist the metal polishers on strike. If the company, is successful in beating the polishers and buffers, will undoubtedly next smash the union of the molders in the shop.

The laborers do the heavy and unskilled work in the shop. Their average wage is about 45 cents an hour.

The semi-skilled workers are treated but little better than the laborers. Their wages are about 60 cents an hour. Most of the men in the shop are married and have large families. The wages are far from being adequate to clothe and house the workers and their families properly.

Wages Slashed

The company at present is attempting to cut the wages of the workers in the plant and the strike of the metal polishers and buffers came as a protest to this move by the company.

The workers on strike insist upon their right to organize and demand that their shop committee be recognized by the bosses.

"The men in the polishing room are out 100 per cent and will stay out until the company comes across and recognizes our shop committee and the union local," the strike chairman reiterated. "We will not go back to work under the old conditions. Our fellows need the increase in wages to take care of their kids and we certainly have not gotten fat on the wages this company has paid us."

To Import Scabs

The strikers held a meeting yesterday morning at which they discussed the next step in their fight with the bosses. It is expected that the bosses may attempt to bring out-of-town strikebreakers into the plant tomorrow. The strikers were assigned their posts for the next day.

STEEL WORKER KILLED WHEN DEFICIENT MOLD CRACKS, 2ND MAY DIE

Robert Knavich, 43 years old, was killed and William Estell probably fatally burned when the mold at the Interstate Steel Co., mill which they were filling with molten metal cracked and showered them with the fiery mass.

The plant is located at East 118th St., and Prairie Ave. The company had neglected to scrap the deficient mold.

McNamara Faces Jail for Aid in Indiana Iron Workers' Strike

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 22.—The fate of John McNamara, labor leader on trial in criminal court here on charges of "blackmail" growing out of labor troubles here last year, was declared guilty today. McNamara is a member of the Iron Workers' Union. McNamara is liable to one to five years prison sentence to which a $1,000 fine may be added.

Convicts in Desperate Fight.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Twenty-five convicts and one warden of the Kiel prison in Holstein on the Baltic Sea were killed in a desperate attempt of 400 prisoners to fight their way to freedom, according to a Central News dispatch from Warsaw today.

Eleven convicts and two wardens were injured in the pitched battle. Troops were called to aid the prison officers and rounded up all the escaped criminals.

An Alien Bootlicker Threatens

Secretary of Labor, Davis, from Wales, one of the most subservient lickspittles that ever groveled before the almighty dollar, threatens to deport all aliens who are members of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

There is not the slightest doubt that the alien flunkey, Mr. Davis, would like to see every alien worker who has not debased his manhood by licking his master's heel, placed on board a ship, bound for foreign parts. Whether Mr. Davis will be successful in carrying out his plans is another question.

According to the news dispatch from Washington which informed the public of Mr. Davis' intentions, the spur to this action was given by the unfavorable publicity received by the Coolidge administration thru its cancelling of a visa to Comrade Saklatvala, the Hindu Communist and member of the British house of commons.

Even the capitalist press has diplomatically hinted that the ratio of bone to brain in Mr. Kellogg's head is entirely out of proportion to the intellectual requirements of a competent secretary of state. The press suggests that real statesmen know enuf to gloss over the letter of the law when questions arise that cannot be solved by mechanical methods. Davis and Kellogg are as alike in their mental bankruptcy as two mackerel are in the matter of color. Birds of a feather have a tendency to flock together and what is more reasonable than that dumbells should put up a united front against a barage of intelligence?

Therefore, there are two quite obvious reasons why the department of labor should announce a new offensive against the radical workers, at the same time, that the state department is under a withering fire over its action in barring out a Communist member of the British parliament on orders from the British foreign office.

The first is the fundamental hatred combined with fear that the capitalist class entertains towards the Communists. The second is an effort to block the wave of attack on the administration thru its exclusion of Saklatvala. The theory is the old one, that an offensive is the best defensive.

Secretary of Labor Davis, the alien flunkey of capitalism, will not frighten the radicals by threats of deportation. Those who join the Communist movement do not do so under the illusion that they are going to walk into a paradise over a road strewn with roses. They know that the path to the emancipation of the working class is a hard and thorny one; that the army of labor will reach its goal after traveling thru a valley of tears.

Tho the capitalist system in the United States is strong, yet we can see in the hysterical threats of the government evidence of the international decline of the robber order. Our ruling class sees the handwriting on the wall. They see the mighty British empire shaken to its base by revolution in its colonies and incipient revolution at home. Like the tyrants down thru all the stages of human history they try to ward off the inevitable by persecution. They will fail. They may deport Communists, but they will never kill Communism.

Green's Convention Thunder.

Considerable speculation is indulged in as to what line William Green will take, in making his opening bow to the first convention of the American Federation of Labor he faces in the role of president, when that organization meets next month in Atlantic City.

The speculators need not waste much brain energy in guessing Green's line. Green will follow the strategy of Sam Gompers. He will make faces at the "unreasonable employers" as Sam did, but will reserve his heavy thunder for the Communists, just as Sam was in the habit of doing.

The labor fakers are not afraid of the capitalists, not even of the "unreasonable" ones. There are only a few employers who have not brains enuf to realize that the labor fakers stand between them and a militant trade union movement, that would make constant assaults on their profits. The labor fakers know that their interests are interwoven with those of the capitalists and therefore they will defend the capitalist system as they would defend their very lives.

William Green knows this, being one of them. His strategy therefore is not hard to guess at. In order to hold the rank and file, the fakers must make a bluff at fighting the employers. Gompers used to attack Judge Gary. Green will find some convenient capitalist target for his vocal barbs. He will fight the injunction and child labor, with his mouth, even as Sam did. But he will train his heaviest artillery on the Communists and put the fear of god into the hearts of the assembled labor fakers. He will try and convince them that he is better able to save them from the Communist danger than by any other labor lieutenant of capitalism in the paddock. He will probably succeed.

The left wing in the labor movement is still deplorably weak. It will get strong in time. It will grow in strength as the capitalist system in the United States weakens. And as the capitalist system weakens, so will the power of the labor fakers who are part and parcel of that system.

Sadder If Not Wiser

The officialdom of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is sadder if not wiser than it was some weeks back. Its ranks have thinned somewhat. The G. E. B. lost the services of the two stoolpigeons Meyer (Mire) Perlstein and Joseph Breslau. The rank and file of the union loses nothing by this desertion.

The Sigman machine sees the handwriting on the wall. Its united front with the employers and the capitalist press did not stand up against the united opposition of the rank and file. Something had to crack and it was the Sigman machine that cracked.

Sigman now proposes that the date for the next convention be November 30 instead of next May. The letter accompanying this proposal states that the agreements between the unions and the manufacturers expires next July and as a new administration is likely to result from the next convention, it would not be fair to the next G. E. B. to be obliged to face the problem of new wage negotiations without having an opportunity to get acquainted with the union's machinery beforehand.

Sigman sees the handwriting on the wall.

BOSSES SPEED UP TAILOR SHOP STRIKEBREAKERS

United Garment Workers' Union Aids Boss

Despite the fact that the strike is in its thirteenth week, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers involved in the strike against the International Tailoring company and the J. L. Taylor Co., maintain a continuous picket line from 7 in the morning till 4:30 in the afternoon. The spirit of the strikers is just as strong as it was the day the strike started.

But when we look into the camp of the employers we find a sorry sight indeed. Ray Reeder, the secretary of the International Tailoring Co., called the strikebreakers in the plant together and told them that they must produce more in order to meet the demands of the trade.

"Your production is not enough," wailed the speaker.

In order to increase production Ray Reeder, in behalf of the company, offered to pay the strikebreakers a little bonus. Not only did he offer to pay their bonus, but he also undertook to pay their union dues after Oct. 1.

The United Garment Workers local in Chicago has assumed the role of strikebreaker and is assisting the bosses to crush the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union. The paying of a bonus and the giving of other inducements is in line with the plan of the company to establish the speed-up system in the shop, with the able assistance of Green's beloved, United Garment Workers of America.

Terrorize Strikers

The bosses in their desperation to crush the union are now terrorizing individual members of the union, who are active on the picket line and in the conduct of the strike. Harry Novak, 5740 South Green St., and his brother Oscar were both shot and are now in the hospital. According to prominent officials of the Amalgamated, this shooting is only one of the acts of terrorization that have been practised by the bosses. The members of the Amalgamated, who were arrested in the headquarters of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union are awaiting trial for conspiracy. The date of their trial has not been fixed as yet. The arrest of the pickets, the threatening of various members, go well in line with the shooting of Harry and Oscar Novak, it was pointed out by a prominent union member.

Strike meetings are being held every morning in Hod Carriers Hall, at eleven o'clock, where speakers discuss the developments of the strike.

Six pickets were arrested yesterday.

Taylor Co. Venture Fizzles

ROCK ISLAND, Ill.—The press agents for the J. L. Haylor & Co. broadcasted the opening of a gigantic clothing factory here for Sept. 15. When Sept. 15 did arrive, the company presented a sorry spectacle. Their attempt to run away from the striking garment workers of Chicago met with a mighty cold reception here.

Some Success!

The company agents had leased a factory in Moline and Rock Island for six months and the company started an intensive drive to secure 600 workers for the Moline shop and 400 for the Rock Island clothing factory. So far they have succeeded in getting 15 boys in Rock Island to work for them at the magnificent wage of $15 a week. None of the lads know how to thread a needle, lot alone make clothing. In order to be able to produce clothing, they attempted to import some strikebreakers. All that could be mustered into the shop were ten professional scabs. The company has made reservations for them at the Y. M. C. A.

In Moline they have not as yet recruited one hundred to take the job.

The company agents had painted a glorious picture of the future Moline and Rock Island ventures and had made plans to take over the defunct Daniel Boone Woolen Mills. It seems as tho they bit off more than they could chew. Out of the 1,000 workers they intended to hire, they have only 100 inexperienced clothing hands to turn out suits in the busiest season of the year.

Hot Air Merchants

It seems as tho their talk of expansion made them expand so much with the hot air they generated that they blew up.

The workers in this city and in Moline realize what the workers of Chicago are up against and they refuse to scab on their fellow workers.

AS WE SEE IT

workers and lead them along the correct lines. The Communists tell the workers that only thru the overthrow of capitalism will they be able to begin the work of changing conditions so that unemployment and its attendant miseries can be abolished.

IT is significant that the headquarters of the second international has been moved from the comparatively turbulent atmosphere of London to the more peaceful one of Geneva. The yellow international does not feel comfortable in a revolutionary country. When things looked rather shaky on the continent of Europe the office was moved to London. If the league of nations blows up, it may be obliged to move to Sleepy Hollow where Rip Van Winkle hibernated for several years according to legend. The Wandering Jew of Eugene Sue's novel had nothing on the second international.

THE Wall Street Journal's London correspondent draws a gloomy picture of the seamen's strike from the seamen's point of view. He cabled a column full of doleful impressions of the strike, hurls a choice collection of curses at the heads of the Communists and plants a crown of roses on the brow of Havelock Wilson, the most notorious capitalist stoolpigeon that ever sold out a trade union. Here is a sample of his stuff: "'This victory of a legitimate trade union over a rabble of Communists has made a strong impression upon the wage workers of Great Britain. In fact it was the quickest and most efficient instance of strikebreaking that the British people have ever seen."

THE Wall Street Journal's correspondent counted its victory before it was properly hatched. The strike is not broken nor even badly bent. The government of Australia was obliged to call a special election on account of it and several hundreds of British ships are tied up all over the world. The capitalists will find out before this battle is over that Havelock Wilson, like many another dog, has had his day.

THE DAILY WORKER is often accused by its critics, some of them friendly, that it colors its news too much; in other words that it is too partial to the workers' side of the struggle and particularly to the Communist side. We plead guilty to the indictment to a certain extent. We are not concerned with publishing news for the sake of news any more than cartoonists are concerned with drawing pictures for art's sake. But we do not lie, because we know that lying does not serve our purpose, which is the advancement of the working class movement. The truth is good enuf for us. We leave the lying to the capitalists. It is one of their most powerful weapons.

AND how they do lie! Take the Saklatvala case for instance. For days we were informed that the workers of Battersea, England, who sent him to the house of commons were arranging a mass meeting at which Saklatvala's resignation would be demanded. The meeting was held alright but it turned out to be a meeting of workers protesting against his exclusion from the United States and affirming confidence in his political views. This is only one example of capitalist lying.

Calles Acts as the Humble Servant of Foreign Imperialism

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 22. — The Aguila Oil company has asked the Calles government to give "protection" against the strike declared against the company, not only in the oil district, but everywhere that the company has stores for sale of oil and gasoline.

Since Calles, under the repressive laws he has had passed against strikes to please foreign capitalists, has reason to proceed with the repression, he will probably send troops to break the strike and punish any pickets at the company stores thruout Mexico.

COOK TELLS BRITISH MINERS TO PREVENT COAL EXPORTS TO U. S. IN AID OF ANTHRACITE STRIKE

LONDON, Sept. 22.—A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, and leader of the recent miners' strike movement to which the Baldwin government was forced to bow, told the British miners in a speech at Cardiff, Wales, on Saturday last, that they must prevent coal being exported to America, since it was the duty of British miners to help the American miners in the great anthracite strike now going on in Pennsylvania.

Anthracite Profits - -

By Earl R. Browder

By EARL R. BROWDER

THE anthracite coal corporations claim that to avoid bankruptcy they must cut the miners' wages by 10 per cent. That is why 158,000 miners are now on strike in Pennsylvania.

It is interesting, therefore, to examine the books of these companies, and their histories, to see how they came by these great capitalizations upon which they want to increase dividends at the cost of wages.

HOW much "capital" is invested is the anthracite fields?

According to the estimate of the coal commission, the present valuation is slightly under one billion dollars.

Where did the billion dollars come from?

Does it represent the savings of the stockholders, laboriously gathered together by sacrifice and economy from the product of their labors, and "invested" in anthracite?

Not at all!

Most of it is "book valuation," that is, a figure established on the basis of expected profits.

For instance:

The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad was in the anthracite coal business. It held properties valued at $6,240,000.

THE stockholders of the D. L. & W. joined together in 1921 to form a new corporation, the Glen Alden Coal company. The new corporation purchased the coal properties of the old corporation at a price of $72,240,000, paying for it principally with promissory notes. That is, the same stockholders who in 1920 owned six millions of coal thru the D. L. & W., in 1921 suddenly found themselves the owners of 72 millions of dollars of "coal capital."

The only cost was a promissory note given by themselves to themselves.

But the new "capital" must earn dividends!

Then take a look at the Lehigh Coal & Navigation company, with assets of 77 million dollars.

This corporation began operations over 100 years ago, on lands which it leased for an annual rental of one ear of corn!

That ear of corn, plus "valuations," plus "revaluations," plus the labor of miners who produced the flood of "black diamonds" from the earth, is now represented by the assets of $77,000,000, of which 99 per cent at least is appropriated surplus value from the labor of the miners.

Are the corporations so poor that they must cut wages?

Look at the divident record (cash dividends!) of the Pennsylvania Coal Co. It runs like this:

1913—49 pct.; 1917—110 pct.; 1921—137 pct.; 1922 (strike year) 168 pct. with the other years running from 10 to 83 per cent.

Or the Hillside Coal & Iron company. Its cash dividends in 1917 were 105 pct.; in 1921 were 205 pct.; and in 1922 were 190 pct. (and the last figure averaged $6.69 per ton of coal mined by the corporation!)

But it is objected, not all the corporations earn such profits.

No. The reason their rates are lower is because their "book values" have been written up so high that the dividends become a "normal" ten to thirty per cent.

Some of them are so poverty-stricken that they don't even pay dividends! For example, the Philadelphia and Reading Coal & Iron Co. Why? Look at its "assets" — $115,000,000 dollars! It has "capitalized" its earnings ahead of time, and the profits are collected by selling "stock" which didn't cost anything.

And then, if one is going to reinvest these tremendous profits, why should dividends be declared and thus be liable to taxation? It is so such simpler to accumulate a "surplus," which may at convenient times be distributed as "stock dividends."

Thus the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co. (paying no dividends) increased its surplus from $1,460,000 in 1912, to $29,074,000 in 1922.

Surely you will agree that they must cut wages to get out of the poverty-stricken condition and begin to pay dividends!

AND there's the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. Its "surplus" increased from $1,655,000 in 1912, to $7,467,000 in 1922.

The "net" profits of the so-called "railroad coal companies" were, in 1915, $11,264,000; in 1918 they increased to $22,369,000; in 1920 they were $33,466,000. Such "net profits" do not touch such items as $38,550,000 added to the assets of the Lehigh Valley and Cox Brothers, thru "revaluation," from 1913 to 1921; or the $27,583,000 added by "revaluation" to the Hudson Coal Company interests, etc.

Yes, a truly poverty-stricken lot of corporations are in control of anthracite.

But if the coal miners would take control, burn up the "book values," and give the consumers cheap coal, instead of monoply prices, as at present, they could still increase their wages 20 per cent and have a real surplus, instead of decreasing wages.

Why not "workers' control of anthracite?"

Workers' Theater of Philadelphia to Give Working Class Drama

By SAM WEINBERG

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 22. — The Workers' Theater Alliance has been given official sanction by District No. 3 Workers Party Educational Committee.

Because of the bitter need of a true and more explicit means of working class education and propaganda that will bring understanding to many young minds who hunger for the entertainment that the stage affords, the Workers' Theater Alliance has been formed in Philadelphia.

Due to the earnest and sincere effort of Comrade Alfred Sobel, we have been able to plant this institution on a firm foundation. Our real work is but beginning now. As we have laid plans for an extensive campaign for the production of proletarian plays, which will be carried out in a large scale. We intend to begin immediately with an initial performance of three one-act plays.

These plays are highly educational as they deal exclusively with the clas sstruggle. We call upon all intelligent workers in Philadelphia to join the Workers' Theater Alliance and make it what it should be, an educational institution. Send your name, address and occupation to 521 York Ave., Philadelphia.

N. Y. Window Cleaners Make Wage Demands on Bosses' Organization

By H. FEINSTEIN.
(Secretary Local 8, Window Cleaners' Protective Union.)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 22.—The membership of the Window Cleaners' Protective Union, Local 8, has unanimously adopted the proposal of the Executive Board to demand $2 a week increase in wages and one hour less per week.

Every window cleaner shall receive a minimum of $40 and work no more than 44 hours. All are determined to fight for these demands by strike, if need be.

The office of the union is located at 215 East 6th street and all window cleaners are invited to get in touch with the organization. The bosses are raising a large fund to try to break the union and destroy union conditions. They are completely organized in one association.

MANY ORGANIZATIONS GIVE SUBSTANTIAL AID IN DAILY WORKER DRIVE

TODAY'S list of DAILY WORKER savers may not be very long but it is nevertheless fairly heavy. For it includes a goodly number of Workers Party units and other workers' organizations which have collected in small sums from individuals and sent it in large sums. The results were $642.70 which swelled the total so far received to more than $7,500.00 or three-quarters of the emergency fund. These are hopeful signs.

It is time to point out, however, that any slakening of effort to save the DAILY WORKER would have extremely serious results. We did not succeed in our efforts to raise the emergency fund within two weeks and it is more necessary than ever to press on with all possible speed to reach that goal. And then we must not let ourselves think that the crisis is over. The DAILY WORKER cannot be made safe with the $10,000 fund. We dare not again allow the DAILY WORKER to be so endangered that its very life is momentarily threatened. To make the DAILY WORKER secure for the coming year some mighty efforts will still have to be exerted.

UNITED [illegible] DEMONSTRATIONS THRUOU[illegible]NTRY AGAINST BAN ON SAKLATVALA CALLED BY W. P.

United front mass meetings participated in by numerous working class organizations, have been initiated by the Workers (Communist) Party and are to be held in the large cities and industrial centers thruout the country, in protest against the barring of the Communist member of the British parliament, Shapurji Saklatvala, from America, C. E. Ruthenberg, the party's general secretary announced.

Meetings will be held in Chicago, Boston, Pittsburgh, Minneapolis, Philadelphia, San Francisco, and other large cities, to demand that Saklatvala, who was to come here as a delegate to the interparliamentary union in Washington, be admitted immediately. A highly successful demonstration has already been held in New York.

A Chicago meeting, conducted under the auspices of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, will be held Monday evening, Sept. 28, at Northwest Hall, North and Western Aves.

The speakers will be Manuel Gomez, secretary of the league, and William F. Dunne, editor the DAILY WORKER. There will be Hindu and Chinese speakers representing other organizations, and several working-class groups will take part. Admission will be free.

BRITISH LABOR FAKERS HAVE HARD TIME WITH NAUGHTY 'OUTLAW' MEN

LONDON, Sept. 23.—A boatswain from London Dock addressing a meeting of striking seamen in front of the N. S. U. Hall on Well street, was denouncing the scabbing role of the N. S. U. officials when the N. S. U. delegate opened fire on the meeting. He was arrested and charged with attempted murder.

The Minnuwaska sailed from London with the engine room crew made up of pensioners from the Royal Naval Barracks of Chatham and the deck crew made up of Trawlee men from Grimsby and Yarmouth. All unemployment doles are being stopped against the seamen in London.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

DANIEL J. TOBIN was re-elected president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters at that organization's recent convention in Seattle, Washington. This was not all. Tobin had his salary increased from $9.000 to $15,000 a year. No ten per cent raise for Brother Tobin. After all those things happened, Tobin made a speech thanking the teamsters for their generosity and telling the world that it is a splendid organization. So it is, for Tobin.

GUSTAVE B. RUEGER, a member of the Barbers' Union in Seattle, took it on himself to circulate a petition among local barber shop proprietors urging that the cost of a hair cut be reduced to 50 cents and a neck shave to 10 cents. His local union tried him for his pains and placed him on probation for two years. Rueger secured the services of an attorney and appealed to the international executive board. Mr. James C. Shanessy, international president, gave the local union a slap in the face and overruled their decision.

HAD Rueger been guilty of advocating policies that would benefit the barbers, it is quite likely that Shanessy would give him the same kind of medicine he gave Joe Giganti and others here in Chicago. Here the local union exonerated Giganti and his comrades of the charges made against them by the fakers, but Shanessy overruled their decision. Giganti was fighting for shorter working hours and more pay for the bar-

CALL FOR THIRD GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE

ON November 14 and 15 the Trade Union Educational League will hold its third general conference in Chicago. Representation to the conference is based upon rate of two delegates from each functioning local industrial group in the United States and Canada.

These delegates shall be elected by the local general group where such exist. Each local general group is entitled to a minimum of six delegates, including those of the local industrial groups.

The agenda for the conference is as follows:

1. Economic and Political Situation.
2. Report of Secretary.
3. Reports of National Industrial Committees.
4. Organization of the Unorganized.
5. Amalgamation.
6. The Labor Party.
7. The Class Collaboration Movement.
8. Company Unions.
9. Shop Committees.
10. The Struggle Against Imperialism.
11. Unemployment.
12. The Negro Workers.
13. Youth and Women Workers.
14. The Independent Unions.
15. Problems of the Canadian Movement.
16. World Trade Union Unity.
17. Organization of the T. U. E. L.
18. Financing the T. U. E. L.
19. The League Press.
20. Election of National Committee.

The labor movement is in a deep going crisis. The reactionary trade union officialdom are showing themselves completely incapable of meeting the difficult situation. Under their guidance the unions are either falling to pieces or rotting with B. & O plans and other schemes of class collaboration. Upon the left wing falls the full burden of giving a lead to the organized workers and of laying the basis of organization among the vast masses of unorganized. In fulfilling this task the left wing, weak in numbers and attacked on every side, has innumerable problems to solve and obstacles to overcome. To meet the situation, it is necessary that there be a great national conference of trade union progressives and revolutionaries, which shall map out the program of the left wing and strengthen its organization. The T. U. E. L. general conference offers such a meeting. Therefore, let every locality send its full quota of delegates to this third general conference, which must be made the largest and most important in the history of the Trade Union Educational League.

U. S. CONFERENCE ON CHINA URGES AMERICA ACT INDEPENDENTLY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 23—Forty Chinese officials, educators and students attended the four-day conference on American relations with China, held here under the auspices of the Walter Hines Page Foundation.

The discussion indicated that American business men in China are divided as to whether further attempts to maintain foreign imperialist domination by force will add to their profits, since the Chinese nationalist movement is growing.

The conference voted, after long and fruitless filibustering by a die hard element in its managing committee, to urge upon the state department that the United States act independently in giving up extra-territorial rights and restoring tariff autonomy to China, if the other powers fail in these conferences to co-operate.

INTERNATIONAL SOLIDARITY IS M. T. W. SLOGAN

I. S. U. and Wilson Try Hard to Break Strike

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 23.—As the end of the second week of the I. W. W. Marine Transport Workers' strike approaches, the strike committee in this port considers that the strike is getting organized and under way.

With the notorious British labor faker, J. Havelock Wilson joined with the officials, big and little, of the International Seamen's Union of this country, all broadcasting the lie that there is no strike among seamen here or elsewhere in the world, the Wobblies have no easy task, but with keen instinct for their class obligations on the international field, these obstacles only stimulate their determination to stick with their fellow workers of England, Australia, South Africa, China and elsewhere.

A Long Hard Fight

The strikers realize that the powerful international shipping interests will not be brought to their knees in a day, but that the world trade of Great Britain is suffering seriously from the tie up.

The organization of the strike is undoubtedly making a great impression on the seamen in this port, as shown by the steady stream of new members joining the union as they come off the ships and learn of the strike.

J. Havelock Wilson, following his unpleasant experience when he tried to talk to the crew of the Olympic, has not had the nerve to try to address any more ship crews.

New Zealand Ship Meets M. T. W.

Captains of the picket squads report that as soon as the S. S. Piako tied up at the Bush Terminal wharf Tuesday afternoon, the whole crew came off. This is a ship of the New Zealand Shipping company. When she reached England en route here, the strike had just begun. The officers with the help of the British police in London succeeded in keeping the men aboard ship. When the I. W. W. pickets went aboard the ship here in Broklyn and told of the extension of the strike to this country they quit in a body.

The whole crew of the American Farmer is now on strike 75 per cent coming out Monday and the rest Tuesday.

Boston Taxi Drivers Strike Against the Checker Cab Company

BOSTON, Sept. 23.—Between 175 and 200 taxicab drivers of the Checker Taxicab company struck Saturday over working conditions. Company officials said that the strike was without warning. The drivers said they were required recently to purchase uniforms and later ordered to buy uniform overcoats, or be discharged. In March 200 Premier Cab company drivers stopped work because of violation of a union wage scale agreement.

SYRIANS CAPTURE FORTRESS OF SUEIDA FROM IMPERIALIST ARMY OF FRENCH; TAKE 500 PRISONERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, England, Sept. 23.—The Syrians have captured the fortress of Sueida from the French garrison, taking 500 French prisoners, capturing two armored cars, artillery munitions, and twenty-six thousand pounds in Turkish currency, it is reported from Constantinople.

The revolt of the Druse against French imperialism in Syria has received a tremendous impetus as a result of the victory.

French Position Desperate.

PARIS, France, Sept. 23—Both in Syria and Morocco the French imperialist ventures are faring badly. The loss of Sueida is a heavy blow to the French bankers who have been exploiting the Syrians. In Morocco hopes of finishing the war before the rainy season have been abandoned.

The French advances in Morocco have merely brot them to the line they occupied earlier in the war, and now they face roadless and mountainous countries in which it is impossible for their armies to maneuver against the natives.

The Spanish offensive, on which Marshal Petain was counting to produce an effect has been a total failure. A new landing west of Cebadilla beach has been effected, but it has even failed to relieve the pressure of the Riffian troops who have been desperately striving to hold their own for the last ten days.

The only water supplies in the region are in the hands of the Riffians, and the Spaniards have been unable to capture them

CONFERENCE OF NEEDLE TRADES SECTION OF T. U. E. L. INDICATES GROWTH OF LEFT WING UNIONISM

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 23.—The Needle Trades Section of the Trade Union Educational League closed its third national conference yesterday at 1347 Boston Road.

The ninety delegates who attended represented the left wing of the needle trades of the principal garment centers of America, such as Chicago, Montreal, Rochester, Baltimore, Cleveland, Boston, Philadelphia, Toronto and New York City.

The delegation was representative of the left wing groups in the various needle trades unions as follows: 36 of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 35 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 9 of the Furriers' International Union, 7 of the Cap and Millinery Workers' Union, and 3 of the Journeymen Tailors' Union; 90 groups in all.

Foster Makes Extensive Report

William Z. Foster reported for the Trade Union Educational League national committee, his report dealing extensively with the complete bankruptcy of the present trade union leadership and the complete demoralization existing within organized labor due to the leaders' policy of class collaboration, "B. & O." plans, banking, business, etc. Fact after fact was cited.

Foster further stressed the necessity of making the Trade Union Educational League a mass movement on the same lines os the British Minority Movement, which is the only factor capable of giving stiff resistance to the capitalist open shoppers and the henchmen of the union bureacracy.

An Important Development

In view of the recent campaign, in the I. G. W. against the left wing, said Foster, and the general attempt by certain labor officials to wage war upon these rebel elements, the broad character of the conference takes on additional significance. It marks the growing development of a left wing in an important section of the American labor movement—the garment trades.

After passing a resolution of protest against the exclusion of the British Communist, Saklatvala, the conference adopted the "Progressive Needle Trades Workers' Program," which demanded the "Amalgamation of all needle trades international unions into a departmentalized industrial union" and the "democratization of the unions thru the reorganization

DRAFT ACT TO CRUSH STRIKES IN COMING WAR

Workers Are Subject to Martial Law

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—A proposal to "militarize industry," which will give the president the power to induct men into the army, in time of war, and then grant them "industrial and agricultural" forloughts is being drawn up by a group of militarists to be presented to the next session of congress, in order to crush strikes during war time. The "industrial and agricultural" furloughs could be revoked at any time that the president may see fit. No conscription of wealth is planned.

This conscription act would apply to all workers between the ages of 18 and 45. The only exceptions to the draft act would be the clergy, necessary mariners, and a numbers of classes of federal, state and municipal employes.

Conscientious objectors to war would not be compelled to participate in combatant service. The president would have the power to decide in what non-combatant service to place them.

Aliens who had declared intention of becoming citizens could escape the conscription by withdrawing their declaration. This would bar them from ever becoming citizens.

The conscripted men are to be used in the military service, army reserve, coast guard, lighthouse service, coast and geodetic survey, public health service, diplomatic and consular service.

Illinois Bank Closes

DECATUR, Ill., Sept. 23.—By a vote of the directors, the Farmers State Bank and Trust company was closed today pending investigation by the state bank examiner, one of four persons to whom Frank E. Harrold, 54, cashier of the institution for 12 years, addressed letters shortly before shooting himself to death in a cottage of his 120 acre farm near Dewitt, Ills.

RAID ANGARANO HOME; KEEP HIM INCOMMUNICADO

Attempt to Procure Habeas Writ

James M. Angarano, one of the active strikers in the International Tailoring company strike, was pulled out of his bed at five oclock yesterday morning by a squad of detectives and uniformed police. The police refuse to book Angarano and are holding him incommunicado. According to the information gathered by the DAILY WORKER representative he is being held in the detective bureau, which is known for the brutal treatment it accords workers caught in its clutches.

William A. Cunnea, attorney for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, is attempting to procure a writ of habeas corpus to force the police to book Angarano. It is not known what charge will be lodged against Angarano.

The police arrested Izzie Miller, Phillip Nochonson and Tony Gollota, as they were peacefully picketing the plant yesterday. The police that arrested them have charged them with disorderly conduct. The union has had them released on bail.

There were more than 150 pickets on yesterday's line. The picket line remained unbroken and the Amalgamated members on the line picketed all the more vigorously when the police arrested three of their number.

LEONARD WOOD POURED COLOSSAL FORTUNE INTO BID FOR PRESIDENCY

The threat to "blow the lid" off the campaign of Gen. Leonard Wood for the republican presidential nomination in 1920 was voiced here by attorneys for Col. A. A. Sprague, defendant in a suit for $50,000 brot by William Cooper Proctor, of Cincinnati, which is on trial in federal court

Proctor seeks to recover half of a note he paid and half of which he says Sprague, treasurer of the Wood campaign fund, promised as a contribution.. Sprague's defense is that he merely signed the note as an indorser.

On cross-examination today Procter admitted that he had contributed $300,000 to the fund but could not recall if he had given twice that much.

SEAMEN REFUSE NEGOTIATIONS UNTIL PRISONERS ARE FREED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SYDNEY, Australia, Sept. 23.—The government effort to get a conference between the ship owners and the striking seamen got a severe and pointed rebuke when the executive committee of the union, which in Australia is conducting the strike, declared emphatically that the strikers would refuse to enter into any negotiations whatsoever until all men imprisoned since the strike began have been released. The Australian seamen and waterside workers' organizations are affiliated with the Red Transport Workers' Section of the Red International of Labor Unions.

NAVY INSISTED ON FLIGHT OVER CAPTAIN'S HEAD

Lansdowne's Protest Was Rejected

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 23.—The official correspondence between the navy department and the late Commander Zachary Lansdowne of the lost naval dirigible Shenandoah revealing Lansdowne's protest against flying over the Middle West in the stormy season, was made public by Captain George W. Steele, of the Lakehurst naval air station, testifying before the board of inquiry, meeting here to fix responsibility for the disaster.

The communication between Lansdowne and the chief of naval operations showed that Lansdowne had recommended the western flight be made in the second week of September instead of the first week, pointing out the earlier date was in a season of thunderstorms.

Lansdowne's Protest Rejected.

The navy department wrote back on August 12 that this recommendation had not been approved and the flight would take place on September 1 or 2.

The navy department in their communication of July 20 pointed out the list of states to be flown over including Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Indiana and expressed the department's desire to visit as many of the state fairs as practicable.

Lawnsdowne replied to the navy department that it was impossible to cover all the fairs in the first week.

Tries to Blame Commander.

When the commander received directions to proceed in the first week he recommended in a letter of July 15 that if the flight was taken at that season, mooring masts and landing fields should be selected.

Plans for a landing field at Minneapolis, Fort Scott, and a mooring mast at Detroit were made.

Capt. Steel placed the responsibility for the inspection of the Shenandoah on Commander Lansdowne, in testimony given before the board of inquiry.

"He was responsible for when it was done and how?" Rear Admiral Hilray P. Jones, president of the court, asked.

"Yes," replied Capt. Steele.

Steele O. K.'ed Flight.

Capt. Steele testified he did not prescribe for the number of inspections or manner of inspection of the dirigible.

"When the Shenandoah left Lakehurst for its last flight, was the condition or manner of the ship reported to you?" Admiral Jones asked.

"There was no official report, but I was aware that her condition in all respects was ready to fly," Steele answered.

"Then her condition met with your approval?"

"Yes."

Parents Protest Meeting.

The striking parents of the Eugene Field school meet tonight at 6459 Sheridan road to discuss the need of an elementary school instead of the junior high proposed by the school board for that district along with their immediate problem of dealing with the board of education stalls in its efforts "to make the parents like" the location where the portables were planted.

Film Hero Mistook Steel for Paper Mache; Drew Blood

GUERNEVILLE, Calif., Sept. 23.—Rodney Leroque, widely known film star, was seriously injured while on location near here in the filming of a new production, it was learned today. Leroque while enacting one of the screen parts too realistically plunged an Indian knife into his thigh cutting a deep gash. Several stitches were required to close the wound and it was said by the physicians attending him that he would be laid up for several days.

WAR IN CHINA THREATENS OVER CONFERENCE PLAN

Gen. Feng Seeks to Clean Pekin of Traitors

PEKIN, Sept. 23—The Chinese government yesterday, replying to the British note of Sept. 1, opposes the "judicial inquiry" which proposes to whitewash the Shanghai massacres of Chinese workers and students by British police troops last May 30. The Chinese note charges that the British proposal for such an inquiry has delayed settlement of the incident.

There is some truth in this, as Chinese are up in arms again with demonstrations everywhere against the coming whitewash scheme of the British and other imperialists.

Reports are that both Feng Yuhsiang and Chang Tso-lin hope to seize Pekin and hold it under more or less personal control before the "citizens' conference" of Oct. 10.

This conference was called soon after Marshal Tuan Chi-jui was seated in the office of chief executive. Tuan and the whole Chili party has been bitterly accused by the Kuomintang of turning such assemblies into servile bowings to imperialists in exchange for subsidies and favors to the military governors who make up the ruling element in the assemblies.

The purpose of this conference of Oct. 10 is announced as to deal with the outstanding problems of the republic, the principal task being to determine the future form of the republic. Another matter which the conference will now likely consider is the following customs tariff conferences of the imperialist powers on Oct. 26.

Evidently Feng is seeking to drive the quarrelling and grafting militarists, who betray Chinese interests for their own at any opportunity, out of control of Pekin and the conference and furnish the basis of formal authority for the furtherance of Chinese liberation from imperialist control. Chang, as every one knows, is the puppet of Japan and is certainly trying to thwart any effort of Feng to clean out the traitors at Pekin.

Indiana Coal Miners Force Public Service Board to Lower Rates

The strike of approximately 1,500 coal miners in the Clinton, Ind., field ended with a victory for the workers. The miners, who were employed by 8 mines in the field, struck Sept. 1 when the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad increased the monthly charge for transporting them to and from work from $1.10 to $2.50. They went back to work when the Indiana public service commission ordered the fare reduced to $1.50.

REPORTER GOT CAILLAUX'S GOAT WITH QUESTION

Finance Minister Is Now Patriot

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 23—Prepared to effect an agreement for the payment of France's $4,000,000,000 war debt to the United States, Joseph Caillaux, once notorious "traitor" and now present French finance minister, and a commission of financial experts, arrived in New York today on the liner Paris and left almost immediately for Washington.

The French liner reached quarantine at 6:30 a m. and docked in the Hudson three hours later. M. Caillaux and his associates debarked at once and proceeded by automobile to the Pennsylvania station, where they entrained.

Leaving for Washington, Caillaux issued a formal statement, declaring that he was confident that a Franco-American debt settlement would be made.

M. Caillaux made the following statement to newspapermen who journeyed down the bay to meet him:

"I have come, accompanied by eminent members of all political parties in the French parliament to bring a settlement of our debts. There is no instance in history in which France has failed to do so."

Caillaux Reddened.

M. Caillaux invited the newspapermen, some 40 in number, who went to quarantine to meet him, to a conference in the smoking room of the Paris. An interesting interview was progressing when one of the newspaper men propounded a question which caused the minister of finance to turn red, rise to his feet and exclaim:

"I have nothing more to say."

The question asked him was:

"Mr. Minister, there is a great deal of misapprehension in the United States as to the charges brot against you in your trial; were you charged with treason?"

After refusing to say anything more the minister of finance yielded to the importunities and apologies of the other newspapermen and answered a number of questions put to him.

The minister of finance was asked if he were confident that the debt funding commission could accomplish a settlement which would be satisfactory to France.

"Why should we come for any other purpose?" he retorted.

MORGAN'S STAFF SAILS TO CRUSH ENGLISH WORKER

Long Hours, Low Wages Aspired Goal

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press.)

The sudden departure of J. P. Morgan for England accompanied by Lamont of his American staff and Smith of his English staff calls attention to the alliance of American and British capital to overwhelm British labor with unemployment. England in the next few months will be the active front in the struggle between labor and the employing class.

The British-American alliance first appeared when J. P Morgan and the New York Federal Reserve joined to put $300,000,000 at the disposal of the British government in its efforts to restore the gold value of the pound sterling. It was pointed out at that time that this action of the federal reserve might really be overstepping its powers in making a treaty with a foreign government without the formality of government sanction. But the deeper significance of the move passed unnoticed.

Rising Unemployment.

The restoration of the pound to par was followed by a rapid rise in unemployment in England, from 1¼ millions receiving official unemployment relief to nearly 1¾ millions have applied for relief and been rejected.

Feeds Poison to Herself and Child to End Starvation

BROCKVILLE. Ont., Sept. 23.—A mother and one of her eight children are in a serious condition in a hospital here today following frustration by police of her attempt to kill herself and her family.

"There is no use scraping and scratching to get money to feed all the children. I won't leave alone in the world, so will take them with me," read a note found by the woman's mother, who summoned police.

Police found the woman forcibly feeding one of the children poison. She swallowed the contents of the bottle herself before police entered. Both are in a critical condition. The woman, Mrs. M. W. Love, is a widow.

CHINA EXPOSES HYPOCRISY OF NATION LEAGUE

Actually Wanted It to Do Something

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Sept. 23.—The saintly hypocrites were all upset yesterday at the league of nations assembly when the Chinese delegate, Chao Hsin Chu, insisted that the pretensions set forth in the league covenant be lived up to.

Such a proposal was unheard of. The delegates were aghast. Chao had been for three weeks trying to get the assembly to say something on the application of Article 19 of the league covenant to China. Article 19 says:

Article 19 of the Covenant

"The assembly may from time to time advise the reconsideration by members of the league of treaties which have become inapplicable and the consideration of international conditions whose continuance might endanger the peace of the world."

Certainly the conditions in China, if continued, threaten the peace of the world. But that the league of nations should really do something or express an opinion contrary to the wishes and interests of the imperialist powers in the matter of the treaties with China which have "become inapplicable" was altogether a quaint idea to which the delegates reacted with evident astonishment.

Get Worried About Precedents

Fortunately for the big imperialist powers, they had their puppets among the Polish, French and little entente delegates, do most of the fighting against Chao, who finally had to submit an innocuous resolution and leave any protest merely to his speech. These Polish and little entente delegates have in mind that if a precedent—and precedents are a holy thing in the league—is made in the case of China, Germany will speak up and demand reconsideration of the treaty of Versailles on the ground that it has become "inapplicable" and threatens the "peace of the world."

The peace of the world may be threatened, but that is a small matter compared with giving up their boundaries these small nations think, and France fought also on that basis.

A Queer Idea of the League

Chao, in his speech said he was making the motion for the application of Article 19 in China as it would not only justify the existence of the league, which seems to need some such justification, but would "convince the whole world of the league's activity and efficiency."

That the league of nations should be either active or efficient was an inovation too much for the delegates, apparently, so the league of nations promptly voted Chao down.

WAGE INCREASE DEMANDS BEFORE U. S. RAIL BODY

Railroad Unions Demand Slight Increases

Applications for wage increases totalling $100,000,000 annually have come before the United States railroad labor board which opened its sessions in Chicago.

The Maintenance of Way Union has a case to come before the board Oct. 12, involving wage increases on thirty-five railroads amounting to $12,500,000 annually.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railroad Conductors are asking for an increase of approximately 12 per cent.

The Masters, Mates and Pilots of America had a hearing before the board yesterday, involving the Chesapeake & Ohio, the Seaboard Air Line, the Norfolk & Southern, the Southern Pacific and the Atlantic Coast line railroads in wage disputes.

Undoubtedly the firemen, engineers and switchmen will ask for wage increases for their membership.

Workers Are Interested in the Inquiry Into the Shenandoah Disaster

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, great numbers of workers in industry, and farmers toiling on the land, discuss with great seriousness the official naval inquiry into the wreck of the giant dirigible Shenandoah near Ava, O., on September 3. With the usual show of sympathy, they join in the speculation as to who was responsible for the death of the 14 air mariners who lost their lives.

The supposition is ventured, however, that never are these discussions linked up with labor's own problems. The workers do not connect the Shenandoah disaster with their own jobs.

• • • •

One of the big facts already brought out is that the Shenandoah was sent on its western tour as a publicity stunt. The fatal trip, city for city, was laid out in railroad time table style, by the warmongers at Washington, and it was left for the Shenandoah's crew to follow orders. In one great center of population after another, at many state fairs, the dirigible was to appear as a stellar attraction, for the assembled multitudes to gaze at in awe and admiration, all the while gushing complimentary expletives for the government at Washington that made such things possible. Always forgetting, however, that this was an instrument of war, the next war, in the preparations for which much money must be spent, the war into which the masses must be persuaded to go willingly. This indirect propaganda for the next war proves too subtle even for the average adult workers' mind, not to mention the children in whom is drilled a goose-step worship of things as they are. Thus is assent to new wars won.

• • • •

The naval inquiry now going on is merely one method of satisfying popular clamor. New Shenandoahs must be built and "the people" must be made to like it and pay for it.

• • • •

No such spread of publicity was ever given an investigation into a mine horror, with its death list of hundreds. Disasters occur and are forgotten in industry. Occupational diseases daily take their vast toll of lives, with hardly passing mention. For a short time, in the immediate vicinity of a mine blast or factory or mill accident, the workers stand appalled. Then the struggle for existence, the rush of the unemployed for the jobs vacated by death, goes on again and all is forgotten.

For the worker in the mine pit gives his life for the profit social system of his boss, as did the members of the Shenandoah's crew for the capitalist government they had sworn to serve. Most miners do not yet know that coal mines are dangerous places to work in because it hurts profits to make them safe. Most soldiers, sailors and aviators are ignorant of the fact that they fight and murder the workers of other nations so that the profits of their imperialist masters may not only be protected but enhanced, in opposition to the profits of the competing imperialists.

• • • •

In other words, the worker at his job and the farmer at his plow, as they discuss the Shenandoah disaster, do not recognize the great dirigible as a weapon of the capitalist government that oppresses them; no more than the victims of the air tragedy realized that they were in the service of a dollar government, the only object of which is the protection of the dollar and the spreading of its influence.

Realizing this, that the dirigible Shenandoah was an instrument in the hands of their exploiters, to protect plunder, stolen at home and abroad—for were not airships used against the striking coal miners of West Virginia?—then the respectful awe with which millions greeted this warship of the air during its career, must turn to hate, just as the striker hates the scab who tries to steal his job.

• • • •

The inquiry into the Shenandoah wreck concerns the workers and poor farmers only as they are interested in the ending of the capitalist government that is conducting it, and the substitution for it of a workers' government that will make industry safe for the workers, and the world peaceful and socially productive for all the people that inhabit it.

REPORT BRANDS CHICAGO SCHOOL SYSTEM A FIZZLE

Parents' Protest Meeting Tonight

A report issued by the Chicago Principals' Club brands the criminal overcrowding of children in the Chicago public schools as a disgraceful failure. The report shows that ten per cent of the students "flunk" every term. In one school 35 per cent—more than one-thrid of the pupils—failed at the end of the term.

The report was gotten out to show that money could be saved on 30 principals and 1,000 teachers if so many pupils did not have to repeat courses but the lesson the figures carry is that fifty children to one teacher cannot even put over McAndrew's white collar slave training system successfully.

McNAMARA FOUND GUILTY IN TRIAL AT INDIANAPOLIS

Open Shop Employers Framed Him Up

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 23.—John J. McNamara, business agent of the local Iron Workers' Union, faces another term of imprisonment as a result of a frame-up against him by the employers of this city. The charge carries a prison term of from one to five years.

McNamara was charged with terrorism against non-union workers employed on the Elks building. The defense introduced several witnesses that tore the state's case to pieces and exposed the stoolpigeons of the employers as shameless liars.

The prosecution prejudiced the jury by painting a lurid picture of McNamara's indictment and conviction with the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building.

McNamara announced thru his counsel that he will appeal the verdict.

ALCOHOL TWINS RAISE BIG ROW AT COUNTY JAIL

Lawyers Make Dough While Pols Whine

The prison activities of Messrs Druggan and Lake, two millionaire bootleggers and high up among the elect 400 in the political register of the republican and democratic parties in Chicago, are still causing local political leaders considerable worry.

It develops that the power behind the throne, or more correctly behind the Cook County jail, was Morris Eller, west side republican party boss. It was Eller who instructed Sheriff Hoffman, to allow as many visitors in to see the millionaire twins, as their business interests warranted. Messers Druggan and Lake were to be the judges.

They Deny Everything.

Of course Mr. Eller indignantly repudites the charges connecting him with the illegal liberties of the beer sultans. Sheriff Hoffman indignantly repudiates the accusations of Ex-Warden Westbrook, who says in effect that Hoffman, suggested that the alcohol experts be permitted the freedom of the city inasmuch as they were wealthy, good spenders and good political friends of the sheriff.

In return for these compliments, Hoffman pitchforks all the political and official dung in and around the county jail, on the shoulders of the ex-warden. It is rather indelicately hinted that Westbrook reduced the weight of Mister Druggan, by relieving him of $20,000. Westbrook now has his turn at indignant denials. He is honest, he admits, painfully so. In fact, it appears that the ex-warden often expressed doubt to his wife the infallibility of the old saying that "honesty is the best policy."

Crowe for Hoffman.

Sheriff Hoffman is a republican party office holder. It appears that the county jail is a G. O. P. stronghold. State's Attorney Crowe is not near as much excited about the reported grafting in connection with the county jail, as he as about alleged deviations of trade unionists. Crowe waved aside all suspicions about the integrity of Hoffman and offered his services to the sheriff in any political ambitions he may cherish.

The politicians are worried over the jail exposures. Nobody expects anything to come out of it however. The lawyers will shake down Messers Druggan and Lake and the politicians who are getting a decent divvy out of the booze racket may be forced to drop some simoleons.

KENTUCKY LABOR FIGHTS FORMING MOUNTED POLICE

Threat of Prison Labor Is Also Opposed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—The formation of a state constabulary in Kentucky was scored in the report of the president of the Kentucky Federation of Labor. The president urged in his report that the fifteenth annual convention of the state labor body go on record opposing any measure that may be presented to the state legislature for the formation of a state constabulary.

Score Prison Labor

In the report of the president, the menace of prison-made goods to union labor was pointed out. Upwards of $7,000,000 of prison-made goods have been placed on the market in competition with union-made goods in Kentucky.

The modification of the workmen's compensation laws was another big issue in the convention.

Bribe Charge Investigated.

The investigation of the charges against four directors of Labor Union, the official organ of the Kentucky Federation of Labor came near being one of the biggest issues of the convention. The four directors were accused of accepting a bribe of $1,000 to call off a labor boycott which the unions had instituted against the Louisville Baseball association.

The legislative committee spent most of its time hearing evidence as to whether the four should be expelled from the union. The committee undoubtedly will recommend that their names be stricken from the roster of delegates to the convention.

THOUGHT HE WAS CHEATING THE UNION BUT FOUND HE WAS STUNG

By A. ROSENFELD.
(Worker Correspondent)

JOHN did not like his union very much. For his part, all the unions with their officials could go plumb to hell. It would be better without them, John used to say. He wouldn't have to pay dues, assessments and any other payments the union is levying.

He would be allowed to work as much as he wants and for how much he wants. No one will dictate to him whether he is allowed to work on this or on that holiday.

"Why should any one bother me about how many hours I should work? Am I not a boss over my time, over my own hands? Why should I quarrel with the boss about overtime, demanding time and one-half or double? Am I making more work doing this over-time? And if the boss don't want to pay the price for overtime demanded by the union, why should I lose the few cents he is willing to pay?"

AND so John decided to cheat the union. To do away with its rules and to work overtime as much as the boss will only permit him. He will not talk about the price.

This will be arranged between him and the boss, and as far as the union is concerned the full sum required will be put in the envelope and if necessary the money will really be put in. It's alright, John will bring it back the next day.

It is only to prove to the business agent and the rest of the workers of the shop, that their suspicion is groundless, that he is not undermining the union conditions. So it went on day after day, week after week. All the workers in the shop were quitting in time and John always remained working overtime for the "union scale."

ONCE, after a long and hard week's work, John came home and without even washing himself, he opened his pay envelope with a delightful expression on his face, expecting to find a fat pay roll for his long week's work, but to his astonishment, after counting the money, he found out that something was wrong, that something was missing. He counted the bills again and again, but it was still missing.

"It must be a mistake," John said to himself, and on the next day he called the attention of the boss to that effect, but the boss showed him his figures and items, and according to that, the boss was correct.

"Why," said John, "I worked twice as many hours as you put down. There is something wrong."

"Don't tell me stories," answered the boss, "my figures are right, and if you are not satisfied," he sarcastically continued, "complain to your business agent."

John did not answer a word, he only gnashed his teeth, and determined not to work overtime any more.

Another Big Merger.

Two of the largest wholesale dry goods firms in the world will be merged here October 10, when Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., take over the entire business and properties of the John V. Farwell Co., it was learned here today. The Farwell stock alone will inventory more than $5,000,000, it was said, while no value is fixed on the property and good will of the concern, which has been doing a business of $25,000,000 annually.

OLD FORGE, PA., KINGDOM OF BURGESS FRANK CONSTANZA, TO WITNESS COMMUNIST COURAGE

By AUGUST VALENTINE
(Worker Correspondent.)

OLD FORGE, Pa., Sept. 23. — Old Forge lies between Scranton and Wilkes-Barre. Old Forge is a typical mining town, predominantly of an Italian population who are more radically inclined than their fellow workers in other towns. The Italian population elects a complete Italian administration every election, elects men who are ostensibly favorable to labor.

King Constanza.

Old Forge has a burgess. His name is Frank Constanza. Frank is a pretty good fellow, when he is sleeping. Frank owns half the speakeasies in Old Forge and gets a royalty and commission from the other half for permitting them to operate. Frank has other side lines, a few gambling joints and a pull with the officials of the local collieries, the operators' officials.

Old Forge is a working class town with a working class population. Workers' meetings are always well-attended and not molested. But this is election time in Old Forge. Old Forge goes to the polls to vote soon. Frank is a candidate to succeed himself, against another candidate who is a member of the local union of the miners.

Progressive Miners, Another Organization.

Frank is worried; worried over an organization known as the Workers (Communist) Party. He has another worry. It is about another organization known as the Progressive Miners' Committee. These two organizations have picked Old Forge, domain of Frank and his booze joints, to hold several strike meetings.

We must remember this is election time and Frank is worried. Frank must keep the support of the officials of the Jermyn colliery otherwise his chances of election are slim. Frank does not want to offend the operators lackey officials. And yet he wants the support of the miners of Old Forge. Frank, therefore, has forbid the Workers Party and the progressive miners that they cannot hold their proposed meeting in the town park next Wednesday. Frank listened to his master's voice and acted accordingly.

Tells the Cock-Eyed World.

To others than Communists the order to cancel the meeting might be carried out. With Communists it is just a little different. The radical miners have told Frank to go to hell; that they are going to hold their meeting. And a meeting will be held, we wish to inform the cock-eyed world. True, we might be guests of Frank for several days as a consequence, but a meeting will be held.

The meeting will begin promptly at three o'clock from the platform in Town Park. Town Park is in the very heart of the town, you can't miss is. There will be good speakers who will very ably cover the strike situation from every angle.

Benjamin Gitlow who is holding successful meetings thruout the anthracite will be the principal speaker. Pat Toohey, secretary of Local Union No. 1483, Plains, will also speak. An Italian and Lithuanian speaker will be on hand also. Any striking miner who has any money to put up should be present for it would be a crime to keep our speakers in Frank's jug for we understand his meals are rotten. Be on hand.

of the entire union on the basis of the shop committee."

Among the specific economic demands advanced were:

1. Union control of contractors thru jobbers and manufacturers.
2. Guarantees to enable needle workers to make a living in the industry by the establishment of
   - (a) The 36-hour week.
   - (b) Forty weeks guarantee of employment per year.
   - (c) Abolition of minimum standards of production and piece work thruout the industry.
   - (d) A wage scale that will bring the yearly earning power within a minimum of $2,000.
   - (e) Unemployment insurance paid by the employers and administered by the union and guarantees against discharge by the employer.

The conference elected a committee of 25 to act as the national committee.

The conference adopted a number of important resolutions including a resolution of greetings to the Minority Movement of Great Britain, a protest resolution against those trade union reactionaries who together with the American capitalists opposed the recognition of Soviet Russia, a resolution favoring the organization of a labor party, and world trade union unity, a resolution of greetings to the cloak and dressmakers of New York in their brave struggle against the reactionary Sigman machine, a resolution endorsing the International Labor Defense, a resolution pledging support for the DAILY WORKER and other working class revolutionary papers.

The conference also adopted a resolution expressing warm recognition and pledge of support to the Freiheit for its loyal services in the cause of the working class.

FREE STATE IN BRITISH DEFY AT LEAGUE CONFAB

Dominions May Support Ireland's Protest

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Spet. 23.—The age old fight between Great Britain and Ireland broke out anew today in an unusual quarter.

Representatives of the Irish Free State appearing before the juridicial committee of the league of nations challenged the right of British representatives to speak for the Irish Free State.

Sir Cecil Hurst had told the committee that Great Britain opposes compulsory arbitration.

Kevin O'Higgins, member of the Irish Free State ministry and delegate to the league of nations, jumped to his feet and informed the league delegates that Sir Cecil could not speak for Ireland, with regard to compulsory arbitration.

Today's incident may reopen an old dispute between Ireland and England relative to the right of Ireland and the league of nations.

The Irish Free State has given indication that it intends to defy England and bring the question of the Ulster border before the league, if the decision of the boundary commission is unsatisfactory to the Free State.

During recent sittings of the league there has been a tendency on the part of Ireland and Canada and South Africa to stand together, and today's objection by Ireland may be supported by Canada and South Africa.

Leviathan to Dry Dock

The big liner Leviathan had a large percentage of her crew leave as soon as notified, and the rest will leave as soon as they can do it legally. This ship is going into the dry dock. The American steamer West Katan had 95 per cent of her crew leave, only two ordinary seamen remaining. The men stated this was the worst ship they had sailed on for many years. The food was full of maggots, the quarters were dirty and there was no way of keeping clean. This ship came from the West Coast.

The Baltimore branch of the M. T. W. has possession of the names and photographs of the scabs who left that port for South America after knowing a strike was one. The data is being forwarded to Santos and Buenos Aires for a warm reception there.

Cotton Mills Run at 80 Per Cent Capacity in August; Beats 1924

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Cotton spinning declined further in August as compared with July but was greater than in August of last year, the census bureau's monthly report today shows.

Active spindle hours for August numbered 6,954,413,849, or an average of 184 hours per spindle in place, compared with 7,297,648,494, or an average of 192, for July this year, and 5,399,549,661, or an average of 143, for August last year.

Spinning spindles in place Aug. 31 numbered 37,822,040, of which 31,269,774 were operated at some time during the month, compared with 37,936,784 and 31,760,596 for July this year and 37,822,706 and 28,945,603 for August last year.

The average number of spindles operated during August was 30,464,534, or at 80.5 per cent capacity, on a single shift basis, compared with 31,967,971, or at 84.3 per cent capacity, during July this year, and 23,761,440, or at 62.8 per cent capacity, during August last year.

Yom Kippur Day Party to be Celebrated by Anti-Religious Talks

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CAMP TOWL, MIDDLEBORO, Mass.—The Roxbury branch of the Young Workers' League has opened a camp where Communists may have a gathering place and recreate their depleted energies. Tho the camp is not a financial success, it has been an educational and social success.

On Sept. 28, the camp will hold an anti-religious day, at which the comrades will show the relation of religion to the exploitation of the working class. Prominent comrades are to speak on the subject "Religion and Whom it Serves." The occasion of this demonstration is Yom Kippur Day.

A small admission will be charged and the proceeds will be used in the following manner: Ten per cent of the profits will be given to the Young Worker, ten per cent to the DAILY WORKER, and ten per cent to the Freiheit. All comrades are invited to attend this meeting and assist the camp in its efforts.

WAR NOT YET OVER; 26,344 MAIMED SUFFER

Suffering Continues Among Veterans

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 23.—The war for democracy is not yet ended if one is to accept the statements of officials of the veterans' bureau. 26,344 veterans are still confined to their cots in the various hospitals in the United States.

About five thousand veterans are discharged every month from the hospitals, but these are soon replaced by other war veterans who still suffer from wounds received in the line of duty.

According to the report of the veterans' bureau, most of those under treatment will be cured and discharged, but many of them, maimed and shell shocked and diseased, will spend the remainder of their days being cared for by the government.

Insanity was the most terrible of the wars aftermaths. There are now 12,308 veterans being treated for mental diseases caused by shell shock and fever. 9,185 soldiers are suffering and receiving treatment for tuberculosis.

There are 2,000 more soldiers under treatment than last year. One of the wounded veterans, confined at the Walter Reed hospital, Washington, D. C., has undergone 49 skin grafting operations to make over his face which was torn away by shrapnel.

Help Wanted to Aid Chicago Juniors in Future Activities

The Chicago Junior section is completely reorganizing on the basis of School Nuclei. Two sections of the city have already completed the reorganization and are successfully working on the new basis. The Chicago Junior sections needs as many comrades as possible, who are members of the Young Workers League, to become active in Junior work by becoming group leaders.

Fifteen additional group leaders will be needed within the next two weeks. All comrades who are interested in Junior work, who will seriously undertake to lead a group lease apply to Gilbert Greenberg in care of the Young Workers League at once. This is very important we have nuclei that are waiting for comrades to lead. HURRY!

HOW TO CHANGE OUR CHARACTER

By Harrison George

ONLY by making the Communist press a reflection of the lives of the working masses can it attain that hold upon the labor movement necessary to shape the form and activity of the movement into the path of revolutionary struggle. And only by development of far more and much better Worker Correspondents than the DAILY WORKER now has, can this, our paper, become fixed in the faith of the workers as their very own.

It should be an indication of the weakness of the DAILY WORKER merely to cite the fact that the circulation of this, the leading organ of Communism in America, is far below the estimate of 100,000 voters who cast their ballots for Foster and Gitlow in the presidential election. The great circle of sympathizing workers must be made into readers of the DAILY WORKER.

THE Worker Correspondents have the duty of correcting this shortcoming, chiefly by changing the character of the DAILY WORKER, by bringing into its columns the intimate details, the tragedy, the significance of the common things, the very common things, of the lives and struggles of the working masses. By this means the influence of the DAILY WORKER will expand amazingly and at the same time these masses under its influence will simultaneously become conscious that the Communist Party is their leader in action against capitalism.

If we wish to make the DAILY WORKER a mass paper in the true sense, we have to do something more than cry out that this is our ambition. It must be definitely accented that the paper must change its character. Now, it must also be accented that the comrades everywhere should not think that this change of character is the business solely of the editorial department of the DAILY WORKER. The biggest change in character will come with the increase and betterment of a corps of Worker Correspondents.

THIS is not to say that the editorial department of the DAILY WORKER is perfect. Quite the contrary. Lack of finances to sustain a larger staff cripples it tragically. Even when all who are assigned to the department are working at their desks, much good material in the rough is neglected for lack of time, and much that is handled is poorly worked up under driving speed. It is worse yet when the demands of the party call editorial workers away for conferences and speaking tours and leave those on the job to their own devices, with visible results in lowering the quality of the paper. Moreover, this condition has become the rule and not the exception.

This technical lack also tends to cripple the editorial staff politically, as it is obvious that work which demands both speed and long hours continuously faithfully to discharge the task, does not leave even the minimum of leisure for political, theoretical and cultural reading, editorial councils, etc., necessary for proper editorial perspective.

This is contributed to by a pernicious departmentalization which makes one "the trade union expert" or the "expert on China," etc.

This is such a common disease that the agitprop bureau of the C. I. especially condemns a condition where "Instead of political collaboration among the different members of the editorial staff, we find an obstinate struggle for 'columns.'"

WHILE we see that the editorial department is not without fault, yet the writer believes that an immense change and improvement would result if only the Workers Party members and readers of the DAILY WORKER would take more seriously the building up of a corps of Worker Correspondents.

In the editorial room, we have seen, since the issue of Comrade Dunne's little booklet on Worker Correspondents, the most deplorable lack of comprehension of the subject on the part of many comrades who seem to have either not read the booklet or not to have absorbed a single idea from the first word to the last.

Comrades who occupy party posts, such as district organizers and district industrial organizers, comrades whose particular task it is to send in from this or that locality the news of the labor movement, some of these comrades pay not the slightest attention to the sound advice and positive instruction given in Comrade Dunne's little booklet.

Instead, they send in the most careless manuscripts, if one may call them such, piles of newspaper clippings, not identified either as to what paper or its date, unintelligible scrawls on odds and ends of note paper, important news all mixed up with personal comment, manuscripts written in single space, without regard to the need of editing nor space allowed at the top of sheets for editorial directions to the printers.

BEFORE me on my desk are some horrible examples. Here is a comrade who can write a story—but doesn't. From Los Angeles he sends a letter—a letter, mind you, not a story, of two closely typed sheets in which the real story of a real struggle in the local Machinists' Union is tangled up hopelessly among personal chatter of the correspondent and his naive request that "You write up an article" on the subject. This comrade wrote at least 600 words in the letter, but apparently never thought that he should write and could write the story about the machinists in 200 words separately and put his personal comment on a separate piece of paper.

The same comrade followed the above messy contribution which was too impossibly mixed up to allow us to thresh out the story for lack of time, by another, five days later, of 450 words accompanied by four newspaper clippings, which he asked us to pour over for a half hour and extract the story which he had already perceived in them, but which he failed to write up. This sort of thing is sometimes useful, but it is decidedly taken on sufferance and is not Worker Correspondence.

ANOTHER mania some comrades have is to write about incidents with which they have not the slightest connection. A comrade in New York City, for example, sends in a story about the Mosul oil region of Turkey and travels around the world ending up with the Rockefeller interests in Colorado coal mines—all written up with a pretense of being news, and having no regard for the instructions issued in the little booklet by Comrade Dunne on Worker Correspondence, tho proudly setting forth at the top of the story—"By a Worker Correspondent."

New York City seems to have been especially unfortunate in getting the wrong idea of what Worker Correspondence is. Another comrade, beginning a story with the claim "By a Worker Correspondent," proceeds:

"New York City, Sept. 2.— The steamship Majestic, of the White Star Line, left Southampton, England, this morning, bound for New York City, despite the fact that a large number of her crew deserted her last night." The story then proceeds in detail. But what, might we ask, is a "Worker Correspondent" in New York City doing with cabled news from England? Did he not get it out of the daily papers and does he think that the same cables which carried the news to New York papers have no connection with Chicago?

IN New York City there are millions of workers, with great factories everywhere, all sorts of struggles involving masses every day. Yet the comrade chose to ignore these struggles, even those in his own factory, to rewrite for a Chicago paper the news he read in a New York paper of what was going on in England. This is not Worker Correspondence, and it is a pity that among all the revolutionary workers the party has in New York, not one seems able to comprehend and carry out the simple duty of a Worker Correspondent.

Our Chicago comrades have a different fault. One and all, high and low, Chicago comrades think that the limited means and the small staff of the DAILY WORKER nevertheless ought to furnish "a reporter" for every little incident—and they blandly ignore "Worker Correspondence" duties and don't write at all.

Another New York "Worker Correspondent," understands his function so poorly that his anxiety to "find something to write about" causes him to drag in by the hair the most remote incidents of flood and field to allow him to insert, by way of smuggling into the story, some comment about the taxicab drivers, in which he is particularly interested.

For instance, on August 5, this comrade sent us a story, setting forth that the Building Trades Council had passed a resolution assailing Mayor Hylan, and the comrade quotes the resolution entire. Then the comrade brings in his own issue, saying:

"The building trades workers are not the only workers that will fight to defeat the Hylan-Sinnot machine in this city. There are 38,000 taxicab drivers in New York who will put up a bitter fight to prevent Hylan from being re-elected and giving over the streets of New York to the Yellow Taxi corporation."

But the comrade failed to note that he was taking the same political position as the Building Trades Council whose resolution he gave as saying:

"Whereas, this board is working in harmony with the American Federation of Labor in furthering the principles of rewarding our friends and opposing our enemies, therefore be it resolved that we will use all our efforts to bring about the defeat of Mayor Hylan."

OBVIOUSLY, the comrade did not follow the instruction given in the little "Worker Correspondence" booklet that "The difference between the policies and tactics of the reactionaries, reformists and Communists must be made clear." Obviously, too, this was due to his going out of his field to drag in an incident on which he could hang an argument for the taxi drivers.

Another comrade, writing painstakingly, from Seattle, tells us at the beginning of his article:

"Learn to be in the union. It is better to be organized than unorganized. Learn how to organize the workers." And so on for six sheets.

Now, these are excellent recommendations, but in the whole six sheets the comrade did not once connect his purely propaganda phrases with a single incident of the class struggle, either of his own or his fellow workers' experience or of such nationally known incidents as the miners' strike or the Daugherty injunctions. Hence, all his exhortations were more formulae and utterly valueless.

One kind of supposed "Worker Correspondent" the DAILY WORKER can certainly dispense with is the gentleman who writes us from Washington, D. C., on a letterhead neatly printed with his name and address, with the following: "Founder of Reformed Bahaism," "Formerly reporter for the Washington Daily News," "Manager All-American Press Syndicate" at the top. He asks: "Could you use any Washington news or original literary contributions from me?" The DAILY WORKER will probably struggle along without the "original literary contributions" of this gentleman, in spite of the fact that he has printed under the sauve resounding titles the claim "Washington Correspondent of the Chicago DAILY WORKER."

WHAT the DAILY WORKER wants is news hot from the struggle, that drips with the sweat and blood of the toiling masses, that intimately pictures the class conflict, in each shop, dealing individually with each little detail, every brutal foreman, every complaint, every rebellion, every minor victory.

What the DAILY WORKER wants is a page or two every day of such stories, and those who write them to distribute bundles in the shops which are described in the stories. No member of our party is too big or too little to read Comrade Dunne's little booklet for Worker Correspondents and to put its invaluable directions into practice.

The booklet by Comrade Dunne is furnished free to Worker Correspondents. It shows how the humblest worker may express the story of the life of the workers as seen by his own eyes. It tells "What, where, when, why and how" to write.

Since the publication of this little booklet, Nunmber 4, of the Little Red Library published by the DAILY WORKER Publishing company, there is no excuse for the members of the Workers Party, especially, either to fail in sending in the news or sending in articles that have no destiny except the waste paper basket, or making it so difficult for the editorial department that valuable material is lost to the readers of our DAILY WORKER.

THE writer wishes that he could reproduce entire, some of the fine examples of Worker Correspondence the DAILY WORKER has carried, to give the bright side of the picture. We mention the excellent articles from Pittsburgh appearing frequently.

Another is the shop nucleus correspondent from Newark, New Jersey, who told in the issue of August 19, of the problems of his shop. Another from Shinnston, W. Va., from a miner, appearing on August 21, is an excellent article, depicting not only the conditions of the miners, but reporting a conversation with a railroader on the subject of common struggle with the striking miners.

Others are given in the little booklet by Comrade Dunne, which I again insist that all who write for the DAILY WORKER must read. Change the character of the DAILY WORKER. Build a corps of real Worker Correspondents!

W. P. CAMPAIGN SPEAKERS MEET; PLAN FOR FIGHT

New York Communists Organize Forces

By J. O. BENTALL
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 23—Twenty-five comrades responded to a call for a meeting of speakers to be used in the mayoralty campaign for the purpose of listening to instructions and an outline of the course of action given by Bertram D. Wolfe who is in charge of the agitprop department of the Workers Party and also manager of the present campaign.

Issues Are Analyzed.

Comrade Wolfe made a clear analysis of the issues of the campaign and pointed out in a lucid manner the Communist method of approach and attack in the campaign now under way.

He showed how the capitalist candidates were used against each other for the purpose of muddling the issues before the workers and mislead them into voting for the one that would suit the capitalists best, that there was little difference between them but that the most servile tool was to be given preference.

Waterman for Big Biz.

Waterman, the republican candidate, Wolfe showed, is a wealthy manufacturer who is bluntly outspoken in favor of big business.

He has nothing to lose by failing of election, but is willing to run as the representative of black reaction, backed by President Coolidge and the whole republican machine.

Walker Choice of Tammany.

Walker is the choice of Tammany, and entirely satisfactory to the Wall Street crowd. He is backed by Governor Smith and the entire traction interests, and will in all likelihood be elected. His legislative record was dealt with and should be dealt with in the campaign, showing his vote on all labor bills that some before the assembly since he became a member of the state legislative body.

Mayor Hylan, who lost out in the primary, should be analyzed whether he runs on an independent ticket or not. His main campaign material was and will be the 5 cent street car fare. Comrade Wolfe showed that Hylan did not fight for the 5 cent fare because he wanted to save the workers from paying 8 or 10 cents, but because he thereby served the big real-estate sharks who are depending on cheap transportation to outlying territory for high price of their property and the possibility of keeping up high rents in distant portions of the city. In strikes and in all matters touching the workers Hylan has shown himself entirely on the side of the master class.

Announce Policy Toward Thomas.

Norman Thomas, socialist candidate, should be dealt with not only as a person of inferior understanding of the class warfare, but he should be linked up with the whole socialist movement with its history of betrayals and murders that rival the blackest deeds of the capitalists in the persecution and exploitation of the workers. In fact, all the candidates should be dealt with in the main as types showing where they get their backing and giving a history of the role which they have played in the struggle between capital and labor.

In contrast with these capitalist candidates is Benjamin Gitlow, a typical worker, a fighter unafraid who has been loyal to the working class and suffered imprisonment and faced with new imprisonment for his activities in behalf of his own class. The Workers Party while it does not emphasize the individual, said Wolfe, may well take advantage of the fact that Comrade Gitlow represents that which is strongest and staunchest and most intelligent in the revolutionary element of the working class, and we need not be ashamed of having a jailbird for candidate but rather proud of it.

Plan Handling of Hecklers.

Comrade Wolfe then took up detailed matters in conducting meeting, how to handle hecklers, answer questions and emphasize special topics that come up, using as an example the case of Shapurji Saklatvala, which will be dealt with now while it is fresh.

Must Understand Problems.

Comrade Trachtenberg opened the discussion which followed. He showed the importance to the speakers of a clear understanding of the problems to be discussed during the campaign. He advised that no one answer questions who were not fully prepared to do so, and suggested that one comrade at each meeting be assigned to answer questions in order that there may be no confusion. Brahdy, Darcey, Nesin, Chrover, Bentall and Statchel took part in the discussion.

This was the first attempt to get available speakers together for a conference, and Statchel expressed satisfaction with the fine turnout and promised that fifteen or twenty more would be present at the next meeting, which will take place at 2 p. m. next Saturday.

Comrade Wolfe proved to be a splendid director and a keen analyst of the situation and created much enthusiasm among the comrades who have volunteered their services as speakers in the campaign. New bulletins will be published for the speakers with data and directions so that the campaign may be carried on in a systematic and effective manner.

A spirit of fine co-operation pervaded the entire conference, and this force of twenty-five, to be augmented by approximately as many more, will present a fighting strength that will challenge capitalism and arouse the workers to greater struggle in their battle for the overthrow of the present robber system and the setting up of a workers' republic.

The Workers Party in Action

Bolshevik Reorganization

ARTICLE VII.
By ROBERT MINOR

THE reorganization of the Workers Party constitutes a change from the organizational basis of the old American socialist party to the organizational basis on which the Russian Communist Party is built.

The present structural form of our party is basically the same as that of the old socialist party. The basic unit is the branch composed of those members speaking the same language and residing within the same general residence neighborhood. The peculiarity of the residence basis of organization is two-fold:

1. It conforms to the basis of the parliamentary elections.

2. It (the structural form) has no relation to the proletarian class nature of the party.

The present form of our organization is more or less sufficient to participate in the elections—without any particular attention to the question of class lines. The division into 18 language sections is good for purposes of abstract educational activities and social entertainments. The whole form was evolved in a certain historical period to meet what were then conceived to be the needs of the working class party.

This organizational form was and remains in accord with the political theories of the socialist party. Education would bring the working class (and the petty bourgeoisie) to a belief in socialism, and the parliamentary elections would bring the co-operative commonwealth into existence. Political conditions in which the American and Western European parties grew up (legal existence, "democratic" forms, the franchise, etc.) led to the development of the type of party conforming to the political system of the capitalist state.

Different political conditions in which the Russian party developed (the prohibition of all working class gether every day in the factory at their employment. The formation of the working class revolutionary party in Russia inevitably took the outline of the workshop as the outline of the basic unit of the party—the shop nucleus.

Necessity had brought the Russian party to the best type of organization, while the rest of the parties lagged behind with an inferior form.

THE development of history in this period of the decay of capitalist organization, lack of political franchise, etc.) led to a different basis of organization. Workers could not hold meetings in public halls; yet the same workers were of necessity drawn to "democratic" institutions and of the proletarian revolution, has created in all industrial countries of the world the essential conditions which now compel the reorganization of all sections of the revolutionary party in the higher form, on the basis of shop nuclei.

It is not a question of exact copying of the detail of a party form which evolved in another country at another time, not the blind effort to do something only because our Russian comrades did it. The reasons compelling the adoption of the shop nucleus form are as compelling for America today as the somewhat different reasons were for the Russians. The Russian experience produced a form of organization which present circumstances prove to be necessary for the American party. (Also for all of the other sections of the International.) In this period it becomes glaringly clear that an organizational structure which serves only for abstract educational activities, for assembling mass meetings in a ponderous and haphazard way, and for participation in elections according to forms laid down by the capitalist state, is not a structure which can constitute itself the leading organ of the proletarian revolution. A party structure which is not, and in its present form cannot be, centralized, and which is therefore, incapable of immediate mobilization for specific tasks, incapable of discipline, incapable of homogeneous ideology, is utterly inadequate.

Our party, no matter what its program and ideology, is structurally an imitation of a social-democratic party

THE proletariat does not derive its strength solely from its numbers. It is thru concentration in the factories that the revolutionary capacities of the working class are brot to their highest point. The proletariat has not always existed. It is a distinct product of modern conditions of production. Marx wrote in the Communist Manifesto: "Masses of laborers, crowded into the factory, are organized like soldiers." (Organized for production, by the capitalists.) The isolated sheep herder on a lonely hill top may work for "wages," but he and his unknown fellows are not the proletarians who will lead the revolution. Only when the sons of former independent artisans and peasants (and even of ruined petty bourgeois) are rooted out of their former condition, drawn into modern industry where they can live only thru the sale of their labor power, it is only then that we have a working class. "But not only has the bourgeoisie forged the weapons that bring death to itself; it has also called into existence the men who are to wield those weapons—the modern working class—the proletarians."

In the Communist Manifesto, Marx also speaks of "This organization of the proletarians into a class, and consequently into a political party."

The capacity of the workers to form their revolutionary party arises out of their concentration in modern large industry. It is not strange that a revolutionary party whose structure is built in almost complete disregard of the lines of concentration of the working class—built in fact, in structural imitation of the democratic parties of a previous revolutionary class, the bourgeoisie—should be unable to constitute itself the leader of the working class in the period of proletarian revolution. In this period the Communist Party must shift to the basis which conforms to the lines of concentration of the working class.

IF the reorganization of the party were undertaken with the idea that it is a "purely organizational matter," the reorganization would be a complete failure. No mechanical change can Bolshevize a party. A menshevik party could also exist on the basis, mechanically, of shop nuclei.

But the shop nucleus system lays the basis upon which the political Bolshevization of the party becomes possible. The structural reorganization must be conceived as a part of the process of political transformation of the party.

Correctly conceived and executed, the reorganization to the shop nucleus basis accelerates, and is a part of, a deep-going political change. The C. E. C. deliberately plans that the ideology of the party shall be "reorganized" no less than the party structure. The two tasks are inseparable. The Communist International does not disguise the fact that it seeks deliberately to throw the weight of control of each of its sections into the hands of the Communist workers in the basic industries. This alone gives the basis for a change in the political ideology of the party. One does not have to solve a mystery to know that if there were a party with the Communist name but with its center of gravity among a membership of small merchants, doctors, lawyers and independent artisans, it would not respond to the same ideology as would a party whose major anad dominant composition is of wage workers in large industry. To go a step further, a party whose center of gravity lay in the stratum of highly skilled workers enjoying a standard of living equal to that of the petty bourgeoisie, would not react in exactly the same way as would a party having its center of gravity among a membership who are of the masses of workers in the heavy industries. Of course, the raw, "spontaneous" reaction of the workers of whatever stratum, untouched with Communist training, are not Communism; nor do we mean to slacken in the slightest degree the effort to win the most highly skilled workers to the Communist Party. But the masses of the unprivileged stratum of the working class are the absolutely necessary soil for the taproots of a Communist Party.

The shop nucleus system shifts the center of gravity of the party toward the party membership composed of proletarians in the workshops, particularly those who are concentrated in the heavy industries.

It is not too much to say that this "structural" change constitutes the basis for a political change—the Bolshevization of the party. A flash of light has already been thrown upon this fact by the experience we have had even at this early stage of the beginning of the organization of shop nuclei. When the work had only progressed to an infinitessimal degree (previous to the party convention), we already had a chance to see the different reactions of the shop nuclei as compared to the reactions of the membership in the most typical of the old forms of party units. The overwhelming majority of the shop nuclei reflected the Communist outlook that was to be found in the party, rejecting sectarianism and opportunism alike.

The shop nucleus is not a cure-all. We cannot say of it, as is said of a famous patent medicine, "It works while you sleep." The Bolshevik form of party structure is a powerful instrument only if its is in the hands of energetic, resourceful Bolsheviks, who drive the instrument into effective action.

MANY MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS IN PARTY'S REORGANIZATION DRIVE

The dates of Workers (Communist) Party membership meetings arranged in the party's reorganization campaign are as follows:

District	Date
1. Boston	Sept. 27.
2. New York	Sept. 25.
3. Philadelphia	Sept 26.
4. Buffalo	Oct. 4.
5. Pittsburgh	Sept. 25.
6. Cleveland	Sept. 27.
7. Detroit	Sept. 27.
8. Chicago	Oct. 7.
9. Minneapolis	Sept. 27.
15. Connecticut	Oct. 4.

An organization tour of the western districts is being planned by the C. E. C. Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and other party centers of the west will arrange mass membership meetings to be addressed by a representative of the Central Executive Committee.

CHAUFFEUR TELLS DAILY WORKER HOW CHICAGO YELLOW TAXI CAB COMPANY DRIVES ITS DRIVERS

The following letter was received from a Yellow Taxi Cab driver not a member of the Workers Party. He requests us to publish it in the DAILY WORKER for the information of our readers.

The Letter

To the DAILY WORKER: I am one of the many thousands that have been in the employ of the Yellow Cab Co. of Chicago as a driver and find from my experiences that they are the cheapest and rottenest in this line of business. They have the largest labor turn over of any company here as their average pay is about $20 a week for six long days of abuse. A driver is required to have two licences, state and city, uniforms costing considerable—they are even so cheap, they make the men pay for the gas they burn looking for fares, and it often takes all the tips received in a day. As to salaries, there are none other than the 30 cents on the dollar commission.

If the people of Chicago knew the truth they would surely steer clear of the Yellow cabs. The men don't stay long enuf to make competent chauffeurs. The majority are taught by the company school which means merely breaking them in on the street. After a few days they are ready for work.

They employ a slugging crew whose job is to slug drivers from other companies. They act as tho they own the streets because they stand in with the right politicians. They maintain they own the court of justice and it is a common occurrance for them to beat up drivers so bad that they require hospital attention. They also employ stool pigeons which are known as canaries who receive $5 per week for their dirty work.

I am sending this letter to the only true workers paper in Chicago for the information of the workers so that when they read Yellow Cab ads in the paid press they will know what the job offers for them.

Yours for workers solidarity.

300 SLOVENIAN DELEGATES HEAR COMMUNIST TALK

Ruthenberg Outlines the Party's Program

WAUKEGAN, Sept. 23.—The greater part of the 300 delegates who are here for the national convention of the Slovenian National Benefit Society attended a mass meeting addressed by C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the Workers Party, at which the Communists' achievements in Russia and the Communist program in the United States was outlined.

The meeting was arranged by the Communist fraction in the Slovenian National Benefit Society convention, working under the direction of the South Slavic section of the Workers Party.

The subject of Comrade Ruthenberg's speech was "America and Russia Today." The speaker contrasted America's boasted "democracy" with the workers' democracy which exists in Russia today and showed how the workers in the factories elect their representatives to the Soviets and that these representatives are in close contact with the workers whose interests they are to defend and must continually report to them. This was contrasted with the sham democracy of the United States which really, as the speaker declared, was a mask for the dictatorship of the capitalists.

"The Russian workers and peasants," the speaker declared, "have the highest form of democracy that has ever existed—workers' democracy expressing itself as a dictatorship of the proletariat."

The speaker then turned to the situation in Russian industry where the workers, thru the trade unions and thru their factory committees have a voice in all phases of management, direction, hours of work and wages.

Czars of American Industry

"In American industry we still have the rule of the czars and kaisers of industry who hire and fire at will. The czars of industry dictate the wages and working conditions. The Russian workers are no longer subject to the whims of exploiters. They have won their rights in industry. They are not fired or laid off at the will of a boss. Thru their industrial trade unions and thru their factory committees they have achieved a position of equality in industry."

The speaker showed that the victories of the Russian workers has been won thru the Communist Party of Russia. It was the Communist Party that stood in the forefront of the struggle at the point of danger which led the workers to victory and was leading the workers in the building of a social system in Russia.

Contrasting Russia under the leadership of the Communist Party with Germany, where the socialists had the opportunity to take power in 1918, Comrade Ruthenberg showed the betrayals of the socialist party leaders "The socialist party produced a Noske to shoot down the revolutionary workers and to murder Luxemburg and Liebknecht. The socialist policies in Germany have had the net results for the workers in the election of Hindenburg in the last presidential election."

Ask Questions

A lively debate followed the meeting. Many questions were asked. Delegate Kobe of Duluth wanted to know what program the Workers (Communist) Party had to unite the workers in their struggles against capitalism, to which Comrade Ruthenberg replied that the Workers (Communist) Party had persistently fought for a united front of the workers in their immediate struggles. He pointed to the labor party as the means of uniting the workers for the fight against capitalism and to develop class consciousness and a class struggle against capitalism.

At the close of the meeting a collection of $37.81 was taken up for the DAILY WORKER.

This mass meeting which was attended by the great part of the delegates to the convention is expected to have its results in relation to the debate on resolutions before the convention for recognition of Soviet Russia, for endorsement of the formation of a labor party, endorsement of the International Labor Defense.

The Slovenian Benefit Society has in the past been officially on record as supporting the socialist party. One of the resolutions proposed by the Communist fraction points out the betrayal of the workers by the socialist party. It call for the endorsement of the Communist International on an international scale and support of the Workers (Communist) Party in the United States. The convention is expected to last at least another week before it finishes its business.

SPECIAL MEETING OF RUSSIAN BRANCH TONIGHT, SEPT. 24

A special meeting of the Russian branch of the Workers Party will be held Thursday, Sept. 24, at 8 p. m., at 1902 W. Division St. The reorganization of the party will be discussed.

WORKERS PARTY OF TOLEDO CALLS FOR UNITED FRONT OF WORKING CLASS PARTIES IN CITY CAMPAIGN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 23.—A special committee elected at the last meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party of Toledo, sent a letter to Thomas Devine, socialist candidate for mayor, calling for a united front of all working class organizations, on a program which included organization of a labor party, recognition of Soviet Russia, release of class war prisoners, and workers' control of public utilities. The letter is given in full below:

"The Workers (Communist) Party at its last regular meeting appointed a committee to take up the political situation confronting the workers of Toledo in the present muncipal election.

"After a careful analysis of the conditions, we find that the only candidates in the field representing the interests of labor are the socialist and the Communist.

"We believe that you as a socialist and a candidate for the office of mayor, will appreciate the necessity of a united front campaign of our forces.

"The committee feels that it should not be a very difficult task for us to find a common ground to unite on in this campaign. As a basis for negotiation, the committee offers the following program for your consideration:

Labor Party.

"1. The organization of a labor party for Toledo, to be formed of the labor unions and all workers' political and fraternal organizations.

"2. We shall lend every aid to strengthening union labor, to organize the unorganized regardless of race, color, or creed.

"3. We stand for the elimination of all child labor. In order that workers may send their children to school instead of the shops, we demand full maintenance for all workers' children attending school.

Demand Soviet Recognition.

"4. Unemployment is created by capitalism and the unemployed workers are then used to lower the wages of the employed. We demand work or full union wages for all unemployed so as to increase the standard of living of all workers.

"5. We demand the abolition of the injunction in all labor disputes and that the police and militia shall be used to assist the workers to get a better living instead of assisting the capitalists to rob the workers.

"6. We demand the release of all workers still imprisoned for their political beliefs or their activity in behalf of the workers.

"7. We demand the recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States, and also demand the establishment of trade relations with Soviet Russia.

"8. We demand municipal ownership of all public utilities with workers' control.

United Front Action.

"You no doubt understand that both organizations disagree fundamentally in principle, and would reserve the right to criticise, but that should not serve as a barrier to united action at the polls.

"The Workers (Commnist) Party would appreciate an early reply as to what extent you agree with the above proposition, and hopes that a conference may be arranged in the very near future."

SUPPORT TO ENEMIES OF SOVIET MUST CEASE, PRISONERS HUMANELY TREATED, SAY GERMAN DELEGATES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 23.—The German workers' delegation to Soviet Russia has addressed a manifesto to the Soviet Union and the Second International, declaring that the Soviet treatment of political prisoners is humane, and calling on the Second International to reply to the notes from the Soviet Union.

The statement follows:

"During its stay in Soviet Russia, the German delegation visited a number of prisons. During these visits the delegation paid special attention to the political prisoners, especially in Georgia. The delegation has come to the conclusion that the treatment of prisoners is humane. The delegation is fully aware that political offenses committed in a state where the power is practically in the hands of the working class, deserve to be judged differently from similar offenses committed in capitalist states.

"Everyone participating in measures directed against Soviet Russia or supporting them is thereby supporting the greatest enemies of Soviet Russia—the capitalists. Whether he does this consciously or unconsciously is immaterial. In both cases the result is the same.

Demand Liberation of German Workers.

"However, the German workers' delegation is of the opinion that some sort of steps should be taken in the question of political prisoners. For several months there has been a movement in Germany on behalf of political prisoners. This movement must at all costs produce good results.

"The delegation has come to the unanimous decision to approach the German trade unions and the party closely connected with the proposal to make the German government liberate all political prisoners. We therefore also approach the Soviet government with the question: Is it willing, on the strength of the manifesto addressed by the I. R. A. to the Second International, to which, unfortunately, no reply has yet been received, to express its readiness to effect an exchange of political prisoners, provided the Second International accepts the conditions put forward by the I. R. A.? The main questions mentioned in this manifesto can be formulated as follows:

Exchange of Prisoners Sought.

"Firstly, the fate of the political prisoners in all countries should be decided on the basis of mutual agreement. The I. R. A. makes itself responsible to obtain the consent of the Soviet government for the exchange of political prisoners. At the same time the Second International must make itself responsible to bring pressure to bear on all governments in which its members participate, in order that the exchange should take place on a mutual basis.

"Secondly, in the event of the acceptance of the above mentioned proposal both sides undertake to exchange notes about the position of political prisoners and to take further steps in the direction of mutual assistance to these prisoners.

"The First German Workers' Delegation: (Signed) Freiberger, Hansbeck, G. Meile, Arthur Leckert, Thomas Staudt, Edward Marro, Willie Benevitz.."

OUR DAILY PATTERNS

FROCK WITH SEPARATE APRON

4958. Here is a very practical apron frock—one that may be easily developed, and that is suitable for a wash materials. It is supplied with a separate removable apron portion, which may be of self or contrasting material.

This pattern is cut in seven sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38-inch size requires 3¼ yards of 36-inch check or plaid material, with 1¾ yard of plain material for the apron if made as illustrated. If frock and apron are made of one material 4½ yards will be required. The width of the frock at the foot is 1¾.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

ROMPERS STYLE.

5067. This design has the bloomers and smock cut in one piece, as the accompanying diagram shows. The sleeves may be omitted. One could develop this pretty model in pongee, repp or chambrey. Embroidery, braid or stitchery will form a suitable decoration.

The Pattern is cut in 4 Sizes: 1, 2, 3 and 4 years. A 2 year size requires 2 yards of 36 inch material.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

NOTICE TO PATTERN BUYERS—The patterns being sold thru the DAILY WORKER pattern department are furnished by a New York firm of pattern manufacturers. Orders are forwarded by the DAILY WORKER every day as received, and they are mailed by the manufacturer direct to the customer. The DAILY WORKER does not keep a stock of patterns on hand. Delivery of patterns ordinarily will take at least 10 days from the date of mailing the order. Do not become impatient if your pattern is delayed.

FASHION BOOK NOTICE!

PREPARE FOR DISTRICT CONVENTION OF YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23—The Second District Convention of the Young Workers' League of New York will mark a new stage in the history of the revolutionary youth movement in this city and the comrades in New York are making elaborate preparations to greet this convention in the proper way.

This Saturday evening, Sept. 2, there has been arranged a grand banquet in honor of the Second District Convention of the New York district. This banquet will take place at the Freiheit Gesangs Ferein Hall, 133 Second Ave., New York City. The preparations that are being made for this convention give good promise for making it worthy of the occasion.

Of course every member of the Y. W. L. and its sympathizers in the New York District will want to be present. All of the revolutionary youth of this city will rally to the call of the Y. W. L. and come to welcome its Second District Convention.

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 23.—Religion, as has always been the case, is also today a paying proposition. If you want to have a nice comfortable home, a sporty little car, and if you are of a roving disposition, fond of wandering into Europe and other continents occasionally, just join the ecclesiastical order of Rome and be assured that all your desires along this line will be gratified.

Just recently, in the September 17, 1925, issue, of the Catholic Observer, a priestly controlled organ in the vicinity of Pittsburgh, carried items to the effect that Rev. Charles Doyle, of the St, Peters church of Fairmont, W. Va., is spending the summer months in visiting the different countries of Europe, and that Jeremiah O'Connell of the vicinity of Wheeling has just returned from a trip to Europe. It stated that they both had delightful times. Without doubt they did! Has there ever been a time when a person didn't have a delightful time on somebody else's money?

Even tho the parishes may be burdened with debt and the poor, unsuspecting working people giving their last cent to the church—money which they need badly enuf for proper food for themselves—it seems that the priest always does manage somehow or other to scrape up enuf to have a royal time in Europe.

Take for instance this city. The debt on the catholic church and school is enormous. The bulk of the parishoners are poor working people having a blinding trust in the church and doing all in their power to insure its autocracy, yet within the last few years the priest managed to make two European trips, lives in one of the best homes in the city, and has a nice little car.

And yet in spite of all this they try to tell us that religion demands that you deprive yourself of the fleshpots of the world. Yes, indeed, religion is a paying proposition—but not for the working class.

UTAH UNIONS FIGHT ILLEGAL EXPULSION PLAN

Labor Party Loses in Federation Meet

By M. P. BALES

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 23.—The 21st annual convention of the Utah State Federation of Labor has just adjourned with the conservatives in control by a slight majority.

A. P. Goodmansen, conservative member of the Typographical Union No. 115 was elected president, and F. G. West, fairly progressive member of Barbers Local 377, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. The first vice-president, Con D. Silva, Meat Cutters of Ogden, is a real progressive and can be depended on to stir things up occasionally.

Big Fight on Disruptive Expulsions

The big fight of the convention was on resolution No. 7 which condemned the growing tendency of the trade union officialdom to expel bona-fide members without due trial and strict compliance with their constitutions and by-laws governing expulsions.

It also cited the fact that these expulsions were usually justified on the grounds of the expelled member being a member of a radical political party. This seemed somehow to smack of Moscow gold.

One delegate demanded to know what "lay back" of this resolution. Your correspondent then took the floor and made a lengthy talk outlining the left wing program.

Tabled By Tricky Talker

The resolution after nearly two hours debate was finally disposed of by a parliamentary ruse of A. P. Goodmansen who declared that while this might be a meritorious matter it was taking up too much time of the convention and he therefore moved to table it. This motion carried 19 to 15.

Labor Party Voted Down

The specter of Communism again hovered over the convention when resolution No. 17 calling upon the federation to issue an invitation to all State Federations and city central bodies to meet and lay the foundation for an American labor party was reported back to the federation with the unanimous concurrence of the resolutions committee.

The Salt Lake Tribune reported that "this was suspected of being another move of the Communists and was promptly voted down by the delegates." It was by a small majority.

One Left Motion Carried

Resolutions No. 16, which was copied almost verbatim from Foster's article in the September Workers Monthly condemning company unions, was the only resolution from the left wing that got over. It carried unanimously.

Ogden got control of the executive council when W. M. Piggott was elected 7th vice-president giving them five members of the council to Salt Lake's 4. Something may come of this as the 1st vice-president Con Silva of Ogden, is a militant.

The balance of the resolutions and actions of the convention pertained to inspection of meats, prison-made goods, legislation, etc.

Next year's convention will be held on the 2nd Monday in Sept., 1926, at Salt Lake City, Utah in the Labor Temple.

HAS WONDER-WORKING RADIUM ANSWERED THE PYORRHEA RIDDLE?

Will Mysterious, Marvelous Radium check and eradicate PYORRHEA? Will it kill germs causing diseased gum conditions? Will it heal gums? Will it save teeth? Many former PYORRHEA sufferers say that it does!

Would you protect yourself from internal poisoning resulting from hidden wells of poison in the mouth, from absorbtion of germs into blood from diseased gum conditions, called PYORRHEA? Would you avoid or are you weary of loose, wobbly teeth? Would you save those precious teeth?

Then end your PYORRHEA! How? Use PYRADIUM, the Preparation containing Genuine, Mysterious, Wonder-working, Precious RADIUM, costing over two and a half million dollars per ounce! Powerful RADIUM, combined by Chemist with proven Antiseptic and Germicidal Agents in sufficient quantity and strength to kill germs causing Pyorrhetic conditions, heal gums, and yet not harm healthy tissue!

PYRADIUM is used simply as a Mouth Wash! Its Action is rapid! However, the services of the dentist are required to scale tartar from teeth, correct mechanical defects, and irrigate pus pockets which must be done with any treatment of Pyorrhea if permanent relief is to be effected.

Numerous testimonials from former PYORRHEA victims tell of the remarkable results of PYRADIUM treatment—furnished upon request.

PYRADUM is sold under a "Money Back" guarantee! Price $2.50. Ask your Druggist! If he does not handle, order direct from Laboratory, sending druggist's name—send money order or say C. O. D.! "PEOPLE FIT ONLY TO WORK," A PRODUCT OF MILL TOWNS WHERE EDUCATION YIELDS TO PROFITS

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Popular education is ladled out in the cotton mill towns of the south in just such quantities as are necessary to meet the demands of the masters for a cheap labor supply. This is shown in a series of articles on "Why Cotton Mills Have Been Moving South," prepared by R. W. Edmonds for the Boston News Bureau and Wall Street Journal. The series is evidently written to counteract recent unfavorable comment on the semi-feudal conditions of the industrial south.

Education If Expedient.

The prime interest of the mill owners is an adequate reserve supply of native labor. If it is shown, says Edmonds, "that educational efforts are actually cutting the mills off from a future supply of their highly satisfactory native help there will be a curtailment of educational effort in some quarters.

"It is useless to talk about duty to, and the rights of the helpless mill people; southern mill men are like other business men, and the majority will not deliberately pursue a course they believe to be harmful to their personal interests. On the other hand if it can be shown that the educational efforts are not likely ever to cause a serious shortage of mill-village bred boys and girls the work will be continued with increasing enthusiasm."

Dividends First.

Southern mill executives, according to Edmonds, "are business men looking primarily for dividends from their mills, and they will not indulge in social service work if they are convinced it cuts too deeply into dividends."

Some mills are evidently experimenting to see how far they can profit from the increased efficiency due to education without going so far as cause the young people to leave the mill towns for wider opportunity. A leading mill is shown as having recently debated whether to add 8th and 9th grades to their schools. Some directors objected. But when a survey showed, "that 75 per cent of all those who were graduated from their schools in the past 5 years were in the mills, and that they were from 60 per cent to 75 per cent more efficient than those who had not finished the school course, it was decided to add the two additional grades."

"People Fit Only to Work."

The author's observation is that these mill villages will always tend to produce an adequate supply of mediocre people fit only to work in the mills. The proportion graduating from the schools is always small, the majority dropping out in the 4th or 5th grades and another large group in the 8th grade. Practically all of these enter the mills. The abler ones who go on to graduate from high school or college do not return to the mills. Says Edmonds:

"No mill can hope to retain many of its most capable youths or girls, for the largest mill has only one superintendent and seven overseers and few other positions attractive to ambitious and capable men. The result will always be that the majority of the most intelligent and capable ones will leave the mill village while the ones left behind to reproduce in the village will be the less capable and less ambitious; and on the whole their progeny will be like them."

This, he thinks, will be the rule as long as the mills of the south continue to maintain villages.

BARBERS LOSE MOST OF WHAT THEY DEMANDED

But They Are Talked Into Accepting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 22.—The strike of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union, Local 900, which began Sept. 1, ended Saturday afternoon with what the strikers said was a victory, although the Master Barbers' Association, the employers' organization, did not grant all their demands.

The employers, at a meeting Thursday night, mapped out their program and reported just what concessions they would give. The union men met yesterday at Leslie Hall, Eighty-third Street and Broadway, and voted to accept the employers' proposals. The agreement was signed and the barbers returned to their shops.

Although the barbers demanded a day off each week and a shorter working day, they accepted an 8 a. m. to 8 p .m. day (instead of 8:30 a. m. as heretofore) on all days except Saturdays and Sundays, which remain as they were. They also accepted the old day off in two weeks arrangement. On Saturdays they will work until 9 p. m., and on Sundays until 1 p. m.

Under the new wage arrangement they will receive $30 a week, as wages, and "split fifty fifty with the bosses" all earnings weekly above $45.

BRITISH UNIONS FACE TO LEFT!

The British labor movement is "turning to the left." What makes it turn? You will not know unless you read the article by Carl Brannin in Friday's DAILY WORKER. Brannin's article gives you a close up on the National Minority Movement within the British trade unions. Don't miss Friday's DAILY WORKER.

FRANKLIN UNION TO AMALGAMATE WITH PRESSMEN

More Aggressive Union Is Plan

Unity between the Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3, and the Franklin Union No. 4, is nearing attainment. This move was accelerated by the revocation of the charter of the Pressmen's Union and the attempt by Berry to smash the pressmen's and feeders' union in the Cuneo, Sears-Roebuck plant.

The following petition is being circulated among the members of Franklin No. 4:

"Petition to Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3, by members of Franklin Union No. 4.

"We, the undersigned members of the Franklin Union No. 4, hereby petition the officers and members of Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3, to consider our request that you take us into your organization in order to mutually protect the interest of both the assistant's and pressmen, for the following reasons:

"1.—Being united in one organization, we can present a solid front to any force which tries to impose unreasonable conditions on us.

"2.—Under the present conditions, one union is used against the other in trouble.

"If we were united this practice would not prevail.

"3.—The International Union is placing men in the Cuneo Press and the Cuneo Printing corporation regardless of their qualifications as pressmen or assistants, giving them cards, and they are working under police protection, violating all union principles."

This petition to unite the two locals has been signed by over 600 members of the Franklin No. 4, and so far 85 per cent of the workers, in the shops that have been approached have signed the petition.

The executive board of the Printing Pressmen's Union has been considering the question of uniting the two locals for sometime. A special meeting of the membership of the Pressmen's Union is being called for Saturday, to discuss the question of uniting the feeders, pressmen and their assistants.

American Consulate Admits Prying into British Businesses

LONDON, England, Sept. 23.—Altho denying the charge of British manufacturers that the American consulate is engaged in trade espionage for the benefit of U. S. capitalists, the consulate admitted that it had sent out circulars asking a number of firms to supply numerous particulars about their businesses.

The information was wanted "to develop an international directory which is being prepared by the department of commerce at Washington," the consulate said.

The Official Report of the British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia

Albert Purcell, chairman of the British delegation to Russia, is a delegate to the coming convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The question of Russia is sure to become an issue at the convention. It will be widely discussed at local unions. It is ever more a live issue for every worker in and out of the organized labor movement.

Now is the time not only for every worker to secure a copy of this arsenal of facts about Soviet Russia for his own use—

But this is also the time to take the book to your trade union—

To get orders from local unions—

To get it to every person where the question of Russian recognition will be discussed.

Maps and charts—and art work by Fred Ellis, add greater attractiveness and value to the book.

The Boys Are Skeptical

Geneva is skeptical that the league of nations will be or can be able to turn swords into ploughshares or establish a reign of peace upon earth. There is good reason for this skepticism.

Several years have now passed since this league held its first parley. But war is now no more remote than it was when the league of nations dropped the gavel on its first session.

To enumerate the number of respectable wars that have passed, would be superflous and uninteresting. Suffice it to say that every important European power has unsheathed its sabre at will, with the league a grinning spectator.

The league has failed to establish peace. It never meant to establish peace. The league was meant to be a tool of the British empire or of whatever power or combination of powers that was able to use it to further certain aims. If those aims could be accamplished without war so much the better, if not so much the worse for peace.

The capitalists, taken as a whole, don't want war if they can avoid it, but war is as inseparable from capitalism as strikes Granted that the lying diplomats who meet occasionally at Geneva were not liars, but honest men who wanted to abolish war, nevertheless, the conflicting interests of the capitalist powers make peace impossible, just as the conflicting interests of the workers and capitalists make industrial peace inside a nation impossible no matter how much class collaboration bunk is indulged in by the capitalists and their labor lieutenants.

A correspondent cabling from Geneva expresses his thoughts in the following terse manner: "No nation will disarm unless it feels that its safety will be insured by some other means." That is the crucial point. What other means?

The fact of the matter is that the capitalist powers of the world can be compared to a gang of robbers who sometimes make alliances against each other. Those alliances last just so long as they serve the interests of the contracting parties. When they outlive their usefulness they are ditched. Treaties are not sacred under the capitalist system. Nothing is sacred but profits, and every capitalist in the world is willing to unleash the dogs of war and cause untold misery in order to make profits.

Peace conferences, disarmament conferences! So long as capitalism exists there can be no peace. Under capitalism when the robbers are not quarreling among themselves, they are grinding the lives of the workers into dollars. They are doing that all the time.

It is an axiom that revolution only takes place when the cost of obedience is no greater than the cost of rebellion. When that point is reached, a war takes place that the capitalist buzzards in Geneva do not relish.

Communists are accused of being bloodthirsty because they declare that the capitalist class will not surrender their power without a struggle; that it is more than probable that the struggle which will transfer political power from the capitalists to the workers will be accompanied by a few broken ribs, at least. But in England, the cradle land of democracy, the classic land of parliamentarism, the burning issue today in the labor movement is, whether the workers shall arm and fight for their emancipation, or whether they shall allow themselves to be slaughtered by the jannisaries of capitalism.

Let the workers not be fooled by this peace bunk. The capitalists are not idiots. They know well they cannot have peace. Their various peace conferences are ruses to fool each other and mentally disarm the working class.

Mellon Quits Rum Business

There is nobody so wicked that he cannot be induced to walk the straight and narrow path. It is true that there are disappointments, like, for instance, Joseph (Yellow Kid) Weil, the noted Chicago confidence man, who cannot help relieving friends of their spare cash, no matter how many times he endeavors to repent. But he keeps on trying and who knows but he may yet become the treasurer of a bank?

There is Andrew Mellon for example. His friends call him Andy. Therefore we shall call him Andy. When he became secretary of the treasury he owned a thriving whiskey distilling business. Even tho Volstead had done his arid worst, the drop that cheers still trickled from the pipes in Andy's booze foundry, in Pittsburgh.

Andy as secretary of the treasury, was charged with the responsibility of enforcing the provisions of the prohibition clauses of the Volstead law. But he was so darned busy that he forgot all about his own distillery. People began to get suspicious.

They always do. Then like a bolt from the blue came the announcement that Andy remembered that he was violating the Volstead law and like a law abiding citizen, he sold out his booze at a handsome profit. After all he is an American!

More Troublesome Than Ever.

As we pointed out when the news of Saklatvala's exclusion from the United States by a state department order, was made public, the Hindu Communist is making a great deal more trouble for the capitalist system, than he would had the government met him at the Battery in New York with a brass band and a reception committee.

The New York Times spent hundreds of dollars on cable tolls which carried Saklatvala's revolutionary words across the Atlantic to decorate the front page of America's leading conservative newspaper. And the Times did this not because of any love for Communism or the Hindu masses but simply because it is in the business of furnishing news and it wants to be ahead of its competitors. It is safe to predict that had Saklatvala been allowed entrance here without any advertising such as Kellogg's action has given him, the few words of his that might be noticed by the capitalist press would be buried among the pawn shop and second hand furniture ads.

"Those whom the gods wish to destroy, they first make mad," is an old saying, but when those whom the gods wish to destroy are as stupid as Cal and Kellogg, the gods have an easy task.

"The country that is more developed industrially only shows, to the less developed, the image of its own future."—Marx.

On the Revolutionary Movement in the East

By I. STALIN.

In the following article we publish Comrade Stalin's answers to the questions of the Moscow correspondent of the Japanese paper, Nishi-Nishi. We also give verbatim the questions of the correspondent.—Ed.

FIRST question. The Japanese people, the most advanced among the peoples of the east, is the one which is most intrested in the movement for freedom of the eastern people. The Japanese people would gladly become the ally of the Soviet Union in this great cause, the cause of the liberation of the oppressed peoples of the east from the yoke of the western powers. Nevertheless Japan, which is after all a capitalist state, must sometimes act in opposition to this movement and make one front with the western powers. (For instance the Anglo-Japanese alliance in consequence of which Japan must support England in its struggle against the insurgents in India, and the common action of Japan with England, America and France against the Chinese workers in connection with the recent events in Shanghai.)

What in your opinion, is the way of escape from this complicated situation of the contradiction between the national ambitions of the Japanese people and the public and social order of the Japanese state?

Answer to the first question. It is true that the Japanese people are the most advanced of the eastern peoples, and that it is interested in the success of the movement for the liberation of the oppressed peoples. The alliance of the Japanese people with the peoples of the Soviet Union would mean a decisive step in the cause of the liberation of the eastern peoples. Such an alliance would mean the beginning of the end of world imperialism. Such an alliance would be invincible.

It is however at the same time true that the political and social order of Japan drives the Japanese people into the path of imperialism, and makes it an instrument not of liberation but of the enslavement of the eastern peoples.

You ask where a way of escape can be found from this contradiction between the interests of the Japanese people and the political social order of Japan.

There is only one way of escape: the political and social order of Japan must be adapted to the fundamental interests of the Japanese people.

Russia was at one time the terror of eastern peoples, the gendarme of any movement for freedom. How can the fact be explained that it has changed from a gendarme of movements for liberation into a friend and standard-bearer of this movement? Only thru the fact that the political and social order of Russia has been changed.

SECOND question. The eastern peoples who inhabit the territory of Soviet Russia, are many centuries behind in their development, in consequence of the despotic regime of czarism, and only since the revolution have they received the right of independent development of their industry, their agriculture, their culture, etc.

How many years will these peoples of the Soviet Union, in your opinion, require to reach the cultural level of the other peoples of the Soviet Union?

Answer to the second question. You ask about how many years the eastern peoples of the Soviet Union will require to reach the cultural level of the other peoples of the Soviet Union.

It is difficult to say. The rapidity of the cultural development of these peoples depends on many internal and external conditions. I must once for all remark that the prognosis with regard to the rapidity of development has never been distinguished by accuracy, especially when it is a question of "how many years." The most essential facilitation for the cultural development of these peoples lies in the fact that the chief obstacles to development have already been removed, such for instance as czarism, Russian imperialism and the regime of the exploitation of the border territories by the center. This fact gives the cultural development of the eastern peoples of the Soviet Union a tremendous impulse. But to what extent this essential furtherance is utilized, depends on the eastern peoples themselves, and above all on the stage of cultural development at which they were when the Soviet revolution broke out.

One thing however can be said without hesitation; under the present-day conditions of development, the eastern peoples of the Soviet Union have much more prospect of a rapid and all-round development of their national culture, than would have been possible under the rule of even the most liberal and cultured capitalism.

THIRD question. You say that the union of the national movement for freedom of the subjugated peoples of the east with the proletarian movement with the advanced countries of the west, insures the world revolution. In our country, among the Japanese people, the slogan is popular: "Asia for the Asiatics!" Do you not find that there is something in common between our endeavors and your revoltuionary tactics with regard to the colonial countries of the east?

Answer to the third question. You ask whether there is not something in common between the slogan "Asia for the Asiatics!" and the revolutionary countries of the east.

Insofar as the slogan: "Asia for the Asiatics!" means a call to revolutionary war against the imperialism of the west, insofar—but only insofar—there is without doubt something in common.

The slogan "Asia for the Asiatics!" does not however merely refer to this side of the question. It contains two other component parts which are absolutely irreconcilable with the tactics of the Bolsheviki. In the first place this slogan begs the question of eastern imperialism as tho it were the opinion that eastern imperialism is better than western and that war against eastern imperialism could be left out of the question. Secondly, this slogan inspires workers of Asia with a feeling of mistrust for the workers of Europe, enstranges the Asiatic and the European workers from one another, undermines the international connections between them and thus undermines the foundations of the movement for freedom themselves.

The revolutionary tactics of the Bolsheviki are directed not only against westtern imperialism, but against imperialism as a whole, including eastern imperialism. Its aim is not that of weakening international connections between the workers of Asia and the workers of other countries, but in strengthening and extending these connections.

Thus, as you see, besides there being certain things in common, there are also fundamental differences between the slogan "Asia for the Asiatics!" and the Bolshevik tactics in the east.

FOURTH question. In 1920, Lenin in a discussion with me, answered my question as to where Communism had more prospect of success, in the east or in the west, as follows: "Real Communism can only be victorious in the west. The whole west however lives at the expense of the east; the European capitalist powers enrich themselves chiefly in the eastern colonies, but at the same time they arm their colonies, teach them the art of war and thus the west is digging its own grave in the east."

Do you believe that the events which are following more and more closely on one another in China, India, Persia, Egypt and other eastern countries, are a sign that the time is near when the western powers will be compelled to lie down in the grave which they have dug for themselves in the east.

Answer to the fourth question. You ask whether I am not of the opinion that the intensification of the revolutionary movement in China, India, Persia, Egypt and other eastern countries is a sign that the time is near when the western powers will lie down in the grave which they have dug for themselves in the east.

Yes, I believe it. The colonial countries are the most important support of imperialism. The revolutionising of this support must undermine imperialism, not only in the sense that imperialism will lose its support, but also in the sense that the revolutionizing of the east will give a decisive impulse to the intensification of the revolutionary crisis in the west. Imperialism, harassed on two sides, by a frontal attack and an assault from the rear, will have to recognize that its death sentence has been passed.

Another Professor Discovers Marx

By H. M. Wicks

MARXISM, until recently a target for the malignant assaults of every nincompoop professor trying to curry favor with the master class, is now coming to be accepted as respectable in certain university circles. It is not unique to find faculty members of colleges and universities embracing a sort of emasculated Marxism and thereby gaining a degree of standing among certain elements of the revolutionary movement.

Of late a book written by a professor who adopts the cognomen, "V. F. Calverton," which, for want of a bettertitle, is called "The Newer Spirit—A Sociological Criticism of Literature" has been attracting attention in revolutionary circles. Some comrades have referred to it in laudatory terms, even to the extent of heralding it is a distinct contribution to Marxism.

A careful reading of the book clearly reveals its superficiality and shallowness and every Marxist will instantly discern that the whole conception of the thing is anti-Marxian. The leitmotif of the book is that that since the literature of various ages is the reflex of the prevailing economic conditions and with the rise of new classes new cultures develop it therefore follows that as the proletariat develops within a bourgeois society a proletarian culture inevitably arises.

MR. Calverton has obviously come in contact with the merest fringe of Marxism. He has learned to repeat certain formulas such as: "Every revolution in ideas is a consequence of a revolution in the social structure that the material conditions have produced." Certainly no Marxist will dispute the soundness of that assertion. But that formula has been the rock upon which all novices in the realm of Marxism have met disaster. Equipped with that quotation many are tempted to create of historical materialism a mechanical monstrosity and proceed to apply it to any and all situations and experiences as one would apply a yard-stick. The author of "The Newer Spirit" applies it to literature in America and makes a number of amazing discoveries. He discovers that as the proletariat develops in this country a proletariat culture also develops. On page 142 of his book he states that Walt Whitman was perhaps the first to voice this new departure in America. Following his analysis of Whitman we are treated to a series of intellectual contortions that conclude with present day writers and we learn that Sherwood Anderson is "the avater of the proletarian movement," that Eugene O'Neal is among the proletarian dramatists, etc.

EVERY American Marxist recognizes Walt Whitman, not as a defender of the proletariat, but as the apostle of bourgeois democracy. Instead of voicing "the aspirations and dreams of the proletariat" he sang paens to the god of middle class equality, vitiated by anarchism. His idea of universal brotherhood was the fetish of bourgeois democracy where all are equal regardless of class. His espousal of freedom in sex life was also bourgeois; poetic apologies for the looseness of the capitalist swine who, as Marx and Engels said in the Manifesto: "not content with having the wives nad daughters of the proletarians at their disposal, not to speak of common prostitutes, take the greatest pleasure in seducing each others' wives." Whitman's place in literature is that of apologist of the American bourgeoisie just emerging from the terrors of Puritanism into the so-called freedom of the machine age.

As to the assertion of Calverton that Sherwood Anderson is the avatar, the incarnation of the proletariat, it is even more ridiculous than his estimation of Whitman. Any Marxist who reads Anderson's books is bound to be impressed with the fact that this novelist deals almost exclusively with the hopeless struggles of the petty bourgeoisie of the small town against the rise of the machine. Prostrate before the machine they rail at their fate. The exception is when he deals in true bourgeois style with the sex struggles of some petty small town legal luminary and his stenographer. Certainly the proletariat is not concerned about the tribulations of such creatures.

OF a piece with the absurdities with which the book abounds is Calverton's classification of Eugene O'Neal with those who display proletarian tendencies in literature. The most talked of drama of this playwright, "The Hairy Ape," depicted the worker as an atavism, a semi-beast from which normal people shrank with horror—a piece of bourgeois sensationalism revolting in the extreme to an intelligent worker. True his dramas deal with what he calls proletarians, but there have been many dramas that deal with the workers. Twenty years ago for instance we used to have at the ten-twenty-thirty theaters such dramas as "Bertha the Beautiful Sewing Machine Girl;" these dramas (?) dealt with proletarians but no dilletante professor arose to hail them as symptomatic of proletarian art and culture. Yet the O'Neal productions are not one whit better dramatically or otherwise. The cheap thriller simply moves from the Bowery to the Times Square district.

SCORES of the most inexcusable blunders abound in the book, such, for instance as is to be found on page 204 where Calverton refers to the pseudo-Marxist and renegade, Enrico Ferri, the Italian criminologist, as having "done more thoro analysis and research into the history of crime than any other contemporary criminologist." Long ago Antonio Labriola exploded the Marxist pretenses of Ferri and every informed Marxist living today knows that even in the field of criminology, Ferri's specialty, he has no standing since the appearance of William Adrian Bonger's monumental work "Criminality and Economic Conditions," a part of which is devoted to the delusions of Ferri.

But the greatest blunder of Colverton and the one that proves him to be an anti-Marxist is his whole conception upon which the book is based—the notion that there can now, or at any later time develop a class culture known as proletarian. Nowhere in all the history of the world has a culture arose voicing the ideology of a class while that class was enslaved. It is only after the class has triumphed over its oppressor and firmly established itself as the ruling class that it has time to create a culture of its own. If, as Leon Trotsky has shown in his masterful work on "Literature and Revolution" this class happens to be that working class and rules only long enuf to reorganize society upon a classless basis, there can be no possibility of a proletariat culture arising. Says Trotsky:

"The formless talk about proletarian culture, in antithesis to bourgeois culture, feeds on the extremely uncritical identification of the historic destinies of the proletariat with that of the bourgeoisie. A shallow and purely liberal method of making analogies of historic forms has nothing in common with Marxism. There is no real analogy between the historic development of the bourgeoisie and of the working class."

SO, Calverton coming in contact with certain Marxian formulae, which he only half understands, rushes into print with a volume that reeks with absurdities of logic, historical inaccuracies, and in order to display his erudition completely forgets the simple formula that every working man learns at the very threshold of Marxism when he studies the role of the proletariat in the revolution:

"Between the capitalist society and the Communist society there ensues a period that can be known as nothing else than the dictatorship of the proletariat."

And the task of the proletariat is not to create a new class and a new class culture, but to annihilate all classes and all class cultures.

This Is a Gem

We have stated many times that the socialist parties of Europe—or wherever else there are any—did not represent even the right wing of the labor movement but the left wing of the bourgeoisie. Now here comes one of the editors of the Milwaukee Leader and clinches the point, even if it is done in a very stupid and incoherent. manner. No better indictment of the socialist international could be written than the following:

> Observers of the international socialist congress in Marseilles say that it gave a comprehensive picture of the mental development in the different sections of the European labor movement.
> The old friction between realistic politics and theoretical guiding lines showed itself this time in the shape of a difference between western and eastern socialists.
> This found expression most drastically in the discussion which led to the adoption of a resolution on the problems of the East.
> In West Europe, where strong socialist parties must share the responsibilities of government, the prevailing sentiment favors reformist policies. In East Europe, where parties reflect the chaos of unsettled and undeveloped capitalism, there is a strong leaning towards methods of direct revolution, partly inspired by Moscow propaganda, partly by fascist counter-revolutions.
> Western Europe has developed a mature capitalism and strong democracies in politics. Eastern Europe is in a state of ferment, economically and politically. To provide a common international policy by means of resolutions is, of course, practically impossible. Even a national socialist party adopts different methods in different geographical sections.
> At Marseilles, for instance, the British labor party adopted reformist ideas in connection with a league of nations based on the Geneva protocol. In problems dealing with Soviet Russia, India and China the same party adopts ideas which savor strongly of left wing tendencies.
> The special problems which each socialist party has to meet in connection with the foreign policies of its government often make it impossible to get any guidance out of the general views laid down in a resolution of the international congress.
> International socialist unity as a practical working arrangement must inevitably remain an ideal rather than a reality under such conditions. The big advanced parties cannot act in any decisive manner without ignoring more or less the temporary interests of the smaller national parties. And these small parties cannot follow the general directions of the international in special phases of their own politics.

THE CHRONICLE, a weekly labor paper published in Cincinnati, comments on what the "great and conservative" British labor leader, Havelock Wilson, has to say about the reds. We need not repeat Wilson's tirades. Briefly, he says the Communists are in the pay of the Soviet government. Well, Wilson is not. He is only in the pay of the British government and particularly in the pay of the shipping interests. The British seamen do not seem to have as much hatred for those "in the pay of the Soviet government" as they have for those who connive with the employers to reduce their wages as Havelock Wilson did.

U. S. S. R. ABOLISHES HOME WORK SYSTEM IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. Sept. 23.—Assignments of home work in arithmetic, spelling, history and geography are forbidden for the pupils in the first nine years of the public schools by order of the commissariat of education in the Soviet republic. Brief essays and reports may be assigned providing they require not more than six hours of work a week and even those are forbidden on evenings preceding holidays.

This change is a radical step forward in the system of education. Among the advantage to be derived from it are: it tends to develop character in each individual child; it tends to eliminate memorizing and craming, its effect upon the child's mind will be to keep it fresh and alert for school life. It is greeted with enthusiasm by the parents as well as the children.

The strong fight for unity and struggle being put up by the Wobblies in Baltimore has captured the local rank and file of the International Seamen's Union, whose officials nationally and locally have been urging them to scab on the M. Demand Admission of Saklatvala!

THE resolution adopted at the big Union Square demonstration in New York City, against the barring of Shapurji Saklatvala, the Communist member of the British parliament, was as follows:

WHEREAS, Secretary of State Kellogg has instructed the London consul general to revoke the visa granted to Shapurji Saklatvala, a member of the English parliament representing the organized labor movement of that country at the interparliamentary union at Washington; and

WHEREAS, Shapurji Saklatvala has carried on a valiant struggle on behalf of the exploited mass against English imperialism in the Far East, in China, Egypt, and particularly in India and Ireland; therefore be it

RESOLVED, by the joint demonstration meeting at Union Square, New York City, Sept. 21, that we vigorously protest the action of the secretary of state in excluding Shapurji Saklatvala as an act hostile to the interests of the organized labor movement of the world, as an act of unauthorized and unjustifiable discrimination against the foreign-born workers and as a high-handed attempt to limit the freedom of speech in the United States; and be it further

British Labor Has Revolutionary Minority

ALL EYES ON BRITISH LABOR AS IT DISCUSSES—"SHALL WE ARM?"

"THE class struggle in sharpening"—such is the hackneyed phrase used over and over again in the case of this or that strike or minor social disturbance symptomatic of the conflict raging between the proletariat and the bourgeoisie. But when we say that in England today "The class struggle is sharpening," we mean that a general revolutionary situation appears to be developing in which the bourgeoisie as a class and the proletariat as a class are both preparing for a gigantic collision.

Nothing could indicate more clearly the profound nature of the conflict than the fact that the outstanding discussion in every British labor union circle and publication now is over the question, "Should the Workers Arm?"

The following article by Carl Brannin on the conference of the British unions' revolutionary left wing, the National Minority Movement, is a forecast of the actions of tomorrow, for it must be remembered that the Trade Union Congress held later adopted overwhelmingly the spirit if not letter of the proposals of the revolutionary left wing—and the "minority" seems to be in a way of becoming the majority of British labor.—Editor, DAILY WORKER.

By CARL BRANNIN.

THE British government is secretly engaged in enrolling a new police force which will be under direct control of the army. The National Citizens' Union is enlisting volunteers to maintain national services in emergency. The army supplementary reserve which was opposed last March by the general council of the Trade Union Congress, is being pushed forward again. The British fascisti are beginning secret drilling in various industrial centers.

With all these forces aimed at the working class taking form in Great Britain, the second annual conference of the National Minority Movement held in Battersea Town Hall (London) on Aug. 29 and 30, came at a time when some concrete expression was needed on the part of the militant working class element of the British workers.

Prepare for Struggle.

The slogan "Prepare for the coming struggle with the bosses" which cried out from the walls of the hall to the delegates might be taken as the keynote of the conference. The first striking demonstration of this spirit was the action of members of the Battersea Unemployed Workers' Committee movement in stationing themselves as a guard in the hall the night before and the nights of the conference, to frustrate any efforts of fascisti groups to prevent the meeting by placing stink bombs in the auditorium as was done at a previous Minority Movement conference last January.

The last expression of this definite purpose was the adoption of a resolution with only three dissenting votes calling for the formation thru the Trades Councils in every possible district of defense corps to protect workers' meetings, to prevent black-legging and scabbery, to meet the fascisti and hired hoodlums of the bosses with organized force.

"Get Ready"—Says Tom Mann.

Tom Mann, veteran labor militant, chairman of the National Minority Movement and chairman of the convention, made the hall ring with cheers when he declared in his opening speech:

> In the struggle with the mine owners and the miners it is something to be glad of that the miners, backed by trade union solidarity, successfully held up the owners; altho this has secured nothing for the miners we are entitled to be proud of it, because it gave evidence of class solidarity of a kind that only needs to be extended properly to secure much greater results; still we have to ask ourselves are we prepared to meet the opposing forces when the next round begins? We must be frank about it and admit that at present we are not ready. The engineers feel keenly the absence of fully disciplined forces capable of national and international action, and the miners will require a much more highly disciplined regimentation of the organized forces of the workers when the next battle begins. For this we ought to really prepare and that without delay. I feel confident I may say, without a moment's hesitancy, that all present at this conference are fully determined to be prepared.

The real work, however, in the various districts thruout the country will naturally fall to the Trades Councils. In the past Trades Councils have been of very real value to the labor movement, and altho there has been a period of comparative lethargy and neglect in regard to many of the councils, we gladly recognize that a marked improvement is showing itself, and with our continued assistance it will in the immediate future enable them to become of immense value to the movement.

"When the Struggle Comes."

We urge the Trades Councils to at once prepare their forces, visit all the branches of unions, affiliated and others, get in touch with the co-operative guilds and societies, and all the workers' organizations. The joint consultative committee of the general council and of the Trades Council is working to link up the latter with the former, and for ourselves we claim that the Trades Councils shall have the right to send delegates to the Trades Congress, but at this hour, that which is of greatest urgency is to be in readiness to render valuable service in the class struggle, especially when a big dispute is on. Get ready then, you have influence in the councils, use your influence, do the work, set the pace, and when the struggle actually comes we shall not only know what ought to be done, but also know how to do it. A number of the Trade Councils have already set up councils of action and hold themselves in readiness for emergencies.

The forces will be called upon to act as blacklegs and to crush the workers on strike with their bayonets. Always keep in mind—"cold steel." Now, can the movement allow that the fight between millions of workers against a small bunch of exploiters should be converted into a fight between the workers of the factories and the workers in the barracks?

Such a thing should not be allowed to take place. It is our duty to start immediately a big campaign of propaganda among the workers in the army, the navy, and in the air force, in order that they should know the full truth of the matter.

"Let us Make Sure."

Let us make sure that there will not be a single soldier, a single sailor, a single airman who will dare to raise a finger against their brothers.

There are certain indications that the ruling classes themselves are not too much confident of their forces. They feel that at the time of trial the worker in uniform may think more about his brothers than about his chiefs. That is why they are so anxious to create a real class militia which would be devoted to the existing system heart and soul. That is why the fascisti are in a privileged position.

All kinds of prohibitive laws exist for the working class fighters, but not against the fascists. I wish to make it clear that the labor movement does not pay sufficient attention to this new anti-labor force which is growing up before our eyes. Let us take the matter seriously.

We have to organize our forces

SHOP CHAIRMEN DECIDING FATE OF PEACE PLAN

I.L.G.W. Factions Have Tentatively Agreed

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 24.—A proposed plan for peace within the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has been agreed upon tentatively between the leaders of the Joint Action Committee, representing the suspended locals 2, 9 and 22, and the Sigman administration of the International, according to reports of the Joint Action Committee.

Conferences have been going on day and night for the past few days between the left wing locals and the administration. These conferences have been under the direction of the committee chosen by the meeting of shop chairmen at Cooper Union on September 10.

Shop Chairman Decide

The deliberations closed Tuesday night, but the terms of the agreement are not made public until the plan has been ratified not only by the executive boards of the suspended locals, but also by the shop chairmen who appointed the mediation committee.

These shop chairmen are meeting tonight—Thursday, and if these representatives of the rank and file approve the plan, peace will be restored to the I. L. G. W. after 15 weeks of bitter struggle.

Louis Hyman, chairman of the joint action committee, though declining to give any details of the terms tentatively agreed upon, said that he considers the plan a just settlement of the quarrel.

Hyman States Approval of Plan

"We believe the plan if accepted by the shop chairmen, will do away with the policies of our union to which we have had such objection," he said. "It is going to make possible the reforms we have demanded and it will undoubtedly make our union a stronger organization than it has ever been."

The meeting of shop chairmen, since it brings those of both factions together, may be an overflow assemblage. If they adopt the plan, the joint action committee thinks that the fight that has gone on since June 11, when 77 members of the three left wing locals were suspended, will end with distinct gains for the left wing.

BORAH REFUSES TO SPEAK TO INTERPARLIAMENTARY UNION AFTER EXCLUSION OF BRITISH COMMUNIST

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 24.—Senator William E. Borah of Idaho has cancelled an agreement to speak before the interparliamentary union here, as a protest against the exclusion of the Communist Shapurji Saklatvala, who was to attend the union as a delegate from the British house of commons.

Saklatvala was barred from the United States and his passport visas cancelled by Secretary of State Kellogg, on the ground that no foreign Communists will henceforth be admitted to this country.

Powerful American capitalists have told President Coolidge he made a great mistake in barring Saklatvala, giving as one of their reasons that the "despised" Soviet government has already spent more than sixty million dollars in gold in America for purchase of textiles and machinery. They are afraid their business with the Soviet Union will be taken from them.

Duncan McDonald Protests.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 24. —Duncan MacDonald, one of the leaders in the left wing of the trade union movement, and formerly president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, and the Ilinois Mine Workers' Union issued a statement protesting vigorously against the exclusion of Saklatvala by the United States government.

MacDonald, one of the outstanding figures in the fights of the Illinois miners against the corrupt Lewis-Farrington machine, said:

"In the barring of Shapurji Saklatvala the powers that be in Washington are running true to form. Their complaint that he has given expression to certain opinions and for that reason is barred is prima facie evidence that people are no longer to have opinions in order to be admitted to a country that boasts of 'freedom of speech' and yet denies it at every opportunity.

"The charge that Saklatvala is a Communist means in effect that persons who reach our shores must belong to the gang in control of our political destinies or get off the earth. The misrepresentatives of our alleged 'democracy' no doubt are carrying out the mandates of their British contemporaries who are trying hard to boster up a corrupt system of misgovernment that is crumbling everywhere.

A Band of Strikebreakers.

"'It ill becomes a member of the plunderbund to question the motive of any person in view of the record established by the gang now masquerading under the banner of the republican party who have prostituted their office in the interest of capitalism at every opportunity. They have broken strikes, gouged the farmers exploited the railroad workers and in every instance have acted as the stoolpigeons and carried out the mandates of the plunderbund of America.

"'The action in barring Saklatvala is only in harmony with their other acts but should be an inspiration to the workers to renew their determination to fight for the overthrow of the most corrupt political machine that ever existed since the beginning of time."

SEAMEN FLOCKING INTO I. W. W. TO JOIN STRUGGLE AGAINST BOSSES; I. S. U. SCAB POLICY REPUDIATED

Go Over in a Body.

The Baltimore I. S. U. membership, in a body and over the vociferous protest of the most of their local officials, came over to the I. W. W. hall Tuesday and accepted assignment to picket duty. They report the I. S. U. hall is completely cleaned out of all except one or two office holders.

Philadelphia reports that Tuesday was the most successful day of the strike in that port. Very few scabs got by the pickets and many men came ashore. All but three of the crew of the Mary Weems came off when they were paid, and two of those remaining promised the pickets they would follow.

The crew of the Silver Dollar walked off. Six men left the Persion of the Merchants' and Miners' Line. Half the crew of the Eugene V. R. Thayer walked off. The pickets at the Humphries shipping office reports that there was only one animal "looking for work." This character is well known and the men say he will have a hard time getting by after this strike—harder than he did before.

The steamer Van Dyke is still looking for a crew and part of the crews of both the Paulsboro and the Sabine Sun came off Wednesday.

Going Strong in New York.

The skipper of the Norwegian ship Sacktant, whose black gang and deck department came off in New York harbor Wednesday, refuses to pay the men off. The men threaten to tie up the ship with a libel for wages due, and they tell of the most abominable conditions of their quarters, which no printable words could describe.

The crew of the West Katan was paid off, but each man was logged (fined) $3. as fee to be paid to the shipping crimp who will try to procure scabs for the ship. This action is illegal, but under the capitalist class dictatorship the California Eastern Lumber company who owns the ship don't have to concern itself with a little matter like the law—which either works for the bosses or don't work at all.

The Korean Prince crew have declared their readiness to join the strike and pickets have gone aboard to get them off. The crew of the New Zealand freighter Piako, which struck Wednesday as soon as the ship tied up at the Bush Terminal, tell of miserable conditions on the trip from England, where they were held practically prisoners by ship's officers and police to prevent them leaving ship there. The food was spoiled in the storeroom and the crew became terribly sick.

Strike Meetings Enthusiastic.

At the corner of South street and Coenties Slip Tuesday night Elizabeth Gurley Flynn addressed a crowd of a thousand striking seamen, explaining the strike situation and rousing great enthusiasm among the already determined strikers. At the end of the meeting the hall at 105 Broad street was packed with strikers asking instructions and assignment to picket duty.

William Brennan of the I. W. W. addressed the strikers and emphasized the need for increasing the pickets and doing all in their power to bring the strike to a victorious conclusion. The response was a spontaneous and immediate strengthening of the picket line and a call for "action and still more action!" The hall rang with cheers for "international solidarity."

Other big meetings were held at the corner of Court and Carroll streets in Brooklyn. A large crowd of strikers cheered and applauded the M. T. W. strikers and somehow failed to see that the Salvation Army was present beating a drum and trying to save the strikers' souls—and get them to scab on their fellow workers to their own detriment.

Skipper Changes His Mind.

When the Lamport and Holt liner Vauban paid off Tuesday, the skipper tried to hold out $20 on a Portugese seaman who couldn't put up much of a fight because he could not speak English. The M. T. W. delegate went aboard and had a llittle round with said skipper, who finally discovered that he had made a "mistake." The seaman promptly lined up as a member of the M. T. W. and joined the picket line.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK—(FP)—The chief reason why Negro children dies nearly twice as rapidly as do white children, says Forrester B. Washington in the current issue of Opportunity, a Negro magazine, is that the Negro worker is so poorly paid. Low wages compel the Negro worker to take the poorest and most unsanitary housing and low wages of the father compels the mother to go into industry. The children are neglected and undernourished.

NEGROES SEND DELEGATES TO LABOR CONGRESS

Whiteman Speaks to Pitts., Conference

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 24.—One dozen regular and fraternal delegates were elected at the Pittsburgh Local Negro Conference held at the Labor Lyceum to attend the National Negro Labor Congress at Chicago on Oct. 25. Wm. Scarville, W. O. Francis and Ernest Careathers were elected as delegates and in addition the following regular delegates from outside of Pittsburgh, C. W. Fulp, president of Local 212 United Mine Workers, Primrose, Pa.; J. J. Jones, member of Hod Carriers Local 527 from Ambridge, Pa., Charles Wallus, coal miner from Vestaburg, Pa., member of the U. M. W. of A., G. W. Rich, of Ambridge, Pa., member of the Hod Carriers, Local No. 11 and T. A. Wilson of Pittsburg.

The following were elected as fraternal delegates: Joe Mankin, of Retail Clerks, 1046, Pittsburgh; Joe Solnitzky, Young Workers' League; Sam Slomberg, member of Workers Party and Arne Swabeck, district organizer, Workers Party.

Spirited Gathering.

Approximately 60 delegates attended the convention representing various organizations and groups of colored people and trade unions. In addition a number of fraternal delegates participated in the conference making a total of more than 100 participants of both races.

The conference altho a little slow in getting started due to the fact that delegates came together the first time and were not acquainted with one another turned out to become a very spirited gathering. The conference was presided over by Wm. Scarville of the local committee of action with W. O. Francis as secretary. All the participants became very enthused as they began to recognize the great possibilities in uniting workers of both races as embodied in the Negro Labor Congress movement.

A local executive committee consisting of eight members, to take up the future work and also to provide the necessary funds for the sending of delegates, was elected. The conference decided to initiate a campaign to enlarge the response to the national congress by urging organizaitons who were not yet represented to send delegates direct.

Delegates elected from points outside of Pittsburgh assured the conference that the necessary means to bring them to the national congress would be provided for by the local groups and thus connections have been established thruout the Pittsburgh coal mining and steel territory.

Unity of Workers of Both Races.

Many speakers addressed the conference amongst them were Louis A. S. Ballinger, member of Veterans of Foreign Wars who stated that the working class was entitled to all it produced and that he felt convinced that this conference was one step toward attaining that goal. C. W. Fulp from the United Mine Workers particularly stressed the necessity of complete unity between both races of the working class as only upon that basis could the aims of the movement be attained.

Wm. Scarville in opening the conference pointed to the significance of the opposition to the movement which had come primarily from capitalist dominated publications of which the reactionary Negro press was no exception and from the officials of the trade union movement who had shown their eagerness in helping to uphold the present system of exploitation.

W. O. Francis in reporting on the activities of the local committee of action stressed the fact that the Negro workers everywhere as soon as the objects of the movement had been clearly presented to them responded wholeheartedly, which could particularly be measured by extensive distribution of publications and propaganda material published by the Negro Labor Congress national committee.

E. H. Careathers in making the final address told the delegates that no matter what the enemies may say about this movement that even tho it would be charged it was directed from Moscow, from which he himself was convinced that only good directions had come for the working class, that should be only one more reason why the Negro workers in particular should rally in full support.

Greetings from Workers Party

The district organizer of the Workers Party, Arne Swabeck, brot greetings of the party to the conference emphasizing that the party as the most militant section of the working class would continue as in the past to give co-operation to this movement to the best of its ability to unite the workers no matter what race they belong to and to more effectively carry on the struggle for complete emancipation.

World Awakening.

Lovett Fort Whiteman, national organizer of the Negro Labor Congress, attended this conference to help guide it in its first steps thru actual work. He spoke at length on the aims and objects of the congress movement stating that in addition to the problems which are confronting both Negro and white workers there were specific problems of the Negro workers in this country in the solution of which they themselves must take the leadership.

He described the international situation of this particular oppressed race emphasizing the awakening which could be noted thruout the world in many places expressing itself in struggles thruout the world to throw off the yokes of world imperialism. He stated that this coming national congress is only a step which will be further solidified thru an international congress. Lovett Fort-Whiteman while expressing thanks to the local movement to the favorable attitude shown by the Pittsburgh American in giving publicity also pointed out that the Pittsburgh Courier, local Negro paper, while giving prominent space to the vicious attack made by Wm. Green upon the congress in publishing the reply by the national committee inserting only a part took good care that this was hidden in a very inconspicuous place.

That of course said Whiteman proved who is dominating the Pittsburgh Courier. Our struggle while directed against the domination of capitalists of the white races is directed as eagerly against the Negro capitalists and petty bourgeois who are trying to put obstructions in the paths of the Negro workers. Hence leadership is now developing from below, from the ranks of the workers themselves, while this petty bourgeois leadership will be thrown on the scrap heap. This new leadership is a class leadership in the true sense of the word and becoming internationally unified.

The conference adjourned by singing the International.

Suicide Leaves Shortage

DECATUR, Ill., Sept. 24.—A shortage of approximately $250,000 has been found in the accounts of Frank E. Harrold, cashier of the Farmers' State Bank and Trust company, who committed suicide in a cottage on his Dewitt county farm Tuesday night, directors of the institution are reported to have estimated today.

Berger's Socialists Try to Capture LaFollette Voters in Wisconsin

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, sees interesting closing clashes in the special senatorial campaign in Wisconsin, especially as Victor Berger's "socialist" daily, the Milwaukee Leader, struggles to win over some of the LaFollette vote to its banner.

The "socialists" cleverly claim that they have fallen heir to the LaFollette program, which they contend has been thrown overboard by the "crown prince," LaFollette, Jr.

• • • •

Here is the method of the "socialist" reasoning. Instead of becoming more conservative with the passing years, LaFollette, Sr., became more radical, it is claimed. At first LaFollette, the elder, hit "wildly and viciously" without program, say the "socialists." Then he proposed his system for the regulation of public utilities. Then the last development, in the words of an editorial article on the first page of the Milwaukee Leader, Sept. 15:

> "Much later still in his full maturity, he came around to the socialist viewpoint and came out clearly for public ownership as the only method of restoring to the people of the country what had in one way or another been taken from them."

Ergo, the "socialists'" stand for public ownership, and therefore, say the "socialists," the LaFollette followers should all vote for the "socialist" candidate, John M. Work, former Iowa lawyer, later a national secretary of the "socialist" party in the days before the war, but now an editorial writer on Berger's Milwaukee Leader.

• • • •

But, if this is all that is needed to vote the "socialist" ticket in Wisconsin, why not carry the reasoning a little further? Even Coolidge's republican administration believes in the public ownership of the post office, for instance, among other things. Should Cal's boosters, therefore, vote "socialist"? Evidently!

Public ownership had been carried far under the regime of the former kaiser in Germany. Instead of the kaiser turning "socialist," however, the "socialists" went to the right during the war and voted him war credits, and even now they continue the most ardent supporters of the German capitalist republic.

Public ownership even had its say in the Russia of the czars. This should have been the bridge for the czarist followers to cross over to the "socialists," according to the "Wisconsin idea."

• • • •

But in none of these countries, in Russia, in Germany, or in the United States, has public ownership proven a stepping stone to socialism. Nor will it. Nor will those who believe in public ownership under the capitalist state, as a cure all for the evils of exploitation, prove worthwhile fighters against capitalism. LaFollette, just as much as the former kaiser and the late czar, believed in a supported capitalism. It may be said that they did not prove more loyal to capitalism, than have the "socialists" themselves, who have betrayed all socialist principles and turned their backs on socialism.

Public ownership is not socialism. Only the Communists, who struggle for the rule of the working class, pave the way to the new era that follows close on the heels of the passing profit system.

• • • •

LaFollette's desperate grasp, on the brink of the grave, at public ownership, did not make him a believer in socialism, any more than William Jennings Bryan's espousal of public ownership as a vote-getting weapon made him an upholder of socialist principles.

The fact is, however, that Berger's "socialists," with their "Wisconsin idea" have just slipped another cog back into the lap of capitalism, where they will find a comfortable nestling place. In Wisconsin, as everywhere else, the fight for socialism falls upon the shoulders of the Communists.

FAMOUS RUSSIAN POET COMES TO DETROIT ON 30TH

Mayakovski to Speak on Russian Poetry

Mayakovsky will speak on modern Russian poetry and literature.

Vladimir Wladimirovich Mayakovsky is one of the most outstanding poets of the new Russia and of the great Russian revolution. He is coming to Detroit on Wednesday, Sept. 30 nad will speak in the House of the Masses, 2646 Gratoit, corner St. Aubin, on the new Russian literature and poetry.

Thru him we will be able to get first hand information about what is going on in the literary world of the present new Russia. Comrade Mayakovsky is a powerful poet and a great personality, and he will surely be able to tell us of the new civilization and of the new culture that is being built in the socialist republic. Mayakovsky will also read some of his own poems.

Russia has changed politically and socially and a new literature is the natural result. Comrade Mayakovsky will show us the new literature and poetry of a young proletarian state.

We will all be there at 8 p. m. sharp.

Watch for further announcements.

STOVE WORKERS START INTENSE UNION CAMPAIGN

Plan to Organize the Cribben-Sexton Plant

An intensive oganization campaign to unionize every one of the [illegible] workers in the Cribben & Sexton company plant, at Sacramento Blvd. and W. Chicago Ave., was decided upon at the meeting of the striking stove polishers and buffers yesterday.

Representatives of seven or eight unions met in conference and decided to carry on a house-to-house campaign to organize every worker in the big stove plant. Every worker, from the unskilled laborers that truck the sand to the molders, to the highest skilled worker, is to be approached and organized.

Strikers Standing Firm.

The molders' union delegates were in conference with the bosses and it is understood that following the conference with the molders the management of the plant may call the representatives of the strikers to the office. Little is expected to come out of the conference with the bosses. The strikers stand firm in their demand for recognition of their union and their shop committee.

"You can't leave anything in that plant overnight. The roof leaks so damned bad, that we have to make umbrellas out of a newspaper when we work on a rainy day," one of the strikers informed the DAILY WORKER.

"If we leave our stuff over night we find it soaking wet in the morning. The company has got us on piece work. Sometimes, we leave a job unfinished when we leave the plant. If it rains that night, we've got to do the work all over again as the rain has spoiled the job. You can bet your sweet life that the roof will be fixed if the union has anything to say about it."

Company Feels Effects of Strike.

The effect of the strike has begun to be felt by the company. The stove mounters are being placed on a day rate basis instead of a piece rate basis. There is so little work to do that the company has had to use this means of keeping the mounters on the job.

The Chicago Plating company is not able to turn out the [illegible] ed. Some of the equipment of the Crbiben & Sexton company has been sent to the concern that is turning out the work of the shop on strike.

The foreman of the polishing room at the stove manufacturing plant has been fired by the company. The superintendent accused him of carrying a union card and not being able to recruit enough scabs to carry on production. Yesterday the foreman from the Edison Appliance Co., the manufacturers of "Hotpoint" goods, was called to take charge of the department.

Bosses Use New Threat.

The pickets on the line were told by the superintendent of the plant that they return by Friday or lose the insurance policies which have been mentioned in a previous article in the DAILY WORKER.

Only two workers applied at the gate looking for work in the polishing department. They had been working at the Crane company for some time and had been laid off. When the manager told them they were to get 40 cents an hour for strikebreaking they walked out of the office, telling the manager to go to a hotter place than the company's furnace room.

The company has not been able to coerce the laborers into running the automatic polisher and with the intensive organization drive planned, it is expected that the strike will spread and tie up the entire plant.

Native Capitalists of India Develope Their Gravediggers

NEW YORK—(FP)—Organized labor of India, recently defeated in the Northwestern Railway strike and now fighting on the textile factory front in Bombay has won recognition in the steel industry without a strike, according to papers arriving in New York from Indian ports. The new deal affects the 25,000 workers employed by the Tata company, a group of Indian capitalists who have a virtual monopoly of the iron and steel industry in the peninsula and who never before have recognized a labor union. The workers there were primed for a strike when the company conceded three main points—the reinstatement of Sethi, an organizer discharged for his union activities; recognition of the union and the promse of a system of union dues collections equivalent to the American checkoff, if the union desired it.

British Labor Has Revolutionary Minority

against the forces of the fascists, and our forces must be strong enough to beat them if they dare to attack or interfere in our fight—for a decent life.

Discussing the resolution calling for a defense corps, one delegate stated that the fascisti were drilling in secret and that he had been offered $20 a week to speak against Communism. The only speaker taking the floor against the resolution said it was folly to adopt it unless the workers could get arms. The active leaders would soon be jailed. The active delegates only laughed and but three votes were cast against the resolution.

But no one should think that a definite appreciation of working class strugles was absent. Frankly avowing their ultimate purpose to be the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government, at the same time the weight of the discussion was with regard to building up the trade union movement, developing factory committees, raising the wage standards of the workers, unifying and strengthening the workers as a class nationally and internationally. Harry Pollitt (Boilermakers) urged that members be thorely active in the routine work of the trade unions and demonstrate their practical value to their fellow workers. The program of the Minority Movement must be presented to the workers by those in whom they had confidence as practical workers.

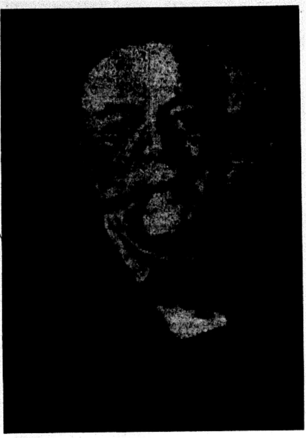
Saklatvala Cries Out Labor's Defiance.

Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of parliament for North Battersea, evoked a similar response when he said: "The British empire must be dissolved if British and European workers, and Americans in time, are not to be reduced to the coolie standard of living." Short of stature, of frail build, dark as befitted his Indian birth, Saklatvala electrified his hearers as he indicted British imperialism for its many crimes.

"Comrades," said he, "The mining problem in Great Britain cannot be solved by royal commissions so long as 40 million tons per year are dug in British colonies on wages of less than 16 cents per day and at a cost of less than $1.00 per ton at the pit mouth. Nor can the lads and lasses of Dundee in the mills hope to maintain the bare standard they now have in the face of the competition of women and children in Indian mills working ten hours for 10 cents per day. The enslaved millions of India and the East under British control are a menace to the living standards of the advanced workers of the world. I am an implacable enemy of the British empire for this reason. That is why I say that the British empire must be dissolved. The Union Jack must be pulled down."

But the conference was not all fireworks and not all from the platform. There were delegates from the pit, the bench and the farms who hit straight from the shoulder in revolutionary style. The tenseness of the struggle now going on in Britain was revealed in their every utterance. And there were more prominent workers of the movement, like Pollitt (Boilermakers) Watkins (Miners); Gossip (Furnishing Trades), Hannington (Metalworkers), Elsberry (Garment Workers) Murphy (Engineers), Hardy (Transport Workers), who made effective practical contributions in the discussion of the various resolutions.

British Labor Leader Coming Here



A. A. PURCELL

Chairman of British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia, who is coming to the United States as delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention.

Realistic Revolutionists.

The conference showed the right combination of revolutionary spirit and realistic facing of actual conditions. Harry Pollitt, secretary of the movement in his report pointed to the large and widespread rank and file representation at the conference as an answer to the charge that the National Minority Movement was nothing but a few agitators with little strength inside the regular trade union movement.

The first convention in August, 1924, had 271 delegates; the special unity conference in June, 1925, had 617; the present had 683, practically all rank and file workers. There were workers present from every corner of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, speaking for 750,000 trade unionists. Back in December, 1920, when a small group of workers met to plan for agitation for affiliation to the Red International of Labor Unions there were a number who favored pulling away and forming new unions outside. Those who insisted that the proper way was to work inside the existing unions and strengthen and extend them prevailed. Today there was further vindication of this policy.

Militants must realize that they must not scorn the most simple tasks in the trade unions, they must function wherever there was work to do. In this way they could demonstrate that they were real trade unionists and that their revolutionary program sprang from the same motive. A delegate from the National Union of Railwaymen said he had been a lone voice crying in the wilderness for some years, but results were now showing themselves. There would be eleven left wing delegates at the coming convention of the N. U. R, Pollitt declared that while many leaders of labor a year ago were quite openly close to the N. M. M., the sharpening of class lines was causing some of them to hedge. While declaring for the social revolution they were beginning to stand away. The movement must become strong enuf to force them to make a choice. They must either adopt militant action on behalf of the workers or stand before their followers as discredited and of no further use to them. The N. M. M. would work as a trade union organization with anybody or group that was prepared to put forward the revolutionary demands of the working class. J. T. Murphy (Amalgamated Engineers' Union) discussing the resolution on the "economic struggle and the capitalist offensive" indicated the factors proving the breaking down of capitalism in Great Britain.

Three Billion Dollars Lost.

Widespread unemployment and high prices had reduced the purchasing power of the people to an enormous extent—$3,000,000,000 from 1921-23. Markets heretofore open to Britain had been lost due to the development of manufacturing in other countries. British capital was being increasingly invested in industries in India, China and South Africa where cheap labor was obtainable. The only way British capital could stabilize itself was at the expense of reduced standards for the workers. The only answer was working class unity, nationally and internationally.

In order to accomplish this, attention must be paid to concrete issues—wage increases, shorter hours. These were not reformist or palliative measures, but would tend to sharpen the struggle and pave the way for revolutionary action. It was a mistake to think that capitalism would collapse of its own accord. There must be preparation and planning on the part of the militant workers to strike the final blow when the time was ripe.

Answering a question as to the attitude of the movement toward unofficial strikes Pollitt said that such struggles did not take place unless there were grievances so grave as to justify them. It was an indication that officials had failed to properly meet the demands of the rank and file and protect their living standards. The N. M. M. made it a point to help all such justifiable strikes and to analyze the basic agreements and to assist in their correction. In the present outlaw strike of the seamen against the wage reduction of $5 per month, foisted upon them by Havelock Wilson, president of the Seamen's Union, the N. M. M. was doing all in its power to extend the strike among the seamen and bring it to a victorious conclusion.

The Scope of Action.

On the resolution there was complete unanimity of sentiment, the discussion on the part of the delegates simply emphasizing certain features. The following were topics covered: Setting up the defense councils; extending assistance to the unofficial seamen's strike; emphasizing the importance of wider organization in trade unions among the young people, among women and among agricultural workers; closer connection between the co-operatives and all militant workers to make these societies of valuable aid in the workers' struggle; for complete independence and self-determination for British colonies; denouncing British policy in China and protesting against the white terror in Bulgaria, Poland, etc., against the security pact as a new anti-Soviet Russia move.

The position of the conference on other matters is covered by the statement of aims and objects which was enthusiastically re-affirmed:

Aims and Objects of the Minority Movement.

1. To organize the working masses of Great Britain for the overthrow of capitalism, the emancipation of the workers from their oppressors and exploiters, and the establishment of the socialist commonwealth.

2. To carry on a wide agitation and propaganda for the principles of the revolutionary class struggle, and to work within the existing organizations of the workers for the purpose of fighting for the adoption of the program of the National Minority Movement, and against the present tendency towards a false social peace and class collaboration and the delusion of a peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism.

3. To unite the workers in their everyday struggles against capitalism and at all times to advance the watchword of the united front of the workers against the exploiters.

4. To maintain the closest relations with the R. I. L. U. and to work for the unity of the international trade union movement.

The Program of the National Minority Movement.

1. Wages—An increase of $5.00 per week on all existing rates, and to work for a minimum of $20 per week.

2. Working Hours—A 44-hour working week for all trades, except in the mining industry where a six-hour day is demanded.

3. Nationalization—Nationalization of the mines, railways, the chief heavy industries engaged in engineering, shipbuilding, banks, land, without compensation, and with workers' control.

4. Unemployment—The application of the joint demands of the general council of the Trades Union Congress, and the National Unemployed Workers' Committee Movement, as embodied in the six-point charter, with the addition of the confiscation of all idle land and factories by the government with the workers' control.

5. Housing—The carrying out of an adequate scheme for housing, and the requisitioning of all empty houses, large and small, and the suspension of all forms of luxury building, until sufficient new houses to accommodate all in need are built.

6. Foreign Policy—(a) The repudiation of the Versailles treaty, and in particular the Dawes report.

(b) The ratification of the Anglo-Russian treaty, and the extension of the trades facilities act to Soviet Russia, and the granting of long term credits.

(c) The appointment of a trade unionist as the representative of Britain in Soviet Russia.

(d) Repudiation of the conception that the British empire is of any regard to the British workers, and instead, to pledge ourselves to work in close connection with the workers of all those countries comprising the empire, and assist them in their struggle to overthrow British imperialism. Also to establish close relations as will lead to common action on all issues affecting the interests of the workers.

Organizational Program

1. To work for the formation, wherever possible, of workshop committees, the members of whcih are to be guaranteed from victimization by their various trade unions.

2. The reorganization of the local Trades Councels, to make them become local unifying centers of the working class movement in every locality.

3. Affiliation of the National Unemployed Workers' Committee Movement, and the local trades councils to the T. U. C. Also the acceptance of representatives of these organizations upon the general council of the T. U. C.

4. The adoption of the principle of one union for each industry, as a first step towards the unification of the national trade union movement.

5. The creation of a general council of the Trades Union Congress with full powers to direct the whole activities of the unions, and under obligation to the Trades Union Congress to use that power to fight more effectively the battles of the workers.

Acceptance of the principles of the inter-changeability of the card of the unemployed organization for a trade union card, without any further entrance fee, upon unemployed workers becoming absorbed into industry.

6. Full support for the general council in its fight for international trade union unity, and in its present relations with the Russian trade unions, but we further demand the definite formation of the Anglo-Russian Unity Committee, that shall conduct immediate propaganda and agitation, that will lead to the organizing of a world trades union congress, where all trade union centers shall be present, and where a single international trade union center shall be created.

The executive committee of the National Minority Movement affirms that such an all-embracing program as this will rally the whole of the workers to its support. We further place on record our willingness to cooperate with any working class organization that is willing to fight for the realization of this program.

Larkin Rejected.

The only discordant note* in the conference was injected by James Larkin of the Irish Workers' Union. When he was first called to the platform he was given quite a cordial reception by the conference. Later in a speech he bitterly denounced British trade unions and certain leaders of the Minority Movement by name for not insisting on the withdrawal of all British unions from Ireland and for not giving him better support. Tom Mann later answered some of these points. Just as the convention was adjourning Larkin rushed to the front and tried to make a conciliatory statement but received more hisses than attention.

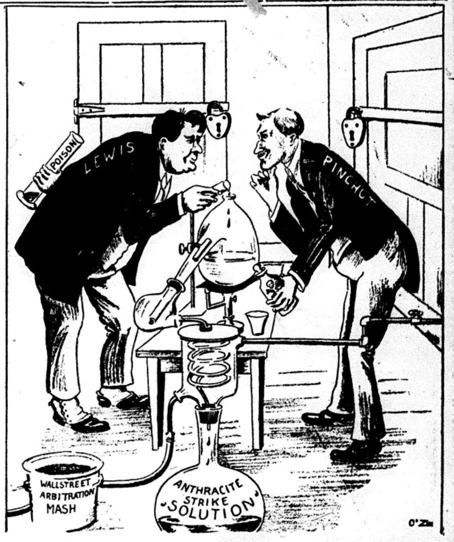
The following is the line-up of delegates.

142 branches in the provinces sent 165 delegates. 41 trades councils were represented by 82 delegates; total delegates from metal workers' organizations, 126; building workers' organizations, 103; transport workers' organizations, 75; general workers' organizations, 72; miners' organization, 33; co-operative organizations, 16; miscellaneous trade union organizations, 75; minority groups and shop stewards' committees, 56, and from unemployed organizations, 54.

There were 430 branches, 7 district committees and 6 executive committees represented.

The executives represented were: The Chemical and Drug Workers, National Association of Furnishing Trades, Forest of Dean Miners' Association, Fife Miners' Reform Union, Irish Workers' Union, National Unemployed Workers' Committee Movement.

THE REASON FOR SECRECY



Scissor Bills Flash Their Loyalty Before Hibbing Steel Barons

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

HIBBING, Minn. Sept. 24.—Hibbing, the iron ore capital of the world, is flooded today with fascists gathered in convention and the dedication of a half million dollar memorial recreational building, one of the largest of its kind in the land, a tribute supposedly erected to those who were drowned in the blood bath of the European war.

The demonstration consisted of a group of legionnaires led by the Racine, Wisconsin Drum and Bugle Corps and followed by a 75 m. field artillery gun mounted on a huge army truck. Then came a truck of painted Indians brandishing clubs and lastly the clubs of scissor bills demonstrated on the streets of Hibbing their loyalty to their master. An airplane squadron of four army planes whirred up above. If it had been a miners' demonstration, bombs might have dropped, instead of flowers.

While the capitalists may need such memorials to honor their dead, the monuments of the revolutionary veterans are inscribed in the hearts of the class conscious workers.

BRITAIN FEARS CAILLAUX'S TRIP TO WASHINGTON

Suspects Plot Behind Debt Negotiations

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. — The busiest spot in Washington today was not the room where the French and American financial experts haggled over the problem of negotiating a settlement of the $4,000,000,000 war debt, but the British embassy.

Spies trod on each other's heels coming and going with information of secret meetings between semi-obscure French and American agents who talked cold turkey while Caillaux and Mellon were getting rid of the usual polite piffle.

The British ambassador is reported to have expressed anger when he was shown an excerpt from the reply of Andrew Mellon to the opening remarks of Joseph Caillaux. Mellon said: "We were glad to receive the help which France extended to us when we were fighting for our independence and we were eager to make some return in France's own great need."

British agents see in this cryptic remark a hint that the U. S. government is willing to find an excuse for letting France down easier than Britain in the debt settlement. The reasons for this willingness can be summed under the heading of business and political.

Dangerous Rival.

America has leaped to the front as Britain's most dangerous competition in the capitalist world and both powers are checkmating each other even while they profess friendliness and actually work in agreement in certain parts of the world. Caillaux is not believed to have given up his idea of a European continental bloc against England, France's historical enemy. Never have the relations between France and England been more strained than since the end of the world war.

The tentative proposals of M. Caillaux have been submitted in writing. Neither the French nor the American commissioners would discuss them.

The conference opened without any formalities. At a nod from Mellon, Caillaux rose and consumed about one minute and a half in his opening speech. Mellon's reply took three-quarters of a minute, ending with the sentence that disturbed the British ambassador.

Caillaux's plan is said to involve, first of all, the most liberal terms, both as to time of payment and interest rates, that the American congress will swallow, and secondly, the floating of a gigantic commercial loan to France in Wall Street that may run as high as $400,000,000 or even $500,000,000.

France Needs Ready Cash.

The one, according to French financial opinion, is dependent upon the other. If France is to undertake the discharge of a debt of roundly $4,000,000,000, four times the indemnity paid by France at the close of the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, then France must have entree to private money markets in the United States to obtain funds to consolidate her internal debt and bring order out of the chaos into which her national finance has fallen, thru her militaristic adventures, her plots against Russia, her financing of Polish, Roumanian and Czecho-Slovak conspiracies against the Soviet government and her Riffian and Syrian wars.

Army and Navy Collectors.

Caillaux hopes to have easy access to Wall Street just as soon as he can fund the debt. The government has advised Wall Street quite frankly that any European government that would not come across could secure loans from the private bankers, but the army and navy would not back up the money barons in case the debtors defaulted. The bankers took the hint and so did Caillaux. When Coolidge passes the word around that the army and navy will be ready to collect from France in case of necessity, the bankers will call in the French borrowers and over the cigars and champagne, the shekels will be passed.

The grand total of the French debt, now at slightly more than $4,200,000,000, probably will be scaled down to about $3,400,000,000 by the time the negotiations are concluded, this being accomplished by figuring the accrued interest at the new rate to be agreed upon instead of the 5 per cent that the demand notes call for.

East Side English Branch, Cleveland Upholds Convention

The East Side English Branch of Cleveland, Ohio, at its meeting Sept. 10 had two resolutions before it expressing the opinion of the branch on the work of the National Convention and the new Central Executive Committee.

By a motion both of these were combined and reads as follows: "The East Side English Branch of Cleveland, heartily endorses the statement of the Central Executive Committee as published in the DAILY WORKER of Sept. 5.

The decision of the Communist International which is the basis upon which the new Central Executive Committee was unanimously elected puts an end to all legitimate further controversy.

We declare our earnest intention to vigorously support the Central Executive Committee in its efforts to carry out the many tasks ahead of us and to support with equal energy the policies laid down for our party by the National Conventionn.

Resolved: That we accept the decision of the Communist International and endorse fully all the actions of the convention. We endorse the expulsion of Lore from the party and the removal of Askeli from the editorship of the Tyomies and pledge our fullest co-operation in the struggle against the right wing within our party. We greet the determined attitude taken by the convention on the Bolshevization of our party and the recognition by the convention that the reorganization of our party on a shop nuclei basis as a real advancement of our party towards Communist maturity. We pledge the Central Executive Committe our fullest support and cooperation in carrying out all decisions.

FRANCE EXPECTS BIG LOAN FROM U. S. COIN LORDS

Caillaux Expected to Doublecross J. Bull

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Sept. 24.—The open suggestion that a debt settlement with the United States will enable France to float another big loan in America was made here today with the arrival of Finance Minister Caillaux in Washington to open debt funding negotiations.

Most of the morning papers refrained from comment on the debt situation pending the publication of the American reaction to M. Caillaux's funding plan, but there was an under current of enthusiasm in view of reports that France was likely to receive better terms than Great Britain in the conference at Washington.

The Midi was most outspoken in connection with a new loan, declaring that "even if Caillaux does not show enthusiasm for a loan, certainly America manifestes a strong desire to loan us as much as $400,000,000."

A Costly Venture

The Morocco campaign is drawing heavily on French resources and it was the need for touching up Wall Street for more money that compelled the French government to send its best financial ace to haggle with Secretary of the Treasurer Mellon.

It is reported here that the American government intends to give France better terms than England, but will not do so openly. It is also stated that an unofficial envoy of Coolidge had a conference with Caillaux shortly before he made up his mind definitely to go to Washington. It is not believed that the canny French politician would venture his political career on a failure in Washington.

Caillaux's recent expressions of regard for British have caused consternation in Downing Street. The British politicians felt reasonably secure while the finance minister was in open opposition to England's schemes, but now they do not know from what quarter the poisoned dagger will come.

CLEVELAND MEMBERSHIP MEETING SUNDAY; OTHER PARTY MEETINGS CANCELED

Still Another Parley

BERLIN, Sept. 24.—The German cabinet, presided over by President Hindenburg, today formally decided to accept the allied invitation to participate in a conference of foreign ministers preparatory to a general conference for the negotiation of a security pact.

The cabinet decided to send Chancellor Streseman and Dr. Luther as the German delegates. The support of the social-democratic party in putting over the pact was appreciated by Hindenburg.

Indian Day Today.

The white man's indebtedness to the American Indian will be discussed thruout the state of Illinois today, which is Indian Day, according to an Illinois legislative enactment in 1919.

Celebration in Chicago will be sponsored by the grand council fire of American Indians, an organization composed of Indians and whites interested in the Indian race. Its membership includes representatives of the following Indian tribes: Blackfeet, Chippewa, Creek, Flathead, Mohawk, Omaha, Oneida, Ottawa, Seminole, Seneca, Sioux, Ute and Winnebago.

HUSTLING FOR SIGNATURES FOR PETITIONS IS IMMEDIATE TASK FOR EVERY N. Y. PARTY MEMBER

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Every year before elections it becomes necessary for our comrades to hustle out to get petitions signed to place the Communist ticket on the ballot. There is very little time left for the coming muncipal campaign and we must get started on this work immediately. The work of getting signatures must therefore, have precedence over all other work for the next few days.

Every New York party member must report at once to section campaign headquarters and volunteer his services. The best and most certain time to get in touch with the district office about petitions is daily between 6 and 8 p. m., on Saturday between 12 noon and 5 p. m., Sunday 11 a. m. and 3 p. m.

The following are addresses and telephone connections of section headquarters:

Downtown—Joe Cohen, 108 East 14th street; Yorkville, James Lustig, 350 E. 81st street, Lenox 8307; Harlem, A. A. Harfield, 64 E. 104th street; Lower Bronx, L. A. Baum, 443 St. Annes Avenue, 535 E. 146 street, Mott Haven 2863; Upper Bronx, Belle Robbins, 1347 Boston Road, Kilpatrick 10485; Williamsburg, George Primoff, 56 Manhattan avenue, Stagg 6112; Brownsville, J. Rubenstein, 1844 Pitkin avenue.

Institute of Criminology.

MOSCOW, Sept. 24—An institute has been opened in Moscow for the study of criminology and criminals. The institute will study the causes and circumstances responsible for the development of criminal inclinations, and the methods of social hygiene and prevention of crime. Attention will be given to the study of individual criminals.

Y. W. L. Pledges Support.

The following resolution has been unanimously adopted at the meeting of the Jewish Branch Y. W. L., Sept. 9, 1925.

The Jewish Branch Y. W. L. of Cleveland wholeheartely indorses the decision of the Communist International concerning the American party. This branch pledges to solidify its forces in support of the new Central Executive Committee of the party in carrying out the policies and decisions of the party.

Resolved to send this resolution to the Central Executive Committee of the party and the National Executive Committee of the League.

STELLA KAUFMAN, Secretary.
Young Workers League, eJwish Branch, Cleveland, Ohio.

Free Tuition of Orphans.

MOSCOW, Sept. 24—Orphans and homeless children will be given free admission to occupational and technical schools in the forthcoming educational season.

TOKIO POLICE START AMAZING WATCH ON RUSS

Workers Threaten Rush to Get to Banquet

sians around with a wall of police, the police have arrested all Communist leaders, together with those Japanese labor leaders who had gone to Shimonoseki, to meet the Russians. These will be held in jail until after the Russians leave the country.

The police engaged a room in the Imperial hotel opposite the rooms of the Russian labor leaders and watch all coming and going, while a cordon of police is thrown around the hotel to prevent demonstrations. The excuse given by the police for these astonishing moves is that the Japanese fascisti threatens to attack the Russians and the police are "guarding" the unionists from the land of Soviets.

However, the police are "guarding" the visitors from their friends, also, and the workers turning out by thousands give good evidence of furnishing any protection needed against the fascists without the aid of the police.

Political Quarantine.

Held in a sort of moveable police corral, the delegates are further threatened by the police with deportation if they "attempt to start any subversive thots." Yet such action by the Russians is entirely unnecessary so long as the police monopolize the generation of "subversive thinking" by their acts.

The capitalist press rages against the Russians, claiming that their visit to China "fomented anti-foreign (anti-imperialist) disturbances."

"Dangerous Thots" Loose

A crisis threatens the police control tonight. The workers had engaged a restaurant for a banquet to the Russians, the police have forbid the banquet and the workers threaten to rush the police lines and hold the banquet anyhow. "Dangerous thots" forbidden by Japanese law, are clouding the bright sun of Japanese capitalism.

EMPTY PROMISES ONLY HOPE HELD OUT TO PARENTS

No School Board Member Shows Up at Meeting

To date the moves made by the board of education to help the parents of the Eugene Field school out of their difficulty has been a series of stalls. That was the concensus of opinion expressed by most of the parents attending the last parents' meeting held at 6459 Sheridan Road.

The suitable grounds promised by the school board have not been found. Not only that, but no representative of the school board showed up. This was the third meeting held by the parents and tho they were promised each time to be visited by a member of the board they were disappointed each time.

Julius F. Smitenka, acting president of the board of education acted greatly concerned about their trouble when the parents called on him He is showing by his actions how concerned he really is, said one of the mothers. "He did not even consider it important enough to attend our meeting to tell us how much he has been able to do."

The parents realize now that when Elizabeth Murphy, assistant superintendent told them that nothing would be done, she told the whole truth tho she used no diplomacy. And so did J. Lewis Coath when at the meeting of the building and grounds he leaned over and confidentially warned one of the parents "They are determined to make you like it."

The meeting also voiced the parents' objections to the building of a junior high school on the Eugene Field school grounds when they have been waiting for an elementary school which has been promised them for the past 13 years.

Representatives of Mayor Dever who attended the meeting, helped the board of education out by suggesting that a resolution of protest be sent to the board of education and that no meeting be held until a reply is received from them. Thus the school board can also keep on stalling on this matter until the parents become discouraged and give up.

Tho some of the parents have sent the older children to distant schools, they are forced to keep the smaller ones at home.

BANNED UTTERANCES OF BRITISH COMMUNIST BEING PRINTED FOR AMERICAN WORKERS IN PAMPHLET

people's wishes. You see the same thing in Turkey.

"No Eastern country would tolerate as the British people have tolerated the humbug and nonsense from the governing classes; they have overthrown them and established the people in power.

Will Not Yield to Terrorism.

"I for one will not yield to terrorism," declared Saklatvala in answer to a charge of Comunism in the house of commons. "I am going to carry on subversive propaganda, revolutionary propaganda, Communist propaganda with the assistance of the Russians, and the Chinese and the Germans and the British. I am not alone in that. The government has kept quiet about the great Indian railway strike. I put it quite definitely, that taking in comparison with any other country, you pay the most miserable wages, and give the most miserable conditions, and deprive the population, which works you and for the properity of your great empire, of their rights and inflict on them political indignity and humilation worse than can be found in any part of Asia."

Protest meetings are being arranged in Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, San Francisco, Minneapolis and other cities by the Workers Party to protest the exclusion of Saklatvala.

A Chicago protest meeting will be held Monday evening, Sept. 28, at Norwest Hall, North and Western Aves., and conducted by the All-America Anti-Imperialist League.

William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, and Manuel Gomez, secretary of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, and Hindu and Chinese speakers representing other organizations will speak. Admission free.

Announce Meeting for Detroit.

A protest meeting of the Detroit workers will be held Monday evening, Sept. 28, at the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin St. There will be speeches made in English, Chinese and Hindu by speakers representing various organizations.

Big Demonstration in New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—A united front demonstration of six organizations took place Monday at the initiative of the Workers (Communist) Party as a protest against the exclusion of Saklatvala by the state department at Washington. Thousands of workers jammed the narrow street just off Union Square where the meeting was held. The estimates of the capitalist press range from 1,200 (New York Times) to 8,000 (Daily News) as the number of workers that rallied on only three days' notice to voice their solidarity with the excluded British Communist and demand his admission into this country.

Hail Defender of Workers.

Resolutions hailing Saklatvala as the defender of the workers and oppressed peoples of the British empire, denouncing international imperialism and branding the action of the state department as the beginning of a new campaign against all but the most servile of the foreign-born workers, were unanimously adopted and every one of the ten speakers representing the six organizations that co-operated was enthusiastically applauded.

In addition to the Workers Party, the Civil Liberties Union, the Friends of Freedom for India, the Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, the International Labor Defense and the Young Workers League were represented by speakers.

Socialists Absent.

Norman Thomas, candidate for mayor on the socialist ticket was conspicuous by his absence altho he was specifically invited, and his act of treachery in breaking labor's solidarity in its united demand for free entrance of militant foreign-born workers into the United States and against British and American imperialism, was scored by the chairman, William W. Weinstone, and branded by the Workers Party candidate for mayor, Benjamin Gitlow, as "a rejecting of a united front with the workers and the forming of a united front with Coolidge and Kellogg and every enemy of freedom of speech for the workers in this country."

The assembled workers roared their approval of an invitation on behalf of the American working class to Saklatvala to visit the United States, when Saleindra N. Ghose, a Hindu, representing the Friends of Freedom for India, declared:

"If the working class of America demand the presence of Saklatvala in this country he will be here within a month in spite of Mr. Kellogg and in spite of Secretary James J. Davis of the department of labor."

Peter Golden, representative of the Association for the Recognition of th Irish Republic declared: "Saklatvala was banned because this government feared he would say some true but unkind things about that holy of holies, the British empire.

Fear Communist.

"Mussolini, who rules by assassination would be admitted . . . I did not know that the United States was so fragile a thing that it feared destruction thru a series of speeches by Saklatvala. The state department is making itself an accomplice of the enslavement of Ireland and India when it bars this fighter for the freedom of all the oppressed nations of the world.

Arthur G. Hays, who spoke on behalf of the Civil Liberties Union, was introduced by the chairman as one who had battled for freedom of thot in Dayton, Tennessee as associate counsel with Darrow in the Scopes trial. He made a plea for "free speech" in general and charged the Workers Party with being interested only in free speech for itself. Gitlow, who spoke shortly after him, took up the challenge and declared: "Yes, the Workers Party is not interested in free speech for the capitalists. What capitalist reactionary was ever excluded from our shores? What capitalist was ever denied free speech? The master class owns all the avenues of thot, the press, the pulpit, the school, and owns the government besides which it uses to suppress the workers, exclude the foreign-born militants and deny the right to speak and organize the workers in this country.

Trade Union Unity.

The dominant note of William Z. Foster's speech was "World Trade Union Unity." "The American working class is perhaps the most conservative in the world," he declared. "But only ten or fifteen years ago, the British workers were even more conservative. Now the empire, is cracking, it has lost its dominant position, there is a permanent economic crisis, and the British working class sees that its only way out is to imitate the Russian working class. That is why it is turning from MacDonald and Henderson to Purcell and Cook and Saklatvala. That is why it is working for trade union unity, and that is why the Scarboro conference took great strides toward a conscious revolutionary position. The American working class will yet follow the example of its British brethren."

Jay Lovestone spoke on the real meaning of the exclusion of Saklatvala. He pointed out that rival imperialisms will always bury their differences face to face with the workers and revolting oppressed peoples. That is why there is a united front of the British and American governments against the colonial and backward nations.

Rally to C. I.

"India is the greatest colonial nation. Its revolt is the symbol of the revolt of all subject peoples and Saklatvala, Indian and Communist is the symbol of the union of the revolutionary proletariat with the oppressed colonial and semi-colonial peoples in a united struggle under the leadership of the Communist International to overthrow imperialist capitalism. The answer to the united front of the British and American imperialist governments is a closer united front of the workers and suppressed nations of the world under the banner of the Communist International," declared Jay Lovestone.

Charles Krumbein pointed out the significance of the Kellogg action and the department of labor statements as the beginning of a new war of deportations against the foreign-born workers and called upon his hearers to form United Councils of Foreign-born Workers to protect the militant foreign-born from this new attack.

Rebecca Grecht described the "Indias and Irelands" of America to be found in the Philippines and Latin-America. She pictured the rising tide of colonial revolt which, leagued with the revolutionary workers would secure freedom for all subject nations.

Herbert Zam, on behalf of the Young Workers' League, declared that the principal burden of fighting militarism and the use of the army to enslave colonies or break strikes, falls upon the working class youth. He pictured the heroic fight of Liebknecht against militarism and war and pledged the Young Workers' League to imitate his example.

COUNTER REVOLUTION RAISES FUND IN CHINA TO OVERTHROW CANTON

CANTON, China, Sept. 24.—Reports received here say that merchants at Swatow, 225 miles northeast of Canton, have given General Cheng Kwing-Ming $10,000,000 with which to finance a military counter revolutionary attack on the Canton Kuomintang government. Swatow is in the hands of General Cheng. The strike and boycott against imperialist business and trade continues here, with the boycott on Hong Kong paralyzing trade at that port.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF PARTY INDUSTRIAL WORKERS ON MONDAY

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 24—A very important meeting of all leading party members engaged in industrial work has been called for Monday evening, Sept. 28, at 108 E. 14th St., at 8 p. m. Each industry and craft must be represented by at least one leading comrade.

MILADY'S BONNET WORKERS SLAVE IN DUSTY SHOPS

Ten-Hour Day, Milinery Girl's Lot

By WORKER CORRESPONDENT

Not being able to find work at my trade, I took a job as an apprentice in one of the millinery shops downtown.

The shop was a small dusty room, with the machines on one side and the cutting table on the other. The trimming table was in the center of the room. The tables and machinery were so close together that it was a hard task to walk around in the room without knocking something down.

I was put on piece work as a trimmer, working ten hours a day. We started at 8 in the morning and left the shop about six in the evening. No time was allowed for lunch. You had to put your lunch on the table and take a few bites every once in a while.

The first day my pay was $1.20, the second, $1.40, and on the third day $1.40. This did not discourage me as I wanted to learn the trade. But the forelady, also the proprietess, told me work was slack and laid me off for a week.

The experienced trimmers were all new girls. They get such small wages, that they do not work there long. The apprentice girls receive no wages the first week. The second week they receive $10 and on the third they get $14.

Small, stuffy, dusty cages into which the workers are packed in for 10-hours at a stretch hustling their life away. No pay for apprentices and low wages for experienced milliners. All this can and should be abolished by organising a union. It is only thru unity of the workers can be abolish the conditions that prevail in the open-shop millinery shops.

Wrap your lunch in a copy of the DAILY WORKER and give it (the DAILY WORKER, not the lunch) to your shop-mate.

ZANKOV SENDS AGENTS TO AMERICA TO WAR ON BULGARIAN MILITANTS

The terror Zankov government of Bulgaria has sent agents to America in the guise of ministers, priests, consuls, students and secretaries to destroy the influence of the Bulgarian and Macedonian Communists who escaped the clutches of its secret police.

During the reprisals following the bombing of the Sveti Kral cathedral, where 150 officers were killed, many workers were forced to flee from Bulgaria. The Zankov government feared the tales which these escaped workers might tell to the workers of other lands. Agents were sent to every country where they suspected that some of the workers may have escaped.

In America, there is a large colony of Macedonian and Bulgarian workers, that has repeatedly shown its contempt and hatred for the Zankov government. During the past two years over $12,000 were collected for the victims of the white terror of bulgaria. That is why especial attention has been given to the "lost brothers over the sea."

Emissary Hissed

Their first emissary was hissed by the Bulgarian workers at every public showing that he made in America. He received but little aid and comfort.

Their second, Srebren Pop Petroff, a deputy of the Bulgarian parliament openly fighting the revolutionary movement in Bulgaria, tried to pose as an ardent Macedonian revolutionist in America. His career proved to be very short. The following statement was made in his report to the butcher Zankov's central committee:

"Our brothers in America are lost. The devil (Communist International) has got hold of them. We can not depend on them."

A "Journalist" Enters

The third emissary to be sent was Yordan Tchkatroff, who led the Zankovites in their struggle to destroy the Stambolinski government and led the white guards against the peasants and workers in the September uprising. He came to this country as a "journalist," on a special pass. He was twice granted an extension of time by the state department of the United States. Now he is allowed to stay in the country indefinitely, regardless of the quota law. He is the present editor of the official organ of the Macedonian political organization and is attempting to destroy the revolutionary movement among the Macedonian and Bulgarian workers in America.

Many more are working secretly in the country and it is expected that such incidents as the murdering of Thodor Panitza at Wiena and Peter Schouler at Milan, Italy, will be duplicated by Zankov's agents in America in their attempt to annihilate the revolutionary movement.

WALL STREET IN HAGGLING MATCH WITH FRANCE

British Plan Will Be Offered

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Irrespective of rumors and reports, and the mass of conflicting data relative to France's ability to pay her war debt of approximately $4,000,000,000, members of the American debt funding commission today expressed confidence that an agreement will be reached within ten days, and that when finally consummated it will not differ very materially from the British plan of settlement.

What the American negotiators expect from M. Caillaux and his colleagues, after the social amenities are ended, is a brief, intensive effort to obtain the most advantageous terms possible, and then the signing of an agreement.

The British Plan

At the outset of the negotiations which get under way tomorrow, France will be offered the same basis for settlement that was accepted by Great Britain—a scale of annual payments on the principal, beginning with a modest figure, and then gradually increasing in size over a period of 62 years, the whole to bear interest at a rate approximating 3¼ per cent. In the case of the British, the initial payment was $23,000,000, and even now, two years later, is only $24,000,000, so gradual is the increase.

Treasury officials believe—and are prepared to back up their belief with their own statistics—that France can manage such a settlement without undue hardship or difficulty.

In this connection, it was pointed out today that France will secure this year approximately $151,000,000 from Germany under the operation of the Dawes plan. Next year she is to receive approximately the same amount, and in succeeding years considerably more, ranging up to $300,000,000.

Forecast Cotton Crop.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—Based on on a condition of 53.8 per cent of normal on Sept. 16, the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture today forecasted a cotton crop for the United States of 13,931,000 bales of 500 pounds gross. A yield of 143.5 pounds per acre was indicated. The condition of the crop on Sept. 1, was 56.2 per cent of normal, while on Sept. 16, 1924, it was 55.4 per cent of normal.

Opposes Death Penalty

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Attorney General John S. Sargent was asked directly today to sponsor a bill in the next congress to abolish the death penalty throught the United States.

The request was made by E. E. Dudding, president of the Prisoners' Relief Society, who told the attorney general that he had polled 74 wardens of prisons, and of this number, 68 declared their belief the death penalty should be abolished.

MUSIC · LITERATURE · DRAMA

ONE of the long sought ideals of the theater—a first class repertoire company at really popular prices has just been realised in Chicago. News to this effect forms one of the most important and interesting announcements of the new theater season. It is contained in a bulletin from the Central Theater, 64 East Van Buren St., in giving details of a complete change of policy of that house.

With the present production of Don Marquis comedy classic The Old Soak, the Central will inaugurate its new policy of presenting the best Broadway plays with the best seats selling for $1.50 for the regular performances every night including Saturdays, and dollar matinees on Wednesdays, Saturdays, and Sundays. This makes the Central Chicago's only popular priced playhouse, bring the legitimate theater within range of prices charged for the better motion pictures.

A roster of the best of recent Broadway successes will be shown for a limited engagement of four weeks for each play. Some plays will be held over for a longer time. Special productions will be made for each showing. Special casts of the best professionals will be engaged for the various plays.

The central will thus serve a two fold purpose. It will in any cases bring to Chicago plays that were produced in the east but not given a Chicago showing. It will give theatergoers an opportunity to see other plays that were successes in Chicago at lower cost than the original production, yet with the same excellence of performance. The new policy of popular prices is expected to result in increased patronage sufficient to give Chicago a truly representative repertory theater.

This announcement of the change in policy is made with the engaging of Harry Minturn to stage the plays. Mr. Minturn is well known as both a stage director and an actor. He is at present also playing the feature part of The Old Soak supported by an able cast of veteran professionals including Dorothee Bates, Dorothy Fay, Richard Farrell, Carlos Inslee, Karl Way, Shirley Warde, Cora King and Walter Poulter. The present production of The Old Soak is limited to October 3rd.

American Legion to Control Education Week Set for November

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 24.—The American Legion Education Week program will be forced upon the children in the public school this year in the week of Nov. 16 to 22. Tho a definite program has not as yet been specified, from the suggestions handed in it is rumored that camouflage will be used to hide its militaristic character as much as possible. This can be seen from the following sample program suggested for several cities:

Monday, The Constitution; Tuesday, Patriotism; Wednesday, School and Teacher; Thursday, Conservation and Thrift; Friday, Know Your School; Saturday, Community and Health; and Sunday, For God and Country.

WORKING WOMEN OF DETROIT TO PRODUCE "R. U. R."

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 24.—A play of deep working class interest will be given before a workers audience in a working class center when "R. U. R." comes to the House of the Masses, Sunday, Sept. 27.

The play is to be expertly given. The company obtained is the Detroit Reportory Theater company, which gave the play in its own theater last year. It will be given at the House of the Masses under the auspices of the Detroit Federation of Working Class Women's Organizations.

The working women of Detroit have not yet organized players from their own ranks. In this instance they are bringing an expert company into a working class educational and agitational center to perform a significant play.

"R. U. R." has been widely reviewed in the press generally, altho conservative propagandists have looked askance at its meannig. One of the "R's" in the title stands for "Robots," the name in the play given to workers in industry who become as standardized as the products they turn out. Not only are they wage slaves. They are puppets. This phase of the play is a satire on the machine age of today. But the play also shows how class consciousness and the spirit of revolt develop in Robots.

The House of the Masses is equipped with a stage and ample property. The performance will mark a quickening this fall of the varied activities at the House. Working men, womtn and children will pack the hall when the curtain rises on "R. U. R." The net proceeds will be devoted to International Labor Defense.

Liner Empress Disabled

SOUTHAMPTON, Sept. 24.—The disabled Canadian Pacific liner Empress of France lay at St. Helens, Isle of Wight, today, while her 250 passengers were enroute here aboard a tender. The liner, crippled by a broken rudder, was towed by tugs the last fifty miles to St. Helens, at a rate of a mile and a half an hour.

The Official Report of the British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia

Albert Purcell, chairman of the British delegation to Russia, is a delegate to the coming convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The question of Russia is sure to become an issue at the convention. It will be widely discussed at local unions. It is ever more a live issue for every worker in and out of the organized labor movement.

Now is the time not only for every worker to secure a copy of this arsenal of facts about Soviet Russia for his own use—

But this is also the time to take the book to your trade union—

To get orders from local unions—

To get it to every person where the question of Russian recognition will be discussed.

Maps and charts—and art work by Fred Ellis, add greater attractiveness and value to the book.

The Fox Trotting Prince

The Prince of Wales is about to return home after fox trotting his way over two continents. If there are some who believe that the prince uses his feet solely because of his desire to be in close proximity to the fair sex, that delusion must be combatted.

Much tho the prince may be addicted to those pleasures that include indulgence in the terpsichorean art, his mission nevertheless was one of business and not of pleasure. It merely happened that in this case pleasure was the handmaiden of business.

One of William Randolph Heart's special writers tells the truth about the prince's travels. He says his royal highness is simply an imperial bagman, using his prestige and the publicity value of the royal name for the benefit of products of the British manufacturers.

The prince's trotting expedition was made necessary because of the growth of American trade in South America, says Hearst's pen hireling. Correct! General Pershing kissed every baby in Argentine that he came in contact with, so that the products of Gary's steel mills would knock out those of the British iron masters. The general had barely returned from his mission when the prince went on his. This is how the game works. Every time the prince moved to the strains of the latest musical jingle there was a nickel under his heel.

The prince is returning home. He will find England a little bit different to what it was when he left it. When it is possible for an article to appear in the respectable London Daily Herald, with the title "Should the Workers Arm?" written by John Wheatley and answered in the affirmative, the prince may be justified in remembering a few lines from Oscar Wilde's "Ballad of Reading Goal."

Yes, prince, it is nice to dance in a ballroom but "it it hell to dance in the air." Kings have had a rather easy time of it in England since Charles lost his head, but the British workers are getting hungrier and hungrier.

Hearst and Saklatvala

William Randolph Hearst hastens to take advantage of the adverse public sentiment aroused against the Coolidge administration by the ruling of the state department which bars Comrade Saklatvala, Hindu member of the British house of commons, from entrance into the United States to attend the world conference of the inter-parliamentary union.

Hearst's action is not motivated by any sincere desire to advance the interests of the cause which Saklatvala has at heart. Hearst is no friend of the revolutionary working class movement, nor of the movement to free the people of India from the yoke of British imperialism. In fact, many of Hearst's writers, particularly the notorious mental prostitute Brisbane, never miss an opportunity to glorify British rule over the subject peoples of the British empire.

If Hearst were concerned about free speech or free assemblage in the United States, he would have an opportunity every day to write an "open letter" to the administration in Washington protesting against the violation of the constitutional guarantees regardng free speech, free press and free assemblage. Yet Hearst remains silent while the capitalists fill the jails with their victims, and the odor of the burning flesh of Negroes pervades the air of the south.

The class conscious workers will not take Hearst's defense of Saklatvala's right to enter this country seriously. They know his object in jumping to the front in this controversy is to gain advertising useful to him in securing more circulation for his publications and in gratifying his craving for personal publicity.

The Class He Dreads

J. R. Clynes, prominent member of the British labor party and a trade union official voiced the unspoken thought of every labor faker in the world when he stated at the British Trade Union Congress in Scarborough that he was "not afraid of the capitalist class; the only class I fear is our own."

Quite right. Clynes and company have no reason to fear the capitalist class unless the capitalist class should suddenly get crazy and imagine that the labor fakers represent the interests of the workers.

Barring that the labor fakers have every reason to hope that capitalism will continue indefinitely, or at least until they are comfortably tucked away in a neat little grave. The reactionary labor officials are in mortal dread of a revolution. It has the same terrors for them that it has for the capitalists. Mr. Clynes unloaded more wisdom than he probably was aware of when he spoke those historic words.

Proctor, the soap king, spent almost one million dollars to have General Leonard Wood elected president of the United States. Well, he got him appointed governor general of the Philippines anyhow.

When will Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, alcohol kings, be invited to speak before the Y. M. C. A. on "How to make a million dollars a year and stay out of jail"?

The Chicago police are said to be again under the control of the war bosses. When were they not?

The capitalist press now brands General Feng as the "christian militarist." He used to be the "christian general."

Whether Robert LaFollette, Jr., or Calvin's man Wilcox wins in Wisconsin, the workers and poor farmers will lose.

Even if Ramsay MacDonald's star is on the wane, Sir Alexander Grant has lots of biscuits, enough to feed Ramsay's parrot.

Less Wheat and Lower Prices for U. S. Farmers

By EARL R. BROWDER

Last year the agrarian crisis in the United States obtained spectacular relief by the unusual juncture of a world shortage of wheat and exceptionally large production in the United States. The result was the farmers had more wheat and received higher prices for it. The divergence between industrial and agricultural prices (the "scissors") was overcome for the time.

But 1925 is witnessing a reversal of the situation of last year, for American farmers.

The wheat crop this year is distinctly smaller for the United States. Thus the farmers will have less to sell.

The world production is immensely larger than 1924. Thus the farmers will receive a lower price per bushel for the smaller crop.

A bulletin of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture dated Sept. 21st, states:

"World wheat production so far as reported this year is 8 per cent larger than the 1924 crop, as indicated by total estimates of 2,852,000,000 bushels for 29 countries which produce 85 per cent of the world crop outside Russia and China. These countries last year produced 2,634,000,000 bushels.

"The abundant harvests in Europe, Canada, and North Africa have more than made up the deficit caused by the short crops of India and the United States, the department of agriculture declared today in announcing these figures. The postwar come-back of world wheat countries is also shown in the fact that the 29 countries produced an average of 2,660,000,000 bushels a year in the pre-war period 1909-13.

"With a record wheat harvest in Italy and large crops in France, Germany and the lower Danubian countries, the European wheat crop this year outside of Russia is 26 per cent above 1924 production, and only about 1 per cent below the 1909-13 pre-war average, the department says. Aggregate production of 20 European countries reported to date is 1,282,000,000 bushels against 1,015,000,000 bushels last year, and 1,296,000,000 bushels the pre-war average."

In addition to this is the large Russian crop, which, it is announced by the Soviet foreign trade office, will provide an export surplus for the European market about ten times that of Russia's 1924 exports.

Again the American farmers are in for a bad time. The "scissors" must inevitably open again. The agrarian crisis that began in 1920, which was so deep that it was the principal immediate factor in producing the La Follette "third party" movement—this crisis which the unusual conjuncture of 1924 placed for the moment in the background—becomes again a major problem of American economic life.

Will any of the schemes of American imperialism, now being discussed, be able to help the farmers? What about, for instance, the project reported by Sigrid Schultz in the Chicago Tribune, in a dispatch from Berlin, dated Sept. 22, which says:

"A plan for an economic rapprochment of America, England and Germany of such a wide scope that it borders on a political pact is under consideration in Washington, London and Berlin, the Tribune learns from a reliable source. If carried thru, the plan would solve the problem of the American farmer who is trying to dispose of his raw products at a profit and would solve the unemployment problem in England and Germany.

"The old idea of America's advancing raw material to Europe on credit, Europe paying after the sale of manufactured goods, is revived. Economic experts of world fame are said to be sketching an agreement for economic reciprocity by which American raw material, especially farmers' products, would be advanced to England and Germany. In exchange goods from these countries of the same value as the American articles exported would be allowed to enter the United States free of tariff."

Without entering into the implications of world politics involved in this proposal, it is interesting for the moment to ask, supposing it could be put into operation, whether it could possibly improve the situation of the American farmers in any basic manner.

We are forced to the conclusion that it would not.

There is more wheat in the world than there was last year. American farmers have less of it. The conclusion is inescapable that, no matter what economic "rapprochements" are made, American wheat will not bring more than the market price.

Two ways out are possible for the farmers.

(1) With the help of God to persuade the capitalists to forgive them their debts; or

(2) Failing success in this, to join hands with the working class to repudiate their debts, increase the consuming capacity of the working class by raising wages, and establish a workers' and farmers' government.

As American farmers have not yet faced the last proposal seriously, we will this year be forced to watch them again rely upon God, knowing that he will fail them again as he has so many times, and that the resulting agrarian crisis will ultimately force masses of farmers to realize that help will come, not from capitalism or the deity, but from a revolutionary working class.

TRAITORS TO GERMAN LABOR GET WELCOME BY A. F. OF L. ASKING AID AGAINST TRADE UNION UNITY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 24.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and a formidable array of the leading bureaucrats of the American labor movement, will form an official reception committee to meet the delegation of German labor reactionaries which is due to arrive in New York on Sept. 25.

This choice group selected from among the blackest forces in the German labor movement is coming with an ominous purpose in view. The rising tide of sentiment in favor of unity between the organized workers of England and Russia has aroused a panic among the red baiters in the American Federation of Labor.

A Well Planned Scheme.

The conference with the German delegation is the first move since the last convention of the American Federation of Labor, at which Samuel Gompers initiated an alliance with the extreme right wing of the German unions, for the purpose of assisting the American bankers and imperialists in successfully carrying out the provisions of the Dawes plan and for the purpose of combatting the leftward surge in the European labor movement.

The delegation includes the following German labor fakers: Friedrich Heusman of the Miners' Union; Oswald Schuman of the Transport Workers; Fritz Tarnow of the Woodworkers; Franz Wendel, Franz Sheflo of the Railroad Workers; Herman Jochado, Fritz Meunter of the State and Federal Employes; Edward Beckert of the Food and Drink Workers; Martin Pletil of the Clothing Workers; Kurt Heinig of the Miscellaneous Trades; Bernad Meyer, chief director of the workers' banks of Germany and their translators and secretaries.

Welcomed by Capitalists, Too.

These archfakers will be warmly received not only by Green and his staff, but also by the capitalist class and the capitalist press. It is notable, also, that the Forward gives a very prominent place to the arrival of these betrayers of the German workers. This is, of course, in line with its policy of opposition to all progressive tendencies on the part of the workers and its consistent policy of collaboration with the bosses.

In this case an alliance of the reactionary Green machine with the black wing of the German labor movement against the alignment of the Russian and English workers is a direct service to the cause of international imperialism.

SYRIAN TRIBES BEAT ATTEMPTS TO AID SUEIDA

French Fear Fort May Surrender

PARIS, Sept. 24.—Premier Painleve informed the French cabinet today of the unsuccessful attempt to relieve Fort Sueida in the war against the leader of the Syrians, Djebal Druses. The fortress has been reseiged by the Syrians for forty days. Two attempts to get relief to the beseiged defenders of France's imperialism have failed.

Drinking water is supplied to the 700 French mercenaries by airplanes dropping cakes of ice within the French lines. Food is also being supplied in the same manner. At present the premier asserts the soldiers have enough ammunition, but help must be sent them immediately or the fortress will have to surrender.

Repulse Legionnaires.

The tribesmen have repeatedly made attacks on the foreign legionnaires, hired by France to fight the Syrians at Messi Frey. The tribesmen inflicted heavy losses in the French column and are successfully blocking the attempt of the legion to march to the aid of Fort Sueida.

Communists. But he does care very much. Democracies are ideal for gentlemen of easy virtue, who desire to accumulate wealth at the expense of others. It would not be so easy for Wright to float a fake oil scheme under a workers' government, the kind they have over in Russia. He would probably lose his head. Wright also knows that if the radicals get control of the labor movement, he will either have to go to work directly for Wall Street, or live on his savings.

TO show his contempt for the struggling people of India, Wright says: "I roasted Secretary Kellogg as bitterly as anyone when he turned loose his ridiculous shaft against Mexico, but I am strong for what he has handed the Hindu Red. I like this business of telling this angel of destruction where he gets off." Then with a last cry from the bottom of his unsullied soul. Chester mourns: "Oh for the day when freedom-loving men and women will think straight above this whole revolutionary propaganda business."

COMMUNISTS are not in the least disappointed because Saklatvala was refused admission to this country. It is what we expected. The more intelligent of the capitalists know that Saklatvala's exclusion will create more fuss than his admission would. The big fellows feel much more secure in their positions than the labor fakers and their bootlickers. The Wrights and the Greens dread the Communists at this moment much more than the capitalists. The growth of radicalism is reflected in the trade unions, and the skates are uneasy.

THE Reverend Norman Thomas, ex-preacher, and candidate for mayor of New York on the socialist ticket, declined an invitation to speak at a united front meeting called to protest against the exclusion of Saklatvala. He refused, very likely on Hillquit's advice. The dominie knows how to take his orders. Thomas' excuse for declining the invitation was that the Communists did not believe in free speech, and therefore had no right to protest when the capitalist government gags the workers. Anyhow there are political prisoners in Soviet Russia and the Communists broke up Abramovich's meeting, says the reverend.

THOMAS pretends to be in sympathy with Russia, yet he never misses an opportunity to stab Russia in the back. Thomas knows that the political prisoners in Russia are conspirators against the workers' republic. Evidently Thomas places opposition to a workers' republic and opposition to a capitalistic republic on the same footing. This is where he slips, consciously. Either the struggle for the emancipation of the workers is justified or it is not. If it is not, the workers should humbly submit and worship the capitalists. If on the other hand, it is justified, every means of doing away with the robber system is moral.

THIS may seem like jesuitism to the reverend doctor. We believe it is the only sound position for revolutionary workers to take. The Communists do not expect that the capitalists will surrender their privileges without a struggle. The current history of England shows that quite plainly. Even mild radicals like John Wheatley are calling for an army of ten million workers to defend the labor movement against the armed forces of capitalism. Will Thomas say that Wheatley is taking orders from Moscow or that he should be gagged by the tory government for believing that force only can meet force?

MUCH nonsense is being indulged in by capitalist writers regarding free speech in England. There was free speech in England just as long as the British ruling class felt that their wage slaves were in no danger of revolting. Those were the days when British capitalism was on the upgrade and the upper strata of labor in England was given a little extra nourishment at the expense of the colonial slaves. Even the most debased proletarians were able to get enough under their skins to keep them from the morgue. But those days are no more. 1,250,000 unemployed are eloquent testimony to the decline of British capitalism.

ARTHUR BRISBANE writing in the New York Evening Journal makes the following profound comment on free speech in England: "The British have found it a good thing to let men talk. Talking often takes the place of action. In Russia and other countries where talking was forbidden, bombs often took the place of talk. In England they let you say whatever you please, as long as you don't actually do anything." Brisbane is a clever writer and has a strong hold on millions of American workers who read his contributions in the Hearst press.

THE word "Brisbanality" has often been used in this column to characterize the poisonous piffle that Brisbane is an intelligent man. He deceives willfully. We don't object to his propaganda because it appears on the front page of the Hearst press "in the upper left hand corner" as a certain learned omadgaun, did to this column in the DAILY WORKER. It would be well if most of the contributors to the radical press could use the American language as well as Brisbane uses it. But he uses his art to dope the brains of the masses. That is the objectionable feature of his writing. That is what we mean by "Brisbanality."

WHILE the ruling class of Britain allowed orators to shoot the air in Hyde Park, with attacks on everything from roast beef to his majesty the king, without interference, there was a different policy followed in Ireland, India, Egypt and everywhere else where the pirate flag flew over an oppressed people. Why? They were the same rulers. Our liberals attribute their liberality in England to genius for government. Why did they not follow the same policy in their colonies? Simply because the people were in a state of revolt and they used the same methods that the Czar of Russia used against his slaves.

NOWADAYS the British lion is growling at home as he used to growl abroad. The only hindrance to a government campaign of terror against the British working class is the strength of the labor movement. All capitalist governments act alike in like situations. Every dog scratches himself when bitten by a flea. When the British capitalists get a little shakier than they are now, Hyde Park will see mounted machine guns as well as revolutionary orators. But this will not stave off the inevitable downfall of British imperialism any more than the exclusion of Saklatvala will keep Communism out of the United States or hide the truth about India from the rest of the world.

GREAT CHINESE MILITARY LEADER OPENS NEGOTIATIONS WITH SOVIET REPUBLIC FOR AID AGAINST FOES

MOSCOW, Sept. 24.—General Feng, China's great military leader, has opened negotiations with Soviet Russia.

These negotiations may have a vital bearing upon the forthcoming Chinese customs conference in October and also upon the proposed conference upon extra-territoriality.

Representatives of General Feng arrived here on Sunday, together with a new ambassador from Mongolia.

Altho no official statement has been made relative to the purpose of the visit here of the representatives of Feng, it is generally believed that they come to seek the support of the powerful red republic against the international bandits who are plundering their country.

WAR ON SAKLATVALA BAN GROWS

"LET INTERNATIONAL SOLIDARITY BE YOUR SLOGAN," SAYS R. I. L. U. COMMITTEE TO STRIKING SEAMEN

The Red International Affiliation Committee, credentialed by the Red International of Labor Unions to represent its Executive Bureau in its relations with the I. W. W., Thursday issued the following statement concerning the part played by the I. W. W. seamen in the international strike:

• • • •

Every worker who pretends to be informed of the events of the world labor movement and who claims the honor of being a revolutionist, will know and be glad that the call for international solidarity sent out by the "outlaw" striking British, Danish, Chinese, Australian, New Zealand and South African seamen found an immediate response from the class conscious members of the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union of the I. W. W.

International Class Interests First.

For more than two weeks now the M. T. W., particularly on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts where the union leads all other organizations in numbers, ability and the spirit of struggle, the M. T. W. has carried on a magnificent battle against the heaviest odds. While the union's strike demands have not mentioned it, the whole strike movement is built upon the striving toward international unity for which every worker with the interests of his class at heart stands irrevocably committed. The battle flag of the seamen of the world has inscribed upon it "International Solidarity" and no one has need to hold this banner any higher than the seamen of the I. W. W.

The demands of the English, Australian and South African seamen is the revokal of a wage cut of $5 a month. We are not familiar will all the demands of the Danish and Chinese seamen. The M. T. W. has a list of ten demands, every one of which the Red International Affilia-

M. T. W. SEAMEN ADOPT CHANGED STRIKE TACTIC

Prepare Organization for 'Strike on Job'

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 25—The seamen of the I. W. W., on strike for two weeks, during which a spirited battle was put up by the usual picketing and strike tactics, particularly in this port, Baltimore and Philadelphia, yesterday issued thru the strike committee the following news to the DAILY WORKER

"In a meeting unexampled in enthusiasm and intensity in the I. W. W., at least in the recent history of the organization, the New York branches of the Marine Transport Workers, with the approval of the general officers of the M. T. W. located in New York by a unanimous vote transferred the strike in this port to the job, the branches in other seaports of the country being at once notified of the action taken.

"It was the regular weekly meeting of the New York membership and it crowded the large hall at 105 Broad street to the doors. A large organization committee was elected and old members say that with the determination displayed in today's meeting and with the strike taken on to the job, this port will see such an organizational and educational campaign as it has never seen before.

Short Strikes the Role.

"The strike was carried on longer than the usual wobbly strike. The strike call went out two weeks ago last night. The general strike practice of the Wobblies is to attack with great incisiveness and suddenness, gain what can be gained quickly and then withdraw as suddenly as they attacked to await another favorable setting of circumstances, in the meantime building constantly the strength of the organization.

"The occasion for the enthusiasm of the membership meeting today seemed to be the sense of a duty well done for the time being toward the international strike of seamen now in progress in England, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and other international ports, and the strong

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THERE is something happening behind the scenes in the tremendous business institution originally known as the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. As is generally known, Warren S. Stone led the union into the banking, investment and coal-operating fields. That Stone was a conservative was proven by the fact that the Brotherhood mines in West Virginia were operated non-union. But Stone was a radical it seems compared to those who came after him.

WARREN S. STONE had his weak points. In the days before American capitalism sat on top of the world and labor fakers came to the conclusion that their game was to play with the capitalists and forget all about the class struggle, Stone used to indulge in dreams of co-operation. He picked up a well intentioned fellow, who had missed becoming a minister of the gospel and permitted him to say kind words even about radicals in the official organ of the Brotherhood. Indeed under the editorship of Albert F. Coyle the said official organ had more intelligence crammed into it than any other organ of its kind in the United States.

WARREN S. STONE is dead. Before he passed away he was so close to the capitalist class that it would take a keen eye to see any difference between himself and the Wall Street gentlemen who ran the Empire Trust Company in which the B. of L. E. had considerable interest. Whatever the trouble is, Stone's appointees are getting the bum's rush out of the Brotherhood's business institutinos.

THERE is a suspicion that all is not well with the business ventures of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers However, it is a fact that A. R. Stone, nephew of the late Warren S. Stone, founder of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Co-operative Trust Co. has resigned his position as vice president of that institution and will be succeeded by George P. Webb, vice president of the Cleveland bank, Miss Helen Varick Boswell vice chairman of the New York County republican committee, and vice president of the bank is also resigning. More trouble. It is also announced that Samuel R. Stone, brother of the late Warren S. Stone, has resigned as vice president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers

CONVICTS MUTINY AT HOLY CROSS JAIL IN KIELCE

Prisoners Disarm Jail Guards

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—Reports reaching Russia from Poland tell of a mutiny among the convicts in the Holy Cross prison located at Kielce.

The prisoners disarmed some of the guards and seized twenty rifles and a quantity of ammunition. The surviving guards overpowered the convicts and cut off the escape.

In the course of the mutiny, six prisoners lost their lives and one gendarme was killed. Two gendarmes and twenty prisoners were seriously wounded.

Need Big Army to Save Irish Free State Heads from "Admirers"

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Ready to prevent any repetition of the attack on General Richard Mulcahy last week one hundred armed policemen and a dozen detectives met the liner President Harding when it docked at Hoboken today and before a large crowd, waiting at the dock were aware of the move, has whisked three high officials of the Irish Free State away to New York.

New Industry Prospers

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Startling revelations, showing where one of the arrested bootleggers deposited $200,000 in a bank in a single month and another took orders for 4,800 cases of Scotch in a single day, followed further inquiry by prohibition men today into the activities of the Times Square bootlegging ring.

ALL-INDIA CONGRESS PROTESTS SAKLATVALA'S EXCLUSION FROM INTERPARLIAMENTARY CONGRESS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PATNA, British India, Sept. 25.—The All-Indian Congress committee condemns the action of the American state department in barring Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, from the interparliamentary union congress at Washington, for the speech in which the independence of India was championed by this fighter of the workers, in its statement issued on the Saklatvala incident.

Shapurji Saklatvala, born in Bombay, India, has always fought for the independence of the Indian workers not only from the yoke of British imperialism but also against the caste system maintained in India. The workers of India know his record and now when he is barred from attending the conference of the in-

Caillaux Eats Dry Repast; May Consider It Unfriendly Act

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Joseph Caillaux, is said to regret that he was not able to come here on a debt funding mission during the Jess Smith-Harding-Daugherty days, when the "little green house on K. street" was the scene of gay parties and a rendevous for those who like to hear the pop of champagne bottles and to look on the wine when it is red.

Caillaux dined last night at the Coolidge table and among the delicacies he missed most was his favorite brand of wine. Caillaux does not remember when he last dined without the inspiring assistance of wine. Caillaux does his best financial juggling when under the influence of refreshments it is reported. This fact may be responsible for the studied policy of the Mellon whiskey ring to keep him "dry."

DAILY WORKER READ TO THE R. R. CARMEN

But Ryan Had to Read More Than He Liked

By WORKER CORRESPONDENT

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 25.—sensation was created in the convention of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen on Wednesday morning by President Ryan, who read a news item from the DAILY WORKER to the convention. It was written in the records and held up the convention to get it in.

Ryan read the headlines from the issue of Monday, Septmeber 21, showing up the machine work of the big guns visiting the convention. He read "By Workers' Correspondent," then he said: "Someone in the convention must be writing for the DAILY WORKER."

Ryan Forced to Read It All.

Then he read a part of the article and remarked that he didn't suppose they wanted to hear the whole of it, but the delegates yelled, "Read it all! Read it all!" So Brother Ryan read some "Communist stuff," as he called it, to the convention.

He read the paragraph giving the number of members in years gone by and the much smaller number today. Then he said: "See how they gloat over our misfortunes. I consider that an insult to this Brotherhood." But evidently there were those who considered it otherwise, for only a few unthinking members had anything to say against the article.

Progressive Rallies Big Vote.

In the afternoon, Frank Paquin, vice-president, who "exposed" William Z. Foster from the convention floor the other day for previous relations to the I. W. W. and forgetting to mention his own work with Debs in the A. R. U. troubles, came near being defeated by a progressive named Gipple. Gipple had 1,141 votes and Paqin 1,395.

Paquin was the first grand lodge officer to have any opposition up to his time of election. Four grand lodge officers before him had previously been elected by acclamation.

Canada's Bread in Hands of Monopoly with Profit Hunger

MONTREAL—(FP)—While there are complaints about the price of bread, the Ogilvie Milling Co., Ltd., a large Canadian concern last year paid 25 per cent dividends. The stock was split up on a three-to-one basis. In the milling year just closed the company paid dividends of 5 per cent and a bonus of 3 per cent, equivalent to 24 per cent on the old stock. And this old stock, included a stock dividend of 100 per cent, given stockholders in 1908. So holders of the original stock really received 48 per cent this year and 50 per cent the year before.

Montreal consummation of an asbestos merger places under the control of a group of American and Canadian capitalists 80 per cent of the world production of that commodity.

WORKERS WALK OUT AT CHICAGO PLATING WORKS

Refuse to Handle Work from Struck Shop

The metal polishers at the Chicago Plating Co., 351 West Superior street, have thrown a picket line in front of the Chicago shop, following a walkout yesterday.

The polishers refuse to handle the work sent by the struck Cribben and Sexton Co., located at Sacramento Blvd. and West Chicago Ave. Since the polishers and buffers at the Cribben and Sexton Co. have gone on strike, the Universal stove and range parts have been plated and polished at the Chicago Plating company, formerly known as the Co-operative Plating Co.

Make Strike 100 Per Cent.

The strike which was called by the Chicago Plating company workers had been planned a few days ago. The bosses got wind of the strike and fired those who were suspected of belonging to the union. Some of the other workers seeing that the bosses had fired the men for refusing to do the scab work, walked out. A few polishers and buffers are still in the shop. These are expected to join the strike before the day is over.

A picket line has been established and will be on duty from seven in the morning to 5:30 in the evening.

Bosses Refuse Conference.

The bosses in the Cribben and Sexton plant have refused to go into conference with the representatives of the union. The firm refuses to deal with the union, but expressed its willingness to deal with the men as individuals. The strikers refuse to go into any conference except thru their union representatives.

UNITED FRONT FOR WILLIMANTIC STRIKERS BRINGS FUNDS TO AID FIGHTERS AGAINST A WAGE CUT

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 25.—As a result of the conference which represented eleven organizations, such as the Workers (Communist) Party, the Young Workers League, Painters' Club, Workmen's Circle, Bakers' Union, Literary Circle and a few others, for the purpose of aiding the Willimantic strikers, $600 were collected in a house-to-house collection.

These strikers, who are out now for 26 weeks against the ten per cent wage cut which the American Thread company is trying to force on them. are still bravely fighting against the slave conditions the company tries to force on them.

Forty workers of Hartford, together with as many strikers who came from Willimantic, went out to raise the money. When the strikers came to Hartford they were welcomed to the Labor Educational Alliance where the committee had prepared a hall and refreshments for them.

A spectator could not help noticing the fighting spirit of the strikers and the great solidarity they showed to the Hartford workers. It was most inspiring to see young boys and girls part in a strike and willing to fight of sixteen and seventeen years taking the bosses to the end.

It is a great lesson to the American working class youth to realize that only by bitter struggle and great sacrifice shall they be able to improve their conditions and free themselves ultimately from wage slavery by overthrowal of the whole capitalist system.

Help the Willimantic strikers to carry on their fight, for their victory is our victory and their defeat is our defeat. If their bosses succeed in their attack on wages, your wages will be cut next.

WHITE TERROR LAYS VIOLENT HANDS UPON HUNGARIAN COMMUNISTS

VIENNA, Sept. 25.—Reports from Budapest say that the Horthy dictatorship of Hungary, has arrested the former commissar under Bela Kun's Soviet regime. Mathias Rakosi, along with forty-two other Communists. The Hungarian police report that they were informed Rakosi had just arrived from Vienna.

WALL STREET TURNS DOWN FRENCH OFFER

Both Sides Now Busy Haggling Over Terms

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—In plain language, Joseph Caillaux, the French finance minister, was formally apprised today that his initial proposals for paying the $4,000,000,000 French war debt are not satisfactory to the American government, and do not, in Wall Street's opinion, afford a basis upon which a funding agreement can be worked out.

This notice upon the French was speedily followed up by the presentation of a counter plan, worked out by the American debt commission, containing terms that Wall Street believes France can meet, and which at the same time will be acceptable to congress.

In order to give the French time to digest the American proposals, the debt conference adjourned this afternoon until tomorrow morning when, it is expected, the French will give their answer.

The terms proposed by the American negotiators were not officially revealed, but it was learned that the American proposition is an approximation of the British settlement plan, with only such departures from that plan as are applicable to France's fiscal and economic situation.

DUKES AND LORDS TO GO TO WORK; TO SCAB ON BRITISH WORKERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 25. — Britain's dukes and lords are preparing to work with their hands for the first time in their luxurious lives. But it is honest labor—No. They only intend to scab on workers on strike, euphemistically put—to meet a national crisis.

A volunteer organization, aimed to supply the necessities of life in the event of a coal strike followed by other strikes, has been organized by some of Great Britain's leading men and it is reported that Lord Harding of Penhurst and Lord Jellicoe, of Jutland fame, are at the head of the organization. Many society folk have joined the organization, it is said, and if a general strike comes they will man railroad trains and load coal and perform all sorts of menial tasks, in order that British capitalism may not be paralyzed.

TURKEY DEFIES ENGLAND'S RULE IN IRAQ-MOSUL

Refuse to Abide by the League's Decision

LONDON, Sept. 25.—In a semi-official statement from Turkey to the English government, Turkey reiterates her stand that she will not abide by the decision of the league of nations.

The statement scores the attempt of England to take advantage of internal Turkish difficulties to settle the Iraq-Mosul dispute to her own satisfaction at the league of nations.

The government statement continues:

"Tho Lord Curson declared that Turkey would enter the league of nations on a footing of equality with other nations, Turkey is now expected to make implicit renunciations in a question closely concerning her sovereign rights. It is impossible to conceive that any Turkish government could agree to make such a concession. The opponents of Turkey must learn that a new mentality now reigns in the country and that there is now a new state with which they must negotiate terms on an absolute equality. So long as the old methods are followed no understanding is possible."

Lackey of England.

The Constantinople newspaper, Hakkimiet I Millie, declares the league has committed disgraceful suicide and has proclaimed to the world that it is the servant of British imperialism. It states the mind of new Turkey quite concisely in these words:

"Turkey cannot and will not go to The Hague.

"The British in their folly are free to address themselves to The Hague, but all decisions tending to annul our rights are considered by us in advance void and without force."

It also scores the tales of the deportation of Christians from Mosul as "fables of the familiar type."

England Alarmed.

This attitude of Turkey has alarmed England. The imperialists of England are alarmed because of the tone of a certain section of the British press which demands that England immediately evacuate Iraq. The die-hards fear that abandoning Iraq would make Turkey more assertive of her rights.

The capitalists of England hate to let this bit of rich oil land out of their hands and are trying to force the league of nations to the use of sterner means than a mere note.

Kept Press Merger in England.

LONDON, Sept. 25. — The Berry brothers are today reported to be completing the biggest newspaper combine in the history of England, by the purchase of the principal Rothermere newspaper.

Sir William and Gomer Berry, two brothers who came to London some years ago as unknown trade journalists, are reliably reported to have purchased from Lord Rothermere the Daily Mail, the Evening News, and the Weekly Dispatch. It is reported that the price paid is $60,000,000.

THERE is something rotten in the state of Denmark. Superficial minded people see in the spread of labor banking an indication of labor's growing power. It is nothing of the sort. The DAILY WORKER patronizes a labor bank, but not because we believe that the workers can ever emancipate themselves by competing at their own game with the capitalists. The business ventures of the engineers union are not in a satisfactory condition we understand. They may pull thru so long as the American capitalist class retain their dominant position. But when the inevitable clash comes, watch the labor business men getting it in the neck. We are sorry, but the only road to the emancipation of the working class that we would urge any worker to follow is the hard and thorny road of the class struggle. We may have a few more words to say about the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers later on.

JOSEPH CAILLAUX is in America to come to terms with the United States regarding the controversy with France over the $4,000,000,000 war debt. The United States lent that money to France, so that France could purchase guns, bombs, bayonets, poison gas, armored cars, and other lethal weapons with which to dispose of the German army. The big job was to save civilization. You all know that. At least so you were told.

Anybody who can't see thru the rest of the farce could not see thru a pair of opera glasses. It is to gag!

SPANISH legionnaries serving in Morocco have displayed the ears and tongues of their Riffian foes on their bayonets, thinking that such barbarity would deter other Riffians from fighting for their country. It will not. I would like to call attention to the fact that the Spanish soldiers are presumably catholics, and that catholics are presumably christians. Those who still believe that christianity, or any other religion is anything but a monstrous fraud might try squaring the action of the Spanish troops with their conception of civilized conduct. Fortunately, however, the Riffians, are giving the christian barbarians an exciting time. Good luck to them.

FINDING GOAT TO PAY FOR RUM KINGS' GAMBOLS

G. O. P. Bosses Involved in Graft Scandal

Captain Wesley H. Westbrook, ex-warden of the county jail stands a good chance of being made the leading goat in the scandal arising out of the liberties accorded to Messers Druggan and Lake, leading bootleggers and tenants of the local jail.

Westbrook is charged with having accepted money from the bootleggers for services rendered in making their prison life as free from restraint as possible. It has been proven beyond the shadow of a doubt that the rum magnates enjoyed considerable liberty, the only thing that remains to be shown, who got their dough.

The Big Guns Thunder

Sheriff Hoffman, one of the big guns in the Barrett-Crowe-Brundage faction of the republican party intends to throw Westbrook to the wolves. He hints that the ex-warden took the alcohol barons' money. If he did not, he is out of luck, because he will need a lot of money to save him from occupying a cell in what was once his own balliwick. The big chiefs of the republican party cannot afford to have their honesty impugned and Westbrook is about small enough and big enough to fill the role of scapegoat.

When Judge Wilkerson yesterday ordered the arrest of Westbrook and a few other lesser lights in the county jail, everybody knew that there was going to be some hanging done.

Paid Thru the Snout

Frank Lake, was after testifying that he paid "thru the nose" for every favor he received while in the county jail. Lake first paid $1,000 for a transfer from the jail laundry to an orderly's task in the jail hospital. He was compelled to pay $2,500 a month, in addition to "bonuses" and "fines." Lake declared that he had to pay good rum money for treatment accorded to other prisoners for nothing.

Lake paid $1,500 for the privilege of visiting his sister on her death bed and going to her funeral later. For being released before expiration of sentence he paid $2,000. The show continues.

This is only another instance of the rotteness of capitalist government. The outcome will be: a few minor flunkies will be slaughtered. The big fellows like Hoffman will escape punishment.

R. I. L. U. Urges World Solidarity as Goal of Striking Seamen

tion Committee endorses and around which we urge all marine workers, organized and unorganized, here and abroad, to rally in support.

A Necessity of First Importance.

What connections, other than one of mere information, the M. T. W. has built up with the strike committees and official heads of the other unions now on strike, the bulletins of the M. T. W. strike committee does not state. But such connections are of the most necessary sort.

Looking ahead, we perceive that the need for close co-operation between these and other seamen's organizations is not going to end with the present strike. The value of this strike to the M. T. W., the prestige it has gained before the whole world of organized labor must be cherished and held for the future. The lessons it is giving to the revolutionary movement of all the world must be retained and added to by future and more complete solidarity.

Now while the seamen of the world are watching the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union and applauding the fight they are putting up, joining with them and looking to them to continue upon the path of international co-operation—now is the time for the M. T. W. officially to set up with their fellow workers on strike overseas a committee of action or some other form of definite co-operation in order that no break in the fighting front of the seamen may lead to partial or total defeat and to insure in the future as in the present strike, that the ranks of the rebel toilers of the sea are welded into a compact body which will bring the capitalist exploiters to terms.

For unity and revolutionary struggle,

Red International Affiliation Committee,

Harrison George, Chairman.

position in which the strike leaves the organization in this port.

I. S. U. Furnished Scabs.

"It was not anticipated that the strike would result in any sweeping victory. The extent of the organization and the preparation did not justify such expectation, and the steady opposition and scabbing tactics of the I. S. U. officialdom were not overlooked—but great quantities of strike literature were thoroly distributed over the water front and the ground well prepared for the organization campaign which proceeds right on from the strike. A very considerable increase in membership has resulted from the strike and some strong fighting elements have joined the port delegate body as a result.

Great Interest in World Unity.

"Tho there was great activity about strike headquarters today, the membership did not overlook the manifesto, published quite fully in one of the morning papers as cabled from London, of the joint advisory council set up last April by the general council of the British Trades Union Congress and the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions. The manifesto, which calls in militant tones for trade union unity thruout the world was strongly commended.

• • •

The manifesto as quoted in the London cables reads as follows:

Employers' World Wide Attacks.

"The industrial and economic situation, aggravated by the Dawes plan in most countries, has become worse since the beginning of this year. Unemployment is world-wide in its effects and is steadily increasing. Attacks of the employing class on workers' hours and wages become more and more definite and deliberate.

"Parallel with the growth of economic reaction the political situation has become more and more reactionary and obstructive to working class interets. In various parts of Europe reactionary groups of capitalists are obtaining more and more power and leadership in the policy of the state and the danger of war is becoming nearer and more evident.

Imperialism Prepares War.

"The Anglo-Russian Conference last April, in the following words, expressed the situation as it had developed up to that time: 'Already it would appear that a new war, more terrible and more monstrous than any hitherto, is being prepared.'

"These words still persevere and maintain their full force. Already in Morocco, in Syria, in China the thunder of warfare is giving evidence of the justice of this warning.

"War is being waged on the Riffs in Morocco and upon the Arabs in Syria, while the Chinese workers and peasants are revolting against exploitation and usurpation and are held down by armed force.

New Menace to Soviet Russia.

"This is making clear to all workers of the world the insincerity of the lofty professions of peace made by capitalist statesmen. The guarantee pact places upon Germany the duty of using sanctions against the states unwilling to submit to the league of nations. The object of this is to include Germany in a military alliance directed against Soviet Russia. This would make Germany a constant menace to Soviet Russia and at the same time would create in Germany a strategical base for any projected attack upon the Soviet Republics.

Clear Way for One World Union.

"The establishment of an all-inclusive world-wide trade union international has therefore become more necessary than ever. The world-wide and active sympathy aroused by the creation of the Anglo-Russian joint advisory council among the workers of all countries is unmistakable proof of the justice and correctness of the line taken by the Anglo-Russian conference, of the practical proposals adopted and the inevitable success of the cause of national and international trade union unity.

"The joint advisory council, prompted by the firm desire ardently expressed by more than 11,000,000 British and Russian workers, appeals to the workers of every country, and to their organizations and leaders, to join their efforts with the British and Russian trade union movements in order to secure the removal of all obstacles and difficulties in the way of national and international working class unity, and to help them bring into existence oe all-inclusive world wide federation of trade unions."

Illiteracy Campaign in 1924-25.

MOSCOW.—The number of schools for the elimination of illiteracy on the territory of Russian Soviet Republic Socialist Republic has been increased 15 times in the last two years. In 1922-23 the schools for illiterates took charge of 100,000 pupils. In 1924-25 there were 30,000 schools for illiterates with a total of 1,500,000 pupils.

It Is Capitalism That Breeds Its Disorders, Chaos and Catastrophes

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the "socialists" in Wisconsin, in trying to hoodwink the voters of the state into voting their ticket in Tuesday's special U. S. senatorial elections, give added testimony that they have carefully schooled themselves in the betrayals of the workers as practiced by their counterpart European social-democrats.

It has been said that the budget put thru by the late "labor government" in Great Britain, headed by J. Ramsay MacDonald, provided the best financial policy that British capitalism ever had. The Wisconsin "socialists" now place themselves directly in accord with this financial policy, intimating that in Wisconsin, if given power, they would follow in MacDonald's footsteps.

• • • •

Listen to this promise from "Vic" Berger's Milwaukee Leader:

> "When it (the British Labor Party) comes into power the next time, it will proceed to socialize some industries and impose a levy on capital."

It is declared that MacDonald's Independent Labor Party has appointed a committee to study "ways and means of inaugurating socialism," the above being evidently the means, while at the same time the world is warned that the I. L. P. committee that is on the job making this investigation abhors the "extremist idea of a sudden and catastrophic revolution."

The I. L. P. committee, therefore, that has the endorsement of the Wisconsin "socialists," pledges itself to do everything to "avoid methods that would disorder industry," but to promote the "gradual revolution," "to keep industries going during the process of socialization."

• • • •

This was one of the pillars upon which the German social-democrats based their betrayal of the German working class; that led them to support the German capitalist republic in place of the German Soviet republic.

In peace time the industries must be kept going, to develop progressively, preparing for the day of so-called "socialization" under capitalism. The workers must not seize the industries, as a preliminary to seizing the state power, because that might bring about disorder. So argue the British and German "socialists." And during war, they say, the workers must not strike in industry or seize the state power, because that would bring about the "catastrophic revolution" that every social-democrat fears. This led, of course, in Germany, to the "socialist" alliance with the kaiserdom, during the war, in the breaking of strikes, as openly admitted with pride by Fritz Ebert, the late "socialist" president of Germany. It leads, during peace, in Great Britain, to the MacDonalds, the Hendersons and the Thomases, allying themselves with British capitalism against the growing efforts of the workers to win better conditions for themselves.

It is no act of the workers that brings the "disorder" and the "chaos" into industry, that the "socialists" tell of. It is capitalist management that has brought chaos into the American coal industry, for instance, during peace times. It was the world war of imperialist groups of nations that spread the disorder thruout Europe that still persists to the present day. Everywhere except in the Union of Soviet Republics, where the workers and peasants seized power and fearlessly swept aside the wreckage of the czardom and began to build anew under workers' rule. The German social-democrats prevented labor from achieving the same triumph in Germany. MacDonald's labor party is trying to render the same service to British imperialism; just as Berger's "socialists" are serving American capitalism in Wisconsin.

The Communists fight for workers' rule. It has been established thruout the Soviet Union and stands adamant against the capitalist world. The victory nears in Germany. British capitalism is slipping off its precipice beneath which lies its self-created chaos. Even American imperialism, today the proudest and mightiest thruout the world, prepares the new wars and the disorders that will bring about its own destruction, engulfing its "socialist" allies along with itself, while the workers and poor farmers, under Communist leadership, pluck their triumph out of this catastrophe and go forward to the new world economy under Communism.

LOVESTONE TO ADDRESS NEW YORK SHOP NUCLEI ON W. P. REORGANIZATION

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Jay Lovestone, member of the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party and head of the reorganization department charged with reorganizing the party on the basis of shop nuclei, will address a shop nuclei membership meeting, Tuesday, Sept. 29, at 6:30 p. m. at the Workers Party headquarters, 108 East 14 St.

Every party member belonging to a shop nucleus must attend this meeting where many important problems will be taken up.

Any party member desiring to be present will be admitted if he has his membership card with him.

Farmer Blown to Bits.

PARIS, Ill., Sept. 25—Charles Dunn, a well known farmer of this county, was instantly killed late Thursday evening by a premature explosion of dynamite. He was removing a large rock in his corn field. When his father did not return home, a son went in search and found fragments of his body scattered over the ground.

Four Drown in Wine Vat.

AVINGTON, France, Sept. 25.—Four persons, overcome by fumes of wine, met death by drowning in a wine vat here.

A wine producer was first overcome by the fumes from the vat and fell into it. His son and two other persons attempted to rescue him, but were also overcome by the fumes and fell into the vat and were drowned.

JEWISH WORKERS RECEIVE LAND IN SOVIET UKRAINE

Agricultural Colonies Increase Rapidly

MOSCOW, Sept. 25.—According to existing plans of the All-Ukrainian Jewish Agricultural Settlement Society, 4,000 Jewish families are to be put on the land during the current year. The desire among the Jewish masses for agricultural colonization is so great that the available fund of arable lands is far from adepuate to satisfy all applicants. It is proposed to increase the rate of colonization by 20—25 per cent in the next year.

The government of Soviet Ukraine has set aside 60,000 dessiatines of land for the purposes of Jewish colonization in the Ukraine. Forest lands have also been assigned for the use of Jewish settlers in building their homes. Special credit organizations are being established to finance the Jewish colonists.

COUNTY PRISON MATRON BEATS NEGRO INMATE

Took Bath at Wrong Hour in Jail

Mrs. Elizabeth Wright, matron at the Cook county jail on North Dearborn Street, was responsible for the inhuman beating up of Theresa Allen, a Negro inmate awaiting grand jury action. The matron had a number of Negro and white prisoners beat up Theresa Allen for an infringement of jail rules.

The representative of the DAILY WORKER learned that the infringement of the jail rules was the taking of a bath at the wrong hour. The matron ordered Theresa Allen to solitary confinement. Theresa protested, then the matron coerced a number of prisoners into beating up the violator of jail discipline.

The attorney for Theresa Allen was surprised to find his client in the condition that he did. Hardly able to stand, clothing covered with blood, one eye completely closed and the other black and swollen, she told her lawyer, how five women, three colored and two white beat her into an unconscious state and then threw her into solitary. The lawyer had her removed to the hospital immediately.

Due to vigorous protest on the part of many leading Negroes the matron was dismissed.

Warden Weideling in dismissing the matron commented: "It was proper to enforce discipline, but guards are here for that purpose—not the other prisoners."

Matron Witnesses Hanging

GLASGOW, Sept. 25.—Magistrate Mary Bell, the matron who sentenced him to death, watched the hanging of John Keeny. It was the first time in English history that a woman was an official witness of an execution. The law requires that the magistrate passing sentence witness the execution.

She arrived at the prison at 7:45 o'clock, witnessed the preparation for the gallows and then accompanied the procession up the scaffold.

JOBLESS MINERS JAILED FOR NOT GOING HUNGRY

Fishing Costs Them $2 Each in Penna.

By CHARLES BOSWELL
(Worker Correspondent)

MARIANNA, Pa., Sept. 25.—On Tuesday in the borough of Marianna, 15 or more locked out coal miners were arrested on a charge of "illegal fishing" and fined $28 each, with the alternative of paying the fine or going to jail.

It happens that the water in Ten Mile creek, from which the coal company owned by the Bethlehem Steel corporation gets its water supply, has become almost dry and, as a result, thousands of fish were dying owing to the stagnation of the water and the water pumped from the mine.

Some of these miners who have been deprived of the "right to work" since the 15th of May, caught some of these fish used them as food, and pronounced them excellent.

The state of Pennsylvania, however, requires that one contribute one dollar to the political grafters for the privilege of fishing—even though you are starving and the fish are going to die anyway. So these miners had, in the opinion of the magistrate, injured the law $28 worth.

One man who had not taken any of the fish himself, was given some by another man, but he also was fined a like amount, and on his refusal to pay the $28 was taken to jail and $3 more added to his fine—for "contempt of court."

This is a sample of "law" and "justice" as administered in the coal camps of the state. It is also an illustration of the graft practiced by those who are sworn to uphold the dignity of the law. Can we have respect for this kind of law? Can we respect the kind of men who administer it?

NEW YORK, ATTENTION!

There will be an important meeting of all branch industrial organizers and leading comrades in each industrial fraction, Monday evening, Sept. 28, at 8 o'clock, at 108 East 14th street.

Each industry and craft must be represented by at least one leading comrade.

BERT MILLER, Industrial Org.

Chicago Membership Meeting, Wednesday, October 7th

The Chicago membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party, Local Chicago, called to discuss the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei, will be held WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1925, 8 p. m., at NORTHWEST HALL, North and Western Aves. All party members must attend. Speakers: C. E. Ruthenberg and M. Abern.

ARMY HEADS LAY PLANS FOR NEXT WORLD CARNAGE

More Appropriations to Be Demanded

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The investigation by President Coolidge's special board headed by Dwight Morrow of Morgan & Co., into the aircraft controversy, gave the army chiefs a chance to lay their plans for the next war before the country. Acting Secretary of War Davis, Chief of Staff Hines and Assistant Chief of Staff Drum, supported by General Patrick, chief of the army air service, took advantage of the opportunity. They presented figures and charts showing how tremendous an air force, along with other branches of the military establishment, have been mapped out for the war that may come.

One thing made clear was that the army wants the American people to put up a good many millions to buy coast defense guns that can be aimed at aircraft. Gen. Drum suggested 350 big guns and 520 machine guns for the anti-aircraft defense of the New York region. The present number of army air service officers on active duty is 921, with 3,564 enlisted men. This would be enlarged to 4,000 officers and 25,000 enlisted men as a first step.

WORKER CORRESPONDENTS GIVE VIEWS AND SUGGESTIONS TO DAILY WORKER

More valuable suggestions have been received by the DAILY WORKER as a feature of International Press Day. Readers also tell us how the DAILY WORKER is valuable to them.

Charlotte F. Jones, of West Chester, Pa., says: "I read the DAILY WORKER because I am a Communist."

Comrade Jones promises to become a worker correspondent for the DAILY WORKER, and declares that "a certain space should be given especially to the dates of meetings and other announcements", and declares that the language used should be such that the workers can easily understand it.

"I read the DAILY WORKER and I am very much interested in its welfare," writes S. Weinberg from Philadelphia, Pa. "Therefore I induce other workers to read it and to subscribe. It does not compete with the yellow press, but speaks for the workers. It answers with facts every lie the capitalist sheets tell. Considering that the DAILY WORKER has to cover a national demand, there is very little more to be desired from the contents, until we have a DAILY WORKER in every important locality.

"Those who have never seen the Daily before like the articles. Therefore I always manage to have a few clippings of what I think is interesting. And when I am thru reading the DAILY WORKER I pass it on to some one else whom I know will read by securing subs and displaying it on it. Let us all try hard and give the DAILY WORKER a decent circulation the stands."

"I read the DAILY WORKER because I feel that I am getting the real facts," says V. K. D., of New York. The world's facts are put in a simple and clear manner. "There is not enough variety of subject matter for both Communists and neutral workers" he adds. "The magazine page in the Saturday's issue is interesting. Also the 'As we see it' column is good. There should be a special column every day for worker correspondent stories."

From A. J. MacPhee of Milwaukee comes the word, "I read the DAILY WORKER because it is the only workingclass daily published in the English language. Considering the size of the field to be covered by one English language paper, I see no shortcomings except those due to lack of funds."

Wayne Adamson, of Chicago, says "I read the DAILY WORKER because it prints the true facts about the affairs of the workers and is not afraid to come out on their side. It always comes to the aid of the workers in all their difficulties, exposes the labor faker wherever and whenever he shows himself. The DAILY WORKER explains to the workers how they have been and are now being betrayed by those human parasites. There are few shortcomings, if any."

MINNEAPOLIS PARTY MEMBERSHIP MEETING ON SUNDAY, SEPT. 27

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. Cept. 25.—The Minneapolis Workers Party membership meeting will be held on Sunday Sept. 27th at 1 p. m. at the Finnish Hall, 1317 Western Ave., North. Comrade J. Louis Engdahl will report for the C. E. C. on the national convention and the immediate tasks for our party with regard to Bolshevization and reorganization. All other party activities are called off for this meeting and every member must attend.

Socialists Get Fitting Recognition by League of World Imperialism

GENEVA, Sept. 25.—In the reapportionment of the non-permanent seats of the league of nations council, Belgium will retain her seat on the basis that some representation must be given the socialists. This seems an appropriate recognition of the services, which the socialists have performed in crushing proletarian movements and assisting the capitalists of the world, from the international of capitalist imperialism.

Nightshirts in Near East

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 25.—The ku klux klan has invaded the Near East. According to dispatches from Salonika, a business man there received threatening letters signed with the name of the American masked order.

Why Not Build a Wall Around California and Be Sure of Job?

SAN FRANCISCO—(F.P.)—Federal prisons are so overcrowded that a new one is to be built in California to supplement McNeil's Island, Leavenworth and Atlanta. Anthony A. Griffin is at present in San Francisco to make a survey of possible sites, under instructions of a special congressional committee. California state prisons are also badly congested, and there is strong agitation for another in southern California to take overflow from San Quentin and Folsom, largely due to operation of the criminal syndicalism law.

EMPLOYES OF UNCLE SAMUEL WANT A RAISE

But They Beg Congress Instead of Striking

WASHINGTON—(F. P.)—Returned from their eigth convention, held in Boston, President Steward and Secretary McNally of the National Federation of Federal Employes announce a membership drive in support of a program of wage increases and other betterments which must be secured from Congress. They argue that the postoffice workers secured a salary increase of $300 a year because they are organised nearly 100 percent. Federal employes outside the postal and other industrial branches of the public service are still far from that degree of group consciousness.

A minimum salary of $1,500 for all full time adult employes was the outstanding economic demand made by this convention. Other points in the program include a Saturday half holiday the year around, establishment of sick leave as a right, increased travelling allowance, liberalization of the present old-age retirement law, fair administration of the classification law for the District of Columbia, reclassification of the field services, a six-day week for all services, overtime pay for work in excess of regular hours, preferential treatment of employes dropped from the rolls, abolition of the personnel classification board, and payment by the government of premiums on bonds for bonded employes.

Steward and Miss McNally point out the necessity for an immediate and thorough membership drive, to make the influence of the organization felt in every congressional district in the country.

Boss Dictatorship Deports One Wobbly; Another Threatened

SAN FRANCISCO—(F.P.) — Pat O'Hara, arrested in a raid on Marine Transport headquarters in San Francisco last December, and held eight months on Angel Island for deportation, has at last been deported to his home in New Zealand. An effort is also being made to deport James Olson, a criminal syndicalism prisoner in San Quentin who will be released next February. The Defense Committee has started proceedings to quash this action.

High Tension Wire Kills

Andrew Paulliena, 45, died here early today when he attempted to remove a high tension wire from a puddle of water. Paulliena was repairing a temporary lighting system on a construction job, power for which was taken from an arc light. Sparks and blue fire shooting from his body terrified fellow workers, who were afraid to touch it until an electric man had pulled the wire from the water.

Sparks Start Big Fire

DANVILLE, Ill., Sept. 25.—Fire believed to have been started by sparks from a locomotive on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railway destroyed the plant of the F. C. Webber Mfg. company at Hoopeston with a loss of $50,000. Several box cars on the C. and E. I. railway tracks and a section house of the railway were also destroyed. The company will rebuild at once.

Leningrad Public Library.

LENINGRAD.—Since the revolution the Leningrad Public Library has been enriched by over a million volumes. The library is devoting great attention to the work among the masses, lending out about 150,000 books monthly and organizing numerous exhibitions.

The library contains at present 4,000,000 volumes, being in this respect the second largest library in the world.

HEAD OF BRITISH LABOR SEES END OF WAGE SYSTEM

What Will "Bill" Green Say About It?

SCARBOROUGH, Engl., (F.P.)—"It seems to me, that we are entering upon a new phase of development in the upward struggle of our class," said A. B. Swales, president of the British Trade Union Congress, in opening the annual meeting. "All around are signs of an awakening consciousness in the peoples of all countries that the present system of society is condemned . . . . The backward centres of industrial and political slavery are rising in revolt against the capitalist order of society; and so we see India, China, and other Eastern countries in the throes of upheaval and demanding the right of selfdetermination . . . . Those who believe that a new order of society is inevitable, cannot do other than rejoice that at last there are clear indications of a world movement rising in revolt and determined to shake off the shackles of wage slavery. Just as our people have passed out of slavedom into serfdom, and out of serfdom into wagedom, so will they finally pass out of wagedom into freedom."

These sentences sum up the main conclusions of a speech filled with references to the failure of capitalism and to the necessity for the working class to take hold of the economic and technical institutions and create a new social order. "The workers must sweep away such a system and replace it by a structure based upon co-operation, and in which every man and woman will be assured the full fruits of their labor."

President Swales gave a careful review of the present economic situation in the British Isles, and pointed out how the low standards in India and China were cutting under British living and working conditions.

Membership in the Trade Union Congress is about thirty thousand greater than it was in 1924. The number of delegates at the 1925 congress is 724, representing an affiliated membership of 4,342,982. The number of unions, on the other hand, shows a steady decrease, as the process of consolidation is still in full swing. There are 15 per cent fewer separate unions in the United Kingdom than there were in 1920.

In Revolt!

For the first time in the history of international class solidarity, we hear the voice of the Chinese workers calling to the workers of other countries for a helping hand.

For the first time in the history of proletarian revolts in China, we find the Chinese workers awakening to the spirit of international proletarianism.

For the first time in history the Chinese workers are beginning to understand the true meaning of capitalism, militarism, and exploitation.

THEY ARE AWAKENING!

In all the principal cities of China today, the workers are rising in revolt against their oppressors, feeling the breath of freedom that comes to them from the workers' government of Soviet Russia, they too, want to be free.

The iron hand of international imperialism is pressing harder and harder upon their throats in an effort to starve them and keep them in submission, abject slavery and servitude.

The success of international capitalism spells starvation, exploitation, imprisonment and death for the workers of all countries.

MUST THEY STARVE?

THE CHINESE WORKERS ARE WAGING A BATTLE FOR LIFE AND FREEDOM.

THEIR VICTORY WILL BE OUR VICTORY.

A LIBERATED CHINESE WORKER, MEANS A LIBERATED WORKER EVERYWHERE.

THEY NEED OUR HELP—MORALLY AND FINANCIALLY.

WE MUST RALLY TO THEIR SUPPORT AND HELP FEED THEM.

IN RUSSIA, ENGLAND, GERMANY, FRANCE, AUSTRALIA, EVERYWHERE THE WORKERS ARE SUPPORTING THE WORKERS OF CHINA.

SO WILL WE.

We Hate to Do It

It gives us no joy to chronicle the fall from grace of the official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, edited by the highly respectable and responsible Joseph Schlossberg. But in the interest of veracity we must call attention to the fact that those with the best of intentions sometimes go wrong when confronted with facts that run counter to their conceptions of how things should run. Thus it is with the honorable Brother Schlossberg, editor of Advance.

Schlossberg goes on the rocks when he essays to produce an article written by A. A. Purcell, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions, for the Labor Monthly. The article deals with the necessity for a united trade union international.

If the editor of Advance had not written a long introduction to Purcell's article, stating that he did not subscribe to all the details of the argument presented by Brother Purcell, it is possible that our intelligence department might never have gotten suspicious. But when the following sentence hit our editorial eye we immediately got our Cheka on Brother Schlossberg's track. This is what got us guessing: "We preferred to print the article in full, instead of 'editing' it, which, we believe, is a better way of not taking sides in a controversial issue than to eliminate specific reference and thereby color the statement of the writer." So wrote Brother Schlossberg.

No doubt the intentions of the editor were of the best, but we shall publish a paragraph from Purcell's article in the Labor Monthly and the same paragraph minus what you may notice missing in the Advance, so that you can see for yourself that the wicked Communists have not a monopoly on all the tricks that cause our yellow and pink socialists to grieve for the salvation of our souls.

This is the paragraph from Purcell's article as it appeared in the Labor Monthly:

> It is the Second International which tolerates in its midst an Abramovich who represents nobody but himself, as representative of the Russian workers. It is the secretary of the Second International, Friedrick Adler, who has perpetrated the most unscrupulous and contemptible attack yet made on the Report of the British Delegation to Russia—an attack which has received the "honor" of appreciative comment in the Morning Post.

Now read carefully how the official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, edited by the highly particular Joseph Schlossberg, gives the same paragraph:

> It is the Second International which tolerates in its midst LEADERS who represent nobody but THEMSELVES as representatives of the Russian workers. It is the secretary of the Second International who has perpetrated the most unscrupulous and contemptible attack yet made on the Report of the British Delegation to Russia, etc.

We have emphasized the editing. Go and chase the omissions.

The editor of the Advance would have done better if he had omitted the confession of honesty in his editorial note. If he had done that he might have gotten away with the attempt to save the yellow hide of his friend Abramovitch.

Of course, there is a possibility that the real villain in the piece is our old friend Charles Ervin, former editor of the New York Call, who, we understand, is acting editor of the Advance. But Brother Schlossberg is the responsible editor and responsible for debauching an article by such a responsible trade unionist as A. A. Purcell, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions.

We May Have More Tears from John H. Walker

In order to keep his political hide from getting nailed on the fence Governor Small apparently has decided to seek new alliances and discard some of his old team-mates.

The governor is more than slightly troubled over the probable outcome of the efforts made by some of his enemies, to compel him to return a large sum of money into the state treasury which he is accused of misappropriating while he occupied the office of state treasurer, thru the manipulation of interest on state funds.

The labor fakers have backed up the governor 100 per cent in the recent past. In return for their support he handed them a few fat jobs and rendered other favors, none of which benefited the rank and file of the workers to the extent of a French franc, which is about the most contemptible bit of currency now in existence. But the fakers are decidedly optimistic and can wait for any length of time for the fulfillment of a political promise, that is, the part of it that concerns the masses. For their own part, they insist on payment in advance or at least C. O. D.

But there is trouble in store for Messers. Walker, Olander, Fitzpatrick, Nockels, Farrington and the other labor fakers who have been having such a good time on the Small bandwagon. Small has broken with Frank L. Smith, chairman of the republican state committee, and Smith's former political manager. Frank Farrington has been a loyal supporter of Smith for many years. Whether he will stay with the governor or with Smith depends on which of the two Frank thinks will better serve his material interests.

Small is flirting with his old foes in the McKinley and Deneen camps. This "friend of labor" is now taking to his bosom the Brundage-Deneen-Crowe gang that raised heaven in an effort to crucify the Williamson county miners a few years ago. Only last week, at the Illinois State Federation of Labor, Walker and company sang the praises of Small and also of Smith, who wants to be United States senator from Illinois. Both were "friends of labor."

This is non-partisan political action! Walker, Fitzpatrick and company no longer believe in independent political action on the part of the workers. They say it does not pay. It is true it does not pay the labor fakers as well as selling the workers to the capitalist parties. Walker and his reactionary cohorts will drag the workers of Illinois thru the political stables of as corrupt a gang of capitalist grafters as exists in this country.

The only effective reply the workers of this state can make to the treachery of those who make them partners in the unsavory political gang fights of the capitalist parties, is the organization of a labor party, that will split the workers away from all parties of capitalism.

DAILY WORKER CLUB APPOINTS NEW COMMITTEE

Aim to Build Bigger Communist Daily

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—At a well attended meeting of their club, the DAILY WORKER Builders of New York elected a board of directors to cooperate with the manager of the DAILY WORKER New York Agency in arranging campaigns and affairs to make the DAILY WORKER a greater power in New York.

Those elected are: Geza Szepesi of the Hungarian Yorkville branch; Leo Kling, of English No. 1, Bronx; Veronica Golashewski, of Y. W. L. No. 16; John Kasper of the Armenian branch and Abe Rubin and Helen Meader of the Downtown English. Each one of these comrades has not only proven devoted interest in the DAILY WORKER by past activities but also that he knows how to achieve results. With their help, increased success is assured to every undertaking for the DAILY WORKER in the center of world capitalism.

Board Till Next Affair

These comrades will constitute the board until the next DAILY WORKER "affair" in New York. The idea adopted is to consider as members of the DAILY WORKER Builders Club all those that during the proceding period (the year has been divided into three periods) come up to a certain minimum requirement of service to the DAILY WORKER.

Each period will end in some special "affair" to which all those that have qualified will receive tickets without cost. The first period ended with the excursion and re-union at Stony Point. The present period will end with the DAILY WORKER anniversary on January 13th, and another period late in the spring.

Club Requirement

The minimum requirement for this period to become a member of the club, or to remain a member, is to secure at least $10 worth of subs or bring in at least $5 in donations or give at least twenty hours work to the DAILY WORKER New York office, either in office or field work under the direction of the manager of the New York agency.

The board of directors for the next period will be elected at the Jannuary 13th affair from those that make the best records for the DAILY WORKER by that time. Past performances and reputation will not count—only the record of achievement during this period. It will therefore be not only an opportunity to serve, but a real distinction, to be honored with a place on the board of directors of the New York DAILY WORKER Builders' Club.

Membership Not Limited

Membership in the club is not limited to members of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League. Any reader of the DAILY WORKER is eligible and invited to join. Application should be made to the manager of the DAILY WORKER New York office, L. E. Katterfeld, 108 East 14th Street.

Three hundred members are now qualified, and it is hoped to increase this number to one thousand before the Second Anniversary of the DAILY WORKER on January 13th.

AMERICAN AUTO MAKER BACKED GERMAN KLAN?

Arrested "Knights" Admit American Aid

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—It is intimated in Germany that a famous manufacturer of automobiles in America financed the project for organizing the klan in Germany. When first arrested the klansmen told the police that they were out to fight the "jews and other sinister influences" and admitted financial backing from America.

Former Officers Join.

The material seized by the raiders, shows that the organization was mainly composed of students and former officers of the army.

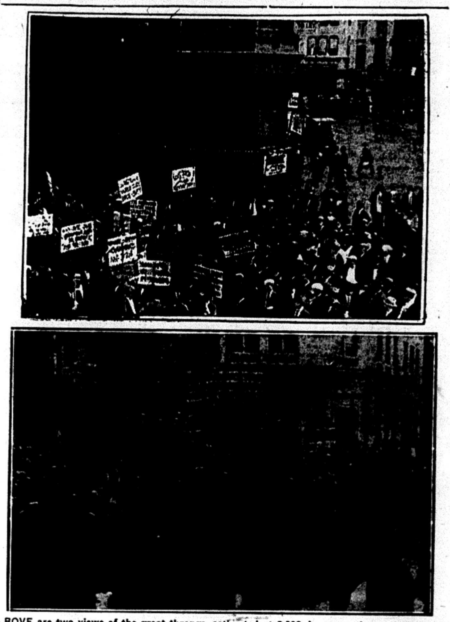
100 Families Routed by Fire

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Punctuated by a series of one hundred explosions, as flames reached a corresponding number of gasoline tanks an early morning fire today destroyed the Madison Avenue Bridge Garage at Madison Ave. and 136th St. One hundred families in adjoining apartments were routed to the streets in a near-freezing temperature as firemen fought the blaze.

Claim Rail Revenues Decline

Railroad revenues for the first seven months of the year, just reported, reveal that only 70 lines earned in excess of $1,000,000. The situation is "the most serious in the history of United States transportation," according to Samuel O. Dunn, editor of Railway Age and spokesman for western railroad presidents.

8,000 In Saklatvala Protest!



ABOVE are two views of the great throngs, estimated at 8,000 by even the capitalist press, that heard the speakers at the New York City demonstration in historic Union Square against the barring of Shapurji Saklatvala, the Communist member of the British parliament, from the United States. He was coming here to attend the sessions of the interparliamentary union at Washington, D. C. Myriads of placards were carried by those in the demonstration demanding the admission of Saklatvala, urging world trade unity and calling for a workers' and farmers' government in the United States.

RECOUP LOSSES DURING WINTER, IS RIFFIAN AIM

Aviators Consider Note April Fool Joke

FEZ, French Morocco, Sept. 25.—"Winter will soon re-establish our victorious situation," Abd-el-Krim told his followers. "The European troops are summer fighters; you are warriors in all seasons." With the coming of the rainy season the Riffs will be able to recoup the losses which they have suffered under the combined attack of armored French tanks and mercenary American aviators.

The French are busy in making roads over which cannon has to be hauled. These roads will be impassable with the winter rains and the French will have to rely on machine guns and rifles and war on equal footing with the Riffians. The Moroccan tribesmen are recognized as better shots and have proved their fighting ability by their successful warfare against French imperialism until the Spanish and American mercenaries entered the scene.

To Mobilize 80 Battalions.

The French and Spanish military forces are hard-pressed in many places and are planning to throw 80 battallions into an offensive movement they expect to organize against the Riffan fighters for Moroccoan independence, before the winter rains.

The order to the American aviators to cease their activities in the war of France and Spain against the Riffians from Washington is the chief topic of conversation. The French are not saying much officially, but the question is asked by many of the French officials, if this action is illegal why did the American state department allow the squadron to be organized, and why did they not protest earlier instead of at this late date? The note is not regarded as a sincere attempt of the United States to force the aviators to cease.

Aviators Laugh at Note.

The American aviators pay no regard to the note. Colonel Charles Sweeney, commander of the American aviators in the service of the French at Morocco, sent the following telegram to the United States to a correspondent for one of the news services:

"After consulting all of the members of the Lafayette squadron, unanimous decision was taken to allow nothing to stop us from carrying on the work upon which we have set out."

No answer has been given by the state department to the attitude taken by the American aviators.

Krim Offers $5,000 Reward.

QUEZZAN, French Morocco, Sept. 25.—Abd-el-Krim has offered rewards totalling $5,000 for any of the mercenary American aviators brot in, dead or alive. The tribesmen have decided upon this expedient to stop the inhuman bombing and firing of Riffian villages. American aviators have dropped tons of explosives over villages, killing hundreds of innocent children and women.

A number of American aviators have been brot down by the Riffian sharp shooting tribesmen.

Chinese Workers Greet Delegates from Soviet Russia's Labor Unions

SHANGHAI, (Tass), Sept. 25.—The delegation of the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions were given a hearty ovation by the Shanghai Council of Labor Unions.

Tho the trade union activities in the international settlement have been suppressed and the union activities in the town are controlled by the Mukden authorities, the Chinese leaders pointed out, the spirit of the Chinese workers on strike was excellent.

Ther are over 150,000 operatives employed by the English and Japanese on strike drawing 6 dollars from the Shanghai council. The council spends a sum of $1,200,000 monthly in strike relief. So far most of this sum has been collected in the interior of China. It is very necessary that China receive international assistance, as the strike continues to spread and more funds are needed.

There are 128 unions affiliated with the Shanghai council.

Reading Huts in Russia.

MOSCOW.—The number of rural reading huts in Siberia is steadily growing. Their present number is about 1,700, of which 82 are run in other languages than Russian.

In the year 1925-26, the chief board of political education plans to open 230 reading huts in Armenian villages.

A number of workers are being trained at Erivan to become reading-hut librarians.

NEW STRIKE CALL IN W. VA. COAL FIELDS

Lewis Announced as Fairmount Speaker

FAIRMONT, W. V., Sept. 25—An order has gone out to miners' locals in the Fairmont field for every miner with his family to take part in a mass meeting to be held here Sept. 26. This will mark the beginning of an intensified drive to organize the miners of northern West Virginia following a new strike call effective Sept. 25.

The mass meeting, according to the order, will "demonstrate to the coal operators that the United Mine Workers are in northern West Virginia to stay.". It will be addressed by President John L. Lewis.

This means storm clouds of a different sort from those in the hard coal regions where silent thousands of determined miners are holding their lines. Where the anthracite workers are on strike gunmen and deputies are absent, consequently there is no violence. But the atmosphere of this region is entirely different for the leading non-union state swarms with agents of bloodshed in the employ of the operators.

The first thrust in this new attempt to win the state for unionism is the attack on the territory between Little Kanawha and the Cheat. The results are being watched with interest not unmixed with anxiety by government officials and the big interests back of the entire coal industry. For it is felt that union success in West Virginia would tend to shut off the chief supply of anthracite substitutes on which open shop interests are depending to beat the union in the hard coal fields.

Anti-Soviet Leader Surrenders

MOSCOW, (Tass) Sept. 25.—Habarovsk reports that Cherniayeff, a notorious white bandit, has given himself up to the authorities there and is begging for amnesty. Cherniayeff formerly played a conspicuous part in the leadership of anti-Soviet revolts in the Trans-Baikal region.

IMPERIALISTS QUARREL OVER CHINESE RADIO

4 Nations Claim Contract Rights

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 25.—Much excitement goes on under the surface concerning the proposal received by the state department over the quarrel between the United States and Japan regarding conflicting radio contracts granted by China to the Federal Telegraph company of America and the Mitsui company of Japan.

Officials refuse to divulge just what the latest Japanese proposal is, tho it is understood to suggest a co-operative arrangement. America, with her own imperialist interests to serve, contends that the Mitsui company contract, which was signed in 1918, three years before the concession to the American concern, is a violation of the "open door" policy because it grants the Mitsui firm the monopoly. The United States therefore insist on prying the "closed door" open.

Further complications are protests filed by England and Denmark, Britain claiming to have a prior monopoly, while Denmark claims that her righteous concession was cancelled by pressure of the allies who alleged it was really a contract with German interests.

All-India Congress Protests Evclusion of Saklatvala by U. S.

terparliamentary union, protest his exclusion thru the All-India Congress.

The Workers (Communist) Party is arranging large United Front demonstrations in Philadelphia, Cleveland, Boston, Pittsburgh, Minneapolis, San Francisc and great industrial centers.

The Detroit united front demonstration for Saklatvala will take place Monday evening, Sept. 28 at the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin St. at which speakers in English, Chinese and Hindu will protest the action of the state department.

In Chicago, the All-American Anti-Imperialist League will hold a demonstration at Northwest Hall, North and Western Aves., Monday evening, Sept. 28 with William F. Dunne of the DAILY WORKER, Manuel Gomez, secretary of the league and Chinese and Hindu speakers, representing various organizations, entering the protest of the workers of Chicago to the action of Kellogg.

Civil Liberties Union Meeting.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25—The American Civil Liberties Union has arranged a protest meeting at the Town Hall in New York City at which Rennie Smith, labor member of parliament, Frank P. Walsh, Samuel Untermyer, Congressman F. M. LaGuardia will speak with the Rev. Harry F. Ward acting as chairman, Monday evning, Sept. 28.

Exclusion Was Expected.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25—"Saklatvala's exclusion might have been expected by anyone who has followed developments in the Orient or who has examined the propaganda of the English Speaking Union," declared Robert W. Dunn, one of the executive committee members of the International Labor Defense Council.

"The American empire is bound to play an increasingly important role in the work of world imperialism heretofore monopolized by the British empire. American diplomats will be called upon to carry much of the dirty work of the decaying British 'commonwealth.'

"Again, it is not surprising to me when a government that gags a liberal count for democratic opinions, popular in 1776, takes even more drastic action against a revolutionary critic of the 1925 imperial social order. Saklatvala had something to say. Karolyi, who admitted he had done his bit to down Communism, was about as revolutionary as George Washington would be if he lived today."

Refuse to Attend Conference.

COLUMBUS, Neb., Sept. 25—The barring of Shapurji Saklatvala has caused Edgar Howard, member of the American delegation, to refuse to participate in any session of the congress.

"By attending the conference I would be giving approval to the action of Secretary of State Kellogg," declared Congressman Howard, "in barring Shapurji Saklatvala, presumably at the request of the British government."

Congressman Howard refuses to attend either the conference or the banquet to be held after the conference in New York in honor of the visiting delegates arranged by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace as a protest against the action of the state department which "penalizes Saklatvala for championing for India the same freedom which the patriot fathers championed and won for the United States."

Statistical Background of the Agrarian Question in the United States

By EARL R. BROWDER.

First Article.

"THE toiling and exploited masses of the countryside whom the urban proletariat must lead into the struggle, or at least win over, are represented in all capitalist countries by the following groups:

"First, the agricultural proletariat, the hired laborers (by the day, by the year, and for the season) who have to earn their living by hiring themselves out to capitalist agricultural enterprises, and to industrial enterprises connected therewith.

"Second, semi-proletarians or semi-peasants, i. e. those who earn their living partly by hiring themselves out to capitalist agricultural enterprises and partly by working on their own or rented plots of land which yield only part of the food stuffs necessary for the maintenance of the family. This group of the rural working class population is very numerous in all capitalist countries. However, the representatives of the bourgeoisie and the socialists adhering to the Second International do their utmost to ignore the existence of the position of this group of workers, partly deliberately deceiving the workers and partly submitting blindly to customary petty bourgeois views and merging this group with the general mass of peasantry.

"Third, the small peasants, i. e. those who own or lease small plots of land, which are just sufficient to meet their requirements and eliminate the necessity of employing hired labor. This section of the rural population certainly stands to gain from the victory of the proletariat.

"These three groups taken together form in all countries the majority of the rural population. Therefore, the ultimate success of the proletarian revolution is guaranteed not only in the towns, but also in the country." (Lenin, Theses Second Congress, Comintern.)

IT is the purpose of these articles to examine and analyze the statistical information available on agriculture in the United States, in the light of the thesis of Lenin, in an effort to fill out the exact American details of the picture so far as possible. "Each country," said Lenin, "develops prominently some particular feature or group of features." The analysis of class relations in the rural districts is particularly difficult and requires particular care. This is all the more true in the United States, which presents so many differences from the rest of the world, and in which the statistical information is not designed to bring out the facts which we seek.

Loose generalizations and hasty conclusions about agriculture in the U. S. have been particularly habitual in the revolutionary movement. These inaccurate and even false conceptions which are current do not contribute to the formulation of a sound program for establishing the leadership of the urban workers over the rural masses. Examples of such looseness and inaccuracy may, for example, be found in the recent resolution of the Parity Commission of the W. P., and in a report on America at the recent sessions of the E. C. C. I., reported in Inprekorr Vol. 5, No. 35, page 463. Among the examples may be mentioned the statements: "Today more than 70 per cent of all improved land is operated by tenants"—almost 100 per cent from the truth—"two million agricultural workers are disfranchised because they are migratory"—a wild exaggeration—"the same bankers and manufacturers who own the mines factories, railroads, etc., are in the main the owners of the land used by the farmers"—a distortion of fact out of all proportion; that, with ten million farmers now on the land, "six and a half million farmers migrated to the cities within the last ten years"—an extremely exaggerated picture of a real situation, etc., etc.

The above items are cited, not for purpose of controversy, but merely to establish the need of careful and exact inquiry. And for this purpose we shall, in these articles, give a comparative analysis of figures of the 1910 and 1920 census (with occasional excursions farther back, and to other sources), establish the approximate relation of class forces, the tendencies of development, and thereby lay a foundation for judgment as to what the exact present status may be.

Relation of Rural to Urban Population.

FROM a predominantly agrarian country, the United States transformed itself, in the period which witnessed its emergence as a—and finally the—world power of first importance, into a land of capitalist industrial production. This process, which is basic to an understanding of the agrarian question in the U. S., is most broadly reflected in the movement of population. While the absolute number of population, both rural and urban, has increased at each census period, the relative development, in percentage of total population, has been as follows:

	1890	1900	1910	1920
Rural	64.6	60.0	54.2	48.6
Urban	35.4	40.0	45.8	51.4

Proceeding a step further, we find the census classification of "persons engaged in gainful occupations," which shows the following comparison between agriculture, mining, and mechanical industries:

Percentage of "Gainfully Occupied"

	1910	1920
Agriculture, forestry, and animal husbandry	33.2	26.3
Extraction of minerals	2.6	2.6
Manufacturing and mechanical industries	27.8	30.8

Ratio of Agricultural to Industrial Production.

AN interesting and valuable comparison is given between the production values, expressed in market prices, in the figures of B. M. Anderson, Jr., economist of the Chase National Bank of N. Y., in his pamphlet "A World Afraid of Production." The comparative value of these figures, as regards agricultural production for 1919, must be considerably discounted; in view of the fact that agricultural prices in 1919-20 were at the peak of post-war inflation, and in the following year dropped by about 40 per cent, it will be seen that the true extent of the preponderance of industry is obscured:

Year of 1919	In mill.	Pct. of whole
Net value of all agricultural products	$18,768	40
Net value of all mineral products	3,095	7
Value added by all manufactures	25,042	53
Total	$46,905	100
Year of 1909
Net value of all agricultural products	$6,702	41
Net value of all mineral products	1,016	6
Value added by all manufactures	8,529	53
Total	$16,247	100

Not only has agriculture been continuously falling back in relation to industry, but also, between 1910 and 1920, there was for the first time in America a positive decrease in the number of those "gainfully occupied" in agriculture, the exact figures of the two periods being 12,659,082 and 10,953,158. Volume of production has increased tremendously, but not, when the 1920 deflation is taken into account, to nearly the extent to which industry has grown.

Strata of Rural Population.

OF the total of 10,953,158 "gainfully occupied" in agriculture in 1920,

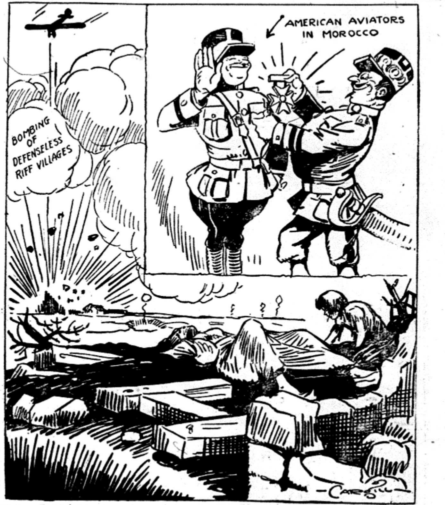
WHAT PRICE GLORY!



AMERICAN AVIATORS IN MOROCCO
BOMBING OF DEFENSELESS RIFF VILLAGES —CARGILL—

OUR OWN PEOPLE

By Ruth Stout

HEADQUARTERS of Local 22 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union of New York City they stay up all night and watch, to keep Sigman from capturing them by force, as they have captured Locals 2 and 9. A crowded street—policeman looking for trouble—a policeman with nothing to do. Enthusiasm—suppressed excitement everywhere.

Inside, more crowds,—more enthusiasm.

A girl is talking. Let her tell her story in her own words:

"IN 1910 we used to have the sweat shop system. At that time people used to sleep in shops and work long hours and terrible conditions—worked twelve or fourteen hours a day, and even have their dinner at the machine while they worked. Since this was the case sanitary conditions were also terrible—no time even to sweep. We were there all week including Saturday and Sunday.

"In 1909 the waist makers, Local 25, called out a general strike and that strike lasted quite a few weeks. People went thru a great deal of suffering; there was really no union when the strike was called—just a handful of people, not organized. So the strike kept on a long time and was lost. But this was an inspiration to organize, because the girls put up such a good fight and were treated so rough that even the society ladies were interested.

"AFTER that the cloak makers' union struck in 1910 and made a success. The union put out the demands for shorter hours and more pay. But then the boss would take a few workers and make one head over them, so that one man had six or eight people under him. He would get all the wages from the boss and pay to the workers, and he would try to get a certain amount and get fifty or sixty dollars a week while others would get very little. So the boss had a number of workers who were interested to keep things going that way. The union fought against that—this must be stopped— and they won.

"In 1913 the waist makers had a strike which again improved conditions of the industry, but one trouble right along was that the Jewish and Americans would not join together—we were foreigners, so to speak. There was only five per cent American element who always said: 'Why go in? Why have a union? We can straighten out with the boss ourselves.' But I thought we should get American girls to approach the boss—I have a foreign accent—too difficult. We had one American girl who would go and try to talk, but if they refused to talk she was insulted and went home. Our girls didn't feel that way. We know the boss won't talk because he don't understand.

"IN 1916 they got out a protocol—an agreement that impartial people should decide. By that time there were already differences of opinion in the union. It really started when we began to differ on the methods. Some of us thought the officials were faking; they called what they said was a regular strike, but some were sent back to work while others were still striking. There were no Lefts and Rights then—youngsters they called us, instead of Lefts.

"In the 1919 strike already we feared it might be a fake again, and probably it would have been but the employers tried to give the union a beating. They made an agreement for a few hours, less, a few dollars more, but they began to send work out to small shops in secret. We would go and sit at the machine, but would not make the waists. The only thing we could do was to make a stoppage—to refuse to work at all.

"But the 1919 agreement made it a crime to make a stoppage, so we made six or eight or ten dollars a week for eight months. The employers had work but we did not make it. We could see what they were cutting and knew we didn't get it. That was the beginning of our going backward,—an agreement binding us hand and foot and not being able to do anything. It created the open shop problem for us. The union kept back workers from striking nad they kept having open shops. What use of such an agreement which ties our hands?

"EVER since then there has been the small little open shop—not the open shop so you immediately know where it is—but a hole in Harlem, two rooms in the back of some yard, or downtown Green Street, where employers moved it, rotten, dirty, everything,—already something of the past. If they would take a nice big loft we would know about it, so they take little holes where we could not know and it would take us some time to find out. So our people are now working under the most miserable conditions, no ventilation, no air, fire traps. The employers get those who have just come from the other side,—get them and teach them and exploit them to the worst extent because they do not know any better.

"I was shop chairman. If I ordered a stoppage the employer had a perfect right to discharge me. But we said we would not work unless we see everytime they cut something we have it. So we made a stoppage in the shop and we managed it so that I didn't get fired, either. The Association sent a letter demanding that either we be put back to work or send otner workers on our jobs. The executive took it up and sent a committee to make us go to work. We explained we cannot and will not work unless we know we get everything that is cut.' We had gone back once or twice with the boss's promise to give us everything, but always he cheated us.

"THERE was a conference in Boston and I and two members of the executive went and explained the situation. The question is: Are we to sit eight months in a shop and not make a living? We had a fight and I cried,—I was so much younger then; I would not cry today! (Her black eyes flashed; true, she would not cry today). We came back and continued the strike; finally, the boss came and held up his hands, and said 'Honorable peace!' and we came to an agreement.

"These little shops became a great detriment. In the beginning a few here and a few there, and because the union did nothing to check them they sprang up everywhere, with these terrible conditions, competting with the big shop, and many employers went into jobbing so the big shop went out gradually,—safely to say more than one half the industry is jobbing. We call them bedroom shops—cockroach shops.

"A room like this would be a big shop, and with all pressing machines and everything, how can you have it sanitary? You will find that many of them are going into the business with $500 that they sometime borrow from loan associations and many of our people are losing their pay after working for a few weeks for such little employers. And, too, the unions have the problem of having to organize five or six hundred new shops and also having many of our workers not only have to work in these miserable conditions, but pay not secure—many lose their last few cents.

"WHAT can the union do to eliminate those conditions? They say: Yes, true, but we cannot do anything. We say: We have to begin to have another policy and see to it that we do organization work all the year round by our own people Not by those, as they have it, who are not of the trade. Up to 1919 our own people did organizing work. They would say to me: We need six or eight people to go to Brooklyn. And I would go. It was more quiet then; once I had to hit a man with my umbrella, but I would do that only when necessary.

"The managers used to get sixty or seventy dollars a week, and the business agents forty-five; now the general manager gets $125; the international manager gets $7,500 a year. Then he got $75. The business agent is the man who does the work. The managers do very little work; they hire gangsters to do their work, and the only thing the gangsters do is develop their muscles. Our people refused to go with these people to picket lines.

"AT the last campaign in January and February we made an attempt,—we, the so-called Lefts, the people who want to see the organization again so that the people themselves do the work—we made an attempt to get our own people to do organization work again. If our people are going to go to the shops and work and picket and be told what to do, they can do their own organization work.

"In January and February the Organization Committee had 300 people who were ready to go to shops and explain to workers to come to the union. First talk, first explain, and then if no success, sometimes fight, but not like gangsters. If you get a little hurt, you know workers hurt you,— not gangsters. Since 1919 to date because of the many disappointments that workers were suffering they did not feel like going into the shop and getting their heads split by these men.

"Now many of the employers have turned into dresses instead of waists, so we are no more a separate industry. When the waists were so glorious there were of course waist locals; now there is no reason for waists being separate but the union wants to keep them separate and I'll tell you why, in a minute. We told the union this, but they said that there were still waists, showing that they did not know what they were doing. I took Fannia Cohn myself and showed her that there were almost no more waists, and she was surprised, and I said to her: "You do not know what is going on in the industry; you are living in the past.'

"SINCE the waists are not there the same thing is true about the skirt, and yet they are still having that local, and the manager getting $100 a week, and very few members, and their expenses about three or four hundred dollars a week, because the manager will not go to the shops and so they must have a business agent and a secretary. And they are making dresses in the same shops; the skirts are no more there. And they work fourteen hours more a week for the same work, and that is what I call legal scabbing with the consent of the union, which is a crime. There must not be two locals in the same trade; it is their own constitution and we have to demand that they live up to it.

"Local 2 sent out to Chicago two weeks before the expulsion to demand that they give us the dress shops which belong to our local, according to their own decsion a year before. And now I'll tell you why they want waists and skirts separate—because that makes more locals and every local has five votes, no matter how few or how many members. We have 12,000 members, and some of the locals have less than 500, and still they get five votes. And our dues pay their bills—but through the union, and so the union controls their votes, because if it didn't pay their bills, they couldn't live.

"ANOTHER thing is that they wanted to raise our dues from 35 cents to 50 cents. The membership won't pay the fifty cents because they feel that nothing will be done with the 50 cents just as nothing is done for the 25 cents. And two weeks before they raised the dues they raised the salaries of the business agents, managers, nad general managers, from $5 to $25 a week more. That amounted to $50,000 a year. What does this mean? They raise themselves, and we are not making half what they were making before they raised themselves. What do they care? They have 55 votes and we have 15 in the Joint Board.

"So we have three differences. First, we want our own people to do the organization work They should not give over our demands to Governor's Commissions, who may be nice people but will not know anything about our questions for the men and women who work in the industry. We feel they cannot do it because they do not understand our trade, and what we should do is to organize workers from the open shops and take the workers and come to employers and see that we get things just and fair.

"Our second difference is that we want all dress locals to be one, instead of fake waist and skirt shops with separate locals, paying big salaries to business agents and managers and general managers shall have bigger salaries.

"BECAUSE of these differences they went, and instead of giving answers to these just claims that we have, instead of meeting it and finding a way of settling it, they declared everyone Communists in order to cloud the issue, because they only have to say that we are Communists and everybody will be afraid of us, because they infer a Communist is not a human being.

"And before they give us a chance o know that they have any charges on us, a day before they sent us official notice that we are under charge, they broke in, in the middle of the night at two o'clock, they broke in to two locals, 2 and 9, and took the office by force. And that is why we watch here day and night, so they can't do the same thing to us."

War, Peace and the Second International

IN Chapter, A, §4 of the Statutes adopted by the Hamburg Congress of The International Working Union of Socialist Parties held in 1923 we read the following:

"The International Working Union of Socialist Parties is not only an instrument on behalf of peace but an indispensible instrument during every war. During conflicts between nations, the I. W. U. S. P. is recognized by the affiliated parties as the highest instance."

THE gentlemen of the Two-and-a-Half International prided themselves greatly on the inclusion of this paragraph in the statutes—in the STATUTES themselves—for it signified a "victory" over the famous Kautsky formula of 1914, (the International is an instrument for peace, it is no instrument of war) it was the dowry which it brought into the marriage union. Friedrich Adler in his address to the congress with special solemnity, stressed the importance of the paragraph which we quote below:

"The entire congress will agree that we have gained experience from the war that the I. W. U. S. P. is not only an instrument for tasks in peace time, but is an indispensible instrument in times of war. (Loud applause). That signifies above all, that what we once experienced must never be repeated (renewed loud applause)."

IT is true, Adler added rather dejectedly that people are not all of the same opinion about what has happened and that the "problem such as national defence must be discussed further," this "problem" can "not be immediately solved however much we may wish to do so." But, the "instrument" for peace and war has been forged, it will be regarded "during conflicts between nations" by the parties as "the highest instance".

Two years have passed since the Hamburg celebrations and the Morocco war has broken out. A typical colonial predatory war. The war is being waged by France supported by a government which has the help of the French Socialist Party generally, and especially in regard to carrying on this war.

TWICE, since the outbreak of the Franco-Moroccan war, the Second International—the instrument for war and peace—has met in conference. The Executive of the I. W. U. S. P. met in Paris in the beginning of May and the Bureau met in London at the beginning of June No word was mentioned of Morocco during the Paris session. Probably, for serious reasons. Firstly, as is well-known, Abd-el-Krim attacked peaceful France and the "problem of national defence" has with the best will in the world not been "solved". Secondly, it is not a question of a "conflict between nations" in the sense of the paragraphs of the I. W. U. S. P. Is this clan chief Abd-el-Krim the legitimate representative of a nation? And thirdly, is there a Socialist-Democratic party affiliated to the I. W. U. S. P. under the Riffs for whom the war and peace instrument is the "highest instance"?

At the London conference (July 4th), the question of the war in Morocco was on the agenda, or rather, as the official communique says, the question of the "situation in Morocco was discussed." Renaudel, the most faithful supporter of the French government, explained the "various conceptions", which exist concerning this question within the French party. The Bureau, however, was not in a position "to define its attitude." The reasons were ponderous: "In view of the fact"—the official statement runs, "that the Spanish party has not been able to send a representative to this meeting of the Bureau."

THERE was, however, a minority in the Bureau which was not quite contented with this elegant disposal of the question, and made a declaration which ran as follows:

"The question of the attitude of the French Socialist Party to the Moroccan war contains in embryo (!) all the problems which caused the split of Socialist Parties during the world war. We will refrain at the present juncture from a discussion (!) of this question only because we have full confidence in the French Socialist Party, that it itself will find the correct solution to this question."

THIS gem of an "opposition" declaration bears "three signatures": Otto Bauer (Austria), Dan (Russian Menshevik) and Czech (German Social-Democrat in Czecho-Slovakia).

Bauer, the man who in 1919 as Austrian foreign minister supported the suppression of the Hungarian revolution and the Polish white army against Soviet Russia by supplying arms, and who was removed from power at the behest of the French, because he secrectly intrigued with the Italian government to re-establish the Triple Alliance—Italy-Germany-Austria. Dan, with his clique, is the individual who for years has been fostering every agitation against Soviet Russia, but who advocates "peaceful" intervention only; and Czech, a German nationalist, a faithful reflex of the Czech government socialists.

The "declaration" itself is priceless. "In embryo all problems of the world war," and "full confidence" in the French Socialist Party, hence "at the moment refrain from a discussion." Apparently, these three heroes wish to say that they are not quite contented with the official attitude of the French party, but bank on a victory within the party of the semi-pacifist tendencies, which are fairly well represented in it, but are in fact absolutely helpless against the actual support of the war on the part of the party leaders. Of course, no one thought of securing the support of the increasing number of socialist workers who are joining the anti-war campaign of the Communists.

EVEN Het Volk, the organ of the Dutch Social Democrats, is very discontented with the attitude of the London Bureau, both majority and minority. The success within the ranks of the workers under the leadership of the Communists in the struggle against war, disquiets the observers from Amsterdam; especially the demonstration on the workers' day that was celebrated in Paris July 4th and 5th. "Why do the Socialists let the Communists have such demonstrations, those workers will ask who make a difference between both parties? The majority will probably be indifferent as to who originated the movement, they accept the leadership of the Communists since the Socialists do not take part in the movement." (Het Volk", July 13th, 1925).

Yes, indeed why do the Socialists "leave" the struggle against the war to the Communists? Simply because a section of the Socialist leaders, the avowed colonialists, carry on the struggle for a war to a victory, and another section, the pacifists of different shades are fighting for a war for peace; because all do not wish to desert their threatened fatherland in the hour of danger.

IN the statutes of the International Working Union of Socialist Parties we read: "Not only an instrument in peace, but it is an indispensable instrument in times of war."

The Spanish delegation is absent . . . all problems in embryo . . . full confidence . . .

China: The discussion on these mighty revolutionary events ensued at the London session of the Bureau of the Second International by dealing with an invitation of the Communist International and of the R. I. L. U. to organize common action in favor of the Chinese revolution. The Bureau proceeded straight after dealing with this document to the ordinary agenda. In a special decision it records that here is another "united front manouver" with a view to "exposing" and "destroying" the socialist parties.

But they want neither to be exposed nor destroyed.

As regards the Chinese revolution (there is modest mention made of "the awakening of the working masses of China") itself a decision was adopted the first part of which was a Platonic greeting of the movement. The entire second part, however, is devoted to the struggle against Chinese nationalism, against the "nationalist race struggle"; hence, it is a question of froming a front against European-American imperialism, and against Asiatic nationalism.

A splendid supplement to this resolution, a fitting commentary to this "greeting" is found in the short address which the twin brother of the I. W. U. S. P.—the International Federation of Trade Unions in Amsterdam—sent to our W. I. R. Having been invited to help the struggling Chinese workers, the Amsterdam I. F. T. U. replied on July 6th: "The presidium of the I. F. T. U. considered the question whether it is necessary (!) and possible to give the Chinese workers material help. The decision was arrived at that the presidium should ask for information from known Chinese trade unions whether help is possible (?) and to what extent it is required."

It is necessary first to ask for information. The Spanish—oh, no, the Chinese delegate is not present. Perhaps the Chinese workers do not require any material help. Perhaps they have plenty of everything. Perhaps they are so much under the influence of "Asiatic nationalism" that they do not want to take any assistance from Europeans. Who is to know?

EUROPEAN governments ply their agents in China with gold, munitions, warships, etc. The I. W. U. S. P. and the I. F. T. U. issue a warning against "Asiatic nationalism" and ask for information.

But the International is a peace and war instrument.

The greatest attention was devoted both at the London Bureau meeting and previously at the meetings of the Executive in Brussels January 1925, and in Paris (May) to the questions of the Security Pact and the Geneva Protocol. In the resolution which was adopted after excited discussion between the British and the continental comrades, we read amongst other items:

"It (the I. W. U. S. P.) considered the Geneva Protocol to be the "execution and realization of the League of Nations and of the principles of the general Court of Arbitration, which alone is able to bring security to the people and disarmament to the world."

THUS agitation is made on behalf of the Geneva Protocol which "alone" etc., is dead and buried, and for the Security Pact, i. e. for the special alliance with the proviso that no "false equilibrium of the powers" should arise.

And in fact the Security Pact, as it is at present understood in England, directs its arrows against the Soviet Union, and is being used in a most cynical manner by the entire Social Democracy, with the Germans at their head, a vile agitational measure against Soviet Russia. Thomas in Great Britain, uses the Railwaymen's Conference to make a most violent attack at a time when the conservative government is threatening to break off political connections with Soviet Russia. The "Vorwaerts" on account of the sentence of the three Fascist juvenile murderers invites the German government to break off relations with Soviet Russia.

In a leading article on the occasion of the dispatch of the new German note to Paris the "Vorwaerts," July 19th, formulates the foreign policy of social-democrats as follows:

"In Germany today there is properly speaking, only two foreign policy programs: the Communist and the Social Democratic. The Communists at least do not preach like the worn-out nationalists, about aimless force, but are seeking the solution in a German alliance with a strong military power: Russia. The Social Democratic Party seeks the solution in conjunction with the peoples of western culture and high capitalist development."

IT cannot be stated more clearly. The Communists are with the great Workers and Peasants Republic, with all oppressed nations on the globe against imperialism, the Social Democrats are working with the highly developed capitalism of imperialist powers against—whom? Against the Soviet Union, China and Morocco.

For some weeks, already, Vandervelde holds the office of foreign minister to the Belgian king. In a program which he issued to the Belgian chamber on June 30th, he stated, that he "would continue the Belgian foreign policy on the lines of his predecessors." These predecessors, amongst other things, occupied the Ruhr together with Poincare. For his own part Vandervelde declared that "as long as Germany had not fulfilled her obligations we will remain in the Cologne Zone. The entire government is in agreement on this point."

According to Vandervelde's statement, the Soviet Union, however, despite the promises which were made to the Belgian workers during the elections, will not be recognized. First of all the Belgian capitalists, who once possessed factories now nationalized in Russia, must be fully indemnified and then "independence" must be restored to the Republic of Georgia as was demanded by Belgium.

In all other matters Vandervelde takes the same road as Great Britain (China) and France (Morocco).

HOWEVER, barely two years ago at the Hamburg Congress, this grestest of present-day hypocrites and swindlers declared in a loud voice in the meeting hall: "We are collecting our forces against this imperial peace, which in reality is nothing but a fossilized state of war, against this war in the form of imperialist peace and we place on record: capitalism will be eternally damned in history, because with recurring regularity it has driven the masses to butchery and warfare."

To those who work hard for their money, I will save 50 per cent on all their dental work.

Communist Work in Co-operative Mass Organizations

By W. HANKA

FOR the Communist co-operative work of the Comintern sections there are two conclusions to be drawn from the estimate made of the political situation, and from the lines laid down for the development of Bolshevist mass parties, by the enlarged executive of the Comintern (April, 1925) First of all it is of the utmost importance to recognize the necessity of devoting intense attention, in the Communist Parties, to the work of the co-operatives. All Communists, without exception, must become members of the co-operatives, and must take active part, and in an organized manner, in all events relating to the co-operatives, and in the solution of the daily questions arising in co-operative life. A second and no less important aspect of the question relates to the methods and starting points of our practical activities in the co-operatives, the tactics by which we are to win over the millions, organized in the co-operatives for revolutionary class warfare. At the III, IV, and V. World Congress it was already pointed out that it is the duty of the Communist Parties to devote adequate attention to the co-operatives, and during the present period of Bolshevization, and of systematic building up of our parties as real leaders of the masses, this duty is placed more emphatically in the foreground.

IN the theses issued by the executive, work among the existing mass organizations is designated as the most essential prerequisite of Bolshevization. Besides the trade unions, with regard to which the enlarged executive categorically declares that the Communists have to work in them even when they are in the hands of arch-reactionary leaders, there are in all countries huge co-operative organizations, again mass organizations of the proletariat. The International Co-operative Alliance (London) alone comprises 100,000 co-operative organizations belonging to 32 countries, affiliated to the alliance thru their central unions. This involves the enormous number of 50 million members. We must wrest these many millions from the hands of the reformist leaders! The slogan: "To the masses!" must be realized in the co-operative movement with our maximum of intensity, energy, and perseverance. We must endeavor to enlist this gigantic organization of the exploited, created in the course of decades, in the united proletarian fighting front against capital.

An intense fractional activity within the co-operative organizations gives us Communists the opportunity of contact with strata of the working class which we encounter neither in the trade unions nor in the factories. Thus, for instance, work in the co-operatives offers the best possibility, or may even be regarded as the first premise, for really useful party work among the proletarian housewives.

MANY proletarian housewives, having learned by bitter personal experience the necessity of organized opposition against the profiteering in food practiced by the capitalists, against high prices and speculation, join the co-operatives. But the social reformist managers of the co-operative societies exert their utmost endeavors to paralyze the fighting will of these masses by the propagation of illusions as to the possibility of overcoming capitalism on peaceful lines with the aid of the co-operatives only, without the necessity of the revolutionary class struggle. To bring light into this obscurity with the torch of Leninism, to show the proletarian housewives, gathered together in these organizations in compact masses and who are otherwise inaccessible to us, the real task and means in the struggle against capitalism, and to lead them forward in this struggle—this is a duty imperatively incumbent on the Bolshevist parties, and one which can no longer be postponed.

Besides the main masses of proletarian members, we find in the co-operative societies of today various groups from those strata of the petty bourgeoisie which may be regarded as possible allies of the proletariat in the revolutionary struggle, tho at the moment they may still be vacillating irresolutely to and fro. The Leninist tactics of recruiting allies for the decisive revolutionary struggle of the proletariat, culminating in the Soviet Union in the magnificent success of the unshakeable alliance between the proletariat and the peasantry, will have to be applied in a much higher degree to the city population in countries where this is of greater decisive importance. We find all these petty state and municipal officials, private employes, artisans, technicians, etc., in the co-operatives.

STARTING with their most primitive needs, with their daily cares, we find here the opportunity of gaining for the first time the ear of these strata of the population for the voice of the revolutionary proletariat, and of convincing them that in the struggle between capital and labor, it is to their own interest not to take part against the proletariat, but to support the working class, or at least not to place obstacles in the way of the revolutionary overthrow of capitalism.

Conditions are similar with respect to the small farmers. The widespread network of farmers' co-operatives is the main type of those economic organizations of the peasantry to which the Enlarged Executive has directed the attention of the Communist Parties. The setting up of concrete Communist demands regarding questions of taxes and credits, in questions relating to the regulation of land ownership, and in all questions dealing with the daily vital interests of the peasantry—questions which are invariably on the agenda of these peasants' co-operative organizations or can be placed on it—forms the best possible opportunity of proving to the largest strata of the rural population the immensity of the antagonism between their real interests and the policy pursued by the capitalist big agrarian state. Here, too, a consistently carried out co-operative activity affords the suitable opportunity, and is the suitable medium, for the influence of the big land owners and the priests, and for converting them into the conscious allies of the proletariat.

THE first prerequisite for the thoro utilization of the whole of these advantageous possibilities for our proletarian class struggle offered by the co-operative societies is, it need scarcely be said, for us to have access to the co-operative meetings, conferences, etc. The entry of Communists into the co-operative societies, and the formation of fractions within these societies, is thus an urgent duty.

With regard to the methods to be pursued in Communist co-operative work, the decisions of the Enlarged Executive show the fundamental lines laid down by the resolutions passed by the organization bureau, and by the co-operative section of the E. C. C. I., in October, 1924, to be entirely correct and in no need of alteration. The conditions of the present general political situation, and the prospects adduced to by the Enlarged Executive of a diminished speed of revolutionary development, render it the more urgently incumbent on the Communist Parties to apply the principle of devoting attention to the current questions of practical daily life to work in the co-operatives.

If we put forward definite Communist demands and propositions with reference to the daily questions arising in the co-operative movement, and in its local, national and international organizations, we shall be able to make use of the immediate interests of the co-operative societies for showing the masses of the members how the gigantic apparatus of the co-operatives could be developed into an effective means of defense against the exploitation and starvation practices of capital, and how the organization of the workers' consumers must work hand in hand with the other organs of revolutionary class war towards the overthrow of the capitalist system, if this organization is actually to fulfill its purpose: The raising of the standard of living among the people, and the bridling of the greed of the usurious capitalists, who force up prices.

BASING our criticism on an accurate knowledge and analysis of the general economic situation, and of the practical business conditions in the co-operatives, we must, in our criticism of the leadership, show the members that the reformist co-operative society interests which they profess to represent; that this bureaucracy, by working together with the bourgeoisie during and after the world war, is driving the co-operatives to ruin, and delivering them over into the hands of banking capital.

The question of combatting usury and high prices, acute in almost every country at the present time, should be specially raised in the co-operatives. In place of co-operation with the bourgeoisie, we must demand a fighting alliance with the trade unions and factory councils. For in the first place the economic power of the co-operative is directly dependent upon the purchasing powers of the working class, and in the second place help form the trade unions and factory councils is necessary if the co-operative societies are to succeed in having their demands (freedom from taxation, credit—control of private trade) acceded to in a capitalist state.

THE necessary conclusions to be drawn for Communist co-operative work from the decisions of the Executive are therefore as follows:

Join the co-operative societies!

To the masses of co-operative society members!

Organize participation in the daily life of the co-operatives!

Exercise expert criticism and make definite demands!

Use the fight against high prices and the struggle for existence as starting points!

Get into contact with the trade unions and factory councils!

Go forward from the current demands of the co-operatives to the revolutionary mass struggle.

A PAGE FROM THE JOURNAL OF A WOMAN COMMUNIST IN 1919

By Working Women's Organizer.

IT is 6 a. m., it is dark. I wake up as if electrified. What is the matter? Then the thought comes to me in a flash. This morning we see our comrades off who are going to the front—48 of our best, dearest and most active comrades, who, full of enthusiasm, had volunteered to work for the party which is near and dear to them. They include also three youths of 15 and 14 years and three women.

Just as a mother parts reluctantly with one child after another when necessity demands, we considered long and carefully the case of everyone of these comrades—either member of the factory committee or active educationalist, or good agitator, or much valued expert—but it did not occur to us that the best should be kept back. No, we were determined to give up those who were dearest to us for work over there where they were needed more than here.

VERY solemn was the moment when selection and deliberations of the comrades had ended, and the chairman of the nucleus said the last parting words to them. With shining eyes and burning cheeks they went on their errand, united and full of enthusiasm. How determined and joyful sounded our "Onwards comrades, onwards."

I start running along the frozen ground oblivious of my age, quickening my pace moved by the thought, "I want to be, I must be with them." A horse is standing outside the club laden with various baskets and sacks. In the club there were already a good few workers and comrades full equipped for their journey, and also those who have come to see them off. Seven a. m. was the hour appointed for the meeting. Soon everyone will be there.

AT the refreshment bar tea is ready for those who are going away and for those who are seeing them off. Everyone is in an elated mood. All are there. The tea drinking is at an end. The order to start is given and the ranks are being formed in the foyer of the club. They are drawn up in a line, the chairman of the nucleus appears on the platform where the band used to play and all eyes are turned towards him.

And then he spoke with emotion and yet powerfully and firmly: If there were ever in Communist ranks waverers or timid people, this speech would have made heroes of them. But here we had no waverers or timid people, everyone was aflame with courage and enthusiasm.

IN the dim morning light the snow which the sun rays tinged with red and the Communist banner made specially for the comrades seemed in unison with the feelings and frame of mind of all those present. Such impressions and experiences are worth many a dull and colorless life.

The speeches and parting words had come to an end. The International was sung, the banner was unfolded and floated majestically in the air.

THEN came the presentation of the banner, the Communist swearing allegiance, the parade and the band march music.

They went away, proud, bold and erect. The whole crowd followed them to the station. There—more speeches and ovations from all the organizations. The train is in sight. The band plays the International. No tears in the eyes of those who have come to see them off. No tears, and yet there was no one dearer to all our hearts than these comrades who were going away. We accompany them as far as Moscow.

IT is broad daylight. There is some joking, but on the quiet, and we all continued to be in a solemn mood. We formed ourselves into a column and went to the other station. It is difficult to distinguish the women from the men: the same brand new fur caps, the same kind of boots and knapsacks on their backs. Those who came to see them off keep pace with them. Friends are wondering if our comrades were given enough provisions to last them for the journey, for here is scarcity everywhere.

The big family, which we really are was worrying about its dear ones, but finally decided that everything that was possible had been done. Then came the final good byes and parting words, the last sound of music, and the train has gone.

WITH the feeling of having done their duty those who stayed behind vowed to keep the promise made to those who had gone to the front—to work hard for the reconstruction of our devastated economy.

1905 Rebels Plan Reunion Celebration at 20th Anniversary

A celebration in memory of the 20th anniversary of the Russian revolution of 1905 is being planned in Chicago by old rebels of the 1905 revolution.

The revolution of that year awakened the masses, it shook the throne of the czar, but it was not strong enuf to overthrow czarism and capitalism. As a result of that, a terrible massacre broke out, killing thousands of workers. Many were exiled to Siberia; some were more fortunate and fled to other countries.

A conference of the old rebels who are living in Chicago is being called to organize a monster celebration for the occasion. Old rebels are requested to send their names and addresses to the Chicago office of the Novy Mir, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Illinois.

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

approximately 40 per cent, or between four, and four and a half million, are propertyless workers. This is the agricultural proletariat, the basic stratum for the revolutionary movement in the rural districts. It is, in turn, due to historic and economic differences, to be divided into many groups, each of which presents distinct problems; such as, (a) the "hired hands" of isolated farmers, more or less fixed as to residence, very conservative and dominated by the employing farmers almost completely (probably the largest single group); (b) the Negro farm workers of the southern cotton states, the most submerged and exploited creature in America; (c) the wage workers on "large scale" farms (not a large group as yet, but growing faster than any other group in agriculture); (d) the migratory workers, who follow the harvests, having no fixed residence; (e) workers engaged in agriculture in the summer and industrial pursuits in the winter (differing from the migratory workers in having a fixed residence); (f) members of the family of "farm owners"; and so forth.

Of the total of 6,448,343 operators of farm establishments in 1920, there were 2,454,804 tenants as against 3,993,539 owners and managers. It is among the two and a half million tenant farmers that will be found the largest number of the semi-proletarian elements, according to Lenin's classification. Almost one-third of these are Negroes, in the south, numbering 714,441; many of the others are former "owners" in the process of being squeezed out of agriculture as independent operators; the tenant farmers, as a whole, while continuously increasing in number, occupy a most unstable economic position, which is more and more becoming a disguised form of wage slavery. The following table shows the constant growth of tenantry in the United States for the past 40 years:

	Percentage of All Farms
	1920	1910	1900	1890	1880
Owners and managers	61.9	63.0	64.7	71.6	74.4
Tenants	38.1	37.0	35.3	28.4	25.6

The approximately four million "owners" of farms present every variation of social stratification possible. And it is only indirectly that we can arrive at an approximation of the relative numbers of "poor," "middle," and "well-to-do" farmers. The census of the U. S. was not designed for the purpose of bringing out the facts of class division in this country.

It is possible to get some degree of light on the question by an examination of that great institution of American private property, the "farm mortgage." The mortgage is the first step in the dispossession of the farm owner from his land, it is the invasion of "outside capital" into the domain of the free and independent producer. And there is no doubt that to a large degree the extent and rate of growth of farm mortgages in the United States is an indication of the number and rate of increase of poor farmers in relation to the total farming population.

In 1890, the first census report on mortgages, the percentage of all farms which were reported as free from mortgage, was 70.9 per cent. In the year 1900, this had fallen to 66.5 per cent. At the last census, in 1920, only 52.8 per cent of all farms were reported as free from mortgage. Thus there is only slightly more than 2,000,000 farmers, of whom we can definitely say that, in their overwhelming number, they represent the middle and well-to-do farmers of America, who, with their families, constitute the backbone of the bourgeois social system in the rural districts of America.

The first approximate classification which must be made, in view of the foregoing, in our efforts to develop the fundamental groups within the agricultural population, would be as follows:

Group in the year of 1920	Approximate Number	Percentage of Total
Workers	4,500,000	41
Tenants	2,500,000	23
Mortgaged farmers	1,800,000	16
Full owners and managers	2,200,000	20
Approximate total	11,000,000	100

Size of Agricultural Establishments.

EACH of the foregoing groups could be analyzed with any degree of exactness, only if data was available for each group as to the size of the undertakings, the various degrees of technical development as shown by number of head of livestock, amount of machinery, buildings, etc. Unfortunately, such classified information is not available, so it will be necessary to use another, indirect method, of superimposing the classification by size and technical development of all farms, upon the classification by land tenure.

The average number of acres in each tenant-operated farm is 107.9 acres. This is almost exactly two-thirds of the size of the average owner-operated farm, which is 162.2 acres. There are approximately two and a half million of these tenant-operated farms of a little over one hundred acres average.

Size-groups of all farms (without regard to tenure) with comparison of 1880, 1910, and 1920, are as follows:

	Number of farms			Percent of total
Size group	1920	1910	1880	in 1920
Under 20 acres	796,535	839,166	393,990	12.4
20 to 49 acres	1,503,732	1,414,376	781,574	23.3
50 to 99 acres	1,474,745	1,438,069	1,032,810	22.9
100 to 174 acres	1,449,630	1,516,286		18.9
175 acres and over	1,223,701	1,153,605	1,800,533	18.9
Total	6,448,343	6,361,502	4,008,907	100

The technical equipment of these various size groups (leaving out the group 175 acres and over as definitely well-to-do farmers and requiring no further analysis from us), is as follows:

Average value per farm, by size, of technical equipment.

	Buildings		Machinery		Live Stock
	1920	1910	1920	1910	1920	1910
Under 20 acres	$ 967	605	$146	56	$ 306	195
20 to 49 acres	827	474	193	76	434	270
50 to 99 acres	1,497	848	412	156	834	522
100 to 174 acres	2,245	1,182	712	241	1,414	869

Of the 800 thousand farms of 20 acres and under, there could be very few with more than two horses and two cows (and if any swine, at the price of a horse or cow). The value of machinery allows of little more than a few plows, harrows, cultivators, etc. When we come to buildings, however, we find the average quite high, higher than that farms of 20 to 49 acres. The explanation of this is without question that this class contains a very large proportion of middle or well-to-do farmers who do not depend upon the produce of the farm for a livelihood—who have, as it were, partially retired, or who have never been farmers in the full sense. There must be a much lower percentage of tenants in this size-group than in the groups over 20 and under 175 acres.

More than two-thirds of the total number of farms are included in the groups 20 to 175 acres. It is from this group that must come most of the tenants and a large part of the mortgaged farmers, with much the heavier part of these poor-farmer elements coming under the class of 99 acres and less. These latter farms will in most cases have 2 to 3 horses and 4 to 6 cows, while its stock of machinery is still quite limited.

Tentative Estimate of Agrarian Groups.

FROM the above we can make a tentative estimate of the principal groups, as containing landless and propertyless workers, four and a half millions; poor farmers (semi-proletarian and practically propertyless) two millions; middle farmers (economically in a dangerous position in America, at this time, but formerly the most "substantial" citizenry of capitalism) two millions; while the well-to-do and rich farmers amount to about two and a half millions.

These figures give us the barest approach, the first faint sketch, of the extremely complicated problems involved in agriculture in the U. S. Compared with Europe, for example, the acreage of American farms seems fantastically high; but the size which, in Europe, would indicate a rich peasant, in America would quite as easily indicate rent racked tenant or a land poor mortgaged farmer. There is further, for example, the extreme specialization which has taken place in American agriculture, which cuts the country into quite distinct sections, each dominated by a different set of crops, different social conditions, different stages of technical development, ownership, etc.

In spite of (or on account of) the extreme productivity of American agriculture, it is true more clearly here than in any other country, that capitalism never develops evenly and harmoniously. American agriculture is characterized by the most acute contradictions, brot about by the most uneven development of agriculture as compared with industry, uneven development of different branches of agriculture, uneven development of agrarian districts, high degree of specialization in some respects together with a very low degree in others, the accentuation and aggravation of social differences carried over from the past (Negro problem, etc.), and a hundred and one other factors which go to mold the groups, sub-classes and classes within the rural population of America.

In the next article we will examine the statistical outlines available for the several principal agrarian divisions in the U. S. and the different problems which they present.

Our First Communist Press Day

By J. LOUIS ENGDHAL.

THIS week has seen the passing of the first International Press Day, Sept. 21, held at the suggestion and under the guidance of the Communist International.

Nothing could more clearly differentiate the Communist press from the capitalist, the social-democratic and the so-called "trade union" press, than the aims and the ambitions of this Press Day.

Bolshevizing Our Press.

THIS day was set aside as an effort in the struggle to Bolshevize our press; to sharpen it to become a more effective weapon in the class war. This meant the clarifying of its working class character; bringing it into closer and still more intimate touch with the workers at their places of toil. Special and most important stress was therefore, laid upon contributions direct from worker correspondents, not merely as a feature of this special issue, but as an important daily aid in the editorial work of our Communist newspaper.

The Communist daily, more and more, seeks to imbibe itself ever deeper in the daily life of the workers, in order to be the better able to fight labor's battles.

On the other hand, however, we find not only the capitalist press closed and in opposition to the workers, but the same holds true for the social-democratic, or "socialist," as well as the "trade union" press, in a varying but equal degree.

The "Friends of Labor."

NOT that the capitalist newspaper denies that it is a friend of labor. It hypocritically insists, that it is his best friend, advising the workers on all occasions to desist from class action for their own benefit. The strike, however, always reveals this capitalist press in its true light, in a way that the workers can understand. But all workers are not affected by strikes or similar class conflicts, nor are any workers on strike all the time. So the anti-working class character of the bosses' press, that reveals itself during these conflicts, is often too quickly dimmed for the worker not yet class conscious. Only the best informed workers can quickly detect in every article, news and editorial, the poisonous propaganda of these enemy publications. The workers in general have not yet learned that the praise of these kept harlots of capitalism, that is being so fulsomely poured forth these days upon the heads of conservative labor officials, and in support of labor's every reactionary act, is the best testimony of treason to labor and loyalty to labor's enemies. Yet increasing numbers of workers must grow to realize this.

Some sections of the "Brass Check" press have carried on deliberate and well-planned campaigns to debauch the workers; to win them away from the building of their own class press. This has been especially true of the Hearst string of dailies and of the so-called Scripps-McRae newspapers, that boasted of their "labor editors," and of their "trade union columns." But these efforts were mainly to win the favor of the trade union officialdom as a means of betraying the workers. The McNamara case, the newspaper strike in Chicago in 1912, and the more recent strike on the Seattle, Wash., Post-Intelligencer, have joined in effectively putting the anti-labor stamp on William Randolph Hearst, while the Scripps sheets have been only a little less fortunate in hiding their allegiance to those who fatten off the workers.

CITY workers and farmers have also had their bitter experiences with the so-called trade union dailies, chief among which were the Seattle Union Record and the Minnesota Daily Star. Those in control of the financing of these publications put out the "Welcome" mat for the city and land workers as long as they showed a willingness to invest their meager earnings in much lauded stock. The pretense of a fight for the interests of the workers and farmers was kept up as long as it did not conflict with the desires of the management, which employed every possible capitalist trick to make of these dailies profitable business enterprises. The inevitable result was the enslavement of these dailies to big advertisers with the ultimate and complete betrayal of its labor support. The fate of the Seattle Union Record and the Minnesota Star should show labor the way of all so-called "trade union" dailies.

IT took the "socialist" daily press a little longer to travel the same road. The "socialist" New York Call, for instance, expired under a dose of "popularization" administered to it by New York trade union officials, with the liberal aid of their treasuries, after it had surrendered all pretense to any "socialist" character. The Milwaukee Leader, the "socialist" daily edited by Victor Berger, lives today at the whim of the big department store advertisers of the Wisconsin metropolis, to at least one of whom, Gimbel Brothers, Berger openly apologized for having criticised it during the war days. Berger's Milwaukee Leader may now be said to be completely submerged in the morass of capitalist journalism in the state of Wisconsin, beyond the confines of which it has ceased to have any influence.

BUT one of the most revealing facts about these dailies, that have carried the labor label, is that they take no interest in the great struggles of the workers, outside of the casual news interest, abetted by the customary capitalist news service report that they receive. They have no policy toward the important anthracite coal strike; no definite stand to be taken on the important conventions of the railroad workers being held at Kansas City, Mo., and at Detroit, Mich., except to echo the reactionary programs of the official conservative regimes, politically as well as industrially.

On every field of battle, whether in strikes or on the convention floor, it is our Communist organ, the DAILY WORKER, that gives voice to the demands of the militant rank and file, struggling to make progress against this combined host of enemies.

Even the Communist press is not impervious to these diseases that beset and destroy the "socialist" and trade union press. It is only thru the most thoro Bolshevization that the Communist press, especially the foreign-language Communist press that is inherited from the "socialist" party, can fight off and rid itself of these dangerous tendencies. One of the tragic examples of this failure to submit itself to a thoro Bolshevization is the case of the New York Volkszeitung, that was the voice of the German workers in the "socialist" party before 1919, but was since then and until recently recognized as our German Communist daily in the United States.

THE Volkszeitung never made a serious attempt to throw off the numerous social-democratic diseases that beset it. As a result its struggle for the workers was poisoned to the point of ineffectiveness.

It might be well to cite a concrete example. The Volkszeitung publishes columns of advertisements of small businessmen. But even these small businessmen come in conflict with their workers, altho some of them are looked upon as "good fellows," and others have been members of the "socialist" party of long standing, even back in the old country. Since some of them have done well, they have contributed financially to the Volkszeitung, as a memorial no doubt, to their own past, but now dead revolutionary activities. But even such "good" bosses die, and the present editorship of the Volkszeitung, that calls itself Communist, must needs pay them tribute, referring to one especially who, "in spite of his sympathy for the cause of the worker, was not spared his struggles with the workers." It was this very boss, a sausage manufacturer, who nearly destroyed Butchers' Union No. 174, in New York City, but the Volkszeitung must needs pay him tribute, because he had shown himself a "good fellow" with his plunder.

THIS tendency finds its expression in many ways, but usually in a hopeless attitude toward everything that the workers attempt.

The Volkszeitung showed it again in its editorial attitude toward the present heroic struggles of the Chinese. It belittled the efforts of the Chinese as merely a nationalist attempt that could not succeed. The nationalist revolution was rejected as no good, while it was pointed out that the time had not yet arrived for the Communist revolution. What alternative then, but continued and complete submission? This is merely a thinly veiled effort to keep up a pro-Bolshevik front thru philosophizing about labor's problems, instead of actually entering into the struggles of the workers.

It is the same disease that breaks into full repulsiveness when an editor, of one of our foreign-language publications, for instance, declares that it is not important to publish the material sent to him by the national organization of our Workers (Communist) Party, that it is more important to give space to the "news" notes of some semi-working class fraternal organization with which it happens to be in close touch. Merely another effort to dodge the open fight for the workers led by our party, that depends upon our press as its most effective weapon.

Sept. 21, 1925, was set aside as a day for the Bolshevization of our Communist press. But the effort put forth on that day must be renewed every day thruout the year. This is being done in the editorial rooms of the DAILY WORKER, where the voice of the working class, sounding thru our worker correspondents, grows ever clearer and louder. Forward to a year of effective Bolshevization that will build stronger our Communist press.

The Lenin Party and the October Revolution

By N. KRUPSKAYA.

Seven years ago, at the height of the imperialist war, the October Revolution—the greatest of all revolutions—shook the world.

Who made this revolution? The Lenin Party alone?

Certainly not: the masses—the workers and peasants—made it together with the party.

War, with its devastations and oppression, had made life intolerable to the workers and peasants and to the soldiers who were drawn from these sections of the population.

They could not stand it any longer.

To suppress the rising the government deceived the people: the soldiers, workers and peasants were told that they were fighting for the defense of their country, and that for such a cause one must be ready to lay down one's life.

Lenin Party Echoed Workers' Needs.

The Lenin Party opened the eyes of the masses; it told them the truth and nothing but the truth; it explained to them the causes of the war and showed them how capitalists and landowners are profiting by wars and are using them for the enslavement of the masses.

And in spite of all the efforts of the capitalists, landowners and their lackeys to besmirch the Bolsheviks, to make the masses believe that Lenin was a German spy, the workers and peasants realized that Lenin and the Lenin Party spoke the truth.

The Lenin Party issued the slogans: "Down with the predatory war." "The land to the working population." "All power to the Soviets."

These slogans touched the heart of every worker and peasant, for they echoed their most intimate thoughts and desires.

They saw that the Lenin Party was standing up for their interests, and the more their eyes were opened, the more they began to believe in Lenin and his party.

Comrades, said the Lenin Party to the workers, you cannot win unless you have the support of the peasantry and unless you make yourselves worthy of the confidence of the latter. Side by side with the peasants, you are bound to win.

Comrades, said the Lenin Party to the peasants, the workers will help you to obtain peace and land and to shake off the yoke of the landowners and rural authorities. Follow it.

And the workers and peasants joined forces; together they had suffered from the oppression of landowners and capitalists and the rule of the nobility—and together they rose.

The Lenin Party did its utmost to help them to their victory, and the peasant and proletarian masses were victorious.

In October they took power into their own hands, and immediately the decree concerning land and peace was promulgated.

Fought Devastation.

And after October the Lenin Party continued to defend the interests of workers and peasants. Those were difficult times. The Brest-Litovsk Peace was made under very hard conditions, but it rescued the country from war. Capitalists and landowners offered a fierce resistance to the Soviet power, the power of the workers and peasants. Foreign powers helped the former in every possible way. They wanted to help the Russian bourgeoisie to suppress the workers and peasants who had rebelled, but they were unable to do so.

The worst enemy with whom it was most difficult to fight was—ruin and devastation. The country had to make great efforts and bring many sacrifices in its struggle against this ruin and devastation. But the Lenin Party did everything it possibly could to help the Soviets to overcome this ruin and devastation, and one can see already that they are in their death throes.

When Lenin was taken ill, the doctors forbade him to work, to read papers and to meet comrades. This was very irksome to Vladimir Ilyitch. And he frequently said: "Can they prevent me from thinking?" And he thought night and day trying to find ways and means to bring the working and peasant classes nearer to complete victory, to help them to overcome all difficulties and to make their lives bright and free from the fear what the next day might bring.

Lenin's Last Articles.

When he was already bedridden, and his right side was paralyzed, but was still master of his speech, he dictated to a stenographer his last articles. In these articles he urged his party to continue to work in closer union between the working and peasant classes to improve our apparatus and to work continually among the masses in order to help workers and peasants to organize their life, to become more conscious and cultured, to understand better their common interests and to adopt gradually newer and better collective forms of work—cooperation.

Lenin's injunction to his party was to continue to develop the October work, and the Lenin Party means to fulfill this injunction.

White Terror---A Weapon of Warlike Imperialism

By V. KOLAROV

THE white terror, is gradually becoming the dominant system of government in capitalist countries.

There is not only the case in the Balkans, where "democracy" was always the screen behind which the ruling classes from time to time accomplished their usual vileness. In contra-distinction to the past this screen has now been removed and the bourgeoisie publicly shoots down and erects gallows for all those who infringe their rule, fabricate false documents, burns and shamelessly provokes, and organizes wholesale destruction of their victims.

It is not only in the countries which have experienced revolutionary upheavals during the post-war periods, where the triumphant bourgeoisie becomes frantic at any sign of discontent of the people—here capitalist "civilization" is saved with the greatest difficulty from the storm of "destructive forces" and is guarded by legions of spies and provocateurs, with the aid of expulsion laws, courts, mass arrests and shotings. The same methods find their echo in the countries of classical "democracy" and of age-long tradition of "freedom loving," and not only in such countries as these. The great European "democracies" which only considered terror useful as a means of paving the way to "civilization" among the "low" races of the colonies is no longer ashamed of trying the same methods also on the backs of their own peoples.

"PACIFIST" and "generous" France of Painleye and the "left bloc" now engaged in the bloody African adventure are becoming more and more impudent in their mockery and violence against the Communist Party, which is striving to hinder French imperialism from suppressing the freedom of a small nation. The government is taking stock in the arsenal of repression of the capitalist powers and is taking down from dusty shelves ancient "laws of exception" (les lois scelerates), prepares new ones more adapted to its aims, carries out arrests, searches and sentences . . . At the same time the capitalist agents, by means of slander, mud throwning and false documents are trying to create an atmosphere of hooliganism

The cradle of "political freedom" and the country of all "civil benefactors", Great Britain does not lag behind other countries under the conservative government. The "Zinoviev letter" with which the imperialists fooled the petty-bourgeoisie was the first cowardly step. Fascist attacks on representatives of the revolutionary movement, now becoming more frequent, are also becoming systematic. The speedy revolutionizing of the British proletariat also gives free play to British imperialsm whch has such extensve practice in India and other colonies.

PRIOR to the war the bourgeoisie had no need of terrorist methods for maintaining its authority and carrying out its policy. It felt itself strong, and force, energy and self-assurance were all that were needed in those days. The bourgeoisie was convinced of the stability of the fundament of capitalist society; it was therefore "democratic" and "pacifist". Its "humane doctrines" defended it from the masses of the people. Social democracy stood in the first ranks of the fighters for brotherhood and "international peace." International socialist congresses passed high sounding resolutions against war, but the governments were sure that these threats would remain on paper and thus convincedly and calmly began preparing for a world onslaught.

After the war and the upheavals that followed it, the world bourgeoisie already had lost its "innocence." It no longer hid its aggressive aims. Pacifism was transformed into an out-of-date doctrine of whining old women: The capitalists were openly preparing for new robbery and adventure. The imperialist thieves, prepared for new bandit attacks and compelled their vassals to submit to their conductors baton. These vassals are the little thieves who cynically hawk the only goods that are left in their hands—the blood ond flesh of their robbed and ruined peoples. In Morocco, the French imperialists are n imperialist team of the whole world oppressing the Riff peasants. In China an imperialist team of the whole world headed by the British lion is tearing into shreds the living body of 400 million people. In India and Egypt they want to silence the savage wails of the revolting slaves by blows of the capitalist whip.

BUT the most intense hatred is being concentrated against the Union of Soviet Republics. Under the trade mark of "the anti-Bolshevik bloc" a blockade of the great workers' and peasants' state is being effected and a general attack against it is being prepared on the part of all forces of capital and reaction.

However, these adventures of the imperialists from which they will gain but one compensation, are being met with the open opposition of the masses. The revolutionary convulsions, which the whole capitalist world has experienced and the victory of the revolution in Russia in particular, have left deep traces on the consciousness of all toilers. The latter are on the watch everywhere, and are everywhere becoming restless; the social patriots no longer remain the unlimited inspirers of their thought. And altho the masses, by dint of custom, continue to fill their ranks to this very day, these masses, as has been showed by the events in France, are by no means displaying any readiness to follow them in their treachery. Moreover, in every country a front line detachment of the revolutionary movement—the Communist Party—has been formed, and its influence on the workers and peasants is becoming more and more extensive and profound. The ruling classes can no longer carry on their predatory policy in peace and quietness, firmly guarding the traditions of "liberalism" and "democracy". They feel the necessity to adopt new principles in their methods of government more appropriate to the times, and are therefore willingly adopting fascism. I am not of the opinion that in the event of extreme necessity they will not renounce even Zankovism . . . The brutalization of the Balkans is one of the stages of degeneration of capitalist culture after the world war.

THE white terror aims at terrifying the masses of the people, breaking down their resistance, reinforcing the wavering power of the predatory bourgeoisie and facilitating the realisation of their plans of conquest.

Will the bourgeoisie succeed?

It might meet with certain partial and temporary successes. It might even set alight once more a world conflagration. But it will never succeed in finally suppressing the revolutionary movement and in saving its own rule. "The hellish tortures to which the white terror is subjecting the proletarian masses, and the innumerable victims which it is claiming from them will have but one result: it will drum into the consciousness of the toiling masses that their historic role is not only to bury capitalism but also to be revenged on the hangmen.

Developing the Activity of Shop Nuclei

ARTICLE EIGHT

By MARTIN ABERN.

"IT is not necessary," writes Zinoviev, "to write long theses, but to start from the most simple things, to follow the prescription of this workingman, first to gather together four men, then another four men and then distribute the work among these. This is Leninism and the practical organization of the work."

The chief lession we learn in the attempts thus far to organize shop nuclei in Chicago and elsewhere is the hesitancy to carry on actual work of some sort in the shop. The tendency is: "First let us learn more about the plan." Our slogan, however, may be: "Education thru organization and activity of the shop nuclei." There are many things which every shop nucleus, small or large can set itself to accomplish and take up at once.

FIRST, gather together all the comrades, from language and English branches, who work in the same shop—and then get them acquainted with each other! Make it a sort of get-to-gether of party members.

Second. Elect a group of officers, secretary, literature agent, industrial organizer, nucleus executive and decide certainly to meet regularly and often.

Third. At the nucleus meeting, assign every member a task, no matter how small or apparently unimportant.

Fourth. At a second meeting, hold a discussion on conditions in the shop and how to remedy them: wages, hours, unionization, "bulldozing" foreman, conditions of production, etc.

Organizing the Work of the Nucleus.

Gradually, as the comrades get to know and have confidence in one another's ability, etc., and have discussed shop and party problems, and other matters of interest to them, ideas and plans for conducting party work in the shop will flow from every comrade.

The Nucleus Builds Our "Daily"

"WE must get the DAILY WORKER to the fellows in the shop," says one comrade. A plan is worked out whereby comrades approach other workers, either in the shop, or at their homes, and give or sell them the daily, or it is sold at the gate. Plans are laid to get subscribers.

Months later. "The DAILY WORKER needs money if it is to live," reads a communication from the National party office to the shop nucleus. The nucleus considers. A meeting is called, perhaps on pay day. A collection from the members or a day's pay is donated right on the spot. Comrades suggest: let's approach other fellow workers in the shop who read the DAILY WORKER for donations. This is done. A good sum is sent to the DAILY WORKER. Reports show that nearly every shop nucleus in Chicago, Gary, Southern Illinois, and the rest of the district made a donation in the present DAILY WORKER drive.

The nucleus considers more carefully. Other party literature, leaflets, pamphlets, papers, are brot to the shop, placed in various spots, where workers can get them. Every member of the nucleus is given the duty of discussing working class problems with some worker in the shop; to visit him at his home; to, in time, get him to join the nucleus.

Getting Into the Struggles of the Workers.

MINE operators and the faker Farrington are trying to railroad militant coal miners to prison on a trumped up conspiracy for murder charges. The nucleus meets. These fighting miners, upon whom depends the life of the progressive miners' movement, must be saved. Moral and financial support must be given these men. Maybe other workers in the shop already know what "railroading" and "rats" on the job mean. They want to help but don't know how. Our comrades quietly circulate lists of the International Labor Defense, striving to defend the Zeigler miners. Money is raised on a defense issue, which nearly always strikes a response among workers. A basis is laid for organizing an I. L. D. branch on the job, secretly or openly as conditions permit. The workers learn to understand better what these Communists are. They are brot a little closer to the Workers (Communist) Party.

Perhaps the shop is a union shop. The nucleus meets to take up the problems of the various local unions in which they belong. They are, of course, in the party fractions in the unions. They bring to the fraction meetings opinions and problems grasped from job conditions. They consider ways and means of bringing the issue of the big anthracite strike before their local union and to get support for it. That may strike home at once.

Maybe, if the union is much more awake, tho abstract, to the union, the problem of imperialism, is brot up, and it is found to mean, among other things: Get the marines out of China! We don't want the American youth slaughtered to make gold and get concessions for Rockefellers and Morgans! A resolution is passed and sent to Washington, etc.

The Labor Party Is Heard Of.

ELECTIONS are on. Whom shall we vote for? Ask the workers in the shops. Our shop nucleus meets. The plan, program, and campaign outlined by the Central Executive Committee, for a labor party, are before them. During lunch time, our comrades engage systematically in argument and discussion with fellow workers on the question of the republican and democratic parties, what have they ever done for the workers; on the LaFollette movement, the aim of the Workers (Communist) Party, the role of Wall Street, capitalist, government, etc. What do they think about their union "going into politics?" Our comrade leaves a leaflet, "For a Labor Party," in their hands. The workers' minds, for the while at least, dwell on politics.

And so on endlessly are problems and issues bound to arise in the shop nuclei. They will solve them if they will understand that: The way to start is to begin.

Get Ready for Reorganization

THE Organization Department has announced its plan to mobilize the membership for the reorganization of the party into shop nuclei and international branches.

During the conduct of this campaign to reconstruct our party, a series of articles on organizational questions is being printed in every organ of the party. Questions and problems confronting our members in the rebuilding of the party will be answered and analyzed in the DAILY WORKER by Comrade Jay Lovestone, head of the Organization Department, and other party members.

The DAILY WORKER has also established a special section for the Organization Department. In this section there is being printed articles on the progress of the organization campaign, the experiences of the comrades in the work of organization, and letters and reports from comrades giving their experiences in carrying on the party's activities thru the shop nuclei.

These articles will be living articles, and of intense interest. Watch these columns closely.

The Presentation of Proletarian Films

ARTICLE IV.

The Presentation of Proletarian Films

PRODUCTION alone does not overcome all the obstacles to the use of proletarian film by the labor organizations. A difficulty equally grave with that of production is the question of exhibition possibilities; the question: "How can we bring our proletarian films before the broad masses?"

This problem is unfortunately no easier, (and in certain countries even harder), than the problem of creating the films. The state, with its bourgeois administration, has surrounded also this field with a veritable barbed wire entanglement, lest its monopoly be broken thru and attacked on any side. The most important and most significant means in the hands of the bourgeois government against the presentation of revolutionary films is the censor. All capitalist countries have an extremely strict and sharp film censorship, that is much stricter than existing press or dramatic censorship. Censorship regulations are put forward on the ostensible ground of protecting "good taste," for saving the youth from the evil influence of bad films, and other Jesuitical excuses. In truth, as is proven by the actual practice of the censors, its function is first of all to establish political control of all motion pictures.

AS examples we can cite the attitude of German film stations, of which there are several, in Berlin, Munich, etc. While the censors pass all films containing outspoken, base-faced monarchist propaganda, they reject categorically pictures of proletarian tendency. It is demanded that in a Russian film the scene showing soldiers taking their oath be eliminated because one sentence pledges the recruit to defend socialism with his life. Censorship is today one of the greatest obstacle to the presentation of proletarian revolutionary films.

But even after these troubles are fortunately overcome there bobs up another, namely, the economic difficulties of presentation. Most countries, to nuture their own film industry, now impose heavy import duties and other restrictions against foreign films. So, also, Germany in 1924 ruled that only German producing firms could import foreign productions. Since naturally, no working class organization possessed its own studios they would be barred from the use of Russian films, were it not possible thru various by-ways to attain them. Similar restrictions prevail in almost all countries.

But even with the extraordinary good fortune to obtain the films with the aid of a commercial film company, and on top of this to get it thru the censors, then comes the question, "What shall we do with this finally imported and released picture?" "In what manner can we now bring it before the general public, before the broad masses of workers and peasants?"

THE normal way chosen by commercial film concerns is that of the big film exchange. In every country on earth there are these big exchanges which supply the market with its films. All principal exchanges are interlocked with the major production units and more or less dependent upon them. Hence it is understandable that the entire question of film rental is viewed from the angle of profit, and that the choice and distribution of films is made solely upon this basis. In recent years the leading film companies of Germany, as the Ufa, etc., have embarked upon the policy of owning or controlling the theaters in all principal cities and villages. Ufa thus compels the optiences to view its own productions and those of its subsidiaries. In Berlin alone Ufa now has twenty theaters, as many as Ashinger has saloons.

It is unnecessary to show all the other difficulties connected with the commercial exchanges. Sufficient to state that only in extremely rare instances, in exceptional circumstances, is it possible to distribute pictures of proletarian or revolutionary tendency thru the commercial exchanges.

WE must therefore, discover another way in which to bring the Russian films out of the storage vault and actually before the broad masses. Many are the means by which this can be done and we will briefly consider some of them.

1. It is possible for workers' organizations possessing proletarian films to make contact with small theaters in single cities, and to show them there. Not yet have all small theaters been gobbled up by the trust. Especially in the provinces are there numbers of small and relatively independent theater owners. It is possible to make contact with them and to book working class films occasionally. The German I. W. A. did this successfully in the Rhein district and in central Germany. This method is particularly promising in industrial sections, or also in cities and villages as in Czecho-Slovakia or France, where the Communist Party wields considerable influence or is perhaps actually in control of the local administration. In many cases this has been successful. But it is not the basis for extravagant hopes, at most perhaps 8 per cent of the theaters can be approached in this way. All the remainder are served exclusively thru the big film bureaus tightly bound by long-term contracts.

2. Other means must therefore, be found to actually bring the films before the broad masses, and despite all obstacles and administrative and organizational difficulties, the method of direct arrangements is as yet the most promising. This is the method used by the I. W. A. in the United States. In New York, Chicago and other principal cities theaters were rented for periods of a day to more than a week, and with typical large-scale American publicity methods, the proletarian Russian films were shown. The first films, among them "Russia Through the Shadows," proved a sensation and achieved tremendous agitational success. Hundreds of thousands of workers have seen these films, and the financial surplus of $25,000 can be cited as an added favorable result. But after the first two pictures the sensation waned, interest flagged, and financially and agitationally the success was less.

Similarly, the British I. W. A.'s experience; during the last year's labor party congress they ran several Russian films in a rented theater in London. Agitationally, they met with excellent success, altho financially the result was less satisfying.

Under this method of showing our pictures in rented theaters there remain a large measure of possible conflicts with theater owners who try to enforce personal censorships, high rents, dependence upon dates set solely by the owner, etc. The method inaugurated by the I. W. A. in Germany, France and Czecho-Slovakia seems to me to be the one applicable and best.

3. In Germany and in France, the I. W. A. decided to organize its film activity independent of the bourgeois exchanges or theaters. In both countries the I. W. A. Central Committee decided in the beginning to purchase several motion picture film projectors. This is a measure strongly recommended to all working class organizations. Our own apparatus makes us independent of the theater and of question of show places. In recent years apparatus has been perfected to such an extent that one can show pictures in any available room irrespective of electrical facilities or sources of power. What makes this apparatus particularly valuable to the Communist Party is the possibility of projection in the open air, making feasible its use in times of election campaigns or other major activity in night meetings in the market square to complete and support the addresses of the speakers.

According to all experiences, gathered thru years of activity in this very film propaganda, the provision of our own apparatus must be advised as a condition precedent to effective and successful film propaganda. It is important that a good-conditioned, technically adequate projector be run by a dependable projectionist whose work, rendered real enthusiasm, as a party member, is a special party propagandist activity of great importance.

IT would be a mistake to assume that the mere ownership of apparatus guarantees the success of every proposed showing. For this a whole series of other conditions are requisite. Showings in the big cities, the headquarters of the organization, are relatively easy and inexpensive to book. It becomes more difficult to invade the provinces, where this form of work is most needed, and where it is much more effective than in the metropolis, where the workers are spoiled by the high-class trust theaters. These showings must be painstakingly prepared and organized far in advance. Experience indicates that film tours in given districts often fail, when, for instance, the Berlin headquarters decides upon a two weeks' tour in the Rhine, the final results are unsatisfactory, about half of the dates fall thru because halls cannot be obtained, because no propaganda is made, etc.

Despite the overhead costs bound up in this method, the I. W. A. of Germany has decided to arrange all showings direct from Berlin, instead of leaving it to the various districts. It was always planned, of course, to properly arrange the tours to cut traveling and other costs to a minimum. But the present total inexperience of our comrades in the use of film propaganda makes it necessary to arrange at least the first showings direct from headquarters.

A FURTHER difficulty is that the comrades, particularly of the smaller villages, do not have the nerve to put an effective, really attractive advertising campaign. They cannot bring themselves, in their publicity, to call, even to shout, which is indispensible in the winning of masses to our shows. In the district paper there would be a screaming half-page advertisemet for Harry Piel or Henry Porten, and down below, made up like an obituary or a vegetable peddler notice, the invitation of a labor organization calling workers to a proletarian film show. It is, therefore, necessary to provide colorful posters for every single showing, that the entire publicity scheme and material be worked out in advance with definite instructions to the committee: Notice on the 11th, Advance ad on the 13th, posters, handbills, etc., on the 14th. Only in this way is it possible to avoid that of eight projected showings only 3 actually take place. If, on the other hand, these necessary provisions are made one can reckon that 90 out of every 100 showings will be a success, as our experience in Germany has actually proven.

HUNDREDS of showings have been arranged by the I. W. A., drawing thousands of patrons and for the most part overfilled halls. An effective complement to the film can be a musical program, choral societies or spoken choruses, used especially in certain cities in connection with the "Lenin's Warning." A combination of our half-year running Red Revue of Berlin with a good film would result in an unprecedented success.

In France the I. W. A., in consideration of railroad schedule difficulties, has equipped a fully-equipped movie caravan that travels from village to village and gives its showings.

Another word as to the financial side of film showings. Most failures were caused by the timidity of our comrades in the matter of advertising expenses. This is absolutely wrong. Only those showings are profitable that draw mass attendence. For a proletarian film showing the admission price must necessarily be lower than that of their competing movie theaters. The consequent loss of revenue must be made up by increased attendance. And mass attendance is achievable only thru widespread, striking, screaming advertising. Therefore in the arrangement of our showing it is unwise to stint, rather to plunge a little to reach all local industries and the street public as well. Sums spent for this purpose will undoubtedly come back thru the increased attendance.

UNTIL now only the I. W. A. organizations in America, Czecho-Slovakia, France and Germany have carried out this film propaganda on an extensive scale. In other countries, Holland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Switzerland, Austria and various oversea countries only single films have been presented. It is the task of all Communist Parties and organizations to exploit the propaganda potentialities, and to ascertain in their own land the best technical and organizational possibility for the carrying out of this film propaganda. Our present report can only give examples from our past experience.

LEF WING WINS VICTORY IN I. L. G. W.

MAYORS, FAKERS, PRESS AND COAL OPERATORS JOIN IN ANTHRACITE TERRORISM; ALEX REID ARRESTED

By BEN GITLOW.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 27.—The mass meeting of progressive miners and the Workers (Communist) Party scheduled for Saturday afternoon in Washington Hall, West Scranton, was broken up by police and Alex Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee, together with August Valentine, were arrested. Vareck, a striking miner who offered bail, was also arrested.

These arrests follow a declaration by Rinaldo Cappellini, U. M. W. of A. official in the anthracite, that all Communist meetings should be broken up. The local union officials, who are preparing to betray the striking miners by dropping wage demands in exchange for granting of the check-off, have united with the political flunkies of the coal companies to prevent any real expression of the miners' demands. The miners are being terrorized.

Pinchot Responsible.

Governor Pinchot, who says gangster rule dominates in Pennsylvania, is correct. It dominates for the coal operators in the anthracite, and Pinchot denies any vestige of freedom of speech and assembly in the interest of the workers. All labor will have to be aroused over the gangsterism and despotism that typifies the rule of the coal mine owners.

The coal barons of the anthracite region where 158,000 miners are striking for demands headed by a 10 per cent wage raise and the union dues check-off, are despotically denying the right of the Progressive Miners' Committee to present their views to the striking miners.

Meetings of the Progressive Miners and the Workers (Communist) Party are being prohibited and broken up. Meetings called at Old Forge, Sworesville, Exeter and Shaft have been prohibited by the authorities. Patrick J. Hayden, the burgess of Exeter, closed the hall where the mass meeting was being held and his police dispersed the crowd of miners.

Local Press Raise Red Scare.

The capitalist press thruout the anthracite region is raising a "red" scare against the campaign to make the strike effective and against struggle in the interest of the workers.

The coal barons and the reactionary union officials are aroused over the miners' interest in real fighting demands. But the fight for the striking miners will continue, despite the czarist attempts to kill freedom of speech.

Gigantic Free Speech Fight.

A free speech fight on a gigantic scale will be held in the heart of the anthracite region—permit or no permit—to arouse the miners against the attempt to starve them into submission. The bootlegging burgesses and mayors of the towns in the anthracite district will find it hard to carry out the nefarious orders of the coal companies.

The miners of the anthracite, on strike since September 1, will continue to fight to get the maintenance men to quit, to compel the operators to grant the six-hour day and the five-day week, and a living minimum wage. They will continue to fight for a labor party to represent their interests as opposed to the political parties of capitalism controlled by the operators. If the miners have their way the strike will not be a picnic, but a struggle against the greed and oppression of the operators.

Mussolini Has Hard Liver

PARIS, Sept. 27.—Premier Mussolini of Italy is still far from well, according to persons who have recently visited him.

The Italian premier, it is stated, is suffering from "stony liver" and is losing weight and his complexion is very sallow. He is said to be easily excited and only his strong body and indomnitable will make it possible for him to continue his activities.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

OUR American "constitutional revolutionists," who give their retreat from the revolutionary implications of Marxism a semblance of authority by quoting Marx to the effect that a peaceful revolution was a possibility in England, may read the latest reports from that country to some advantage. The reports are not of a nature to strengthen their belief that the shifting of political power from the capitalists to the workers will take place without violence.

AN organization has been formed which correspondents admit bears a close resemblance to the original fascist organization in Italy. There are already fascist formations in England, but this looks like the real McCoy. At its head are some of the biggest figures in naval and military circles, including Lord Jellicoe who lost the battle of Jutland to the Germans. Perhaps he expects better luck with the workers.

THE surrender of the government to the miners aroused the British ruling class as they were never aroused before. They saw their powerful government forced to surrender to an army of begrimed proletarians. It must not happen again, they say. In the meantime they are organizing armies of soldiers, technicians, scabs, nurses and other categories needed in a real war for the coming conflict, which they know is inevitable. They hope with the aid of this extra-legal army, in addition to the government forces, to crush the workers, before they can get strong enuf and intelligent enuf to realize that their battle is not won until they have seized control of the government and disarmed their foes.

IN view of this situation an article by P. J. Welinder, in the current issue of the Industrial Pioneer is tragically amusing. This hero of the musty dogma, that government is more or less of a myth, something that should be treated, as the Irish doctor is alleged to have treated a certain social disease, that is, with contempt, this blind leader of the blind, points to the recent victory of the British miners as a justification for his anti-political hydrophobia. The miners won, he declares by exercising their industrial might. Nobody contends otherwise, but what Stanley Baldwin feared was not one million miners with folded arms, but one million workers with clenched fists, with rifles in them.

MOST of us remember how the Italian workers paralyzed the industrial machinery of that country in 1921. The government was powerless for a while and under the pressure of circumstances over which it had no immediate control, the government, representing the collective capitalists of Italy made certain concessions to

The arrest of the central committee of the Roumanian party was nothing but a sheer provocation, which aimed to sentence us to a long term of hard labor for the past illegal work of the committee, when the party was driven underground. In spite of the vast army of agent provocateurs, not a scrap of evidence could be found as a basis for the latest trial.

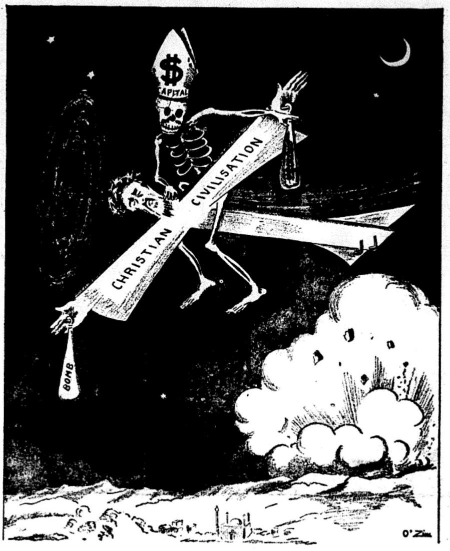
UPLIFTING THE NATIVES



SOVIETS NAIL LIE OF DRIFT TO CAPITALISM

Figures Show Advance Toward Socialization

By G. STRUMILIN.

MOSCOW.—(By Mail.)—It is a favorite and usual method to endeavor to discredit the Soviet Union in the eyes of the workers of western countries as a socialist union by making the libellous statement that in the U. S. S. R. private economy is developing more and more at the expense of state, socialist economy. The data given below prove the falsity of this statement.

On the strength of the statistics compiled by the state tax commission, concerning the socialization of means and processes of production and distribution in our national economy, the following achievements may be brot forward.

62 Per Cent Socialized.

From the material means of production in the country, exclusive of the inhabited housing fund, the state possessed in the beginning of 1924-25 according to the lowest estimate, capital funds to the amount of 11.7 milliards chervonny rubles, co-operatives, 6.5 milliard and private mainly peasant economies, 7.5 milliard.

Thus, in connection with the socialization of the means of production, over 62 per cent of the total amount has been socialized, and 38 per cent remain to be socialized whilst the socialization of our capital funds in the countryside up to the present is barely 4 per cent and in the towns, including our entire heavy industry and

British Bread Subsidy Costs $690,000,000

CRIBBEN AND SEXTON STOVE WORKERS HOLD MASS MEETING TONITE

As the first step in the drive to unionize the Cribben and Sexton company, manufacturers of the Universal stoves and ranges, Sacramento Blvd. and Chicago Ave., a mass meeting of workers in the shop will take place Monday, at 5:15 p. m.

The meeting will be an attempt to organize every workers in the shop from the laborer to the skilled mechanics. The meeting will be held at 736 North Albany Ave.

BOSS THREATENS UNION PICKETS AT PLATING CO.

John Werlik, business agent of the Metal Polishers' Union, Local Number 6, was threatened with arrest if he persisted in maintaining the picket line in front of the Chicago Plating Workers, formerly known as the Co-operative Plating Co., 351 West Superior street.

The Chicago Plating Works have been attempting to turn out the work of the struck Cribben and Sexton plant, Sacramento Blvd. and Chicago avenue. This shop has been an open shop for a number of years and insists that its men are not on strike and that there cannot be a strike as it is open shop. The picket lines give the lie to the statement of the bosses.

Discrimination in the distribution of piece work has been practiced in this shop. The lackeys of the firm get the best jobs and are able to make fair wages while the others are just barely able to make $5 for a day's work.

The DAILY WORKER representative attempted to interview the bosses. The bosses refused to say anything and said, "Let them fellows out there tell you," pointing out the window.

ZEIGLER MINE LOCAL REJECTS FAKERS' RATS

Expulsions of Loyal Unionists Continue

ZEIGLER, Ill., Sept. 27—The Zeigleer miners' union, Local 992 of the U. M. W. of A. held election for local 992 of the U. M. W. of A. held election for local officers on Wednesday night. This is the local in which the Farrington ku klux klan gang led by D. B. Cobb and Lon Fox, sub-district officers precipitated the infamous prosecution of fifteen members by Cobb on charges of "assault with intent to kill" and the murder by Alex Hargis, a kluxer, of Mike Sarovich, a member of the local in the union hall.

In this election, not one of Farrington's rats was elected. However, the Cobb-Klan-Farrington gang is still expelling active and loyal members of the union on framed up charges. Ross White is the latest victim.

The members of the U. M. W. of A. thruout the local camps are becoming aroused at the open alliance between the union officials and the coal operators to disrupt the union and destroy the hard-earned conditions of years of struggle.

Four Cornered Fight in Wisconsin Election

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 27.—The special senatorial campaign which will result in a selection of a successor to the late Senator Robert M. LaFollette next Tuesday, entered the final stage tonight. All four active candidates were making last appeals for support at meetings held in various parts of the state.

Edward D. Dithmar is running as an independent republican. Bob La Follette Jr., who got the regular republican nomination is in the field. The democratic candidate is William George Bruce, but as an "independent" democrat, while John M. Work, the socialist is running. His criticism of young Bob is that he is "breaking from the principles of his father."

REACTIONARIES ARE WHIPPED IN GREATEST FIGHT FOR POLICY OF CLASS STRUGGLE IN U. S. UNIONS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 27.—The left wing of the American Labor Movement has won a smashing and historic victory against the forces of reaction, a victory unprecedented, one which will challenge the attention of labor unionists thruout the world and which proves the soundness of the policies and tactics of the Trade Union Educational League, such is the significance of the "peace plan" adopted Thursday night, by 3,500 shop chairmen of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The shop chairmen filled both Cooper Union and Webster Hall and the proposed peace plan worked out by the Joint Action Committee of the suspended left wing Locals 2, 9 and 22, and the Sigman reactionary administration, was adopted after long discussion and the promise by the leaders of the Joint Action Committee that the fight against the Sigman machine would continue if the agreement is violated.

Workers Storm Halls.

Thousands of workers, who have for months thrown their mass weight and militant spirit against the Sigman machine, and now were anxious to hear the results of the peace negotiations which had extended for two weeks between leaders of the opposing factions under the direction of a committee elected by the previous meeting of shop chairman, these thousands gathered in the streets outside the halls where their shop chairmen were deliberating, and pressed by their anxiety, attempted to enter, but they were roughly repulsed by policemen's clubs and the strong-arm squads of the Sigman machine.

Members Demand Victory or Battle.

These crowds of members of the I. L. G. W. who had fought a long and heroic battle to save their union from official disruption by the yellow socialist right wing were in an aggressive mood, demanding the full fruits of their victory or a continuance of the fight.

Only the assurance by the leaders of the left wing Joint Action Committee, that the proposed plan offers the best chance of gaining the demands of the militant membership secured the plan's adoption.

Amnesty Thruout Country.

The plan was finally adopted with the added resolution offered from the floor demanding immediate amnesty for all union members throut the country, not only in New York City, who have been expelled for political opinions. This was carried by unanimous vote with uproarious applause.

At Cooper Union, L. Horowitz was the chairman, A. Cohen presided at Webster Hall. The peace plan, read by Joseph Boruchowitz, expelled manager of Local 2, establishes forever that there shall be no discrimination against members for political ideas. It provides:

Terms of Peace.

1. There shall be new elections in the three suspended Locals 2, 9 and 22; with all members eligible for office, regardless of their political beliefs or present suspension or expulsion.
2. The next international convention, called for November 30, shall consider proportional representation. If there are majority and minority opinions developed at the convention on the subject, both will be carried

WAR ON SOVIET LURKS IN LEE OF DEBT TALK

Diplomats' Dinners Herald Bloodshed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Sept. 27.—Post prandial diplomacy has followed the post-war debt problem into the lair of American financial imperialism. Yesterday the French finance minister, Joseph Caillaux, together with Marquis de Chambrun had luncheon with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon at the home of Gerrard Winston, Mellon's under secretary. They dined together again at night and today the entire French mission and the American members of the debt funding commission will all have luncheon at Mellon's country place.

"Everything is proceeding satisfactorily," said Caillaux. But Henry Dumay, member of the French mission put on the postscript, "Caillaux would say that it was satisfactory no matter what is transpiring. That is diplomacy." And Caillaux nodded in recognition of the necessity for maintaining the reputation for diplomats of never telling the truth.

Bankers Dangle Bait

New York bankers are in Washington ready to negotiate an enormous loan to France as soon as she comes across with acceptance of the secret proposals of American imperialism.

These proposals deal with larger matters than the French debt, though that is put in the foreground for consumption by the gullible public. America is putting pressure on France to enter without quibble into the so-called "security pact"—which is another name for the alliance of western European capitalist nations against the growing power of Soviet Russia.

One outstanding publication says editorially today that—"Our latest move, in refusing to let our bankers make loans to France until she has made a debt adjustment, has led inevitably to the success of the security negotiations."

Force Anti-Soviet Pact

The $4,200,000,000 debt of France to America is being used as a club to force France into political concessions, leading among which is the rupture of relations between Paris and Moscow. All the chatter about differences on the terms of the debt settlement, while quite true, do not tell the story.

Both American and French financiers know quite well that paying the debt is quite impossible. Only the French want a big loan to postpone the crash of French credit and the inflated franc, and America has in view the building a new counter-revolutionary front against Soviet Russia. "Peace among the western powers" means war to the east.

Atlantic Mills Keep Wage Cut They Said Would Be Temporary

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 27.—Workers at the Atlantic Mills, members of the United Textile Workers, who have been conferring with the employers over the restoration of a recent wage cut, will not have the cut restored. The company holds that it is justified in cutting wages because so many other textile mills have done so. The workers have not yet decided whether they will strike. The Atlantic Mills is one of the largest concerns in Rhode Island.

DUKHOBORS EXPOSE FALSE REPORT OF SEMENOV IN CANADIAN DAILIES

In the counter-revolutionary press of the United States and Canada appeared several articles of Dukhobor Semenov, who went to Soviet Russia with the purpose of getting acquainted with the conditions of the life of Dukhobors in Russia. In these articles Semenov called himself official representative of the Dukhobors. He, in his "impressions" about the life of the Dukhobors, painted it in dark and unattractive colors.

His articles have been read and repudiated by the convention of the Dukhobor delegates, which took place in Soviet Russia. Below is a copy

FRANCE PEEVED AT WASHINGTON STAND ON RIFFS

Aviators Continue to Bomb Villages

PARIS, Sept. 27—Secretary Kellogg's action in calling attention of the American aviators to the extra-territorial treaty with Morocco and demanding that Americans cease fighting the Riffs has caused much unfavorable comment in France.

Resent Slap.

The French resent its being brot up at a time when Caillaux is in America attempting to reach an agreement on the debt question. The French consider this move a slap in the face as it has been two months since the American mercenaries have been bombing Riff villages without any comment by the American state department, tho the mobilization of the Sherrifian squadron was widely heralded in America. Technically the aviators are in the service of the sultan of Morocco, who is the cats-paw of French imperialism.

The French insist that the order from Washington telling the aviators they must not fight a friendly government is recognition of Abd-el-Krim and the French hold that Krim is nothing but a rebel and that America must withdraw its demand on the mercenary aviators present in Morocco.

Reveal Other Violations.

France also points to the fact that many of the present aviators and others fought in the Lafayette escadrille during the war against Germany before America entered the war and have not heard of any going to jail or paying fines for the violation of the law which America is using now in its gesture in Morocco.

The French claim that America has no business to come in at this late hour to tell the aviators of the violation, since they have been mobilized and spent some time in being trained and are just now beginning to do the mercenary work that was expected.

"Travel for Pleasure."

The aviators point out that when some of them applied for passports to go to Morocco, they gave as their reason that they wanted to join the French foreign legion in the fight against the Riffs. When the passports were returned, they were marked "travel for pleasure."

Legal Aspect.

The legal question raised by the service of the American aviators, in the Sheriffian air guard is due to the extra-territorial rights enjoyed by the United States in Morocco. Section 4090 of the revised statutes reads:

"Every such minister may issue all manner of writs to prevent the citizens of the United States from enlisting in the military or naval service of either of the said (extra-territorial) countries, to make war upon any foreign power with whom the United States is at peace, or in the service of one portion of the people against any other portion of the same people; and he may carry out this power by a resort to such force belonging to the United States as may at the time be within his reach.

Doctor to Aid Krim

PARIS, Sept. 27—Dr. Ernest Griffin, an English military surgeon is attempting to cross the lines to give aid to Abd-el-Krim in Morocco. His trip has progressed very well so far, he reached Tangier the early part of last week and expects to be met by friends who will smuggle him across the French lines.

Abd-el-Krim will have a column of warriors to reach the doctor who intends opening a military hospital which is to take care of the wounded Riffs at Adjis.

Dr. Griffin also intends to send out news to the world as to the real facts in the Riffian war for independence.

Bombing Still Continues.

FEZ, French Morocco, Sept. 27—The aviators of the Sheriffian squadron insist they will remain thruout the campaign against the Riffs.

The hardest day's work that the squadron has been involved in came after the threatening note from the state department. Three tons of bombs were dropped upon the ill-equipped Riffians fighting for the independence of Morocco. Scores of villages have been wiped out in the source of the Agourdor. The plantations north of the Ouergha river which were flourishing and prospering are today blackened heaps of ashes.

Independent Union of Barbers on Strike in Boston Over Wage Rate

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—The barbers of Boston are on strike to force their employers to pay them a minimum wage of $25 a week, and a split on the business done in the shop. They also demand that all shops be closed on holidays unless the holiday falls on a Saturday or a Monday, in which case the barbers are willing to work half a day. The barbers' union is not affiliated with the A. F. of L.

CAPITALIST DICTATORSHIP SHOWN BY INCOME TAX OF CONGRESSMEN OF BOTH BIG CAPITALIST PARIES

By LELAND OLDS,

(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

The farce of representative government in a country dominated by a full fledged plutocracy is graphically exposed in a survey of congressional income tax returns issued by the United Press and published in the Wall Street Journal. The figures in this article raise the question whether congressmen with incomes averaging between $30,000 and $40,000 can in any real sense represent the viewpoint of the millions of workers and farmers whose entire incomes are less than the average tax paid by their so-called representatives.

Based on returns from about 200 senators and representatives the United Press estimates the total tax paid by members of both branches of congress at between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. The lower figure would indicate a per capita tax of $2,820 which would mean an average income of more than $30,000 without taking into account claims for exemption. Thus the average income of members of congress is 20 times that of the average male worker in industry.

The following table shows the 10 republicans and 8 democrats paying the highest taxes in the United Press list:

Incomes of Congressmen State	Tax	Approx-Income
Republican
Rep. Ogden L. Mills, N. Y.	$183,413	$500,000
Sen. T. Coleman DuPont, Del.	181,164	500,000
Sen. L. C. Phipps, Colo.	157,741	400,000
Rep. T. W. Phillips, Pa.	155,024	400,000
Rep. M. D. Hull, Ill.	95,568	275,000
Sen. G. A. Pepper, Pa.	21,993	100,000
Sen. D. A. Reed, Pa.	19,546	95,000
Sen. W. B. McKinley, Ill.	17,692	90,000

Conservative Estimate.

These incomes probably fall considerably short of the actual amounts because they are estimated without allowance for deduction or exemptions claimed. Thus Senator Couzens of Michigan paid a tax of $1,214 representing an income of about $21,000, altho he is known to have tax exempt government and municipal bonds giving him probably at least half a million a year. The Underwood returns are $2,955 for the senator and $25,828 for his wife.

With these returns before us it is interesting to speculate on how many coal diggers and steel workers in Pennsylvania feel that they are represented in matters vitally affecting the wage earner as against the big corporations by two senators pulling down at least $100,000 a year, largely from corporate investments.

The taxes of these senators average at least 10 times the annual wage of a skilled mechanic. Or consider the upstate workers of New York represented by a man whose income undoubtedly runs considerably over half a million. His tax alone would pay the annual wages of 100 railroad mechanics.

But the Democrats Have Hopes!

Plutocracy, the figures show, finds its most perfect representation in the republican party. Says the United Press: "The wealthiest members of both branches of congress—at least those who paid the highest income taxes—are republicans. The senate as a class is more wealthy than the house on the same basis. The average tax of a republican congressman is about 10 times that of the average per capita democratic toll. In the senate the average paid by republicans exceeds that of the democrats about 15 to 1."

Roumanian Police Terror at Work

ship of the revolutionary Communist Party take direct action against it. After the trial, the worker and peasant masses closed up their ranks more and more around the one and only party which defends this interest—around the Communist Party of Roumania—not one of the so-called political parties of the opposition conducts a serious struggle against the oligarchy, against the state of seige, and martial law, and against the reign of the secret service.

This is the position of the remaining condemned. The rest of the condemned put in an appeal. They had decided to bring the case to a second hearing in order to unmask the falseness and lowness of the police regime and to uncover the intrigues of the secret service. The Roumanian government tries to frighten the revolutionary labor movement with hard labor sentences. Some of the convicted are at present in the notorious fortress of Gilava, others are in Doftahn, where the regime is so ferocious, that the prisoners continually protest and go on hunger strikes. Comrades Boozhor and Max Goldstein, are all the time in solitary confinement, the latter being for months chained.

Labor Unions Smashed.

The terror in the towns and cities is directed with all its force against the labor organizations and trade unions. Active trade union workers are arrested. In Bucharest the trade unions are under military control. The labor press has been confiscated. The labor organizations enjoy no freedom whatever. Neither the old nor the new constitution, which is the bone of contention between the liberal state party and the so-called opposition, gives the working masses the slightest rights whatsoever.

In the villages and provinces, the terror is raging even fiercer than in the cities. The agrarian "reform" is carried out in such a way so that only landowners, officials and gendarmes receive the land which is being distributed. Profiteering in land is rife. In the annexed zones and especially in Bessarabia, the terror in the villages is so fierce, that even deputies of the Peasant Party have admitted that there are some villages where you cannot find a single peasant who has not been beaten by the gendarmes. The conditions in Bessarabia are worse than they ever were under the czarist regime.

It is very interesting to note how the rural council elections are carried out.

In view of the fact that rural councils have an enormous significance for the peasantry, and seeing that the peasant masses take an active interest in the elections, the government and the well-to-do peasants strive to capture the rural councils.

Peasants Refuse Dictation.

The government for a long time wavered on the question of the rural elections. However, the elections will most likely take place. The government will strive, however, to exclude from the lists all candidates which it knows are class conscious workers. The peasant masses, taking part in the elections are turning more and more against the leaders of the Peasant Party, which betrayed the interests of the peasants and workers by its political bloc with the bourgeois parties. In many districts, the local sections of the Peasants' Party paid no heed to the orders from the central office which directed that candidates should be choosen from the combined lists of the other parties—they put forward their own independent candidates.

NOTE: Comrade Dobrazhanu Geria was one of the 16 members of the Roumanian Central Committee that escaped. He is now in Soviet Russia. He has a long record of activity in the revolutionary movement, and has been in prison a number of times. He escaped from Roumania during the trial of the Central Committee of the Roumanian Communist Party.

But for Hunger and Strikes Ireland Would Be Happy, Says Priest

National prosperity is today replacing the reign of poverty that held Ireland in its grip during the last two years, and a new Ireland is rising out of the revolution and turmoil that swept the island prior to 1923, according to Rev. P. H. Smythe, P. R. pastor of St. Mary's Roman catholic church at Evanston, Ill., just returned from a visit to Erin.

"But for strikes and two terrible seasons of rain there would be no other trouble in Ireland today," said Father Smythe. "Irish labor troubles are often artificial and like those in other European countries, are often brought about by Bolshevik propaganda."

In other words only that the peasants and workers are half starved and some of them insist on fighting everything, would gladden the heart of the skypilot. Perhaps the crawthumping dominie does not know that there were strikes in Ireland before the word Bolshevism was coined. And there will be strikes in reland until capitalism and its religious joss house are abolished.

GERMANY ENTERS SECURITY PACT OCTOBER MEET

Rhineland Agreement Be Ratified

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—Germany has decided to send Chancellor Luther and Foreign Minister Stresemann to the conference of allied powers to discuss the Rhineland compact.

This decision comes after a long debate in the German cabinet at which serious differences arose between the groups represented. The nationalists insisted that Germany demand the return of the colonial possessions Togoland and Kamerun, at present being administered by England; the evacuation of Cologne; the rejection of the Versailles treaty world war guilt clause being placed on Germany.

Ride Nationalists.

The government party refuses to be hampered by these reservations. President von Hindenberg claims that these moves are mainly attempts of the nationalist party to invoke sympathy among the Germans and that the government party feels itself strong enough to oppose any move to hamper its work by reservations.

Treaty Provisions.

The basic features of the proposed Rhineland treaty are, first, an agreement by France and Germany to arbitrate any differences which may arise between them, and, secondly, an agreement by England and Italy to go to the assistance of either France or Germany if either one is the victim of aggression by the other. France and England are also making the demand that as part of the Rhineland pact, Germany join the league of nations. Germany is offered a seat in the council immediately upon joining. This will require a special meeting of the league of nations as the seventh league assembly meets next September.

A Monarchist Speaks.

The opposition of the nationalists was strengthened by Dr. George Heim, leader of the Bavarian monarchists in a speech, charging France with violation of the Rhineland convention thru the continued presence of black troops in the occupied zone, which he alleged Stresemann had deliberately kept out of the newspapers, said:

"If the security compact is signed and we enter the league of nations it will mean nothing other than final recognition of the Versailles treaty and prolongation of the promissory note we gave France despite our conviction it cannot be met. What is the value of a treaty between armed and unarmed adversaries? We Germans will abide by it always, France, however, will cut this rag to pieces with her sabre whenever she wants to. At least, before we negotiate the proposed compact, the Rhenish provinces should be evacuated by the French troops and the shameful court-martials there suppressed. A weak people cannot bind itself on any side. We dare not enter the league." The government merely ignores his speech.

Hindenberg Big Boss.

The Hindenberg group have decided upon going into the conference and are now trying to decide on whether the conference should be located on Italian soil or on Swiss soil. The date has been set for October 5, by Stresemann and the government party has agreed to the terms laid down by the allies in the security pact. The allies to make sure of the victory of the government party have had dispatches published announcing the evacuation of Cologne, by the middle of November and the impending resignation of M. Tirard, who is looked upon in disfavor by the present German government because of his intimacy with Poincare.

Taxi Drivers Strike in Boston Strong on Motorized Picketing

BOSTON, Sept. 27—The 375 drivers of Checker taxicabs in this city are now 100 per cent organized and 100 per cent on strike to have their wages and hours brot up to the union level. The chauffeurs have been on strike for a week and no cars are moving. Police cordons drawn around the non-union cab garage the first days of the strike have been removed, since the company could not prove any violence on the part of the strikers. The men want $4.00 per day of 9 hours.

Picketing in this strike has developed new tactics to fit new conditions. A large number of autos is parked along the streets near the taxi garage, and when a cab starts out with a strikebreaking driver, a union man trails the cab until it returns to the barns. This brand of picketing is

Wisconsin and Illinois Republican Days Help Expose Labor's "Friends"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the voters of Wisconsin get ready for "republican day," Tuesday, at the polls, in the casting of ballots in the selection of a successor for the late U. S. senator LaFollette. Last week there was a "republican day" at the Illinois state fair held at Springfield. But both of these days, in Illinois and in Wisconsin, should be days of clarification for the workers and poor farmers. They are days of unmasking of old party politicians.

• • • •

LaFollette, Jr., will win in Wisconsin. That seems to be a foregone conclusion. Some opposition jokester asked LaFollette, Jr., if he is not running because he is the son of his father, then why is he a candidate? LaFollette, Jr. might have answered that he is running because he wants to carve out a capitalist political career of his own. It is the future of the LaFollette movement in Wisconsin that the workers and poor farmers of that state are interested in, not with the memories of the dead past. LaFollette, Jr. is a part of that future.

• • • •

Wisconsin industrial workers are interested in the fact that their state is known over the land as a non-union state.

Wisconsin farmers feel the blows of the fact that farm mortgages have more than doubled during the last 25 years; that they are in bondage to the money lenders for nearly half a billion dollars.

• • • •

LaFollette, Jr. does not even take up the petty bourgeois attack of his late father against these evils. Instead, he makes his peace with the stalwart, reactionary politicians in Wisconsin, who do the bidding and are the agents of Wall Street. This is shown in different ways.

FIRST.—The national republican committee, Cal Coolidge's committee, has refused to endorse any candidate in the Wisconsin campaign. This shows that it is not fighting LaFollette, Jr.

SECOND.—The republican state central committee, a Cal Coolidge committee, because LaFollette politely stepped aside and let Coolidge run on the republican ticket in Wisconsin last November, has not been active in the campaign, especially not against LaFollette, Jr.

THIRD.—The Milwaukee county republican committee, thru its executive, has declared, therefore, that it "can see no need, at this time, for the county committee of Milwaukee county to officially participate in this special election campaign."

• • • •

In other words, the Wall Street gang, which LaFollette, Sr. so loved to attack, feels so safe with LaFollette, Jr., that it has drawn in its horn, nationally, in the state, and in the state's metropolis, leaving the entire field unchallenged.

• • • •

This condition can only lead to the break-up of the LaFollette movement in Wisconsin. The so-called Madison triumvirate, consisting of LaFollette, Jr., Governor Blaine and Attorney General Ekern, pull toward the right, nudging ever closer to the Coolidge regime. But there is also the break toward the left. Take former Lieutenant-Governor George F. Comings, for instance, who was on the right side of the farmer-labor conference in Chicago, in July, of 1923. He has quit the LaFollette camp and thrown an endorsement to the socialist senatorial candidate. Many other so-called "leaders" will be trying to find a comfortable nestling place.

• • • •

But for the broad masses of Wisconsin's city and land workers; these must find a basis upon which they can wage a militant fight for their own interests. They turned their back on the old capitalist parties when they furnished the basis for the LaFollette movement. But LaFollette would not quit the party of Wall Street. Nor will his son, who is deeper in it than ever. And it was the Wisconsin "socialists," with their mayor in Milwaukee, and a host of local, and state officials, who betrayed the workers under their leadership thru urging them to crawl back into the LaFollette camp. The workers and farmers of Wisconsin must now realize the bankruptcy of this LaFollette republican and Berger "socialist" leadership.

The time has arrived for a new deal. Wisconsin's workers must unite all their forces in support of a labor party, that will make a fight completely independent of the capitalist political organizations, that will rally the poor farmers in its support.

• • • •

The same holds true for Illinois, where Governor Len Small, who was supported last year by the officialdom of the Chicago trade unions, as well as the Farrington machine in the United Mine Workers of Illinois, has finally come out for the Coolidge machine, and shown himself in his true colors.

The republicans have had their days in Wisconsin and Illinois. Speed the day of the working and farming masses.

AS WE SEE IT -:- By T. J. O'Flaherty

the workers. But little by little it substituted the click of the trigger for the suave voice of the negotiation and the prod of the bayonet for the scratching of the pen. And the Italian workers found again themselves slaves in the factories. Very few of them would agree today with Mr. Welinder that the political state is a myth.

THE British ruling class are not discussing the question: "Should the capitalists arm?" They are already armed, but not sufficiently. John Wheatley, member of the British labor party, calls for an army of ten million workers to fight if necessary. The London Herald is conducting a symposium on: "Should the workers arm?" It will be necessary do doubt, and very likely in a short time. But instead of agreeing with Wheatley,—who by the way is far from being a Communist,—respectable leaders of British labor spurn the thot of using force. "If the capitalists are so lacking in common decency that they insist on being nasty and mussing up 'Merrie England' with our guts, blood and bones," they say, "why should we follow suit?"

THE British ruling class are organizing extra-legal forces, because there is a mighty army of labor in England trained to the use of arms. If fired with the holy purpose of fighting for their freedom, ten million workers could make it quite disagreeable for the "lords of foreign lands" who run the empire. The capitalists are not entirely confident of the army and navy, or even of the police. So they are taking the precaution to have a skeleton force composed of the "blue blooded" classes to bolster up the loyalty of those whose love for the robber empire has lost its primal passion.

THE developments in England are extremely important. Big empires go down hard and slowly. It took quite a long time to wipe out the Roman empire but the British octopus will go faster. We are living in a different age. This does not mean that the British empire is destined to topple over into the historical cess pool next week or even before Christmas. But it is doomed.

SOVIETS WILL IMPORT 10,000 "IRON HORSES"

To Distribute 13,500 Tractors in 1926

MOSCOW, Sept. 27.—The Narkomsem (department of agriculture) of the R. S. F. S. R. is planning to distribute next year among the peasants 13,500 tractors with spare parts. Of these, 10,380 tractors will be imported and 2,970 will be manufactured in the U. S. S. R. The cost of these tractors will be 42,000,000 rubles.

Repair Stations.

With the increase of the use of tractors in different parts of the Union, 1,200 repair stations will be established during the year of 1926.

There is now a big demand for tractor runners and mechanics in the U. S. S. R. The organizations which are distributing the tractors are organizing special courses to meet this need. It is anticipated that within a short period 26,000 men will graduate from these courses. This will mean the services of two men for each tractor in the U. S. S. R.

"The Harvest Festival."

This festival was introduced two years ago and it is now universal thruout the U. S. S. R. The festival has proved a very effective method for the spread of agricultural knowledge "The Harvest Festival" is devoted to the inspection of farms, agricultural experimental stations, agricultural co-operatives, etc. On "the harvest day" the peasants discuss improved methods of farming. Many parts of this festival is marked by shows, exhibitions, lectures, etc.

Air Maneuvers.

Caucasus, which was organized by the departments of agriculture, aviochim (organisation devoted to aviation and chemistry) and dobrolet (volunteer aviofleet society), has just returned to Moscow. In Caucasus they were engaged in fighting pests and especially locusts. This first experiment proves that the spraying of powdered chemicals was much more effective than the liquid compounds; in many mountain regions where the breeding grounds of the pests are located, it is very difficult to use liquids on account of the lack of water.

The narkomsen has been confronted with the problem of making topographical maps of many millions of dessiatins of land, so that they may be redistributed among the peasants. The department is now using the airplanes as a means of making the necessary photos for the survey of the land.

Tractors Contest.

In the Crimea in the middle of September there will take place a tractor contest. Russian, European, and American makes will participate.

The Colonization of Jewish Farmers.

The narkomsem has a plant to settle 30,000 Jewish families on land in South and East Russia. For this purpose the narkomsem will distribute 350,000 dessiatins of land in Ural, the Volga region and in Northern Caucasus. In prewar days a Russian Jew had no right to work on the land in any capacity.

Agricultural Exhibitions.

In the northwest region, at the end of Sept. 24, agricultural exhibitions will be opened. The most important exhibit will cover the flax industry.

Irregularity of Wage Standard Shown by a Massachusetts Survey

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—(FP)—An average increase of eight cents a week is shown for factory employees during the month of August over the month of July, according to the Massachusetts bureau of labor and industry. Most of the increase is shown in the very small stove making industry and in the manufacture of shoes. An increase of 2.1 per cent in the number of workers employed is also shown.

Eleven thousand workers in the textile industry suffered wage cuts averaging 9½ per cent while 65 workers in the stove making business received an increase of 145. The slight increase in total wages is due to the increase in the production of shoes for fall styles. Most of the increase is at Haverhill, center of the fancy turned shoe business.

Negro Porters Organize

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—At a mass meeting held by the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, over 500 Negro porters and their wives attended. At this meeting an attempt was made to organize the workers into the American Federation of Labor.

"No class of workers needs organization more than the Pullman car porters," said one of the Negro speakers. "As long as the Pullman company can deal with the men separately and arbitrarily they have no security in their jobs or as to treatment they receive."

Many of the porters joined the organization. Attempts are also being made to organize the Pullman porters in Washington, D. C.

SCIENCE SHOWS VALUE OF OUR DAILY WORKER

Read This and Be Convinced

By LELAND OLDS.

The vital importance to labor of a well organised labor press to combat the propaganda constantly pouring from capitalist organs of publicity is shown in a study made by E. A. Sturges of Washburn College, Topeka, Kansas, of the increase in conformity due to even a short exposure to propaganda. Sturges found that even 7 minutes silent reading of propaganda resulted in an average gain of more that 5 per cent in conformity and that conformity steadily increased as the time spent in such reading was lengthened.

His experiment consisted in getting 680 persons to vote a ballot containing 25 questions connected with the general issue of extreme patriotism versus pacifism. Those questions included:

Is it right or wrong to hate other countries which do wrong? To injure noncombatant citizens of countries which do wrong? Is it right or wrong to make war on any country which opposes American policy? Was it right or wrong for American soldiers to sink German submarines, killing their occupants? to drop bombs on German cities where military supplies were kept? etc.

Each individual voted either right, wrong or in doubt opposite each question. The ballots were graded from 100 per cent conformity down based on the answers. The results of the first ballot and of the ballot taken after 7 minutes exposure to propaganda were:

Percent of conformity	Persons on 1st ballot	Increase conformity after reading
0-19	26	2.3 points
20-39	207	3.0 "
40-59	200	2.3 "
60-79	204	2.0 "

Thus before reading the propaganda the bulk of the persons voting ranged between 20 per cent and 80 per cent of full conformity with the 100 per cent militarist patriot. The average was slightly over 50 per cent. After 7 min. readin of propaganda the average rose 2.3 points or about 5 per cent. After 14 minutes reading it rose 3.5 points and after 28 minutes reading 6.5 points or nearly 15 per cent.

The daily papers, the leading weekly and monthly periodicals the movies, all are filled with propaganda against the point of view of organized labor. And the public is exposed to this propaganda not 7 minutes or 14 minutes but all the time.

Sturges' study shows how this enables the big interests to mold public opinion in spite of the efforts of organized labor. Only as labor is able to counter with well organized propaganda of its own actually reaching the public mind can it hope to obtain the support which it needs.

Commune "Herald" Has a School for Children

MOSCOW, (By mail.)—The opening of a public school was celebrated by the members of the American Agricultural Commune "Herald", situated near Beribine station on the Moscow-Ural Railway, 50 versts out of Moscow.

The members of the Commune consist of Russian re-emigrants from the United States who had fled to America from political and religious persecution under the Czar and have now come back to work on the land under Soviet rule.

The colony consists of 60 adults and 19 children. The children speak English and Yiddish.

Machine Shop's Program.

MOSCOW, (Tass), Sept. 25.—The Supreme Council of People's Economy has approved the program of Soviet machine-building plants, providing for the construction of 250 railway locomotives in the course of the coming year. The 6 years' engine-building plan has also been approved for the construction of 4,509 locomotives of various types.

The plan also provides for a capital re-equipment of the largest Soviet engine-building plants.

BRAMLEY VOICES BRITISH LABOR'S FAITH IN SOVIET

"We Stand by Russian Workers," He Says

SCARBOROUGH, Eng.—(FP)—"We consider it our duty to stand by the working classes of Russia!" Fred Bramley, secretary of the General Council and a member of the British Trade Union Delegation to Russia, was speaking. He leaned over the platform rail, looking at the newspaper men, and dictated his words slowly, so that they might get the full effect of what he was saying. Ever since the British Delegation made its Russian Report, the capitalist papers have been making bitter attacks upon it. This was the first time that the General Council has had an opportunity to answer.

"We must consider Russian problems in relation to the past history of Russia," Bramley went on. "It is not possible to judge them in the light of our experience."

"There are certain things that we can say," he continued. "The Russian Revolution is the first revolution in all history that has aimed at and secured the overthrow of exploitation, the world's first experiment in working class control of public affairs. There they have put into practice the resolutions that we have been passing in these congresses for many years.

"There is one great lesson that the Russian Revolution has taught us. It is possible to make changes in governments; to put people in prison; to cut off the heads even of kings; to remove whole ruling dynasties; to launch devastating wars upon the world and slaughter the workers by the millions, and yet to maintain your position of respectability in society. We have had some experience with these matters in our own country. But if you disturb the landed interests, if you interfere with business profits, if you take any step that threatens the destruction of the established system of exploitation, you will be ostracized and attacked by the whole capitalist world. You will be compelled to face what Russia faces now."

The resolution upon which Bramley was speaking recorded appreciation by Congress "of the General Council's efforts to promote international unity, and urged the incoming General Council to do everything in their power toward securing world-wide unity of the Trade Union Movement through an all inclusive International Federation of Trade Unions." The passage of this resolution placed the Congress squarely behind Purcell, Bramley, Hicks and the other "left" members of the General Council who have been handling the situation during the year.

For several weeks past the capitalist press has been conducting a vigorous campaign against these members of the General Council and against their unity objectives. But after Bramley had finished his impressive speech the resolution went thru with a shout. Scarcely a voice was raised against it, and no one rose to oppose it. The British Trade Union Movement is now officially committed to another twelve months of effort to unify the trade union forces of the world.

LEWIS ADMITS COAL MINE PACT MADE IN CAPITOL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Sept. 27.—A broadside attack against certain bituminous coal operators, whom he charged with violating the Jacksonville agreement, was launched here today by John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, at a great mass meeting of miners.

At the same time Lewis warned the government it had an obligation in the premises "as the Jacksonville agreement was negotiated and executed with the aid and co-operation of high government officials."

MORE MATCHES EXPORTED FROM SOVIET FACTORIES THIS YEAR THAN IN 1913

MOSCOW, (Tass)—Sept. 27—The demand for Russian matches grows abroad. An order was lately placed for 50,000 cases; another from America for 10,000 cases. Many orders are being received from the Near Eastern countries, Syria, Egypt, Palestine, Turkey and Greece.

1,400,000 rubles' worth of matches were exported abroad in 1924-1925; in 1913 the match exportation reached only 1,200,000 rubles.

Production Increases.

3.5 million cases of matches were yearly produced in Russia before the war. From 1918 up to 1923, the production dropped to 1 million cases. The output has shown a rapid growth in 1924-1925, when it reached 2,100,000 cases. It is being planned to increase the output to 4,000,000 cases in 1925-26.

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics possesses 40 match factories.

"B. AND O. BILL" IGNORES GROWING DEMAND TO QUIT

Further Fight Looms by Referendum

WASHINGTON—(F. P.)—Secretary Davison of the Intl. Assn. of Machinists has received, at Washington headquarters of the grand lodge, the recall petition endorsed by a large number of local lodges throughout the United States and Canada. Pending his checking-over of the list of endorsers, and of the legal standing of these lodges, no statement as to whether the legally required number of endorsements has been filed will be made. Davison and Vice-President Conlon have made it clear, however, that they will fight the holding of such an election, claiming that the charges made against themselves and others are too vague to fall within the provisions made in the constitution for a recall proceedure.

If President Johnston holds the decision void, and his decision is upheld by the council, as is expected to be the event, the opposition party may, by petition of 10 per cent of all the lodges, force a referendum election on the question whether the recall petition is legal. If this first referendum election is won by the anti-administration forces, the recall election must be held. These steps will probably take five or six months.

Three Men Killed in Accident on Big Loop Construction Job

Three men were killed and two injured today when a material elevator on a building under construction in the downtown district fell fourteen stories.

James Devlin, escorting a tub of cement on the elevator, was killed in the crash. An unidentified workman, swept off the seventh floor by the falling mass of metal, wood and cement, was taken out dead and Walter Busby, loading cement on the ground was struck by the flying debris and died on the way to a hospital. Crawford Robinson's left thumb was sheared off by a flying piece of metal and Charles Knodel received a broken leg. Both were working on the ground.

NEGRO PARENTS FIGHT AGAINST JIM CROW PLAN

School Board Attempts Race Seggregation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 27.—Jim Crowism has been allowed to creep into the public schools of Philadelphia. Shortly after the reopening of the public schools, after the summer vacations, an edict of the school board set aside a school on 19th and Wharton streets to be used by Negro children.

Children were forced to go many blocks across dangerous crossings where speeding autos were a danger to be met at every step. The children were not allowed any longer to attend the schools nearest their homes, but had to attend a school set aside for Negro children only. This act of Jim Crowism aroused the indignation of the parents whose children were thus discriminated against.

At a mass meeting held at the John Simmons Memorial M. E. Church, the parents, discussed a course of action. A committee was appointed to confer with the school authorities.

Supt. Edwin C. Broome and Associate Supt. Louis Nusbaum of the school board told the parents committee, Mrs. Robert Smith and Edward Ramie, that they were wasting their time protesting against the introduction of the Jim Crow school into the city of Philadelphia. They said that the school had been set aside for Negro children and the plans would not be changed.

The second meeting of the parents decided to hire law counsel to fight this attempt of segregating the children. At this meeting representatives of the Mutual Association of Postal Employees and the Hotel Brotherhood expressed their determination to battle with the parents of the children for the right of Negro children to go to any school in the city of Philadelphia that the parents saw fit to send their children. Other organizations also sent delegates.

The school board, tho it insisted on its determination to segregate the Negro children, let down the bars at the Landreth school when they saw the parents had organized for a real struggle with the city administration. The parents were not fooled by this move and continue their efforts to bring the issue into the courts.

Jim Crowism is a grave menace to the Negro workers of America, and must be combatted.

If the school board in Philadelphia is allowed to follow out its policy, not only will segregation of Negro children take place but the segreation of the Negro workers as to residence will be gradually accomplished.

As Negro children will have to travel long distances to school, the parents will move closer to the Jim Crow schools. The white workers on the other hand will move closer to the schools their children attend. Then in Philadelphia race segregation will be accomplished.

The attendant evils that go with race segregation are: poorer schools, few repairs are made; the course of study is poorer; the teachers are the poorest paid; homes of workers are allowed to deteriorate, the landlords charging exorbitant rates for shacks; streets are not kept in repair; sanitary provisions on the part of the city administration are neglected; and the police inflict shameful degradations on the workers forced to reside in the district because of the color of their skins.

There can be but one answer to the school board administration; a strike of every Negro school child in the city of Philadelphia. Let the parents keep their children at home and refuse to let them enter the Jim Crow schools and we will see the klan inspired school board change their melodies.

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

Flyers Come to Grief.

BREAUX, France, Sept. 27—The French aviators, Tarascon and Favreau, who were attempting to break the world's non-stop flight record, crashed in flames at 3:30 a. m. this morning near here.

Captain Tarascon who was caught beneath the burning debris of the plane, is not in a serious condition. Favreau was thrown out of the airplane and his condition is not considered serious.

CHINESE TROOPS FIRE ON CHINESE WORKERS STRIKING JAP MILLS

SHANGHAI, Sept. 27.—Nine Chinese workers were wounded including three women at Pootung, across the river from Shanghai, today when reactionary Fengtien troops fired on striking employes of the Japan-China Cotton Mill which is Japanese owned.

TINKERED WITH UNEMPLOYMENT AT SCARBOROUGH

Decisive Measures Not Adopted, Says Writer

By CARL BRANNIN.

SCARBOROUGH, England, (F.P.)—With more than 1,600,000 unemployed workers in England to-day and the number growing week by week, the Trade Union Congress confined itself to measures dealing with reform of the present unemployment relief machinery rather than militant action to check and overcome this menace.

Harry Pollitt, delegate from the boilermakers and Secy. of the Natl. Minority Movement, asked the Congress to adopt a program embodying the following features.

1. To cement bonds between unemployed and employed workers so that they would fight better together in strikes.

2. That Labor Party in Parliament should pursue a policy of obstruction until definite action was taken to stop the closing down of industry; to extend government credit to concerns desiring to trade with Russia and break the credit blockade of the banks as evidenced by their recent refusal to finance large buying orders of machinery from Russia.

3. A nation wide campaign to organise the unemployed.

He pointed out that unemployment was being artifically fostered as a part of the employers' offensive against the miners and the working class generally next May. J. M. Keynes, liberal economist was quoted as an authority in this connection.

Ellen Wilkinson, Labor M. P. and Haldsworth of the Distributive Workers urged that the National Unemployed Workers Committee Movement be given full affiliation to the Trades Union Congress. They pointed to the fine support given by the men and women out of work to other workers out on strike. In case after case they had refused to scab even tho they were hungry themselves. The unemployed should be tied closer to the Trade Union movement and given a chance to present their case at the Congress of Trade Unions.

Ask Rehearing on Schedel

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Petition for rehearing by the labor department of the ruling that John C. Schedel of Ft. Wayne, Ind., must be re-deported altho he wants to support his wife and four children who would be left helpless, has been filed by the Labor Defense Council, of Chicago, at Secretary Davis' office.

The petition declares that since Schedel is now in the United States, after having been deported as a Communist and kept abroad for four years, the objection to his presence is purely technical. Indiana citizens have urged Davis to show mercy to the man's family, by permitting him to remain.

MOORS CONTEST EVERY INCH OF BATTLEGROUND

Spain's Offensive Gains But One Mile

MADRID, Spain, Sept. 27.—The Spanish drive on the Moors continues. The Moors have forced Spain to struggle for every inch of ground. The Spaniards have begun their drive in the Alhucemas section. Here the Moors are forcing Spain to use every available airplane to hold the positions that are gained. After a fight that contested every post the Spaniards won but a strip of territory of a mile in depth.

The bitterness with which the field is contested is contained in the following declarations of General Primo de Rivera:

"From now on there will be war, much war—if the rebels desire peace it will be they who ask for it."

Use Mercenaries.

With this declaration is coupled the fact that foreign mercenaries are being used by Spain to carry on the struggle. The foreign legions are usually composed of undesirable elements that are out for plunder. Airplanes are to be used more than ever in the struggle against the Riffs.

The Spanish General Jordana found himself in great difficulty after the storming of Morro Viejo, Cuervos de Xuauen and Malmusst, all situated near the Bay of Alhucemas.

Hard to Hold.

He expressed his perplexity in the following words: "The operations are by no means concluded, because after we have captured the mountains we must fortify them and attend to many other matters to insure the safety of our troops."

The Moorish artillery put the Spanish battleship Alfonso XIII, General Primo de Rivera's base of operations, out of action. The Spanish battleship Jaimo was badly damaged by a well-placed Moorish shell. The military equipment of the tribesmen is scant. They have a few field pieces. Rifles and machine guns are the only other means at their disposal, while the Spanish troops and the mercenaries have airplanes, heavy artillery, battleships, tanks and other modern weapons at their disposal.

In Revolt!

For the first time in the history of international class solidarity, we hear the voice of the Chinese workers calling to the workers of other countries for a helping hand.

For the first time in the history of proletarian revolts in China, we find the Chinese workers awakening to the spirit of international proletarianism.

For the first time in history the Chinese workers are beginning to understand the true meaning of capitalism, militarism, and exploitation.

THEY ARE AWAKENING!

In all the principal cities of China today, the workers are rising in revolt against their oppressors, feeling the breath of freedom that comes to them from the workers' government of Soviet Russia, they too, want to be free.

The iron hand of international imperialism is pressing harder and harder upon their throats in an effort to starve them and keep them in submission, abject slavery and servitude.

The success of international capitalism spells starvation, exploitation, imprisonment and death for the workers of all countries.

MUST THEY STARVE?

THE CHINESE WORKERS ARE [illegible]ING A BATTLE FOR LIFE AND FREEDOM.

THEIR VICTORY WILL BE OUR [illegible]TORY.

A LIBERATED CHINESE WORKER, MEANS A LIBERATED WORKER EVERYWHERE.

THEY NEED OUR HELP—MORALLY AND FINANCIALLY.

WE MUST RALLY TO THEIR SUPPORT AND HELP FEED THEM.

IN RUSSIA, ENGLAND, GERMANY, FRANCE, AUSTRALIA, EVERYWHERE THE WORKERS ARE SUPPORTING THE WORKERS OF CHINA.

SO WILL WE.

N. Y. MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS FIRST AGITPROP TASK

Campaign Committees in Full Swing

NEW YORK, Sept. 27—The most important task before the party in this district for the next few weeks, the mayoralty campaign, was the order of business at the first meeting of the agitprop committee of the New York district. Comrades Bimba, Herberg, Olgin, Grecht and Wolfe of the committee and others interested were present.

A campaign committee of eleven was elected which was subdivided into a research committee (Trachtenberg, Potash, Bosse), to get together material for speakers, for publicity for the press, for our comrades in the unions, etc.; a speakers' committee (Grecht, Darcy, Wolfe) which is in charge of the class at the Workers' School in "Political Issues and Their Presentation," a class which trains campaign speakers; a press and publicity committee (Robins, Holtman, Benjamin, Trachtenberg, Darcy, Bosse) which will take care of reporting the progress of the election campaign, issuing lealets, and the like.

A committee was elected to prepare for the opening of the Workers' School, which will probably not be until the beginning of November, because of the stress of campaign work. This committee (Bimba, Wolfe, Grecht, Mindel, and a Y. W. L. representative) will get to work immediately on courses, instructors, registering students, and making complete preparations for the school year. Its big task will be the raising of the educational level of the party members in the district by putting as many as possible thru an elementary training in the ABC of Communism, of an essentially political and practical nature, especially in its bearings on the reorganization and Bolshevization of the party.

Comrade Wolfe, the district agitprop director, reported that the class in political issues and their presentation had started last Saturday with an attendance of 25, and would meet every Saturday, at 2 p. m. The first hour would be devoted to discussing and clarifying the material to be used, and as an aid to this, a mimeographed bulletin was being published containing this material. The rest of the session was given to practice in speaking on the data discussed, with special emphasis on effectiveness in speaking. After the elections this group would be kept together for any other campaign the party engaged in, as a permanent corps of agitators and speakers. Any comrades in the district who are interested or who can be useful in this, or in any other phase of agitprop work mentioned in this report, should get in touch immediately with Comrade Wolfe at the school office. Students at college, teachers, research workers, and others with some training along research lines are also needed.

A section of the research committee of the campaign committee, got together Tuesday night, and planned the work, divided it, assigned it, and will be ready to report to the speakers' class on Saturday the data on the data on the mayoralty candidates in N. Y. C., their attitude toward labor, their past records, and the like.

Other comittees organized were the library committee, which Comrade Grecht is in charge of, and the auditing committee, (Darcy and Kitzes) which will put in shape for the coming year the affairs of the Workers' School and library. We have the names of some 30 comrades, outside of the class, who have volunteered to help on agitprop work, and want as many more. The industrial work of the district, the party reorganization, mass education work, training of party functionaries, etc., all require research workers, organizers, clerical workers, and any other sort of comrades willing to help, whether they think they are qualified or not. We will guarantee to give them useful and interesting work that they will be able to do, or that can be done under the direction of better trained comrades, who will teach them while they work.

Letter Carriers Meet Has Boss and Union Men Speak on Same Stage

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.— W. J. Gainor, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, upon his return from the convention in Detroit, reported that the divergent economic views on the platform in the array of speaker from Postmaster General New to aggressive trade unionists would never be attempted again as harmony was too precariously maintained.

"Is This A Union?"

A fancy dress parade four miles in length in which letter carriers competed for prizes, led President Green of the American Federation of Labor to exclaim, "Can this be a labor organization?"

The convention demanded that the pension law for federal employes be amended this winter so that letter carriers could retire at an average age of 56 years, after they have been in the service 30 years. The maximum retirement pension to be raised from $720 to $1,200 a year.

The Workers Party in Action

Shop Nuclei and South Slavic Workers

By CHARLES NOVAK

WITH the decision of the Communist International on the reorganisation of the Communist parties on the basis of shop nuclei, the walls which were separating some Communist parties like our own from the working masses in industrial enterprises, have been broken down. Our party, which at the last convention definitely adopted the necessary measures and program for reorganization, has shown the fullest understanding for this important and, for every party, vital aim. What is most important, our party has created the basis for the future building of a real mass Bolshevik party.

In a country like America, where industry has reached its most developed phase, where imperialism is most powerful and where the working class is under the economic and political slavery, our party is a propaganda group with more or less ideological prestige for the masses but organizationally it is very small. In a land where millions are slaving, where capitalism is forcibly committing unheard of crimes, against the workers, our party, because of its incorrect organizational structure and weak ideological influence, it was not able to interest the large circle of the working class for the struggle against capitalism and its system.

ONE of the major causes of our incapability was this, that we did not have close connection with the industrial workers, or rather our influence was not strong enough to win these workers for our work. This is shown by the fact that the results were not as we expected. As for example our work heretofore was inefficient, a result of the poor methods used and because of the absolute organizational structure of our party. On the other hand, we will take our influence among the South Slavic workers in this country in American industry. Today we find about 700,000 South Slavic workers.

The great majority of them are employed in most important enterprises, as for instance, the coal, steel and iron industry and iron mining industry. To better illustrate this we will bring the latest statistics of the industries in which they are employed.

In the coal and steel industry in the state of Pennsylvania, there are about 100,000 South Slavic workers. A good number of them are organized in the economic organization of the United Mine Workers of America, while a very small number are organized in our party (something like 450). In the coal industry in Ohio we find about 80,000 of which the majority are organized in the United Mine Workers of America, while but 300 are members of our party. In West Virginia, where the cossack rule and the open shop system prevails, there are about 25,000 South Slavic workers. They are all, with but a few exceptions, employed in the coal mines. Very few are organized in an economic organization and the strength of our party is almost equal to zero. Out of 25,000 South Slavic only 100 are organized in the Workers Party, while in the economic organization the number is just a little larger. In the states of Illinois and Indiana there are about 110,000 South Slavic workers employed in the industries, a very small number are organized in the economic organization and only about 300 in our party. In the coal industry of Kansas we find about 20,000 workers; the economic organization is fairly well organized though politically the workers are practically unorganized. Minnesota numbers about 25,000 South Slavs, the majority of whom are employed in the iron industry and not organized in an economic organization, while our party has only about 60 members. Colorado, North and South Dakota, Montana and Washington have about 70,000 South Slavic workers employed in various industries, in the coal, steel and lumber industries. A small number are organized in an economic organization and still less in our party. In Oregon, Utah and California there are about 75,000 South Slavic workers, presenting the same picture as Colorado, North and South Dakota, etc. The rest of the South Slavic workers are scattered over the rest of the states and employed in various industries.

FROM this we can see that our party has a very small influence among the South Slavic workers in comperative with the number of South Slavic workers in this country.

There are only 1,500 South Slavs in the party and they are in the most important industries. Our ideological influence reaches a few more thousand workers who are sympathetic. Our official organ Radnik (The Worker) has a circulation of nearly 8,000 while our other language organ, Delavska Slovenija, (The Workers Slovan) has a circulation of about 2,000.

From this picture we see that organizationally our party has had relatively very small success. Ideologically we are in much better conditions. Our ideological influence is about five time greater than the organizationally success. Now the question is before us; How can it be explained in regard to the South Slavic workers? How is it, that our ideological influence is about five times greater than our organizational ties? Why was not our party able to bring those sympathizers into our ranks?

I believe that one of the major reasons for these workers not being in our ranks lies in that our party did not have that organizational structure which would enable a close connection with the workers in the industries. Our work was more or less only propaganda while at the same time we were deficient in organization. Secondly, the reason we did not get those workers for the party lies in that they did not see our party and our comrades actively participate in the everyday struggles. Our struggles were composed more or less of abstract grievances and slogans, while we had at the same time forgotten the immediate needs of the everyday class struggle, the fight for which would gain us influence and prestige.

OUR party did not pay sufficient attention to the Communist activity in the shops, in the street and house agitation. This can be understood if we consider our present organizational structure, which does not and can not respond to the aims of a real Communist Party. In our agitation and propaganda we have to bring to the workers concrete facts and with that get them interested for the struggle against the imperialist class.

Our agitation in the houses, streets, etc. was favorable but that which was most important, namely, to throw most of our strenght into the industrial field, we neglected so that unintentionally we have helped our party separate itself from the working masses.

HOWEVER, with the reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei our party will be in a position to correct its inefficiency and find the way to connect itself with the masses in the various branches of industry. With systematic work in the shop nuclei as the political unit of our party we will be able to gain the sympathy of the masses and what is more we will get the full confidence of the working class. By connecting the every day needs with the political problems we will be in a position to lead the large masses of workers into the struggle against capitalism and the capitalist system. If in those conflicts our comrades actively participate and take the most dangerous places in the struggles as is their duty, there is no doubt that the workers will have confidence in our party and so the party will be able to attract those workers ideologically and organizationally. The major stipulation for drawing the masses to us consists in winning their full confidence. Who has, the confidence has the working class also. But, confidence cannot be gained by abstract slogans. It requires systematic work and struggle in favor of the working class.

All this we were unable to do because of not having the strong connections with the workers in the various industrial enterprises. With the reorganization of our party in the shop nuclei, the foundation has been laid for the development of our party. Our problem consists now in forming a Communist fortress but of every shop, mine and so forth. Only in that way, if we throw our strength there were the workers are most exploited and where they feel that misery and torture of the capitalist exploitation, will be able to bring those masses which are today outside of our party into the party.

THESE are the actual aims of every Communist Party. Our section, which has a large field of work among the South Slavic workers, will do its utmost to see to it that the reorganization will be successful. Every party member must unconditionally become a member of a shop nuclei. Every member, as a real Communist, must fight for the actual needs of the working class and with that show that our party is the only one that is carrying on the struggle in the interests of the working class. But it must be understood that by fighting for immediate needs we must inform the workers that we fight for the final aim, to destroy the capitalist system. If we compare our 1,500 South Slavic members with the 800,000 workers then it is clear that before us is a big task; to get those workers into our party and make them fight for our final aim.

TONY STANFL THANKS COMRADES WHO ASSIST HIM IN HIS FIGHT

The following letter received by the DAILY WORKER tells how Comrade Tony Stanfl of Mystic, Iowa, has been aided in his fight to get well and to continue his Communist activities:

"I let you know that I received a check of $10 on Sept. 18; also I received a check of $35 on Sept. 20, for which I am very thankful. Also I received enclosed two letters from two comrades, from Michigan and New York. To the New York, I did reply already and when I get the medicine, I will write to Detroit, Mich.

Thankful for Aid.

"I am very glad and thankful to you for your care of me and very glad and thankful to friends and comrades for their donations and sympathy for me in my long illness. This money will enable me to buy more medicine and food, which has been very scarce, until I get employment, I don't know when.

"Also, I got a letter from Kellogg, Ia., that he will send me a recipe to cure myself without any expense, but I didn't receive it yet. Comrade Knutson from Nebraska sent me the first money, five dollars. I did need it very bad.

"Might I cure myself of this malady, I would go back to my party work. If I could get my legs well, the heart, I think, would get better also. Then I would go from house to house for subs, the same I did in the past.

Spirit Strong, Body Weak.

"My legs are cold like ice, we have cold weather now. With horror, I am awaiting on the winter months, with my legs swollen. I did help one comrade to distribute the Progressive Miners' leaflets only on the sidewalk. I can't walk outside. So you see, the spirit would do the work, but the body is weak. But I hope that I will be soon in fighting line again, and I am again thankful to you, and to all comrades and friends, for their help and sympathy.

"Fraternally your comrade.

"Tony Stanfl."

Other Donations.

Others who have responded to Comrade Stanfl's need with donations sent to the DAILY WORKER are John Siegard, Bredenburg, Saskatchewan, Canada, $5; Karl J. Malstrom, Moline, Ill., $1.50; Esther Cohen, Brooklyn, N. Y., $1; Margaret Stresow, Central Islip, New York, $1; C. M. Smith, Coscob, Conn., $1; A Friend, Oakland, Cal., $1; Louis Lagomassino, Santa Rosa, Cal., $1; and W. Lindgren, Minneapolis, $1.

PHILADELPHIA, ATTENTION!

"Meet Judge Larry and Mr. Dollars: They will give you an honest and stupid capitalist lecture and then you'll get acquainted with George, Vera and Tony who are members of the Juniors and the phoney questions they're asking in the School Days produced by the Workers' Theater Alliance, Wednesday, Sept. 30, at Eagles Temple, Broad and Spring Garden Sts.

This is a theater of workers by workers and for workers.

Be sure to be there and see them perform.

Get your tickets in advance and tell your friends to do likewise.

FORWARD! THIS IS NO TIME TO HESITATE OR RETREAT

An army marched into battle against a powerful enemy, fighting against overwhelming odds. But it was a militant and enthusiastic army and it quickly dealt a decisive defeat to its opponents. Believing that the conflict had been won in a single battle the army began to become indifferent and to disintegrate. The enemy was in the meantime busy in reassembling its forces and soon launched a counterattack which completely demolished the opposing army.

This is no fairy story. It has happened time and time again not only in military encounters but in every field of human conflict.

The DAILY WORKER has a host of enemies. Not the least dangerous of these is poverty. Lack of funds a few weeks ago threatened the very existence of the DAILY WORKER. A call to struggle was sounded and an army of militant workers sprang up to save the DAILY WORKER. Immediately the money began to pour in and it looked like the DAILY WORKER was winning a splendid victory over the impending disaster.

But as a matter of fact only a good start had been made. $10,000 was the amount needed within two weeks and now three weeks have passed and less than $10,000 has been secured. The DAILY WORKER has survived somehow but now the situation is becoming dark again. Not even all of the past debts have been taken care of to say nothing of securing the DAILY WORKER during the coming months.

Now it looks as tho the DAILY WORKER'S army of supporters is, at least in part, becoming indifferent and is beginning to forget the bitter need of its daily organ. But poverty is an enemy which the DAILY WORKER cannot destroy for a long time to come. As the captalists use poverty to enslave and exploit the workers so will they use poverty to destroy the champion of the workers' struggles.

The list which follows is the record of those whose contributions were received the last three days of last week. It is a long list and a fine one but the total involved is less than the amounts which were received during single days at the start of the campaign.

The campaign to save the DAILY WORKER is not over and cannot be over until the DAILY WORKER is saved, not only for today and tomorrow but saved for the future as the most needed weapon of the Communist movement.

FILIPINO COURT BUCKS AMERICAN ISLAND AUDITOR

Gov. Wood's Dictatorship Gets Setback

MANILA, Sept. 27—American rule in the Phillippines was given a setback in a ruling made by the Philippine superior court. The court decided that the decisions of Insular Auditor Ben F. Wright are not final and may be appealed to the local courts.

The Quezon interests presented a bill aimed at this same goal a year ago which was vetoed by Governor General Wood. In this decision of the court, Wood claims his administration work in controlling finances of the islands is nullified. The auditor and Wood are appealing the case to the United States supreme court.

To Become Rubber Stamp.

The strength of the auditor's office lay in the fact that its rulings were considered final and could only be appealed before Governor Wood. If Wood sustained the auditor Wright then the only appeal the complaining parties had was president Calvin Coolidge. If the supreme court decides against the uditor's office Wright threatens to resign as otherwise he is a mere rubber stamp.

The present case rose from an appeal by the Ynchaust company, a local steamship line, from the auditor's refusal to refund them customs duties of $75,000 which were erroneously imposed. The policy of the auditor has been to refuse the appeals of any complaining parties.

The attorney general of the islands refused to represent Wright. The auditor was forced ot defend himself.

During the trial the attorneys of the steamship company openly admitted that it was a fight to clip the auditor's wings and transfer more power into the hands of the Filipinos.

BRITISH BANKS SABOTAGE RUSS TRADE ORDERS

Force Industry to Refuse $25,000,000

LONDON, Sept. 27.—M. J. G. Eremin, first vice-president of the textile syndicate of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republirs, with reference to the visit of the Russian textile delegation, now leaving England, clearly indicates in a final statement that the big banking firms of Great Britain have prevented manufacturers from taking Soviet orders for $25,000,000 worth of textile machinery.

"We came to England as business men and for business purposes exclusively," the statement continues. "We are not politicians, but traders and merchants.

"We are impressed by the state of the textile machinery factories of Lancashire, and we are satisfied that our textile industry could profitably obtain the machinery required by it from Lancashire.

"During our journey in Lancashire, as well as during the consequent negotiations with the representatives of Lancashire and other firms in London, we gained many proofs that English manufacturers are ready and willing to do business with us. We must note further that contrary to what was reported in some papers, the terms preferred by us did not appear to the firms concerned to be at all fantastic, as evidenced by the orders which were accepted from us on our terms by some of the biggest Lancashire manufacturers.

Banks Blamed.

"Negotiations are proceeding with other firms and there is every reason to hope that agreement will be reached with them.

"Nevertheless we must note with deep regret that up to now we have been unable to place in England the five million pounds worth of orders it was intended to place.

"As a matter of fact, we have succeeded up to now in placing only a small proportion of the orders we brought with us. This is due primarily to the following reasons: Practically all firms, with which we were negotiating, were unanimous in pointing out to us that, in accepting our orders they have to meet considerable financial difficulties. They would be prepared to meet us on the question of credit required provided the banks would grant them the necessary accommodation. But the banks refuse to do it.

British Preferred.

"We are leaving England today and are proceeding to Germany. On our way here we had some preliminary negotiations with a few German firms, and, as already stated by us, the latter were offering us very advantageous terms."

In an interview Mr. Eremin explained that the syndicate had placed orders with six Lancashire manufacturers.

"I cannot disclose as yet the actual amount of the orders or the names of the firms with whom they are placed," he said. "Of course, we shall have to place some of our orders in Germany, but, if we could get it, we prefer English machinery."

NOTED AMERICAN ART CRITIC PRAISES NEW PROLETARIAN CULTURE IN SOVIET RUSSIA

MOSCOW—(By Mail)—Dr. Charles Brinton, the noted American art critic, in an interview with the editor of the Vetchernaya Moskva praised the new culture developed in proletarian Russia.

"I have visited fifteen different countries," Dr. Brinton said, "but nowhere did I see such profound interest in art and culture as in the Soviet Union. Culture in this country does not constitute the exclusive pastime of the few, of the upper crust of society, but is the everyday occupation of the great mapority of the population. In England, Frace and other countries, where I visited museums and exhibitions, culture is separated from the life of the people, whereas in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics the development of culture grows hand in hand with the growth of political education among the masses.

"I was particularly pleased to see in your museums the barefooted students. This spectacle afforded me far greater pleasure than that of elegantly attired ladies, wandering with a bored air thru the museums of the west. I was more delighted to see in your art galleries and museums the bare feet of the visitors who are evidently endowed with studious minds, than the fashionable foot-wear of the tourists strolling through the European museums, with emptiness in their minds."

In conclusion, Dr. Brinton declared that the achievements of the Soviet Union in the domain of culture should furnish an object-lesson to the nations of Europe, and that he would from the bottom of his heart recommend one and all to pay a visit to the U. S. S. R., to the new sources of the new culture.

Dr. Brinton has taken a number of photographs of pictures contained in Moscow galleries, which he intends using as lantern-slides in connection with his forthcoming lectures in America.

IMPORTS REACH 25 PCT. OF PRE-WAR FROM AMERICA

Russian Firm Amtorg Buys Machines

MOSCOW, Sept. 27.—(Tass)—Amtorg, the Soviet-American joint stock company imported all kinds of factory equipment, farming machinery, automobile, tractors and implements to the value of $10,500,000, which is 25 per cent of the total import trade from America to Russia in 1913, while exporting furs, hides, medicaments, casings, flax, herbs, handmade wares and other sundry articles.

A total of $1,500,000 worth of automobiles and tractors was bought from the Ford Motor company of Detroit. Farming machinery to the value of $3,000,000 was purchased from the International Harvester company.

Furs hold first place in export trade. There was $2,500,000 worth of furs exported in nine months. Then follow hides, medicamental herbs, beet-root seeds and other raw materials.

Philly Workers' Theater Presents First Play

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 27.—Philadelphia workers will be given a treat on Wednesday, Sept. 30, when the Workers' Theater Alliance presents its first performance of three one act plays at Eagles Temple, 13th and Spring Garden Sts.

For a number of months a group of party members and sympathizers have rehearsing plays of a working class nature for the purpose of demonstrating that the stage could be used as an effective means of Communist propaganda.

The comrades at the head of the Workers' Theater Alliance assure us that the first performance will establish the theater as a permanent means of Communist propaganda in Philadelphia.

The tireless efforts of these comrades deserve the attention of all party members and sympathizers and especially in view of the fact that half of the proceeds of the performance will go for the International Labor Defense.

For further information apply at the Party headquarters, 521 York Ave. and watch the columns of the DAILY WORKER.

Develop Timber Exports of U. S. S. R. to Italy

MOSCOW, Sept. 27.—(Tass)—The development of Soviet timber exportation to Italy has been recognized as commercially possible and necessary at a recent session of the central timber export bureau. Italy covers two-thirds of her timber requirements with imported goods, such imports having previous to the war averaged 134,000,000 cubic feet yearly; after the war, timber was supplied chifly by Austria, Jugo-Slavia and—more recently—Roumania.

The bureau also decided to take up, together with the Soviet trade mission at Rome, the question of inviting Italian capital to cooperate in the U. S. S. R. timber industry.

Teachers' Conference in Moscow Plans Education of Minor Nationalities

MOSCOW.—A conference was held at Moscow by teachers engaged among the various nationalities in the elimination of illiteracy among adults. There were delegates from Votiaks, Kalmucks, Komi, Merdvans, Tchuvsh, Ukrainians, Jews, etc.

The conference recommended the speediest possible publication of textbooks and readers in the languages of the national minorities.

BRITISH UNION WOMEN ON TRIP TO SOVIET LAND

Find Unprecedented Care for Workers

By MARY QUAILE

(Trade Union Women's Delegate To Soviet Russia)

THE visit to Russia of six British working women is a milestone on the road to international trade union unity. It will long live in our memories and also in the memories of the thousands of workers that greeted us wherever we travelled in that great country. We left London on April 23, and were met in Riga by comrades from the central council of the Russian trade unions, but our first great welcome came when we stopped at the first town across the border from Latvia.

Women were there in hundreds, many of them with bunches of wild flowers to give to their British sisters, all of them wanting to shake our hands, some with tears in their eyes, not of sorrow, but of joy at our meeting. There also came to greet us children, the pioneers of the new social order, which will emancipate the workers of the world. It was Sunday, but these workers in their hundreds had been out early planting trees to give value and beauty to the country they now owned. This was voluntary work, but it was done in the willing spirit that afterwards we met with so often in Russia.

Welcome.

Moscow was reached a day sooner htan was expected, but a tremendous welcome awaited us with bands, banners flowers and speeches. One was glad and proud to be a member of the class that demonstrated so plainly their love for the women workers of Britain. Our tour of Russia took us to Leningrad, back again to Moscow, down thru the Ukraine via Kharkoff and then to the Don Basin, the Crimea, Rostov, Kislovodsk, Grosny, Baku, Tiflis, Borjom, Akhaltsikh, Abastuman and Vladikavkas.

Visits were made to factories, mines oil wells, rest homes, sanatoria, nurseries and children's hospitals, schools, universities, museums and workers' houses, both old and new. Co-operative stores, peasants' villages, farms for experimental purposes were also investigated by the delegation.

I can best summarise our impressions by paraphrasing the preliminary statement we issued on our return.

Soviet Has Support.

After many personal talks with workers of all trades and grades, including peasants and agricultural workers, we have no hesitation in saying that the Soviet government not only has the enthusiastic support of the vast majority of the workers and peasants, but that both these classes of workers look upon the present government as essentially their own. There is certainly a dictatorship in Russia, but it is workers' and peasants' dictatorship. The Russian Communist Party is undoubtedly the directive force, but it is the workers and peasants thru their elected Soviets or councils that rule.

Women are encouraged as far as possible to enter all classes of work, and for equal work they receive equal pay. Their entry into industry is facilitated by the fact that most factories have nurseries and kindergartens attached where the women can leave their children to be cared for by skilled attendants, and this in most cases is free of any charge.

In addition to this every woman factory worker gets two months leave of absence before and after the birth of her child, with full wages. All sorts of other benefits, such as food and clothing, are provided.

Workers' canteens or communal dining-rooms help to make the domestic drudgery very much less for working wife or mother.

Not Like Capitalism

The health of the worker is a first charge on industry, and rest homes and sanatoria are a feature of Russian life which will give the workers a better chance to carry on their great work of reconstructing their industries and abolishing many of the evils inherited from the capitalist regime.

The workers showed a very lively interest in the cause of trade union unity, as the tremendous May Day demonstrations which we witnessed in Moscow made clear to us. We were asked many questions about the chances of a real international united front. They see in this movement a chance for the workers of all countries to emancipate themselves from capitalism and also to afford greater protection for the Russian workers from the many machinations of the imperialist government of the world.

The British workers have in the past often stood by the Russian workers. Let them once more lead the way in a movement to strengthen and protect the pioneer workers' republic. Let us appeal to the leaders of our workers' movement to come together, and, with their great organizing powers, set themselves the task of undestanding and building up the united trade union organization, national and international, that is so necessary to the working class of the world.

INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM WINS AT BRITISH TRADE UNION CONGRESS OVER MASS UNIONISM OF O. B. U.

SCARBOROUGH, England.—Amalgamation, the One Big Union, and organised shop committees were discussed by the Trade Union Congress on a resolution which directed the General Council "to continue the work of amalgamation of existing unions, with One Big Union as the ultimate goal," and suggested that "the number of unions should be reduced to a minimum," and that the "congress should not encourage the formation of any new union."

An amendment, favoring the consolidation of unions which were effective units of organization, but deprecating the idea of the One Big Union, brought out a sharp debate. Ben Tillett, speaking against the amendment, argued that "all the workers in all the trades must get together and oppose all the bosses," while S. Elsburg of the Tailors and Garment Workers declared that "we face a struggle with the master class." The amendment was defeated by a vote of 2,073,000 to 1,667,000.

Summing up the argument in favor of the original motion, C. Dukes of the Nat'l Union of General Workers pointed out that the bosses are no longer organized industrially but financially. Industrial organization is therefore no longer sufficient for the workers. They too must consolidate their forces.

When it came to a vote, the railway men and the miners, both industrial unions, voted against the resolution, which was lost by a vote of 2,138,000 to 1,787,000.

From the debate and the voting it was clear that the congress was definitely committed to the principle of industrial unions. This principle is accepted by all save a few craft unions. On the other hand, the industrial unions, such as the miners, are not yet ready to accept the idea of the One Big Union.

In the big issue of centralization of power in hands of the General Council, A. J. Cook of the Miners and J. H. Thomas of the Railwaymen led opposing forces. Cook said: "The time has long gone past when any one union or any one industry can settle its disputes apart from the whole labor movement." To which Thomas retorted: "Power is essential but common sense is sometimes necessary."

The resolution was referred to the Council with instructions to examine the problem, consult affiliated unions, and report to a special congress of the executives concerned. Cook, after the vote, stated he regarded the decision as a triumph for the more progressive element in the congress.

A resolution favoring shop committees and warning against capitalist schemes of cooperation was carried.

GARLAND FUND MAY SUBSIDIZE RADIO VENTURE

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The Garland Fund will subsidize a new radio venture for broadcasting "advanced political, economic and sociological views." No transaction has as yet been completed, but is in progress, announce officers of the American Fund for Public Service, the name by which the Garland Fund organization is known.

Three years ago Charles Garland fell heir to $800,000 which he refused to accept, but later he was persuaded to use the money for the purpose of financing struggling radical organizations.

A recent report issued by the American Fund for Public Service shows that last year $40,000, the highest sum yet donated to a single venture, was given to the New York Leader.

Workers Not Paid for Overtime Work at Big Dept. Store

By Worker Correspondent.

The employes of the Boston Store are among the lowest paid of any in Chicago's department stores. The salesmen do not get a straight salary, they work on the commission basis.

In the periods just before a holiday rush or a sale, the salesmen are divided into groups and sent out to the stockroom, where they arrange the goods to be sold during the sale. The salesmen are forced to work two and three hours every evening and sometimes the whole afternoon arranging stock so that the company can have the sale. This work is not paid for.

The company employes about 2,500 to 3,000 workers. There is no organization among them. If anyone protests and tries to avoid working extra he loses his job. When a salesman leaves the company under those conditions, it is impossible for him to find work in another store as the bosses work hand in hand, and one cannot get a recomendation.

Besides having to work extra and lose whole afternoons in the stockroom, the salesman's commissions during the sales are cut to one-half of what they regularly are. The average wage is about $20 a week.

RUSSIAN UNIONISTS ON WAY HOME AFTER BRIEF VISIT TO JAP CAPITAL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKIO, Sept. 27.—The four Soviet Russian labor union delegates, whose visit here has arqused the Japanese police to a pitch of stupid frenzy in which they threatened to preciptate bloodshed to prevent the thousands of workers who wished to meet and welcome them from getting even a look at the Russians, have left for Russia after curtailing their visit. The capitalist press prints lurid police tales of the Russians' "futile attempt to distribute Bolshevik gold."

War With Gas is Now "Humanized," so Army General Assures Us

Inhumanity has been taken out of the use of gas in war, declared Major General Amos A. Fries, chief of the army chemical warfare service, upon arrival in Chicago for an address to reserve officers.

"We now have gasses which will put 25 per cent of an army out of business for an entire campaign and yet not injure a man seriously or permanently," he said. "We have gas masks so perfected that a man wearing one can do everything except smoke and eat and we are working on improvements to make even those things possible."

All St. Louis Tailors on Strike for a Short Work Week and No Cut

ST. LOUIS—(F.P.)—Union tailors numbering about 500 are on strike in St. Louis for a 44-hour week. The strike has the approval of the Journeymen Tailors International union and the strikers will be paid regular strike benefits. The union asks that the present wage rate, $40.80 a week, be maintained. The strike is 100 per cent effective: The union aims at a more equal distribution of the work by shortening the working week to care for the many members who are facing winter without a job.

RUSSIA SEEKS SHORT ROUTE BY AIR TO AMERICA

Trans-Arctic Airway is Hope of Bruns

MOSCOW, Sept. 27.—The government has appointed a special committee of trans-arctic aviation to study the question of establishing a trans-arctic airway for quick and easy communication between Europe and America.

The committee is now studying a scheme by Burns, a noted German pilot, of tracing the trans-arctic way thru Archangel, mouth of Pechera river, Kara Strait, Ob gulf, mouth of Lena river, mouth of Kolima river, the Behring Strait, Hope Point in Alaska and Japan.

Over Ice Floes.

To study possibilities of aviation in arctic regions it is planned to send an air expedition in 1927 along the route Murmansk, Franz Josef Land, North Pole, Point Barrow (Alaska) and back over the unexplored region of the Arctic Ocean where firm ground is supposed to be.

Fritjof Nansen and Captain Bruns are due in Moscow where, with their participation, the committee for trans-arctic aviation will submit Captain Bruns' project to further detailed examination.

Transcontinental Airline

MOSCOW, (By Mail)—Bruns, the founder of the International Society for Arctic Exploration, is negotiating the question of establishing of an airline from Amsterdam via Copenhagen, Leningrad and Archangel to Tokio. This would link up Europe, Asia and the extreme East.

The establishment of this route would be of great economic importance to Soviet Russia, as she then could export precious minerals, furs and other articles from Yakutia.

Take Five Days

The entire trip from Amsterdam to Tokio would take less than 5 days. A reply to a letter sent from Amsterdam would be received in 14 days instead of the present 42 days.

To those who work hard for their money, I will save 50 per cent on all their dental work.

The Victory in the I. L. G. W. U.

The attempt of the yellow socialist machine in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to expel all known Communists from the organization has ended in victory for the Communists and equally important, for the progressive wing of the trade union movement.

The gage of battle was thrown down to the militants in the I. L. G. W. U. when the Sigman machine, on direct orders from President Green of the American Federatino of Labor, acting as the agent of the government it is reported, preferred charges against the executives of the three largest locals in New York, because they organized a mass meeting to celebrate May Day at which a Communist was one of the principal speakers.

A hand picked committee, including those who had preferred the chrages against the radicals acted as judge and jury. A verdict of "guilty" was the result.

But the Sigman machine reckoned without the rank and file, who picked up the gauntlet thrown down to every honest member of the union. One of the most glorious episodes in American labor history ensued, during which the members of the I. L. G. W. U. suffered severely in defense of the principles of militant trade unionism, and particularly for the right of members to hold any political convictions they saw fit. That was the central issue in the fight. It was not dodged either by Sigman or by the left wing. Sigman decreed that the Communists had no place in the union. The rank and file thought otherwise and the story published today on the front page only feebly tells the extent of the victory won by the progressives over the yellow socialist machine of Sigman, who had the backing of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy.

News of the left wing victory in the I. L. G. W. U. will be received with joy, by the progressive wing of the American labor movement and indeed other countries. Not only is it a victory for the ladies' garment workers who have been persecuted by a ruthless and corrupt machine, but it is a welcome justification of the policy of the Trade Union Educational League, which insists that the place of the militants is with the masses, in the conservative trade unions and not a polcy of running off into the sectarian seclusion of dual unionism.

Those comrades who grow impatient unless a policy produces victories with the celerity that a penny brings a piece of chewing gum out of a slot machine, might do worse that take the lesson of the struggle in the I. L. G. W. U. to heart.

Slandering British Labor Leaders

The British labor leaders who comprised the trade union delegation to Soviet Russia have been the victims of a most vicious campaign of slander ever since their return from the workers' republic. All the mud guns of British imperialism have been turned on them. In this scandalous work, the capitalists were ably assisted by the British and continental socialist leaders.

What the capitalists and the yellow socialists could not forgive Purcell and his associates for, was their straightforward support of the Soviet government and their acknowledgement that here was a government of the workers, by the workers and for the workers, and that despite all its mistakes it had accomplished a tremendous work and that the Russian masses were increasing in prosperity under their own rule, while the living conditions of the workers in the capitalist countries were deteriorating.

On their return to England, the lid was taken off the capitalist journalistic sewers and the filth began to come forth. Every possible charge was made against the British leaders, except that of personal venality. While it was openly stated that the Soviet government influenced the delegation favorably by methods well known to governments; that they were shown only the bright side of things, they were not yet desperate enough to charge the distinguished trade union leaders with having accepted Russian money in return for a favorable report.

Such a charge has now been made against A. A. Purcell, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions. It appears that the authors of it are the socialist leaders of the Labor Party. Such a charge comes with poor grace from a political group that boasts of a Ramsay MacDonald, who accepted a gratuity of $150,000 from a tory buscuit manufacturer in return for a title, and that numbers among its leaders, men and women, who have sold themselves body and soul to the capitalist government.

The latest and most contemptible attack made on Purcell will not affect his standing with the masses. The British workers have confidence in him.

It is significant that the charge is made on the eve of the Liverpool conference of the labor party and has the same purpose as the "red scare" sprung by the capitalist press during the Scarborough congress.

"Paris ridicules many U. S. laws," says a headline. Paris thinks we have too many. True, but those who make them are not supposed to observe them. Those laws are made to keep the workers in subjection. They are made by the capitalists and their servants. When the American workers establish their own rule, then the shoe will be on the other foot, and it will be the capitalists' turn to feel uneasy.

Capitalist militarists are quarreling over the question whether they should have a separate air navy or whether that service should remain as it is now, under the direction of the navy department. The controversy leaves us cold. We know that the workers will get it in the neck, as long as the bosses own and control the airplanes.

While Mellon is haggling with Caillaux over the settlement of the French war debts, Wall Street bankers are negotiating with the finance minister for new loans. The bankers have plenty of money to loan to a capitalist government, but not a nickel to a Soviet republic. There is a reason.

Germany has accepted the invitation of the allies to discuss a security pact. It is not so many years ago, when our rulers put us in jail for even thinking that a German was a human being.

Are Wages High in the United States?

By EARL R. BROWDER

STRANGELY enough it has remained for a bourgeois Professor of Industrial Relations in the University of Chicago, Paul H. Douglas by name, to shatter the legend of the "high wage" of the American workingman in these latter years. Even the trade union officials, whose duty it is to guard the wages of their membership, have been complagently pointing to big percentage figures of wage increases, in order to claim achievements for themselves. And in the mind of the ordinary capitalist, or the bourgeois intellectual, it has been almost proverbial that the American workingman, especially since the war, has become a sort of semi-capitalist thru his "enormous" wages. Mr. Douglas has shattered this illusion very effectively in a work entitled, "The Movement of Real Wages—1890-1924" which is soon to be published under the auspices of the Pollak Foundation for Economic Research, a resume of which is contained in the Proceedings of the Academy of Political Science, Vol. XI, No. 2.

"Real wages" are the actual necessities of life, the bread, butter, meat and clothes, for which the worker exchanges the money which he receives as nominal wages. How much will the money buy? The answer to this question tells what is the real wage. Douglas set himself to answer this, and to reduce the answer down to a simple set of figures (index figures) which anyone can understand.

TAKING the ten-year period, 1890-1899, as a base, the index figure for the cost of living for that period being 100, the cost of living is shown to have risen to the following figures in the past eleven years:

1913	158	1918	261
1914	162	1919	304
1915	165	1920	339
1916	179	1921	297
1917	214	1922	276
		1923	281

With prices of the necessities of life at this high peak, how much would the wages—those "high wages" of which American bankers brag or complain—of the American worker buy?

In 1918, the last year of the war, when wages were supposed to have been so very good, the worker could buy only 88 per cent of the amount, on the average for the entire country, that the worker of 1890-99 could buy. Wages—real wages—had decrased 12 per cent for the country as a whole. This figure is based upon the hourly wage rates and not upon actual earnings which are lower still. For six years the purchasing power of wages, in hourly rates, ran as follows:

1918	88	1921	115
1919	83	1922	117
1920	100	1923	110

In short, in the year 1923, the hourly wage rate had increased over 1890 by a mere 10 per cent.

STILL more interesting it is to learn who got the increased hourly rate. Did all workers uniformly find their real wages increased to this amount? Not at all.

Printers in newspaper establishments, for example, are supposed to be well organized into unions. What happened to their real wages? They had decreased from 100 in the years 1890-99, to 81 in the year 1922. Newspaper printers have gone backward 19 per cent in thirty years.

Whose wages increased the most? Not in strongly organized craft, but one of the weakest in the "unionized" category, the bakers. Their real wages rose to 169. And the reason for this is, undoubtedly, that in the early days the bakers were so sweated and overworked that the industrialization of the baking industry worked automatically to raise the bakers to the status of the other industrial workers. The rise in their case is therefore merely an equalizing process. These figures prove, not that unionism has failed, but that the Gompers-Green policy of "collaboration" has failed.

IN only one of the industries can it be shown that the increased wages are mainly the result of labor union effort; that is in men's clothing, which saw real wages increase to 155, under the pressure of unionism; but in this industry also, as in the case of baking, the result was in the nature of an equalizing process, for the needle trades was one of the most disorganized and sweated during the years 1890-99 and later.

But how about the purchasing power of the weekly wage? How much is a week's pay in real wages? Douglas gives us the following answer for a five-year period:

Year	Weekly Wages (1890-99—100)
1919	83
1920	89
1921	93
1922	91
1923	95

"For all branches of industry as a whole, therefore," concludes Douglas, "it seems probably that the American working man can purchase less with a standard week's work today than during the nineties."

How do the various sections of the workers fare when their separate full-time weekly earnings are translated into real wages?

Union trades as a whole for 1922 stand at 95, or just 4 points above the general level for that year, and 5 points below the general level of all workers in the last years of the 19th century.

Building trades just held their own for the same period, standing at an even 100; the book and job printing workers lost a point, standing at 99; newspapers printing workers lost 22 points, going down to 78; farm labor went down to 83; unskilled labor to 80; railroad labor to 97; seamen to 77; government employes to [illegible] and postal employes to 74. The anthracite miners, who have been under the illusion that they were getting periodical increases in wages, were really down to 97. Bituminous miners went up to 139, but what they gained in weekly rates, they lost, as they themselves know only too well, in steadiness of employment.

AND all of this actual loss in the amount of real wages to the working class, occurred during the period of the tremendous increase in productivity of industry, during a period when the national production of values multiplied by more than five times, the value added by manufacture (according to the U. S. Census) increasing from $4,831,075,210 in [illegible], to $25,041,698,490 in 1919.

Surely the time has arrived for the workers to awaken, to organize, and to begin to fight for some of the wealth which they produce in such abundance!

Dukhobors Expose False Reports of the minutes of this convention:

The Minutes, August 9, 1925.

The convention of 80 delegates representing 20 united Dukhobor communities of the Salsky district, North-Caucasian region, commune of Chistiakof. Present: 80 delegates, four from each commune. Chairman, F. F. Zaitsef; vice-chairman, E. Kotelnikof; secretary, N. Dementief.

Discussed: Correspondence from Canadian paper Toronto Star, of May 16, 1925, based upon personal information of Dukhobor Semenov who returned from his journey to Soviet Russia where he visited the Dukhobors of Salsky district.

Decided: After getting acquainted with the contents of the above-mentioned correspondence, a decision was passed unanimously to spread widely thru the medium of the press that all information given in this correspondence does not contain a single word of truth. The reasons are as follows:

1. From the documents which were presented by Semenov to the Dukhobors, it could not be seen that he is delegated from our Canadian brothers; especially after he himself admitted that his only object of coming to Soviet Russia was to be at the convention of the Peasants' International where he was sent by some Canadian organization, and that he came to us only to get acquainted with our life and to visit his relatives.

2. During the three weeks of his stay with us he never raised the question of immigration of the Canadian Dukhobors to Soviet Russia. What concerns his interest in the life of the peasants, he did not even try to get acquainted with our economic life and he never went to any place outside of the community in which he lived.

3. The two delegates of the Canadian Dukhobors, who came to Russia before Semenov did and who spoke about the beauty and fertility of our lands, did not exaggerate. Even Semenov admits that; and we have no reasons whatsoever to be discontented with our new settlement.

4. We can only welcome Semenov's statement that he will never leave Canada, as we do not need in our Union individuals of his type. What concerns the rest of the Canadian Dukhobors, they have enough information about our life so as not to believe Semenov who incidentally or voluntarily became an agent of the British capitalists.

5. Semenov's statement that lawlessness rules in the cities, that the industries have died out, and that the commercial life of the country is in a poor state, have been successfully refuted by the labor delegations of different countries, which recently visited the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics; the only thing that remains for us is to ally ourselves with them in the opinions they expressed in the Russian, as well as foreign press.

6. We do not know what part Semenov played in his connections with A. E. Bolten, representative of the directoriat of the Farmer Union in Canada, but the mere fact that he is connected with this organization, even if indirectly, shows that the ideals of the Dukhobors whose aim is to create a real commune are strange and foreign to Semenov.

7. Semenov's statement that the Russian peasants in general and the Dukhobors in particular are deprived of their right to vote is absolutely false. We, as well as the rest of the peasants, elect our own officials and ruling bodies, and the peasants who are not party members participate in these elections and are elected to all ruling bodies, beginning with the local village board and ending with the Central Executive Committee of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

8. The arrangement of the tracts of land allotted to us and their distribution were finished already in 1921; each community has now 1000 dessiatins of land for 200 members. It is easy to see from the above that each individual has five dessiatins of land and not 7½ acres (about 2½ dessiatins) as Semenov states.

No yearly re-arrangements in distribution of land have been or are practiced by us.

9. If so far we have been calling all Semenov's statements false, his statement about the hunger we suffer seems to us simply ridiculous.

We began to immigrate to Russia in 1922; in 1923, we started to sell the surplus of our products, which increases every year. Our food is not only good, but excellent. During the entire year we have rye and wheat bread, meat, poultry, dairy products, vegetables, etc., all of these of our own production. All tell-tales of Semenov that the Dukhobors took turn in feeding him is a lie, because, if it did happen sometimes that he ate in another house, and not in his usual place, it was only when he went there for a visit. His statement about the children being exhausted and worn out because of the hunger they suffer, is only another ugly lie.

10. Semenov misinformed again when he said that his countrymen were so exhausted that he could not even recognize them; he left Russia in 1911 when he was a small boy and it would be ridiculous to expect him to recognize any of them just by looking at his face.

11. No one of the Dukhobors living in Salsky district has made any statement before Semenov about his desire to immigrate to Canada, as all of them know from letters of their Canadian capitalists who in several hours ferociously destroy and ruin the peasant homesteads built up after years of hard labor.

One member of each of the 20 communities is to be empowered to sign this protocol. Copies of this protocol are to be presented to the district department of agriculture with a request to publish this decision in all Russian and foreign papers, especially in the Canadian press.

P. P. Presidium of the convention.

DEDICATED TO ANDREW MELLON, SECRETARY OF THE U. S. TREASURY

Oh, my name is Andrew Mellon; some folks say I am a felon
For the Jays and labor unions I have rank hostility,
For the poor I do not hanker; but I stand in with the banker,
And he calls me Handy Andy and that just suits me!

Oh, I keep our Uncle's money and I live on milk and honey;
With the railroads and the steel trust I'm in perfect sympathy;
I was known to John B. Forgan, I'm a friend of Pierpont Morgan,
And they call me Handy Andy and that suits me!

If the farmers are in trouble, then I fret and froth and bubble,
On my jowls I grow a stubble and I'm quarrelsome as can be!
Thus I keep them at a distance, while I loan my friends assistance,
For they call me Handy Andy and that just suits me!

to the membership by referendum with supervision of the balloting by both sides.

3. Candidates in all union elections have access to ballot boxes to control election methods where the officials are distrusted.

Local Elections.

4. The membership will elect the manager of the Joint Board and the business agents within two weeks at local elections.

5. Elections will be conducted by a joint committee from the Joint Board and the shop chairmen.

6. There shall be a referendum on the matter of dues, with the three alternative proposals of thirty-five cents, forty cents and fifty cents to be voted upon and the decision to be retroactive to July 1.

7. Before elections are held, the eight business agents who are discharged shall be reinstated.

G. E. B. Promises Reinstatement.

8. Members of other locals penalized during the fight are to appeal their cases to the General Executive Board, the shop chairmen recommending their complete amnesty, which the board promises.

9. The plan's proposal that the reinstatement of members thruout the country who have been expelled for their opinions be left to the convention, was dealt with by the resolution from the floor that demanded immediate amnesty for these members. It was adopted unanimously.

10. Following the Joint Board elections, the question of economy in the union and the formation of an organization committee of volunteers shall be considered.

Fair Representation at Convention.

11. It is agreed that Local 2 shall be represented in the convention by the same number of delegates as would have been allowed from the old Locals 1, 11 and 17 (from which Local 2 was formed) and Local 22 similarly to have the same representation as the fomer Locals 22 and 25 (from which Local 22 was formed).

12. After the elections, the membership and the shop chairmen's meetings shall discuss the governor's commission's report and formulate plans to enforce the demands of the three locals.

Significant of the spirit of the meetings was the contrast in the attitude of the shop chairmen toward the leaders of the left wing and toward Sigman. At Cooper Union, Louis Hyman won an ovation, as did Sascha Zimmerman at Webster Hall, Both the outstanding leaders of the left wing Joint Action Committee.

Sigman, on the contrary, received a mingle of applause and booing. He appeared as a defeated man, explaining that he still believed the Communists were a menace, but that he yielded to membership's demand for freedom of political opinion in the union.

Expelled Will Return to Office.

Julius Portnoy, suspended left wing manager of Local 22, spoke at Webster Hall in the name of the Joint Action Committee. Julius Hochman, representing the Sigmanite Joint Board, was loudly hissed and could not proceed with his speech until Portnoy persuaded the crowd to listen.

Membership meetings were held of Locals 2, 9 and 22 Saturday night, at Webster Hall, Cooper Union and Manhattan Lyceum, to hear the details of the victory for which they have fought over fifteen weeks of bitter struggle. Nominations for the new elections in these three locals on Tuesday night will mean a return to office of the three expelled executive boards within ten days.

railway transport, 97 per cent.

Heavy Industry 99 Per Cent.

Especially on the industrial field, the socialization of the means of production is 89 per cent, including heavy industry where it is 99 per cent. As to the total amount of production in the big and small industries, an illustration is given in the following table:

	State and Co-op.		Private		Total
	Absolute.	In Pct.	Absolute.	In Pct.	Absolute.	In Pct.
1923-24	5,562	76.3	1,728	23.7	7,290	100
1924-25	7,550	79.3	1,970	20.7	9,520	100
1925-26	9,186	79.9	2,334	20.3	11,520	100

One can see that production in the socialized enterprises does not only promise an enormous absolute increase—65 per cent in two years, but that it also increased from year to year its proportional weight in the production generally.

The best guarantee for further achievements in this field is the highly developed concentration of the union's industries.

All Big Productions State Owned.

It is a well-known fact that state production is concentrated with us in the bigger and technically best equipped enterprises, whilst private enterprises work as a rule on a much smaller scale and on the lines of workshop and home industries. Concentration of production is particularly noticeable after the revolution in the mining industry and in the factories and works enumerated in the census.

In accordance with the directives of the planning organs, on concentration of production of the biggest and best equipped enterprises, we achieved the following results in the beginning of 1925 as compared with pre-war results:

Concentration of Workers.

Years of investigation	Small enterprises up to 50 wkrs.	Medium, from 51-500 workers	500	Total
1901	287	803	1,180	2,270
1911	269	849	1,424	2,542
1925	92	459	1,218	1,764
Ditto in Per Cent.
1901	12.7	35.3	52.0	100
1911	10.6	33.4	56.0	100
1925	5.2	26.0	68.8	100

In the pre-war period there were concentrated in the largest enterprises employing more than 500 workers in 1901, 52 per cent and in 1911, 56 per cent of the total number of workers employed in the entire mining and manufacturing industries, and by January 1, 1925, already 68.8 per cent.

In this concentration which of course, provides the best explanation for the colossal growth of the productivity of labor—40 per cent in the 1924-25 year, as stated in the central figures of the state planning department.

How great is concentration in our Soviet industry can also be seen by the fact that even in the U. S. A., namely in the country with a maximum capitalist development, the corresponding normal of concentration, according to the census of 1919, for the entire manufacturing industry does not exceed in the highest group (over 500 workers) 44.3 per cent of the total number of workers of all enterprises employing 21 and more workers. And whilst the average number of workers employed in American factories and works is 151 per enterprise, we had in 1925 already 239 workers per enterprise, namely, one and a half times more.

It is true that in commerce and trade—according to a very approximate estimate, socialized capital amounted in 1924, 25 to about 70 per cent of the total capital in trade operations. As to the latter, its distribution is shown in the following table:

Turnover of Trade.

	State	Co-op.	Total	Private Absolute	Private In Pct.	Total
1923-24
First half	1,197	1,390	2,236	2,265	51.8	4,501
Second half	1,745	1,614	3,359	1,729	34.0	5,088
	2,942	2,653	5,494	3,994	41.6	9,589
1924-1925
First half	5,445	4,773	10,228	3,650	26.3	13,878
Second half	6,342	5,490	11,832	3,728	24.0	15,560

Thus, here, as in production, we notice not only a colossal growth of the absolute amounts of the socialized turnover, more than double in the course of three years, but also a very substantial increase of its relative part in the total goods turnover of the country—from one-half to three quarters of its amount.

In order to appreciate this last achievement, we draw attention to the fact that during the last year of military Communism (1920) when trade was altogether prohibited, the private trade turnover in agricultural products nevertheless only reached, according to budget data within the precincts of the Soviet Republic (exclusive of the Caucasus and Turkestan) the figure of over 644 million pre-war rubles.

If we add to this 193 million rubles for products of small home industries, we get a total of over 837 million rubles. Allowing that the entire agricultural production obtained thru taxation and amounting to 704 million rubles, and the entire production of state industries circulated in the same year amounting to 366.8 million rubles, more entirely distributed by the state, without middlemen, and such was not the case, state distribution would amount to 56 per cent at the utmost and the private trade turnover to at least 44 per cent of the general turnover of goods in the country. (See magazine "Along the New Path," 3rd edition, pages 91-194). Thus, even if the New Economic Policy increased the latter percentage, by legalizing private trade, this seeming digression from our path towards collectivism, has been already overcome economically.

Credit Wholly Socialized.

Already in the second half of 1923-24, the socialized goods turnover amounted already to 66 per cent or two-thirds of the total turnover. This means, that it exceeded the 1920 normal. In the coming business year of 1925-26 we expect that the socialized turnover will be over three quarters of the total turnover. And this without any abrogation of N. E. P. and even with a certain further increase of private trade in the absolute amount of its turnover.

If we add to the above statement that with respect to steam transport and bank credit all the means of communication and credit and money circulation are already socialized 100 per cent, we have only to formulate the general task before us; to maintain the position conquered and to advance every year slowly but surely towards socialism, wherever the economic situation will allow it.

BRITISH LABOR PARTY MEETS TODAY

COMMUNIST MEMBER OF NORTH DAKOTA LEGISLATURE RAPS KELLOGG ON SAKLATVALA BAN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILLISTON, N. D., Sept. 28.—In a statement by A. C. Miller, Communist member of the North Dakota state legislature, the attempt by Secretary of State Kellogg to bar Shapurji Saklatvala from the interparliamentary union congress to be held at Washington, D. C., is attacked as an attempt of the capitalist international dictatorship to silence the voice of the British Communist.

"The barring of the British Communist delegate Shapurji Saklatvala from attending the interparliamentary union congress to be held in the United States, demonstrates the solidarity of the capitalist class," declared A. C. Miller.

"A wide-awake working class with unemployment thruout England caused the British imperialists to hesitate and forced the job of exclusion on the American section of the capitalist dictatorship. Needless to say, they found a willing tool in the Secretary of State Kellogg."

Mass Meeting in Cleveland

CLEVELAND. Sept. 28.—A protest meeting against the exclusion of Saklatvala from the United States will be held on Public Square, Wednesday, Sept. 30, at 7:30 p. m.

The Workers Party, the Young Workers League, the American Civil Liberties Union and various labor unions will participate in the demonstration.

The liberal capitalist press of this city cannot understand the action of Secretary of State Kellogg, and it is time that the workers of this city are apprised of the real facts behind the action taken by the American government.

All party and league members must attend this protest meeting. Workers from the shops and factories are invited to participate in the demonstration and raise their voice of protest against this act of discrimination against the revolutionary labor leader of England.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THAT the financial power of the United States was thrown behind the security pact is the frank admission made in an editorial that appeared in last Sunday's issue of the Chicago Tribune. It is also strongly hinted that the seeming alacrity on the part of France to come to terms on the debt question may be a ruse to fool the "Simple Simons" of Wall Street. Caillaux may want to have the debt question settled and a fat loan in his jeans before the scheduled meeting of the western powers takes place. Thus fortified the French could ditch the security pact, pick up the threads of their relations with Poland and perhaps renew the negotiations with Soviett Russia.

ANYTHING is liable to happen. It is interesting to note the tremendous role played by the United States in Europe. The United States is not affiliated with the league of nations, yet Washington speaks louder and more authoritatively in Europe than does Geneva. The American capitalists have the dough and money talks. The American bankers, who are running this country, do not like to see England, France and Germany at each others' throats. When they are fighting, remittances to Wall Street don't flow, whatever movement of cash takes place goes in the wrong direction.

JUDGE GARY delivered a message to a group of budding American millionaires a few weeks ago in the city of New York. The judge's audience was composed of students of the school of commerce. After listening to the steel magnate, they could vision a future with palatial yachts, mansions, and all the luxuries that wealth brings. The only thing they had to do to win fame and fortune was to follow the judge's advice. Above all they must be pure, like the judge. The most honest and truthful men he ever met were J. P. Morgan and Marshall Field.

NO doubt the assembled potential millionaries took the Gary hokum seriously. This is the type that schools and colleges are peopled with. The ideal of success held before their eyes is the attainment of wealth, and all other considerations must be subsidiary. William J. Bryan once said that no man could accumulate a million dollars honestly. As a matter of fact any man who receives more than the value of what he produces is on the wrong side of honesty, or would be, in a state of society where honesty had a chance. While Gary was indulging in this nonsense to the young babbits, thousands of his slaves were turning their flesh and blood into dollars for the judge and the parasitical stockholders of the

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT DEPORTS PARTICIPANTS IN CHINESE TONG WAR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Forty of the 256 Chinese rounded up by the federal officials in raids in Chinatown are to be deported this week. The remaining 216 will be deported to China as soon as arrangements can be made with steamship companies to bring them to China.

The deportation comes as a climax to the outbreak of a tong war in New York's Chinatown. The On Leong Tong and the Hip Sing Tong have just declared a national truce following an outbreak of bitter Tong war. In the raids organized on Chinatown many that fell into the net of the federal officials were not able to produce evidence of legal entry into the United States.

Most of them claimed to be seamen and refused to tell the name of the ship they came on, thus forcing the American government to spend $200 apiece to send them back to China.

POLISH SOCIALISTS MURDER TWO ACTIVE COMMUNISTS WHO EXPOSE TREACHERY IN UNIONS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Sept. 28.—(Inprecorr.)—On the night of August 6, Jan Lukasik, a well-known Communist, was murdered in Warsaw by the fighting groups appointed by the Polish socialist party. At the same time an "unknown" individual murdered Heinrich Pachechorowsky, another well-known Communist.

Both of these leather workers have led a militant fight in the trades unions of Poland exposing the treachery of the Polish socialist party. Pepesovitz, one of the murderers is well known in Warsaw. He was arrested by the police but after a short examination he was released.

A few weeks ago Petzolah, a Communist worker was also murdered in the same manner by the Polish socialist party.

KING CANUTE DIDN'T LIKE TO GET HIS FEET WET, SO HE WAS DROWNED

(By Worker Correspondent)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 28—The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen are holding the last session of their convention here today. On Saturday the apex of bureaucratic stupidity was reached when the convention passed a resolution denouncing the article in the DAILY WORKER which showed up the A. F. of L. fakers' tactics at the convention in browbeating delegates, and instructing President Martin F. Ryan and the general executive board to find out who wrote the article and expel him from the union.

AFFILIATION OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY AN IMPORTANT QUESTION

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The British labor party will open its annual convention at Liverpool tomorrow under conditions which presage a conflict of unusual importance for British workers and for world labor.

Following, as it does, the Trade Union Congress at Scarborough where the British unions definitely broke with the policy of British imperitilism and set the face of British labor looking east toward Moscow for unity and class struggle against the capitalist system, the labor party convention will be a battleground between the forces which swung the Trades Union Congress to the left, and the Ramsay MacDonald, J. R. Clynes reactionary right wing who are mustering all their power to defeat the left wing at Liverpool.

The key question is expected to be the admission, heretofore forbidden, of Communists and Communist affiliations to the party.

BILL HOHENZOLLERN IN PLAN TO RESTORE BOTH HIMSELF AND CZARISM

BERLIN, Sept. 28. — Wilhelm, former German emperor, though an exile at Doorn, still hopes for restoration, not only to his own empire but also of the Russian empire.

Proof of this is given in a letter written by the ex-kaiser on August 1, 1924, and published in the forthcoming biography of Emil Ludwig.

The ex-kaiser's letter was addressed to the former Russian War Minister Sukolinoff.

"The terrible consequences of the attack upon Germany," wrote Wilhelm, "show that the future welfare of both nations lies in loyal cooperation after restoration."

I. W. W. SEAMEN KEEP PULLING BRITISH SHIPS

No Slackening in Aid to British Seamen

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 28.—That the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union No. 510 of the I. W. W. intend to do all in their power to aid the striking British and Australian seamen, although they themselves have been compelled to go back to the job by superior forces, is shown in the union's bulletin issued Friday. It says in part:

"The 'outlaw' strike of the British seamen is still in effect according to the latest information. The British seamen will win their strike. In fact they have already won it. It will be only a matter of a few days until the British ship owners will grant their demands.

"In the meantime, the M. T. W. will do all in its power to pull the crews off British ships as they arrive and will continue in every way to aid our British fellow workers in their struggle for more of the better things of life.

"After a carfeul study of the strike situation, the members of the M. T. W. decided to transfer the strike back to the job. The seamen who went on strike can be proud of their action. We are going back to the ships intent upon intensifying our campaign for a far greater strike in the future. It was well understood when we left our jobs that we meant to show the ship owners that they cannot get away with their predatory rule any longer. We still mean it. We will continue our fight while on the job and prepare to walk out again when the sun is warmer and the shipping is better.

Owners Surprised and Hurt.

"The shipowners certainly felt the effect of this strike coming as it did when the bosses had visions of great profits carrying cargo that ordinarily is carried in British and Australian ships. It was a complete surprise to them and an invaluable aid to our fellow workers striking in England, Australia, South Africa, Denmark and China. These seamen will not forget our display of solidarity, nor will they fail to remember the traitorous action of certain 'International' unions, whose officials did all in their power to break the strike.

"Let us go back to the jobs, then, to organize and prepare for a real battle with the shipping octopus to change the present state of affairs and win good conditions, better pay and better food. Let us take delegate's credentials back to the jobs and organize the marine industry. We count on all marine workers to co-operate with the ship's delegates to better conditions, perfect organization and do away with the blacklist.

Prepare for Next Strike.

"It is of no use to stay in the fo'c'sle and grumble behind the boss' back. Face him with concerted action and solidarity. Stick together, and if some the so-called 'agitators' have to quit, let those who take their places take up the fight. Thus we will be able to make these ships fit for men to live and work on. No one but ourselves can do this. No one is going to fight our battles for us. Whatever we get will come only thru our own efforts. To the ships! Prepare and organize for the next strike!"

HERRIN MINERS LOSE LIVES IN MINE DISASTER

Three Dead After Gas Pocket Explodes

HERRIN, Ill., Sept. 28.—Three coal miners lost their lives and three others were seriously burned when a gas pocket was accidentally touched off at mine No. 7 of the Consolidated Coal company. The bodies of the dead miners were recovered after much effort on the part of rescuers to reach th entombed miners.

Three Killed.

James Galligan, cousin of Sheriff George Galligan, murdered leader of the Knights of the Flaming Cross, William Druzinski and John Fulkins were dead when the rescue crews reached them. The other three were taken to the hospital immediately after they had reached the surface.

Tho the mine normally employs 500 men, the casulties were light, because only a few miners were at work due to the Saturday holiday.

Rescue Crew Helpless.

Soon after the explosion, the Herrin rescue crew attempted to reach the three entombed miners. The rescuers were unable for the first few hours to get any closer than 1,500 feet from the miners because of the carbon dioxide gas.

In the mine explosion of May 11, 1904, eleven miners lost their lives.

PROTEST OVER RIFF WAR GETS PARIS AROUSED

Teacher Advocates a Teachers' Strike

PARIS, Sept. 28. — Communists staged a demonstration near the Gare St. Lazare to protest against the Riffian war. The demonstration was finally broken up by the police, but the attention of Parisian workers was fixed on the issues of the war and its significance.

The minister of education has issued a public statement concerning an ex-service man with a brilliant war record who, as a public school teacher, called for a teachers' strike in protest against war upon the Riffians.

"If public servants, whoever or whatever they may be, pretend to impose their opinions of current events by means of strikes, our constitutional system and representative regime will be done for," states the minister. The advantage to the workers of keeping these costly institutions was not dealt with by his excellency.

MOSUL DISPUTE ENDS LEAGUE OF NATIONS SESSION

Esthonian General to Probe Charges

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Sept. 28.—The question of Mosul occupied the final sessions of the league of nations. The menace of a war between Great Britain and Turkey was the basis of the discussion.

Turkey has refused to abide by any decision that The Hague or the league of nations may make on the question, if it is favorable to England and unfavorable to Turkey.

Appoint Esthonian General.

At the insistence of England, the league appointed an Esthonian general to investigate the charges of the deportation of Christians from the Mosul. General Liadoner, the appointee, will have two assistants.

Great Britain charged that Turkey violated the boundary agreement of Mosul and demanded that she be punished. The league turned the matter over to The Hague for a decision as to rights and powers to arbitrate the issue.

League Meets in March.

The final report on Mosul will not be expected until early next year. The proposed December session has been postponed until March, when the league council will meet in Madrid Spain.

Fascist Foes to End Boycott; Take Parliament Seats

ROME, Sept. 28.—The opposition to the fascisti is adopting a new strategy. Instead of boycotting the fascisti they intend to enter the chamber of deputies and carry on the fight there. The Maximalists, who control 45 seats have abandoned the boycott.

The Aventiners are also considering the calling off of the boycott. Some insist upon sending in their resignations from the chamber as a protest against the ruthless methods used by the fascisti to crush their opposition. The killing of Matteotti is still lingering in the minds of many of the deputies. A formal decision will be reached as to Aventine conduct at the meeting of the executive council next month.

Former Premier Orlando is being asked to withdraw his resignation and be leader of the Aventine opposition to the fascist government in the chamber of deputies. So far he has not accepted the suggestion.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

NIPPON GOVERNMENT ARRESTS FIFTY PROMINENT RADICALS; BAR WORKERS' DEMONSTRATION

TOKIO. Sept. 28.—About sixty prominent Japanese radicals have been arrested for detention purposes while the Soviet delegation of fifty from the Russian trade unions is here in a meeting with the Japanese labor leaders. Secret and uniformed police are watching the movements of the Russian delegation very closely. A reception to greet the Soviet Union's trades unionists was prohibited by the Tokio police.

WILL HERBIE TRY AIR EXCLUSION TO SAVE BOSSES?

Expect Hoover May Censor Radio

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—Since the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala by the state department of America from participation in the Interparliamentary union congress, fear is felt that the department of commerce, under Hoover's guidance, may attempt to revoke the license of the broadcasting station which the Garland fund is leasing to put propaganda, other than that of the employing class on the air.

The department of commerce has the issuing of 90-day permits to radio broadcasting stations under its thumb.

The department of commerce has been given the right to decide as to whether the permit will be renewed and in the case of the broadcasting station that has been leased by the Garland fund Hoover might attempt to censor the programs of the station.

The congress has not as yet passed a law allowing Hoover the right to censure programs, this power will be taken on by him when he deems fit to do so. The announcement that strikers and radicals will be able to use the radio for broadcasting their side of the story does not appeal to the administration

THE Review of Reviews magazine recently submitted several questions on current history to a number of high school colleges and university students. Their ignorance of facts that are blazoned daily on the front pages of the papers was appalling. Some of them thot that "Ma" Ferguson, governor of Texas was Babe Ruth or Beatrice Fairfax who gives advice to the lovelorn. Some were of the opinion that Mussolini was Al Jolson; others thot he was Billy Sunday. But the saddest fact of all was that eleven per cent of them failed to place the photograph of Calvin Coolidge. The magazine does not say whether the ignorant students mistook the president for a veterinary surgeon or a starved British butler.

WE are informed by a capitalist reporter assigned to Sweden that Communism failed in that country. This is news to us. We never knew it existed in Sweden. After reading the story a little farther down we learn that what happened is a split in the Communist party of Sweden, the splitoff right wing getting ready to go back to the social-democratic party. This split took place some time ago. The Swedish party is very mach alive, and has a daily newspaper.

THE Brtish labor party is growing more and more respectable. The latest addition to its ranks is Lady Cynthia Mosley, daughter of the late Marquis Curzon. It is even hinted that if King George could legally belong to a political party, he would rather chum with J. H. Thomas and Ramsay MacDonald than with Stanley Baldwin and Winston Churchill. Ramsay MacDonald, Philip Snowden and that gentleman's inevitable wife, had a nice time as the king's guest at Balmoral castle in Scotland, on the eve of the Scarborough Trade Union Congress.

THE Liverpool conference of the British labor party promises to be an exciting one. While Ramsay MacDonald welcomes the lords and ladies into its ranks he wants to exclude the Communists. He declares that the Communists are greater enemies of his than the capitalists. This is undoubtedly true. He might as well have said that the Communists hated the king more than the capitalists did. But while MacDonald and his supporters in the right wing of the labor party are becoming more anti-Communist every day, the left wing in the party is going farther to the left and nearer to the Communist position. The Liverpool conference should prove interesting.

Marshall Field Co. Head to Build Fish Acquarium in Spring

Construction will begin in the spring of next year. The South Park board will maintain the institution after it has been built.

Even the planes in the attack group, Burwell said, are rebuilt machines and the personnel is far below war strength.

YOUNG ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE IS G. O. P. REGULAR

Expected to Be Next Wisconsin Senator

MILWAUKEE, Wisconsin, Sept. 28—The most striking feature of one of the most unexciting elections held in the state of Wisconsin, is the fact that Robert Marion LaFollette, son of the late stormy petrel of the G. O. P. is running on the republican party ticket while those who support Coolidge if they are running at all are making the race as independents.

Yes, sir Robert Marion LaFollette, the heir to the LaFollette throne that was bolstered up by socialists, left wing democrats, left wing republicans and sundry non-political syndicalists in the last elections, is on the Coolidge bandwagon, whether he likes it or not or whether Coolidge likes it or not.

John M. Work, socialist candidate for senator is grinding his teeth and cursing young "Bob" for not passing over the political estate to the socialists.

Keeping Discreetly Silent.

Robert M. LaFollett, jr., will take his father's place as senator from Wisconsin, according to all indications. But young "Bob" is not saying much about "the malefactors of great wealth" who roused his father's ire. He is apparently preparing his way to take his seat on the old reliable G. O. P. bandwagon, after he proves to the satisfaction of the G. O. P. strategists that he can bring home the bacon.

There is not a word heard about a third party, much less about a labor party, from those who staged the big political show only a short time ago. The socialists are raking the ashes of the LaFollette-Wheeler campaign hoping to find some consolation, but they only find the cinders of their party.

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

FURRIERS DEMAND CONVENTION AND AMALGAMATION

Local 5 Takes Forward Steps for Progress

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 28—More than a thousand fur workers voted enthusiastically in favor of a referendum for an immediate special convention and cheered the demand for amalgamation in the needle industry at a meeting of Fur Operators' Local 5 held Thursday, Sept. 24. Resolutions were adopted denouncing the exclusion of Saklatvala, Communist member of the British parliament, from the United States, and strongly protesting the appointment of Stetzky as vice-president of the Furriers' International.

All Working for the Bosses.

Stetzky had been appointed by Kaufman, president of the union, without consulting the membership, to replace Sam Cohen. The latter, who had been Kaufman's right hand man, had resigned, and is now connected with the biggest concern in the fur dress and dyeing industry, the Hollander firm, where two union members were shot in a recent strike.

The demand for amalgamation in the needle industry was made in a speech by Ben Gold, manager of the joint board of the Furriers' Union. Themendous applause, lasting ten minutes, cheering that filled the hall, and a general outburst of enthusiasm greeted this demand, clearly indicating that the Furriers' Union will be the first to put thru amalgamation.

Prepare for Struggle.

The special convention is demanded not only to fight the Kaufman machine, but also to prepare the demands to the manufacturers as the agreement in the fur industry expires Jan. 31. Among these demands will be equal division of work the whole year, shorter hours, recognition of shop committee, etc. Confidence is expressed that the whole Fur Workers' International Union will line up behind these demands.

SOCIALIST ETHICS LAID ASIDE FOR PROFITS OF STRIKEBREAKING

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 28.—The anthracite operators conference met Thursday at the railroad club and listened to reports on the strike, adopting a resolution on policy reiterating their demand for arbitration.

Theodore Instone of S. Instone & Company, English coal operators, said that plans have been completed for shipment of Welsh anthracite coal to this country. "Advices from my home office," he said, "state that S. A. Wertheim, vice-president of Burns Brothers Coal Co. of New York City, has been in conference with officers of our company. Much progress has been made and there is every assurance that a portion of the supply of coal from Welsh anthracite mines will be made available for American use."

Morris Hillquit, leading American "socialist" and recently returned from the Second (socialist) International congress at Marseilles on a scab ship, is a heavy shareholder of the Burns Brothers Coal company, which is thus undertaking to break the Pennsylvania anthracite strike with anthracite coal from Great Britain.

Welcome to the Soviet Port Commission that Builds for Communism!

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the New York Times, under an unassuming headline, "Soviet Port Officials Land," publishes on an obscure page a short announcement telling of the arrival in this country of "three officials of the Soviet government of Russia." They have come to attend the conference of port authorities to be held this week at the Waldorf Astoria.

This marks a tremendous change since the day when Ludwig Martens, the official representative of the Soviet government in the United States, was expelled from the country, with the resounding crash of a tremendous broadside of hostile capitalist publicity.

• • • •

All American workers and poor farmers will hail the arrival of these builders of the workers' republics, who represent, of course, not the "Soviet government of Russia," but the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, which includes all the lands over which the red flag of workers' rule now waves undisputed.

It is not expected that the kept press will say much about their visit to this country. To do so would reveal to the American working class the tremendous work of reconstruction that is going on within the Soviet Union; thus giving the lie to the stream of propaganda that tries to belittle the achievements of the liberated masses who have freed themselves from capitalist rule.

• • • •

These men are engineers—builders—in the service of the Soviet marine transportation. The commission consists of L. P. Serebriakopf, assistant secretary of the ways of communication in charge of the water transportation; V. V. Touchoika, chief of the division of ports; and V. E. Laknisky, professor at the Leningrad Institute of Engineers. Very significant indeed, is the statement of Laknisky that:

"Our port developments are to be on the basis of the export of raw products and for that reason we are interested in the ports at New Orleans, Chicago, Buffalo and Cleveland."

The Union of Soviet Republics is planning to become, as it already is to a certain extent, a great exporter of raw materials.

Thru New Orleans flows the great cotton crops of the south. Thru Chicago, Cleveland and Buffalo, there flow the tremendous streams of American foodstuffs, especially grains, and dressed meats; the finished products of steel mills and great manufacturing plants. The Encyclopedia Britannica declares that, "The grain elevators are among the sights of Chicago," but the Soviet engineers will no doubt, find ways of improving even American methods of handling export grains, and other products of the Soviet mines, fields and pastures, from the great Russian ports; Leningrad opening into the Baltic; Archangel into the Arctic Ocean; Odessa into the Black Sea, and Vladivostok into the far Pacific Ocean. In the words of the commission itself: "We are in a gigantic plan to improve these ports."

It is the stream of raw products pouring from all these ports that will establish credits for the Soviet Union in other nations, making it possible to import the finished products needed by the workers and peasants. The mere presence in this country of the Soviet port commission is testimony to the fact that the construction process in the Soviet Union is proceeding rapidly and successfully.

• • • •

Shapurji Saklatvala, the Communist member of the British parliament, was barred from the United States because it was feared he might carry on propaganda subversive of American capitalist institutions. The Soviet engineers refuse to talk about "political matters." But the successful establishment of Soviet industry, agriculture and trade will be the greatest propaganda possible for the spread of the Russian Soviet victory to all lands. Welcome to the Soviet port commission.

HORTHY REGIME IN NEW TERROR AGAINST LABOR

Seizes 100 Workers at Budapest

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, Sept. 28.—Reports from Budapest state that the Horthy white guard dictatorship has arrested more than 100 workers and radical leaders.

Among those reported seized are Matthais Rakosi and Zoltan Weinberger leaders of the Hungarian workers. Budapest papers are carrying violent attacks on the arrested workers, pretending that a "plot to assassinate" Horthy was being planned.

Horthy's massacres of hundreds of workers and the barbarous tortures of thousands imprisoned following the overthrow of the Hungarian Soviet regime headed by Bela Kun, has made the Horthy clique apprehensive of every movement, however, mild, of the workers.

The Hungarian socialists have supported Horthy even to the extent of making a signed alliance with him against the Communists in the bloodiest days of the white terror.

In Revolt!

For the first time in the history of international class solidarity, we hear the voice of the Chinese workers calling to the workers of other countries for a helping hand.

For the first time in the history of proletarian revolts in China, we find the Chinese workers awakening to the spirit of international proletarianism.

For the first time in history the Chinese workers are beginning to understand the true meaning of capitalism, militarism, and exploitation.

THEY ARE AWAKENING!

In all the principal cities of China today, the workers are rising in revolt against their oppressors, feeling the breath of freedom that comes to them from the workers' government of Soviet Russia, they too, want to be free.

The iron hand of international imperialism is pressing harder and harder upon their throats in an effort to starve them and keep them in submission, abject slavery and servitude.

The success of international capitalism spells starvation, exploitation, imprisonment and death for the workers of all countries.

MUST THEY STARVE?

THE CHINESE WORKERS ARE WAGING A BATTLE FOR LIFE AND FREEDOM.

THEIR VICTORY WILL BE OUR VICTORY.

A LIBERATED CHINESE WORKER, MEANS A LIBERATED WORKER EVERYWHERE.

THEY NEED OUR HELP—MORALLY AND FINANCIALLY.

WE MUST RALLY TO THEIR SUPPORT AND HELP FEED THEM.

IN RUSSIA, ENGLAND, GERMANY, FRANCE, AUSTRALIA, EVERYWHERE THE WORKERS ARE SUPPORTING THE WORKERS OF CHINA.

SO WILL WE.

MILITARY LORDS PREPARE CIVIL WAR IN CHINA

Dictators Struggle for Shansi Provinces

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 28. — Hasty military preparations under way in several Chinese provinces have increased the fear the civil war may break out within a few weeks between the Manchurian warlord, Chang Tso-Lin and the "Christian" general Feng Yu-Hsiang for the control of the Shansi provinces.

It is believed that Wu Pei Fu, who has been in the background since the drubbing he received last spring, will take advantage of the war over the Shansi provinces to enter Honan and re-establish his headquarters at Honanfu.

Artillery on To Nanking.

The Manchurian war-lord Chang is sending Gen. Yang Yu-Ting to Nanking with artillery as a counter move to the activity displayed by Gen. Sun Chuang Fang, military commissioner of Chekiang provinces and follower of Wu Pei Fu.

Gen. Sun Chuang Fang is suspected of attempting to occupy Nanking, the capital of the Kiangsu province. This would give him control of Shanghai as all rail communications between Shanghai and provinces other than Chekiang must pass over the Shanghai-Nanking raids.

Civil war is expected to break out in an attempt of Chang and Feng to become dictators of China.

Preparations Booming.

The Mukden arsenal is turning out 1,000 75 mm. shells daily for [illegible] mountain guns that Chang intends to press into service. Chang's army is gathering in all the war materials it possibly can. The bulk of the Chinese navy has joined Feng and he is also strengthening his troops for the expected attempt to seize power.

An outbreak around Shanghai, Hankow and Pekin would prevent the international conferences planned to take place soon.

Prepare for Emergency.

TOKIO, Sept. 28.—Banks and business houses are sending out instructions to their branch offices in China as to the conduct of these institutions during the civil war which is most likely to take place. These instructions are being sent in answer to requests which have been arriving during the last few days from the representatives located in China.

"B. & O. BILL'S" OWN LODGE HANDS HIM RECALL RESOLUTION

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 28.—Machinist Local 119 of Newport followed the action taken by Local 147 of Providence ("B. & O. Bill's" own lodge) in endorsing the resolution for the recall of all Grand Lodge officers.

Also, by unanimous vote Local 119 protested against the circular letter ordering the expulsion of members of the Workers (Communist) Party and the Trade Union Educational League.

A letter from "B. & O. Bill" Johnston to a fellow spirit who is member of Local 119, had this to say about the recall proceedings—"I am not worrying about the recall resolution started by Local 1126, for the whole procedure is illegal."

FAKERS SEEK FAT JOBS, NOT CLASS STRUGGLE

Willing to Peddle Labor to Capital

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept 28.—On the eve of the state convention of the California Federation of Labor in San Diego, the labor bosses of southern California are busily engaged in feathering their own nests for the next few years. All the Los Angeles delegates are being propagandised to the effect that "the presidency of the federation must come to the south (meaning Los Angeles) and taken away from the north (San Francisco)."

The officials of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council are making every effort to get John S. Horn, their former secretary, elected to the presidency. Horn, it must be remembered, was the fellow who as secretary of the Central Labor Council, connived with the police to raid the meetings of the T. U. E. L., seize their records and get dozens of militant workers expelled from their trade unions.

Judas got his Reward.

For this service to the bosses Horn was rewarded by the city administration by getting appointed to the board of public works, and to show his gratitude he "lined up" labor's votes to re-elect the tool of the gamblers' trust, George Cryer, as mayor of the fair city of sunshine and jails.

But Horn is not satisfied. His ambition is not satisfied even when he will be elected president of the State Federation of Labor. According to the Citizen, official labor paper of this city, this will be the beginning of a campaign for the state elections next year, in which an attempt will be made to unseat Governor Richardson from his throne because he doesn't "patronize" labor enough.

Refuses to Divvy Up.

Richardson's administration is notoriously anti-labor, having killed more "progressive" legislation than almost any previous one, but what Horn seems to be grieved about, is that he doesn't get as many "favors" as he deserves, considering how many thousand votes he is willing to trade off in return for said patronage. So it is being noised about that "California labor" is going to fight Richardson next year.

Of course, the Citizen doesn't come out openly and say so; it doesn't even mention Horn's aspirations to the presidency of the federation, except in the casual words, "there appears to be a strong sentiment to bring the presidency back to the south, and Brother Horn is much mentioned for the honor." One can put two and two together, and consider this as part of Horn's publicity campaign.

We might even suspect that this same John S. Horn plans to run for the governorship of California, or perhaps some other hide-bound conservative of the same type, from the hints thrown out by the Citizen. The chambers of commerce are shrewd enough to know that this is one of the ways most popular nowadays to detract the workers from thinking of wide-spread unemployment, low wages and open shop conditions, and so a "labor" candidate might not have as much opposition as might be supposed by either the ku kluxers or the Better America Federation.

Got to Have Something to Sell.

To run as a candidate Horn would have to go on one of the reactionary party tickets, and would of course bid for the support of the capitalists by promising them "harmony" between capital and labor. This bid for the leadership of the labor federation is a move to get enough prestige to make a "deal" with the bosses, which means another betrayal of the workers.

The Communists must point out that the only way labor could be represented in the political campaign next year is for organized labor to get behind a united labor ticket against all the reactionary candidates, and on a program dealing with the needs of the workers of California. Horn or any other "labor" candidate would be merely betraying the workers whom he is supposed to represent if he fails to run on the basis of the support of the labor movement to protect itself from the attack of the open-shoppers who are all-powerful in California.

Plenty of Issues—Who'll Fight for 'Em?

There are many important issues at present which will probably NOT be discussed at the state convention in San Diego, but which are of vital interest to the workers. One of them is racial discrimination against Negroes and Japanese, who are not allowed entrance into most of the trade unions and who form the basis for the open-shop reserve force of the employers.

The fight against imperialism will center in the Pacific, and consequently in California, in the near future, and the California workers should take heed of the militant stand recently taken by the British Trade Union Congress against imperialism.

Who Will Organize California?

Another important problem, especially in southern California, the "open shop paradise," is the organization of the unorganized workers. There are only one hundred thousand workers organized in the trade unions of California, and most of these unions are deplorably weak and unable to do anything to better the conditions in the state, because they are in the hands of a reactionary trade union leadership not interested in the class struggle against the bosses, but only in perpetuating their own soft jobs and fat salaries.

Yet the state convention will take up none of these issues and many others of like importance, because the convention is predominantly made up of business managers and the tools of the machine, none of whom actually represent the workers.

Why Not a Labor Party?

Reports from the Citizen indicate that only one important issue of interest to the workers might come up, and that is the question of the labor party. Brother William Schneiderman, delegate from the Office Employes' Union No. 15251, will present a resolution unanimously adopted by his local endorsing the organization of a labor party based on the same principles as the British labor party, and calling upon the state convention to take steps for its organization locally and nationally. This could be made the basis of labor's political campaign next year in the state elections, with a militant working class program and candidates who must accept that program.

John Horn must show his true colors now. Will he accept the challenge that the militant workers everywhere raise with the slogan of a united labor ticket and independent working class political action, or will he continue his role of treason by making "deals" with the business interests? A united labor ticket as the basis for organization of an independent labor party, must be labor's slogan. John Horn, where do you stand?

While Amalgamation Waits Bosses Play Unions for Suckers

Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern Railway company, has been cited by the United States railroad labor board to appear before that body October 8 to explain why his road had failed to carry out an order calling for recognition of the Switchmen's Union of North America in negotiating a new wage contract.

The company, instead, negotiated the new contract with the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, a rival organization. The switchmen had voted, 471 to 439 in favor of the switchmen's union as against the trainmen's organization, which had previously represented them, trying thus—and successfully—to set one group of workers more bitterly against each other than ever before.

The Order of Railroad Telegraphers has opened a hearing before the board against three railroads for wage increases and changes in working rules. They ask an increase of 5 cents an hour on the Great Western, 6 cents an hour on the Burlington, while on the Chesapeake & Ohio they are asking only for changes in working rules.

"FINE SET OF MEN" DISRUPT ILL. MINERS

Jobless Have Lesson Before Them

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee)

It is reported that the two mines situated at Lincoln, Illinois, belonging to the Brewerton Coal company are to be junked, as the coal operators are unable to compete with the larger and more economical mines in and out of the state.

Some time ago the miners were offered a chance to work and finance these mines with their own money, if they had any, at the rate of $100.00 each. The company would give no guarantee that they would get the money back, or even get much work. It seems now the miners either had no money or did not intend to invest in the coal company under the terms proposed as the mines are now being dismantled, with hungry miners on the road looking for work and no work to be found.

Yes, They're a Fine Set!

In one of the Lincoln newspapers, published a short time ago, Mr. Brewerton of the Brewerton Coal company tells the miners that the "district officers are a fine set of men." The starving miners at Lincoln understand by this time that they are indeed a fine set of men to allow coal companies thruout the state to operate the mines in such a way that while many are receiving all the work, and in many cases more than they want, others are in semi-starvation and idle.

When coal companies are using the newspapers to make miners believe that their officials are fine men, the miners have good reason to believe that they may be fine men for the coal companies, but very poor men for starving coal diggers.

The following letter to the secretary of the local union at Lincoln is very instructive and the Lincoln miners will do well to consider the substance of the same at this time. This letter was written a short time ago by Jack Watt to the above mentioned secretary, and will no doubt bring home the truth contained therein, in view of the fact that they are now forced to seek employment in the mining industry at some other place than Lincoln, while their fine set of officers "are living on the fat of the land at the expense of their starving wives and families." Part of the letter follows:

"I am sorry to learn that work has been so poor in that mine, and I further say, Brother Yates, that I cannot see any relief in the future for the mine workers unless the working hours are reduced, and I feel that especially those mines that are now shut down, or only working a few days a week, must demand that our officers fight for a six-hour day and five-day week, and the same must be written into our next contract. Unless this is done the shorter work day from now on will receive very little consideration from our officials.

Somewhat Inconsistent.

"The program of our official family seems to be the discharge of 200,000 miners from the industry and in this process it looks as if the Illinois miners are to receive the thinning out in earnest, and out of proportion to the miners in the other fields. At the same time this is going on we see thousands of dollars being spent by the leaders in having organizers attempt to organize miners into the union, who no doubt will be told afterwards, when they become members of the union, that there are 200,000 too many miners in the industry, and to get out!

"The policy of our leaders keep me in mind of a dog chasing his tail around and around. I say that we have not 200,000 too many miners in the industry. We are organized to better our working conditions, shorten our work day, and to secure the full social value of our toil. The only relief that can be had is that we receive an equal division of the work available and take out of the hands of the coal barons the ownership of the mines, and place them in the hands of those depending on them for a living. Yours very truly, John J. Watt."

AUSTRIAN DELEGATION OF YOUNG WORKERS ON VISIT TO THE SOVIETS

MOSCOW, Sept. 3—(By Mail).—The Austrian young workers' delegation consisting of seven delegates, has arrived in Moscow. The delegation is made up as follows: One young Communist, three young social-democratic workers and three young independent workers. The delegation was enthusiastically welcomed by the Young Communist League of Russia and delegations from the shops. The social-democratic delegates declared that they had come to learn the truth about the Soviet Union despite their expulsion from the socialist working youth organization.

A NICE LITTLE UNION REMAINS NICE, AND LITTLE

Never Thinks of Organizing the Workers

By LEONTICH

(Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 28.—The officials and the "very active members" of the Bookkeepers & Stenographers' Union, Local 12,646, to make up their slackness in the work of organization of the unorganized 400,000 office workers in New York started a real campaign against the Communists in the union.

The "builders and supporters" of the union hate to see the union progressing, they will rather see it stand still on one place, so if Rip Van Winkle wakes up in 100 years from now, he should find the small union smaller yet. They have developed skill in this respect. They do not want to see that by this they are breaking up the union; the little respect and influence that the union had gained among the unorganized is lost thru the effort of these fighters.

Fine Welcome.

Any new member, when he comes up for initiation into the union, does not hear a single report of activity but prosecution of good union men.

At the June membership meeting, charges were brought out against Primoff by a brother who since then never showed up to the meetings. On July 20 charges were brought up against Kitzes, Cooper, and Chernow. On September 21, they were expelled. So far it is not known as yet who comes next on the list.

So month after month passes by in trying and expelling members and in the meantime the unorganized remain unorganized. Not only are the Broadway and Wall St. offices not organized, even the labor offices and "labor" banks are not organized.

Low Grade Activity.

No one can respect a union that does not possess the organizational spirit. A union that can waste its time and energy only to frame up and expel Communists is not worthy to be trusted with the task to organize any office.

Only such members are respected in the union who can put up a fight when the question of a tea-party comes up, but if a member will fight and try to push the officials to do some organizational work, he will be framed up, branded as a Communist and expelled from the union.

The members of the Bookkeepers' Union will have to think about this and put all their effort to bring the union to the level of a real labor union that will fight the capitalists for the interest of the workers, otherwise the union will disappear as a useless organization.

NORSE REJECT CLASS PEACE FOR STRUGGLE

Swift Kick for League of Nation's Lackeys

By Andrew Overgaard.

The Norwegian Trade Union Congress, which concluded its sessions in Oslo Sept. 1, resulted in several victories for the Communists and an absolute defeat for the reformists, especially on the question of the labor bureau in Geneva which is part of the league of nations.

The proposal for representation in Geneva was voted down 147 to 76. The proposal that the various affiliated unions should be allowed to send representatives was also voted down by an overwhelming majority. The congress also endorsed the Anglo-Russian trade union unity committee and the secretariat was instructed to appoint representatives to the committee if such would be provided for.

Russian Unions Represented.

The Russian trade unions were represented by Comrade Belinsky, who was received by great ovations in the congress and who participated both in the discussion on Geneva and trade union unity.

The Norwegian unions, in spite of the reformist leadership, have maintained friendly relations with the Russian unions which have sent fraternal delegates to the various union congresses.

Reformist Fraternal Delegate Insults Congress.

The fraternal delegate from the Swedish unions, Johanson, told the congress that if it would not go to Geneva it would be impossible to have any unity of action with the Swedish unions, and thus demonstrated that the reformists are against trade union unity on the basis of the class struggle, but will rather work to become part of their respective capitalist governments. The struggle against the labor bureau of Geneva was led by the Communists in the congress.

The Communist candidate for president, Comrade Volan, who led the minority in the congress received 64 votes as against the Tranmaelite Halvard Olsen, who was elected by 155 votes. The Norwegian unions in this congress have taken steps to the left and will no doubt be a great factor in the efforts for trade union unity. In future congresses they will surely select a leadership which will break completely with reformism and thus they will become instruments for the social revolution.

JOHNSTON STOOL IS GIVEN HIS HAT AT LOCAL

Attack on T. U. E. L. Not Exactly Appreciated

By N. H.

(Worker Correspondent)

FOREST PARK, Ill.—At the meeting of the local Machinists' Union a delegate from the district brought in the statement issued by J. F. Anderson, suspended by Bill Johnston, showing that our local was on the list of those locals whose ballots were thrown out by Davison and Johnston.

This angered our membership to such an extent that they howled condemnation of Johnston. The ballots were thrown out on the mere technicality that they were "counted in a private house." The real reason is that Anderson received 70 votes and Johnston only four.

Stoolpigeon and Proud of It.

By "chance" there was present a Johnston stoolpigeon from another local, who often comes there to spy. This bird had the nerve to ask the floor, altho nobody but the chairman knew what he was going to speak about. But before he got the floor one member asked him the question: "Who informed Johnston that our ballots were counted in a private house?" This character then answered —"I did."

Then when he started to slander the Communists and the Trade Union Educational League (real Spolansky stuff) he was soon interrupted from all sides. The meeting became a turmoil with members yelling epithets at him. He finally had to pack up and leave the hall.

Trap Waits Another Rat

This bird has been expelled from the Workers Party a few years ago and since then has gone so low as to reach bottom in his attacks against the Communists. He is employed by Johnston now—and the devil knows who else. Anyhow, he got an idea of what is waiting for him if he shows is traitorous face again in this local.

Of course there must be someone in the local who translates for him what is going on, because he—being a Swede—cannot understand a word of Czecho-Slovak language in which the meetings are carried on. But this is a matter of time for the other bird to show his feathers.

This is the Spirit.

It was surprising, when he started to slander the Workers Party, that he was so quickly stopped. Nobody wants to listen to such a stool pigeon and it shows that the prestige of the Workers Party and the T. U. E. L. grows despite the crusade of the labor fakers who fear the T. U. E. L. will ditch them.

It is necessary to carry on the fight against all fakers persistently and with devotion. Communists should challenge the fakers everywhere as strongly as some of the progressive locals do. They wouldn't dare try to expel them so quickly as when only a feeble and timid opposition is made.

The best way to support the DAILY WORKER is to subscribe—and get others to subscribe.

Mine Picketing Enjoined.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Sept. 28.—Picketing of the Consolidated Coal Co.'s New England mine at Watson is forbidden the United Mine Workers, in an injunction issued by Judge Meredith of the local circuit court. In the petition, the claim is made that two attacks have been made upon the non-union workers, and that but for the intervention of deputies and state police much damage would have been done.

Shall the British Workers Arm Themselves?

By EARL R. BROWDER

THE question at the head of this article is not one of theory. It is not a question which is being artificially raised by the Communists. It is a question that has arisen out of the very nature of the revolutionary situation now existing in Great Britain, and which is now being openly asked and debated by the widest circles of English workers.

In the Daily Herald, official organ of the labor party and the Trade Union General Council, there is now going on a lively debate, under the standing headline:

"Should the Workers Arm?"

And who argues for arming the workers? Is it the Communists? But the Communists are not yet admitted into the columns of the Daily Herald. Then who argues for arming?

IN the issue of Sept. 7th, the advocate of arms is none other than John Wheatley, M. P. former minister in the MacDonald government, a catholic, a member of the middle class, publisher of books in Glasgow. The following quotations from Wheatley will give a fair idea of the temper of the discussion on this burning issue:

"Mr. Ernest Bevin, in his article in the Daily Herald of 24th of August, invited me to be more definite regarding my statement that 'in order to maintain industrial peace the workers must be ready to resist successfully the attack that is now being prepared. . . We want ten million men who are prepared to suffer rather than see Britain made a land of coolies.'"

"For ten days I have been beyond and reach of newspapers, and if it is not too late I would like now to tell my friends frankly what is in my mind."

"WE all know that parliament is not the driving force in reform, but rather the driven machinery. The driving force is in the country, and all our nice speeches and parliamentary ability, however useful in the promotion of our careers, are only valuable to the waiting workers in so far as we increase the driving force outside.

"Mr. Bevin recognize this when he supports the withholding of labor as one of the chief weapons of the working class. But he is careful to caution the workers that, altho they may strike, they must strike like gentlemen.

"We have reached the stage where the withholding of labor, in which Mr. Bevin believes, must be national to be successful. This being so, trade unionists must have a new outlook. The railwayman cannot join his union merely to maintain or improve the conditions of railwaymen alone. He now organizes to defend not only himself and the other railwaymen, but the miners and dockers and enginees, to whose aid he is pledged to go in certain circumstances. In other words, the railway worker joins the railway union to defend and promote the interests of the working class. The same is true of the miners and dockers and others.

"UNLESS we are willing to go back, the possibility of a national strike has to be faced. We are told it may lead to bloodshed. I sincerely hope it will not, but I frankly fear it may. In such a gigantic conflict, and all that it implies, the capitalists of this country, in my opinion, would not hesitate to stave off defeat by the use of a few bullets.

"If a fascisti organization that can be obtained by voluntary contributions of a few thousand pounds a year is sufficient for this purpose, well and good. The workers, true to their pacifist teachers, may 'turn the other cheek,' and, having got a bullet in it, return to their work, confident that they have done all that respectability permits. But if in the ranks of the workers there should be a fair sprinkling of heathens, who are not 'other-cheekers,' it may be necessary to employ machine-guns against them.

"This method of conversion has often succeeded with backward races. No man can foretell what the future has in store for us, or what sacrifices the workers in a crisis may have to make. We are only asked to decide now whether we should advance or retreat. I want to go forward."

MOST of the "discussion" in the public press consists of passionate exhortations by religious right-wingers (and many so-called lefts also) against the idea of the workers arming to protect themselves. Why this flood of pacifist propaganda for the workers?

Because among the rank and file the discussion is all going the other way. The workers want to be able to resist the British fascisti, which is becoming more threatening every day. It is not prepared to bow before the new secret army constabulary that is being recruited for next spring's battles. So the pacifist leaders are arguing with the workers against this movement.

Thus we find Lansbury in his Labor Weekly putting the question:

"We would ask our comrades whether they seriously intend to organize for a violent revolution? It is necessary that this question should be faced and answered in a straight-forward manner. We understand and support the appeal to all service men not to take up arms or in any way attack or blackleg the workers during a time of dispute. We go further and we urge British workers not to take up arms against the workers of other lands. If the Minority Movement means no more than this, well and good, but if, on the contrary, its aim is to establish a 'Red Army' in Britain, then much more than words and high-sounding phrases are needed. There must be organized drilling, purchases of arms, explosives, airplanes, etc."

AND in the same issue comes the answer in a letter from a rank and filer (reprinted in full in the DAILY WORKER of Sept. 19, in article "British Labor Breaks with Imperialism") who shows that the employing class is wild with fear, looking upon even "moderate" labor leaders as "Reds," and is seriously preparing to smash the British labor movement by force. This rank and filer is a "moderate," but he says:

"I would therefore plead earnestly with all who have the labor cause at heart that they prepare to meet this danger while they have still time. Force must be met by force. Fascism is purely and simply a military organization, and is not amenable to argument. It can only be successfully countered by a similar organization on the other side. With luck, we shall have nine months to perfect our arrangements, so there is no time to be lost. The thing must be properly organized on a national basis, and I would propose that the T. U. C. general council take up immediately the creation of a Labor Defense Corps, centrally controlled, with local headquarters under each trades council. The fascist organization is a splendid example for them to follow as regards details."

WHAT has brought forward the issue of armed struggle so quickly and burningly?

The answer is the revolutionization of the British labor movement, and the determination of the British government to (in the words of advice given it by the Chicago Tribune) "smash this menace while there is yet time."

The Scarborough Trades Congress, representing the organized millions of British labor, decided upon a revolutionary course, marked by the following:

(1) "This congress declares that the trade union movement must organize to prepare the trade unions in conjunction with the party of the workers to struggle for the overthrow of capitalism." It warns against schemes of co-partnership, and declares for a shop committee movement "to force the capitalists to relinquish their grip on industry."

(2) Approved of the Anglo-Russian Unity Commission, and declared "We consider it our duty to stand by the Russian workers."

(3) Declared for world unity of the trade union movement on the basis of a struggle against capitalism.

(4) Denounced the British empire as stained with the blood of slaves, and declared for self-determination even to the point of separation for all colonial peoples.

THE question, "Shall the British workers arm themselves," is the question whether the British workers are going to fight for these things, or if they will submit to the violence of British imperialism and relapse into apathetic slavery. An indication of whether they will arm or not is contained in the speech of A. B. Swales, chairman of the congress, who concluded his speech in the following words:

"All around are signs of an awakening consciousness in the peoples of all countries that the present system of society is condemned. The backward centers of industrial and political slavery are organizing and rising in revolt against the capitalist order of society; and so we see India, China, and other Eastern countries in the throes of upheaval and demanding the right of self-determination. Who can predict the rate at which the conflagration will travel, or how wide it will spread? We cannot do other than rejoice that at last there are clear indications of a world movement rising in revolt and determined to shake off the shackles of wage-slavery."

The Workers Party in Action

Reorganization and the Language Problem

By B. BORISOFF

OUR party, the Workers (Communist) Party is now in the process of Bolshevik reorganization. It is a difficult task and it strains every ounce of the energy of the party. What are the main difficulties? The first one consists in the fact that the reorganization follows after a severe factional fight within the party (which in itself is a part of this process of Bolshevization and which is not yet outlived). Secondly, the party in the course of this process, and also as a part of it, must wage a relentless struggle against the social-democratic, opportunist tendencies still remaining within its ranks. And, finally, there is this difficulty: that the party is composed overwhelmingly of foreign born workers and that it must accomplish the task of welding together these workers, who speak seventeen different languages, into one monolitic, Bolshevik structure.

The party will overcome all these difficulties. The recent party convention has shown that the overwhelming majority of the party is loyal to the party and to the Communist International in the struggle against the opportunist elements. If there were any friends of Lore at this convention, they did not dare to raise their voice in his defense. The subsequent conventions of the Jewish and Greek sections of the party and the New York conference of the German section furnish additional profs that the opportunist elements will not find any appreciable following among the membership of the party. In the Jewish convention not a voice was raised in defense of Lore; on the contrary, his former followers made a declaration admitting their errors and pledging loyalty to the Comintern. The Greek convention went unanimously on record for the Bolshevization of the party and the fight against Loreism. At the German conference in New York among a hundred participants, only two raised a feeble voice in defense of Lore.

OUR party is overwhelmingly proletarian in its composition, and this is a guarantee that it will come out victorious and with little losses from the struggle to rid itself of opportunist tendencies, and elements.

But how successful will it be in overcoming the difficulty of language divisions? The answer to this we must seek in the objective conditions within the American proletariat of which the party is an inseparable part. The language divisions within our party are but a reflection of the language barriers existing within the American working class. Comrade Pepper in his pamphlet "For a Labor Party" presented, for the first time in the American Communist literature, an analysis of the American working class. He pointed out the historical divisions into skilled and unskilled; native and foreign born, and what importance these factors played in the past as an obstacle to the unification of the American working class and the development of its political consciousness. He also pointed out that since the world war deep changes occured within the American working class—a great levelling process has taken place: the unskilled workers were able to raise considerably their working conditions so as to approach the skilled; on the other hand, with the practical cessation of immigration and emigration, the foreign born workers became "Americanized" to a great degree. They have learned the language, entered the trade unions; the gigantic struggles which mark the after war period brought a further rapproachement between the native and the foreign born workers. The common suffering from governmental oppression served the same end.

IT is to the everlasting credit of our party, as the leader of the American working class, that on the basis of the correct analysis of these conditions, made in its name by Comrade Pepper, it formulated its slogan "For a Labor Party" and for a time was a leader in this movement assisting the American workers in the process of freeing themselves from the political leadership of the bourgeoisie. It is again on the basis of the correct analysis of these changes within the American working class that the leadership of the party can now go to the membership and inspire it with confidence that it will overcome the obstacle which the language divisions place in the way to Bolshevik reorganization of the party. This reorganization in one of its aspects can be considered as an adoptation of the party to the changes which have taken place within the American working class.

There is but one way of approaching the question of the reorganization of the language sections, and that is from the general viewpoint of the party. The language sections form such an overwhelming part of the membership of the party; the conditions of the workers within them are essentially so similar that it would be an error to obscure the great meaning of the Bolshevik reorganization by approaching it from the narrow viewpoint of some unimportant pecularities of a given language section. On the contrary, all the implications which the reorganization carries for the party as a whole, are true for the various language sections. They all center around this fact that the party is making the workshop the starting point and the basis of all its activities. For the entire party, this means the establishment of a broader and a deeper contact with the masses of the workers and, for the language sections it signifies the abandonment of their isolation and coming into closer contact with the struggle of the American proletariat.

IT would be erroneous to suppose that with the reorganization the party would confine its activities only to the participation in the conflicts arising in the workshops and would abandon its activities and struggles in other fields. Similarly in relation to the language sections the reorganization does not signify that they will lose their contact with and cease activities in the organizations of the foreign born workers outside the shop.

While establishing our party firmly in the mines and mills and workshops let us be on guard against the tendency of "economism," a tendency against which the Russian Communist Party had to wage a relentless fight. This tendency has already clearly shown itself within our party.

IT manifests itself clearly in some of the shop bulletins of the already existing shop nuclei of the party when they deal exclusively with the grievances of the workers in the particular shop when they fail to give them political interpretation, when they ignore completely the political struggles in the country outside the shop and the struggles of the workers against the rule of capitalism thruout the world. The "complete orientation of our party toward industry and the industrial workers as the only sound basis for a Communist party" of which some of our comrades speak, must not be interpreted as the lowering of the party to the level of purely economic struggles of the workers; on the contrary, the reorganization means that the party will strive and will be increasingly able to "politicalize" these struggles developing them into a struggle for power. The shop is only a starting point but our party strives to lead the workers out of the shop and into the struggle for the conquest of political power. We must firmly remember this.

The main factor which has to be taken into account in the process of the reorganization of the language sections is the degree of their Communist development. Is is essential that in such sections in which the remnants of social-democratic ideology persist, yet strongly, the party should start an energetic and immediate campaign to win over the membership to the Communist view point.

Our party went thru six years of Communist struggles. With this background, there is no doubt that it will be able to proceed with determination and carry out successfully the task of reorganization—to become a more powerful and worthy section of the Communist International.

FULL INFORMATION REGARDING MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS BEING HELD IN REORGANIZATION DRIVE

Workers (Communist) Party membership meetings arranged in the party's reorganization campaign with the speakers assigned to be held on the following dates:

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Sunday, Oct. 4. J. J. Ballam and R. T. Sullivan.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Wednesday, Oct. 7, at the Northwest Hall. C. E. Ruthenberg and Martin Abern.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Oct. 11. John J. Ballam and William Simons.

An organization tour of the western districts is being planned by the Central Executive Committee Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and other party centers of the west will arrange mass membership meetings to be addressed by a representative of the Central Executive Committee.

Reports on last Sunday's membership meetings will be published as soon as compiled.

LETTISH FEDERATION BUREAU PLEDGES UNQUALIFIED SUPPORT TO COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—The bureau of the Lettish federation unconditionally approves of the action of the Communist International in approving the Ruthenberg leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party of America in a resolution sent to the DAILY WORKER for publication.

Resolution Pledges Support.

The resolution of the Lettish federation bureau on the Workers Party convention and the Communist International decision follows:

We, the Bureau of the Lettish Federation, Workers (Communist) Party of America, after considering the report of our national convention—held in Chicago, August 21-30, 1925, and the decision of the Communist International, resolve and declare that we reaffirm our unqualified support to the Communist International and welcome its guidance and its endeavors to preserve the unity of our party.

Approve Comintern Action.

We unconditionally approve of the actions of the Communist International approving the leadership of our party by the Ruthenberg group who was considered to be nearer to the views of the Communist International and more loyal in carrying out its decisions.

We consider that the Ruthenberg group have had years of experience in our party and the revolutionary movement in America and participated in launching the first Communist Party in this country and in our opinion is trustworthy of such leadership.

Pledges Allegiance to C. E. C.

In full accordance with decisions of the Communist International we pledge our undivided, wholehearted support and loyalty to the Central Executive Committee as constituted by the National Convention and pledge ourselves to continue our efforts in the building and Bolshevization of our party.

We endorse the present plans of our Central Executive Committee to immediately carry out the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei and pledge our assistance and support in this work especially among the members of the Lettish Federation.

Call to Close Ranks.

We call upon all members of the Lettish Federation to close their ranks, and regardless of past differences to unite in carrying out the immediate tasks of the party for constructive Communist work and rally the mass of the workers under the banner of the Communist International and its American section, the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Long live the Communist International!

Long live the Workers (Communist) Party of America!

With Communist greetings,
Bureau of the Lettish Federation.,
Robert Zelms, Secretary-Treas.

How to Apply the United Front Tactic

The letter of the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party regarding the Toledo, Ohio united front proposal is as follows:

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 28, 1925.
Clarence Buehler, secretary,
C. C. C. Workers (Communist) Party,
Toledo, Ohio.

Dear Comrade: Under date of Sept. 23rd there appeared in the DAILY WORKER a united front proposal made by our party to the socialist candidate for mayor of Toledo, Ohio. The party has not received any seperate detailed report in regard to the proposal made and is therefore dependent upon its judgment of the situation upon the report appearing in the DAILY WORKER, and this report makes it necessary for the central executive committee to discuss the question with the comrades of Toledo with the view of avoiding mistakes in the application of the united front tactic.

The Toledo organization of the party correctly estimated the requirements of the present situation in seeking to achieve the placing on the ballot of a united labor ticket in the municipal elections in Toledo. It is the policy of our party to endeavor to unite all workers' organizations in support of labor candidates as against the capitalist candidates in the elections. In taking the initiative to place such a united labor ticket in the field, the Toledo comrades show the proper conception of the party policy. However, on the basis of the statement published in the DAILY WORKER, the central executive committee is obliged to say that the method of achieving this united labor ticket, proposed by the comrades of Toledo, is not a correct one.

The policy of the party is to unite all workers' organizations (trade unions, co-operatives, fraternal organizations, labor political organizations) in support of candidates pledged to a platform representing the workers' interests. Such a united front could include the socialist party. It would therefore have been a correct policy if the Toledo organization of the party had initiated a call of a conference of workers' organizations which included the socialist party and had made a public declaration calling upon the socialist party to participate in such a conference and in support of a united front labor ticket which such a conference might put in the field.

It is, however, quite another thing for the Toledo party organization to address an open letter to the socialist candidate for mayor in which the declaration is made:

"After a careful analysis of the conditions, we find that the only candidate in the field representing the interests of labor are the socialists and the Communists."

"We believe that you who are a socialist and a candidate for the office of mayor will appreciate the necessity of a united front campaign of our forces."

"The committee feels that it should not be a difficult task for us to find a common ground to unite on in this campaign."

This proposal is not a proposal for a united front of workers' organizations in support of a labor ticket, but is a proposal for an election alliance between the socialist party and the Workers (Communist) Party in the present municipal elections.

Our party cannot enter into such an election alliance with the socialist party. The socialist party has shown itself to be the betrayer of the proletarian revolution in every country where it has been put to a test. The socialists today are fighting against Soviet Russia and the proletarian government which rules that country in the workers' interests. The socialists enter the election campaign because they believe that they can bring reforms from the capitalist state and eventually achieve socialism thru the election of the officials of the capitalist state. We, as Communists, enter the election campaign for revolutionary agitation, as a means of exposing the character of the capitalist state, and as a means of mobilizing the forces which will ultimately destroy the capitalist state power. The gulf between these two views is so deep that they cannot be harmonized and there can never be an alliance between socialists and Communists, and therefore a purely election alliance between socialists and Communists is unthinkable.

It is true that the Communist International proposed to the German Communist Party in relation to the presidential election in Germany that the Communist Party proposed to the social democratic party that on the basis of the socialists supporting a socialist candidate pledged to certain demands, the Communists would withdraw their candidate in the second election. The basis of this proposal was the monarchial danger in the candidacy of Hindenburg. The Communists, who ever fight for the workers' interests, were prepared to support a social democratic candidate for president in order to unite the workers against the monarchy, to prevent the elevation to the position of president of Germany of a supporter of the monarchy.

Nothing in the situation in Toledo is comparable to this tactic which was employed in Germany, nor is the proposal of an election alliance in support of a common slate of candidates the same as the tactic which the Communist International proposed in the German situation.

The correct tactic for the Toledo comrades in the situation which existed there, was to initiate the calling of a general conference of labor organizations and to invite the socialist party to this conference. Such a proposal would have made our party the initiator of a united front in the interests of the workers of Toledo. If the socialist party had rejected such an invitation it would stand exposed before the workers of Toledo as refusing to participate in the common action of the workers against their class enemies. Thus the socialist party would have been discredited before the workers of Toledo.

The Toledo party organization correctly made one of the first demands its proposal the organization of a labor party, but it should have made the proposal for a united labor ticket the basis of steps toward the formation of such a labor party thru initiating a conference and not made the organization of the labor party the basis of a proposal alliance in the election between the socialists and the Communists.

It is necessary for the central executive committee to point out this error of the Toledo organization so that the comrades of Toledo may revise their proposal and place them on the correct basis. Since the statement of the Toledo organization has been published in the party press and it therefore before the party as a whole and other units of the party may consider the proposal as made a correct application of the united front tactic, the central executive committee is compelled to publish this letter in the party press for the guidance of the party as a whole.

We feel certain that the Toledo comrades will understand the motive of the central executive committee in making this statement is to aid the Toledo comrades and the party as a whole in achieving a clear understanding of the united front tactic, so that the party may correctly apply this tactic without compromising its character as a Communist Party and so that it will redound to the strengthening of the Communist movement and of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Fraternally Yours,
C. E. Ruthenberg, Gen. Sec'y.

Auctioneer's Hammer Echoes Thru Kaiser's Corfu "Fairy Castle"

CORFU, Sept. 28—Intimate relics of the former German emperor and his son, the ex-crown prince, went under the hammer as the sale of the furnishings of Achilleon, the "Fairy Castle" of Corfu, began.

The castle, built at a cost of $10,000,000 by the restless Empress Elizabeth of Austria, was afterwards purchased by the ex-kaiser for $250,000.

Only the statues will be excluded from the sale. So extensive is the list of articles to be auctioned off that the sale is expected to last four weeks.

LITERATURE AND ART

Most valuable books on the theory, practice and history of the revolutionary labor movement are the backbone of all the books in "The Source of All Communist Literature."

But there are many others. These contribute to the development of a real proletarian culture. The number of them is growing—as you will note by the new books of fiction, literature and art listed here:

DECEMBER THE FOURTEENTH by Dmitri Merezhkovsky.

An intense and gripping historical novel dealing with one of the most stirring episodes in Russian history—the attempt to dethrone Tsar Nicholas I in December, 1825. 12 mo. 320 pp. $2.00

FLYING OSSIP—Stories of New Russia.

Eleven short stories written since the Revolution, revealing the new literary trends, and presenting the work of the most significant of the new Russian writers. 12 mo. 320 pp. $2.50

CHAINS by Henri Barbusse.

A new novel by the renowned author of "Under Fire." A moving love story is woven into the narration of Man's age-old struggle for progress. 2 vols. 12 mo. each 304 pp. $4.00

RHYMES OF EARLY JUNGLE FOLK by Mary Marcy.

Interesting and educational poems for children. An outline of pre-history for young people illustrated with seventy-one beautiful wood cuts. $2.00

LITERATURE AND REVOLUTION by Leon Trotsky.

A brilliant criticism of present-day literary groupings in Russia, and a discussion of the relation of art to life. A fearless application of materialist dialectics in an analysis of literature and art. 12 mo. 256 pp. $2.50

THE NEW THEATRE AND CINEMA OF SOVIET RUSSIA by Huntly Carter.

Mr. Carter, the eminent authority, presents here a veritable encyclopedia of the Russian theater today. 8 vo. 300 pp. + 68 half-tones and 17 woodcuts $6.00

MAMMONART by Upton Sinclair.

This versatile and busy man has now assailed the field of Art. This book is a study of the world's culture from the standpoint of economics. "Who owns the artists and why?" "To what extent has literature served and glorified the ruling classes?" These are the questions Sinclair poses and answers. Paper 1.00—Cloth $2.00

THE CRY FOR JUSTICE by Upton Sinclair.

An anthology of the literature of social protest. Extractions from the works of the world's greatest writers and artists concerning their attitudes towards things as they are. Paper $1.00—Cloth $2.00

POPE OBJECTS TO JOHN HUSS CELEBRATIONS

Break with Czechs Is Imminent

ROME, Sept. 28.—A break in relations between the Holy See in Rome and the Czecho Slovakian government is seen in the answer by the Czech government to the pope's demand that Czecho Slovakia abolish the national fete on the anniversary of the burning of John Huss. The pope objects to having the national celebration on July 6 in the honor of John Huss, a protestant martyr, who was burned at the stake during the fifteenth century of the catholic clergy.

The Czecho Slovakian government in its note says it is desirous of maintaining cordial relations with the pope but that it considered the question of the national fete an internal affair and not His Holiness' business. This will mean a break with the pope as Rome is not willing to consider the matter a national affair.

Parole Board "Has Nothing to Say" on Brindell Violation

OSSENING, N. Y., Sept. 28.— The state board of parole had "nothing to say" on the suggestion of Samuel Untermyer that an investigation be held on the alleged parole violation of Robert P. Brindell.

"It is not expected that the Brindell case will come up before the parole board before their meeting late in October.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Revelations of conditions in the Cook county jail at Chicago, with beer runners and bootleggers being granted almost the freedom of guests at an inn, has resulted in a federal investigation, it was disclosed officially today by the department of justice.

SECOND INTERNATIONAL LEADERS AT MARSEILLES DEFENDED WHITE TERRORIST ZANKOV OF BULGARIA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON (By Mail.)—The Sunday Worker, organ of the progressive center of the British labor movement (tho that center to A. F. of L. eyes would appear completely "Bolshevik"), publishes an article showing that at the recent Marseilles congress of the Second (Socialist) International, Friedrich Adler, its most prominent leader, with others supporting him, condoned the white terror of the Zankov regime in Bulgaria, responsible for wholesale murders of workers and peasants.

The publication says that publication was delayed on the matter, altho the Sunday Worker knew previously of the incident, in order to allow one of the chief actors of the story to be smuggled out of Bulgaria to France. The story is related as follows:

After many difficulties one of the leaders of the Bulgarian working class, himself a journalist, came to the congress in the hope that by passing a resolution of protest against the white terror in Bulgaria the Second International would help to save some of the thousands of Bulgarian workers now passing thru Zankov's courts martial on their way to the scaffold.

Mild Resolution.

A resolution was prepared, quite mild in tone, appealing "to all the sane and democratic forces in Bulgaria to come together and give that unfortunate country the peace and security of life which it justly deserves.

Loebe, president of the German reichstag, signed the resolution, and induced Bauer of Austria and Breidscheid. English, French and American delegates also signed the resolution.

What happened next can best be described in the words of the Bulgarian journalist himself:

"I asked Breidscheid if he could point out to me some other German delegates who were likely to sign. He took me to Mueller, the leader of the German party.

Sakazoff's Feelings.

"Mueller became red in the face and shouting to Loebe and Breidscheid he demanded to know what right had they to sign without first submitting it to the 'leaders of the delegation.' He added: 'We cannot support this; it will hurt Sakazoff's feelings; he is against it!'"

(Sakazoff was leader of the official Bulgarian delegation.)

"He was getting ready to tear the resolution up when I grabbed it away from him. This row attracted the attention of the presidium, and in a minute Adler came down from the tribune and took the resolution away from me, shouting: 'This cannot go on; we are not going to take up any resolution, no matter how many leaders sign it.'

Then he called Bauer aside and warned him against me and Bauer put the resolution in his pocket, promising Adler that nothing will be done.

"It was only after a long and painful discussion with him that the resolution was given back.

"I explained to the British delegates the cause of this scandal, and one of the most prominent leaders of the labor party said to me: 'I am not surprised they are against this resolution. These people are not socialist at all.'

Disillusioned.

"Afterwards just as I was approaching Leon Blum and Henderson to get their signatures, Adler again came up to me and with an agitated voice ordered me to 'stop interfering with the work of the congress,' and almost showed me the door.

"I left in disgust with a deep feeling of bitterness against the leaders of the Socialist international, who, just like their colleagues in Bulgaria, give their tacit approval and sanction to the murderlust which is being perpetrated upon the Bulgarian people."

After the Bulgarian journalist had left an attempt was made to get the resolution discussed by congress, but without success.

Sakazoff could have sent the message to Zankov: "All's clear. Carry on with the hangings."

IGNORING FLAGS NOT AGAINST LAW BUT BRINGS JAIL

If Crowd Collects You Are "Disorderly"

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Because he did not take off his hat quick enough to salute, when an American flag was passing during a parade, John Granetser is now serving a ten-day jail sentence in Raymond street jail, Brooklyn, N. Y.

He was watching the parade in Coney Island which is part of the Mardi Gras celebration, when he was arrested by Sergeant Joseph Lovett on a charge of disorderly conduct.

In his complaint Lovett alleged that several persons watching the processions at that point reported to him that Granetser was ignoring the flag. The policeman said he warned Granetser that "the next time the flag passes you show respect by doffing your hat." The man made no reply. Lovett said he watched him and saw him repeat the offense.

When brought before Magistrate Alfred E. Steers, in the Coney Island court, Granetser was fined $25. Not having the money he was sent to jail for ten days.

"The basis for my sentence," the magistrate said, "was that altho it is not a violation of any law for a person to refuse to uncover for the flag, wilfully causing a crowd to collect does constitute disorderly conduct, a punishable offense.

"Granetser was guilty of disorderly conduct when he refused to obey the sergeant's admonition because by his refusal he created a disturbance. I told him that he should do the same in our country as we would do if we were in his."

RECENT PROGRESS IN RUSSIAN AGRICULTURE IS REPORTED BY SOCIETY FOR TECHNICAL AID

NEW YORK, Sept. 28— The Central Bureau of the Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia issues the following information regarding recent agricultural developments in Soviet Russia.

Russian Agricultural News.

Refrigeration in Ukraine. To meet the requirements of the Ukrainian exportation of eggs and poultry, three large refrigerators will be built in Odessa, Djmerinka and Bachmach. Two large refrigerators for the local sale of meat, fats and butter also will be built in Vorojha and Donbass, and for the internal fish market another unit will be built in Mariupol.

The Ukrainian grain committee has been discussing how to get fullest benefit from the corn crop. It is determined to build a drying plant for the corn and to extract by-products to a total of 14,000,000 poods.

Moscow.

Mutual Aid Societies among Peasants. The peasants in R. S. F. S. R. have now 4,254 provincial mutual aid societies with 51,106 branches in the villages.

Imports of Tractors in September. 2,880 tractors were imported into the U. S. S. R. in the first part of September. The Selskosoyuz is expecting 300 more tractors before the end of the month.

The Export of Butter. The export of butter to England doubled this year in comparison with the last year. For the last three months the export was valued at 11,000,000 rubles.

Colonization of the Far East. Within ten years in the different regions of the Far East, 400,000 peasants from European Russia will be settled.

Flax, Hemp and Sunflower. The seeded area of these plants in the U. S. S. R. in 1925 is 4,590,000 dessiatins. Last year the area was 3,845,000 dessiatins. The harvest seeds and oils extracted therefrom this year weigh 260,000,000 poods, while last year only 136,000,000 poods were extracted.

The exhibition of popular agricultural literature will commence on the 7th of November of this year. The purpose of this exhibition is to select the best types of literature for the peasants and to begin the widest spread of such books in the future.

All the agricultural production of the U. S. S. R. in 1925-26 amounts to 11.5 billion rubles, equal to 84 per cent of the pre-war total.

Agricultural First Reader for Adults. For the use of the village schools there has been issued a special agricultural reader for adults. Among the matters dealt with in that reader are the following: Woman on the farm, the dairy, raising of cattle, poultry raising, veterinary science, raising of flax and hemp, berry culture, vegetable cropping, farm cookery, preserving, handicrafts, sanitation, farm accounts, etc. All this material is presented in a story form with a very telling effect.

Odessa.

Export of Potatoes. The Near Eastern markets have now a big demand for Russian potatoes. The first steamer left Odessa with 15,000 poods of potatoes for Greece, Palestine, and Egypt.

Prey on Disabled War Vets.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. — A nation-wide campaign has been launched to apprehend and vigorously prosecute peddlers of poisonous liquor and narcotics and "hand bookmakers," who have been operating in the vicinity of hospitals where disabled world war veterans are patients, it was learned today.

Rail Crash in Georgia.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Sept. 28. — Tracks of the Atlantic coast line were cleared for traffic here early today, following a head-on collision of passenger trains, eight miles east of Thomasville, in which three trainmen and one Negro passenger were killed, and 20 passengers were bruised and shaken up.

SOCIAL-DEMOCRATS WELCOME HOEGLUND AS PRODIGAL SON

By A. OVERGAARD.

The social-democratic party of Sweden is preparing for the home-coming of the prodigal son, Hoeglund, who has been traveling fast towards the right since he decided to break with the Communist International.

According to an article published in the official organ of the Danish Communist Party, it is only a question of time when Hoeglund will make out his application to join the Swedish section of the Second (Socialist) International. The question of his entrance into the social-democratic party has for a long time been discussed in the social-democratic as well as the capitalist press in Sweden, and statements have been given out by members of the executive committee of Hoeglund's party.

One of those members in an interview with the Norwegian Social Demokraten stated, "That so far, there has been no conference on the matter as one of the two parts naturally must take the first step and of course, Hoeglund must take back what he has said about the social-democrats in the past."

When asked what stand Hoeglund takes toward the two trade union internationals, the answer was, "We are fighting the Red International of Labor Unions and have always been for the Amsterdam International.

"We are also for participation in the labor bureau in Geneva, and in regards to the social-democratic government, we take a position of loyalty."

In an article in his official organ, Hoeglund proves that he is ready for the last step and thus proves his treachery to the working class. He offers to liquidate, providing that good terms can be agreed upon and writes further: "We do not need to pride ourselves on the past and we can easily confess, that we made a number of mistakes which helped to make the struggle more bitter."

The social-democratic press is naturally jubilant and states, "That the Hoeglund Communists have nothing else but the name Communists in common with the Moscow followers." The social-democratic press goes still further and states, "That we shall be ready to forget the past since Hoeglund's complete break with Bolshevism." The official organ declares itself satisfied that Hoeglund has made no demands which would change the program and principles of the social-democratic party.

Rank and File Support Comintern.

The members of the Hoeglund party however, are not willing to go back to the social-democratic party and are deserting and rejoining the Swedish section of the Comintern when they were unable to have a congress called to make a decision in the matter. The membership remember well the declarations made by Hoeglund and company when the split took place.

Hoeglund then resented the statements made by the Comintern that he was on the road back to the Second International. Now, the prediction has come true and the revolutionary elements that remained in his party will have received a real lesson and learned that the policy of swaying between the Comintern and the Second International eventually leads into the swamps of reformism and back to social-democracy.

Already many branches have rejoined the Swedish section of the Comintern and when the proper arrangements have been finished and the bargain struck between the social-democrats and Hoeglund, it is certain, that the majority of the members will not follow him but will follow the leadership of the Comintern and its Swedish section. The Swedish Communist Party has extended its influence among the masses since the exit of Hoeglund and now that he has thrown the mask aside completely and gone back where he belongs, it will mean more strength and influence for the Comintern among the Swedish masses.

LOTS OF OLD SCORES TO SETTLE THERE

By H. C. F.

(Worker Correspondent.)

It is in Palestine this happened.

Under General Allenby, using Australian and Indian cavalry, English infantry and Egyptian laborers, the British pushed the Turks across the Sinia desert thru the whole length of Palestine and away up north of Damascus.

I was with a Canadian bridging company sent out from France in the last months of the war to replace two railway bridges across the Yarmuk river near the Sea of Galilee. We were the technicians on the job and we had for the laboring part about 300 Egyptians. Over every 20 of these there was posted a native boss of their own race with a good leather whip and in charge of the company an English officer. There was a lot of cement to carry out over the river on planks and the natives did this in baskets on their heads—hard dirty work. Every little while if a man didn't step fast enuf—whish! The old whip would cut down on those cotton clad shoulders bringing blood and shrieks.

The British government never fed the Egyptians any meat, only rice and millet and they were just crazy to get hold of some of our bully beef. When British officers found cans of bully in the men's possession they would beat them with fists and feet. This had usually been paid for out of the men's own scanty earnings.

The reason given was that bully would make them sick. But we know that millet and other cow feed is cheaper and if the men got used to meat they wouldn't be so satisfied with Jersey fodder.

These Egyptians were a great mixture of races and colors, ranging all the way from our color to coal black. As for sanitation, they put us to shame in the care of the body. They would go to the river every afternoon, strip and wash their light khaki suit and have a swim while it was drying.

We got away from Egypt before the riots started in the spring of 1919. When we heard of their revolt we thot "lots of old scores to settle there."

WORKERS CHEER COMMUNISTS ON WAY TO PRISON

Police Unable to Stop Demonstration

LVOV, Poland—As Comrades Casimir Pisnik, T. Yarovski, Stanislas Yarovski, Em. Reiss, Mark Schlesman and Edward Bracher were being transferred from the Lvov prison "Brigidki" to the penal institution Sandomir, a demonstration was staged on the railway platform that even the police were unable to stop.

The Polish government not satisfied to have these men imprisoned, transferred them to an institution in another part of the country where it would be impossible to receive aid and comfort which the prisoners received from friends and relatives.

Comrades Yarovski and Pisnik have been suffering from tuberculosis contracted in the Polish bastille. The prison doctor was aware of this condition, yet allowed the transfer to be be to a prison whose sanitary condition was worse than the one in Lvov.

Sing International.

At the station, as they stepped out of the carriage, the police surrounded the "Black Maria." The workers, most of them railway workers, gathered around at the station. The arrested Polish Communists uncovered their heads and sang the Red Flag.

Comrade Pisnik then strode forward and with all the energy at his command, addressed the railroad workers:

"Comrades, workers! We Lvov Communists are saying farewell to you. The Polish bourgeoisie is removing us from the local prison to that in Sandomir; this is a new act of the white terror directed against the workers only because they were working for the emancipation of the laboring masses. They are forcibly removing us from our native towns, imprisoning us for long years in graves which they call prisons; but we firmly believe that the day of reckoning will come.

Call to Action.

"Farewell comrades—railway men! I also worked in these railway workshops. Many of you know me. Continue to work together with all the proletariat for the overthrow of the bourgeoisie, and when you are victorious open our prison gates, and we will greet one another on this same place.

"Farewell, all my Lvov comrades!

"Farewell red Lvov!

"Long live the revolutionary workers of Lvov!

"Long live the revolutionary railway men!"

Police Powerless.

The railway men loudly echoed these calls, and repeatedly raised their hats. The police stood helplessly by, afraid of the threatening attitude of the crowd. The demonstration lasted until the train was no longer in sight.

The Official Report of the British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia

Albert Purcell, chairman of the British delegation to Russia, is a delegate to the coming convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The question of Russia is sure to become an issue at the convention. It will be widely discussed at local unions. It is ever more a live issue for every worker in and out of the organized labor movement.

Now is the time not only for every worker to secure a copy of this arsenal of facts about Soviet Russia for his own use—

But this is also the time to take the book to your trade union—

To get orders from local unions—

To get it to every person where the question of Russian recognition will be discussed.

Maps and charts—and art work by Fred Ellis, add greater attractiveness and value to the book.
